It is most probable that, when the discussions upon the Agrarian Bill are finished the members will proceed with that regulating the sugar-culture in Java. The Minister has already replied to the Section Report, and I regret to say that he has not made the least endeavour to meet the grievances and complaints made against the measure by some leading men of the Liberal party. The Bill in fact remains unaltered. I have already had the opportunity of alluding to these grievances; the principal one of which is that the Minister proposes that the intervention of the Government with regard to the sugar-culture is not to cease before 1890; that for twenty years longer the Javanese are doomed to bear and suffer the greatest injustice. That the law is contrary to justice and right is acknowledged by the Minister himself. Indeed, can anyone contradict, it when it is of public notoriety that, not only the labour of the natives but also their own grounds, cleared for their own use, are arbitrarily disposed of? The Conservatives are even less content with this Bill than the Liberals. They are of opinion that its tenor is too Radical. Their beau ideal is that private industry must be checked; and they maintain that it is not too much that the natives pay for protection with their sweat and blood, in the form of several millions a-year. Their principles of protection go so far that they oppose the proposal of the Minister to indemnify the Javanese when the Government takes possession of their grounds for the State sugar-culture. These indemnifications, they demonstrate, will annihilate that lucrative culture, which must continue to be maintained although contrary to justice and right.

To-day the Bill to establish a Diplomatic Mission in China was laid before the members of the Second Chamber. Some Conservative papers foretell that it has not the least chance of being carried, but of course this is a very speculative assertion. In the meanwhile, the Minister continues to be overloaded with addresses in favour of establishing the Mission. On behalf of this Bill the Minister asks a credit of f.18,000, and demonstrates that while Holland is not represented by a Diplomatic Agent at Peking, the Dutch who live in China cannot find the necessary protection. Mr. Peter, who since 1866 has been our paid Consul, has never been officially acknowledged by the Chinese Government. All the endeavours to obtain this recognition have been futile, and thus Dutch residents are deprived of the necessary security for their trading operations; and it is impossible, without the appointment of a Diplomatic agent, that their trade can be extended. The salary of the Consul is f.10,710, so that the Minister asks only an increase of f.7,290. The Minister fears that some members will be of opinion that the salary for the Diplomatic Minister is too small, and in that case he wishes that an amendment may be proposed to augment the sum. Mr. Roest further objects to an amalgamation of the Missions in China and Japan, which would not give the required results in reference to trade and shipping interests and the personal security of the Dutch in China. The Government of Italy has already attempted such an amalgamation, which was found not to work satisfactorily.

The contract between the Minister of the Colonial Department and the Commission for promoting the national steam line between Holland and Java (Messrs. C. J. Boelen, J. C. Bunge, and J. Boissevain) was published some days ago by the Staats Courant. The principal stipulations I mentioned some weeks since, and I have only to add that the Commission is granted a delay until the 15th May to establish the company. When that date has elapsed, unless the endeavours are crowned with success, the Minister can declare the contract void. No details are yet known of the project, and some papers are complaining thereabout. The Commission, however, seems not quite ready. The King has shown a good deal of sympathy with this enterprise; but, on the other side, there is a strong opposition on the part of the Protectionists, who in their organ, the Industrieel, grumble most vehemently because the Commission ordered five steamers to be built in England instead of employing national industry for a national enterprise. Of course the paper warns capitalists against giving their money to pay for English vessels. I need not add that these arguments will have no effect, and that the general opinion is that the capital will be subscribed so soon as the particulars of the plan are published.

The most vehement complaints are being made by the Hague paper, Het Vaderland, that none of the officers of the East Indian army were decorated on the occasion of the King's birthday, when a shower of crosses was spread over the officers of the home army. "This," says the journal in question, "is shameful, and the Minister of the Colonial Department deserves to be blamed for such enormous negligence." Thereupon, the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant replied that the Minister gave, some time ago, directions to the Governor-General to make the necessary proposals to those persons who deserved distinction, but that Mr. Myer, having neglected to make these proposals, no cross could be conferred on any officer of the East Indian army. Thus, observes the Courant, the Governor-General has made the blunder and not the Minister.

The First Chamber of the States General only met for one day, and carried in that sitting several Bills, which had been previously approved of by the Second Chamber. Our Lords will not meet again until after the Colonial Land and Sugar Bills are voted by the Second Chamber.

The Minister of the Financial Department has laid before Parliament a Bill to introduce a uniform postage of 5 cents for a single letter. The Bill, however, meets with general opposition, because the Minister wishes to abolish the one cent postage for printed matter, and to substitute a postage of 2 cents for every 40 grammes.

The Luxembourg journals have reported some political manifestations recently made in the Grand Duchy, in favour of annexation to Belgium or France. It is, however, now announced that this attitude has been taken up only by a few foreign workmen. The inhabitants, both of the town and country districts, are opposed to any change, and are desirous of retaining their autonomy.

The birthday of Prince Frederic, Grand Master of the Freemasons lodges in Holland, was celebrated in the usual way throughout the country. Her Majesty the Queen remains, as you know, in England, while the King is on a trip to Paris—of course incognita.

The committee to promote the erection of a monument at Batavia, in memory of the late Jan Pieterszoon Koen, has again made an appeal to the Dutch public. A sum of 25,000 guilders is wanted, and only 11,000 guilders have been contributed.

His Majesty has signed the decree stipulating that our army and navy, both at home and in the colonies, are to be armed with breech-loaders made according to the Beaumont system.

COMMERCIAL.

The weather has become very mild, the ice has broken up, and the river is again open for shipping. But very little activity is perceptible in our leading articles of colonial produce, and for most of them prices remain nominally the same. Sugar has been in better demand, whilst the late advance of Tin has made some further progress, and higher prices have been paid for Nutmegs and black Pepper. The Trading Company's Sugar sale for this month, and their spring sale of Tin are advertised.

A further reduction of ½ per cent. in the rates of discount of the Netherlands Bank has been announced. The rates for bills is now fixed at 4 per cent., and for acceptances 4½ per cent.

COFFEE.—Buyers offer the Company's Java at the prices of the late public sale, but no advance can yet be obtained over the same. A revival of the demand is, however, confidently anticipated. To-morrow the Trading Company will advertise its auction to be held this month. About 950 bags Macassar, afloat per Vrachtzoeker, have been disposed of at secret prices. Good ordinary Java is quoted 35c. to 35½c. The total stock of Coffee is 567,000 bags, with 472,700 bags floating.

RAW SUGAR.—The demand for export has been more active, and white sorts have also been inquired after for home refiners. About 8,000 baskets changed hands at f.1⅞ to f.2 under November value, and 1,590 baskets, ex Peri, No. 13 were sold at f.2¼ under November value; 430 bags Batavia, No. 9¾, ex Norsk Vlag, at f.31¾. The Trading Company's first public sale of Sugar for this season is to take place at Amsterdam, on the 22nd instant, comprising about 56,200 baskets Java, stored in different ports. The stock of raw Sugar in bond was on the 1st of March, 25,710,491 kilo.; the unsold stock of the Trading Company, 82,318 baskets, and the private stock, 2,153 baskets.

RICE continues neglected. Only 5,074 bales Java, ex Strathblane, were sold at f.7⅛.

SPICES.—An active speculative demand prevails for Nutmegs, which have been selling at further advanced rates, say No. 1 at 118c. up to 122c., whilst No. 2 were held for 115c. to 117c. Pepper has also been in brisk request, and several shipments, together with 4,663 bags Black, to arrive by sundry vessels, met buyers afloat at 23½c. in bond. The market closed, however, with a duller tone. Stock on warrants in the Trading Company's stores: Nutmegs, 3,240 casks; Mace, 190 casks; Cloves, 2,749 casks; Cinnamon, 45 packages; Pepper, 100 bags.

TEA.—In waiting for the forthcoming auction to be held in Amsterdam, the market is quiet. In this auction 1,230 chests China, ex St. Andrew's Castle, will be offered. Within a month or so two cargoes are expected, 4,500 chests, ex Kali Mass, and 6,000 chests ex Ensign.

JAVA TOBACCO.—There is a good demand for covers for cigar making purposes, the stock of Manila being nearly exhausted. The other sorts meet also with a good demand. The arrival of the new crops is anxiously awaited. The stock only comprises about 6,000 bales.

MANILA CIGARS.—The stock is very large, so that prices are somewhat lower.

DRUGS are quiet, without any alterations in the market value of the different articles.

PRESERVED GINGER.—100 chests at auction were sold at 65 cents.

JAVA INDIGO continues in fair demand at late prices. A couple of small lots of Java changed hands at an advance of 25 cents over the valuations, and lower offers have been refused.

TIN.—Prices continue to creep up. Banca sold last week for usual prompt up to f.69½, and for delivery ex the next spring's sale at f.68. But since the Trading Company's spring sale was advertised prices further advanced for both positions respectively, up to f.70 and f.69. The public sale is to take place on the 31st inst., and will comprise 76,800 slabs Banca and 1,700 slabs Billiton, being the whole of the stock on hand. No reserve has been made to increase this quantity by further shipments still to arrive, and complaints are made thereabout in the leading papers. The directors, however, have given notice that until their autumn sale of this year no other Tin than the quantity now declared will be offered for sale by the company, nor will any Government public sales of this metal be held in the interim in Netherlands India. This intimation does not apply to Tin belonging to other parties. Stock on warrant on the 1st of March, 43,375 slabs Banca, and 100 slabs Billiton; new stock, 76,868 slabs Banca and 1,691 slabs Billiton.

ROTTERDAM, March 11.

The Agrarian Bill for Java has been carried, with but little alteration, by a majority of six; eight of the amendments proposed were rejected by the Chamber; three members were absent from the final division.

Arrived.—Baron Pallant.

SWEDEN.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

STOCKHOLM, March 6.

The great event of the day that I have to record is an act of toleration which does credit to the Swedish Parliament. A Bill has just been passed for the extension of religious liberty by enabling members of all religious persuasions, including even the Jews, to be elected members of both Houses of Parliament, and appointed to all offices of the Government, with the exception of Ministers of State and Professors of the Theological Faculty at the Swedish Universities. The Bill passed the Upper House by 93 to 18 votes, whilst the division of the Lower Chamber showed 116 ayes and 58 noes. Thus, a great reaction has come over public opinion in Sweden, for when a similar measure was introduced three years ago it was rejected by the Parliament and scouted by the press. But now the principal organs are loud in their praises of the spirit of toleration evinced by the representatives of the people, and re-echoed by the whole nation. It is worth mentioning, as showing the tolerant spirit of the Bench of Bishops, that one of the prelates, in supporting the Bill in his place in the Upper House, made use of these remarkable words:—"It is by no means contrary to the intentions of our Saviour, with regard to the punishment inflicted on the Jews for their unbelief, if we take off the trifling pressure that still weighs on them in the social disabilities under which they now suffer in Sweden."

Parliament has unanimously resolved to postpone till next session the revision of the Act of Union between Sweden and Norway. On the other hand, they have accepted and passed all the Liberal amendments to the new law for the freedom of the press in Sweden.

Monetary and Commercial.

Business generally remains in a depressed state, and the demand for money does not improve. The rate, however, for the best three months' paper is maintained at 3 per cent., the charge for six months' India and China Bank Bills being 3½. Telegraph Shares, lately the favourite investment, have been weaker, partly owing to numerous rumours of new schemes, and partly, it is believed, to a combination of unscrupulous operators, such as was formerly directed against the joint-stock banks.

At a meeting of the creditors of Pauw Scheinder and Co. it was agreed that all goods and yarns held by the firm for third parties should be returned to the creditors. An offer of 3s. 4d. in the pound by the firm was accepted, on the understanding that a further sum of 3s. 4d. should be paid to the creditors by Mr. Pauw, by annual instalments of £1,000 each year for five years, out of property settled on his wife in her own right.

The prospectus of the Franco-Egyptian Telegraph Company (Limited), with a capital of £410,000, in 41,000 shares of £10 each, has been issued. The prospectus states the object of the company to be to provide a direct line of telegraph between England, France, Algeria, and Egypt, hereafter to be extended to India and China, as may be determined by the shareholders.

At the meeting of the London and San Francisco Bank (Limited) the report was adopted, together with the recommended distribution, and the progress of the bank, which has now a paid-up capital of £500,000, was described to be in every way satisfactory.

A meeting of the London Chamber of Commerce was held on the 9th, when Mr. C. Reed, M.P., and Mr. W. T. Charley, M.P., in succession took the chair. A large addition was made to the list of members, including bankers, merchants, manufacturers, and traders of London. A provisional council was appointed, and the meeting was adjourned for a fortnight, with a view to the number of members being still further increased.

A five-mile section of the wire-tramway, intended for Ceylon has been temporarily erected on Brighton Downs, where it will be exhibited in action. The entire line is to be sixty miles in length, and will be used for the carriage of coffee.

The case of Mr. James Innes, tea broker, of 90, Great Tower-street, has been before the Bankruptcy Court. The debts were £6,414, the assets £86 8s. 9d. The failure was attributed to unfortunate trading with China and Japan, and the bankrupt obtained his discharge without opposition.

The rates for Bank Bills at sixty days' sight on Singapore, China, and Japan are as follows:—Singapore, buying, 4s. 5½d.; selling, 4s. 3d.; Hong Kong, buying, 4s. 5¼d.; selling, 4s. 3d.; Shanghai, buying, 6s. 2d.; selling, 5s. 8d.; Yokohama, buying, 4s. 7d.; selling, 4s. 3d.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Returns of the Board of Trade for the month of December last give the total estimated values of the exports for the year 1869, the quantities of the imports, and the estimated values of the imports for the eleven months ending 20th November. Beginning with the exports, the total declared value for the year of exported British and Irish produce and manufactures was £190,045,230. The comparison with the last three years stands thus:—Exports in 1867, £180,961,923; ditto, 1868, £176,677,812; ditto, 1869, £190,045,230. The exports were spread over the year thus:—Jan., £13,621,114; Feb., £13,485,026; March, £15,697,465; April, £15,624,475; May, £16,316,540; June, £16,740,645; July, £17,394,951; Aug., £17,364,691; Sept., £16,365,725; Oct., £16,454,896; Nov., £15,287,820; Dec., £15,594,978. As compared with the two preceding years, the total for the month of December, the latest index of the state of trade, the return for 1869 shows an increase of £955,988 over 1868, and an increase of £2,342,386 over 1867. Turning to the details, it appears that the items under which the increase is found on the year as compared with 1868 are chiefly the following:—Cotton manufactures, about £100,000; woollen and worsted manufactures nearly £3,100,000; iron and steel, unwrought, nearly £4,500 000; machinery, about £300,000; hardware, £558,000, and the manufactures of jute, leather, apparel, earthenware, painters' colours, paper, silk, and telegraphic apparatus; also in the export of beer, and of most of the unwrought metals. A decrease in each case appears in the following:—Gunpowder, alkali, coal, cordage and twine, cotton yarn, linen manufactures, and thrown silk. If we consider quantities as well as values, the comparison is, on the whole, more favourable, on account of the generally higher range of prices last year. The total value of cotton manufactures is put at £53,001,551, against £52,971,873. The totals in yards were £2,866,113,363, against £2,977,106,551 for 1868.

The computed real value of the principal articles imported during the eleven months ending Nov. 30 was £217,070,924, a decrease as compared with the year preceding of £1,791,427. The total for 1867 was £208,602,539. The imports are thus made up:—Jan., £11,493,405; Feb., £18,148,799; March. £19,448,515; April, £17.858,517; May, £19.727,937; June, £20,385,565; July, £20,960.848; Aug., £20,559,578; Sept., £23,138,033; Oct., £23,759,824; Nov., £21,590,003. The month of November shows a slight increase over last year, and a considerable increase, amounting to over four millions and three quarters sterling, over the year 1867. Turning to quantities for the whole year, which give a better idea of the actual imports, we find an increase in cocoa, sugar, tobacco, wine, living animals, provisions, corn, wheat meal, fruit, rice, and woollen manufactures. There was a decrease in tea, coffee, spirits, raw cotton (of 954,000 cwt.), flax, hemp, hides, quicksilver and several other metals, flaxseed, linseed and rapeseed, raw and thrown silk, timber and tallow. Although the import of tea is less, the total entered for home consumption was rather greater. The total imported was 139,223,298 lbs., against 154.845,863 lbs. The decrease in coffee was from 173,902,467 lbs. to 173,416,332 lbs.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East:—

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

There has been no improvement in the market, the uncertainty prevalent as to what may be done with the duty still acting most prejudicially, the trade being afraid to operate. Importers, however, in the view of an early settlement of the question, refrain from pressing sales, and thus there is but little alteration to quote in prices. The agitation which has been started by Dr. Letheby for the destruction of the tea known as Maloo Mixture will, we trust, have a beneficial effect in, at all events, stopping further supplies from being sent to this market; but we think a still more efficacious effect will be produced by the heavy losses which have been incurred by those who have shipped it this season. The stock in the United Kingdom on the 28th ult. was estimated at 100,300,000 lbs., against 105,907,000 lbs., and the quantity afloat at 33,327,000 lbs., against 23,671,000 lbs.

CONGOUS.—The amount of transactions has been so small that it is hardly possible to give the particulars under the several heads as usual. We can only say common teas have been dull of sale, whilst good to fine have been firmly supported; the arrivals recently, consisting of good common to fair medium, which have been mostly withheld from the market. Oolongs: Souchong and Flowery Pekoes show no alteration. Scented Teas: Common to fair qualities have sold lower, good to fine, especially fine Canton Orange Pekoes, have sold at full prices. Uncoloured Japans have been neglected.

GREEN TEAS.—In these business has also been very limited, but the finer kinds have been well supported, the common to fair descriptions being neglected. Some sales of Canton Gunpowder have been made from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 6d. per lb. Japan Leaf: Several parcels of uncoloured have come to hand from Nagasaki, via Shanghai, which have been taken for shipment to Canada at 1s. to 1s. 1d. for knobby-leaf kinds, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 3d. for fair to good, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d. for medium to fine, and 1s. 10d. to 2s. for finest in boxes.

SILK.

Messrs. Kilburn, Kershaw, and Co. report as follows:—

The market has resumed its full activity after the slight pause which occurred in the month of February, and a large business has been doing of late at gradually advancing prices in China Silk, for which the chief demand just now exists; the transactions during the last fortnight have been of considerable magnitude, and, with the declining stocks of available Silks, have been of a nature to cause a rise of 6d. to 1s. 6d. on Tsatlees and Japans, and 6d. to 1s. on Cantons; the current quotations for Tsatlees being to-day:—24s. 6d. to 26s. for 5 to good 4½; 26s. 6d. to 27s. 6d. for fair to good 4; 28s. for Red Peacock; 28s. to 30s. for 3½; 31s. to 32s. for best chop 3rds. Taysaams of best descriptions are very scarce, and worth 25s. to 27s. 6d.; some recent arrivals have been sold at 24s. to 25s. for middling Ka Hing, and 23s. 6d. to 25s. 6d. for fair to good Chin Cum and Tai Kai. Hainins are the only China Silks for which demand has not yet arrived; and No. 2 Fatmow is still offering at 26s., with but few buyers at this price; as to inferior classes there is no inquiry whatever. Re-reels, on the contrary, which for so long were altogether neglected, have been lately in good demand, and have found ready sale at 25s. to 27s. for the coarse kinds, and 28s. to 31s. 6d. for good to finest. For Throwns there is also some inquiry, and a few sales at 23s. 6d. to 24s. 6d. for common Trams have recently been made. Canton Silk is still very quiet, although stocks of good qualities of Tsatlee and Loong Kong are so scarce; a slight advance in price to 21s. 6d. to 23s. for good to best sorts has taken place this week, but there is still very little inquiry, although the Silk is comparatively so cheap. In Japan Silk there is a recovery of fully 1s. in Mybash and other sorts, and with a fair business doing. Bengal Silk is comparatively neglected, and the only quotable change is 31s. for November Bund Sirdah, which price has recently been paid. The deliveries of Silk last month were very good, and since the 1st instant have been of unusual importance, say—China, 1,478 bales; Canton, 229 bales; Japan, 310 bales; Bengal, 132 bales: total, 2,149 bales from 1st to 8th instant.

COFFEE.

The supplies of Ceylon at the public sales continued to be brought forward in limited quantities only until within the past few days, when they have been larger than for some time previously. The offers both of Plantation and Native have, however, consisted chiefly of qualities for which there is but little request, and the greater portion has been withdrawn or bought in. The current quotations present very slight alteration from those of last mail, but owing to the limited demand and the few transactions effected, prices must be considered more or less nominal, and to effect sales a considerable concession would have to be granted, to which holders do not appear at present disposed. The following may be given as the ruling prices:—Plantation, low to good medium, 70s. to 81s. 6d.; triage, 41s. to 56s. 6d.; small grey, 60s. to 61s.; low middling grey, 67s. to 70s. 6d.; bold ditto, 70s. 6d. to 74s.; small coloury, 64s. to 68s. 6d.; middling coloury, 71s. 6d. to 77s.; good middling, 79s. to 80s.; peaberry, 76s. to 84s.; Native, good bold, 62s.; good ordinary, 58s.; small, 46s. 6d. The quantity afloat of Plantation is greater and that of Native less than at the same time last year, while the landings and deliveries both exhibit a decrease; the stock is considerably larger than in 1869. In East India Coffee other than Ceylon there are no transactions to report; 1,980 bags Manila were offered, and bought in, pale Indian sort at 57s.; fine bold pale at 63s.

The quantity of Ceylon Coffee afloat for Great Britain is estimated as follows:—Plantation, 230,468 cwt., against 217,529 cwt. at the corresponding date of 1869; Native, 2.,310 cwt., against 55,166 cwt. The quantity afloat for the Continent is 2,694 cwt. Plantation against cwt., and 1,517 cwt. Native against 1,605 cwt. The quantity of Coffee landed in the nine weeks ended March 5, 1870, was of Ceylon, 2,730 tons, against 3,017 tons during the corresponding period of 1869; of all descriptions, 3,534 tons, against 6,492 tons. The quantity entered for home consumption was, of Ceylon, 1,595 tons, against 1,804 tons; of all descriptions, 2,824 tons, against 3,134 tons. The quantity exported was, of Ceylon, 3,426 tons, against 3,396 tons; of all descriptions, 6,161 tons, against 7,007 tons. The stock on March 5, was, of Ceylon, 11,573 tons, against 8,812 tons; of all descriptions, 18,768 tons, against 15,571 tons.

The Rio market at the date of last advices was without change; the unfavourable anticipations with regard to the crop had been partially confirmed; prices continued firm, and an advance was expected.

SUGAR.

The business throughout the interval has been greatly restricted by the uncertainty which prevails as to a reduction in the duties; prices show but little change from those of last mail. The business in East India has consisted wholly of Manila, of which about 32,000 bags are reported sold; Muscovado, at 25s. to 25s. 6d.; fine clayed (duty 8s.) at 30s.; superior (duty 9s. 7d.) at 31s. to 31s. 6d.

The quantity of Sugar landed in the nine weeks ended Mar. 5, 1870, was, of Penang, 269 tons, against 1,017 tons in the corresponding period of 1869; of Manila, Java, and China, 3,469 tons, against 6,734 tons; the quantity entered for home consumption was of Penang, 637 tons, against 450 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 5,276 tons, against 1,531 tons. The quantity exported was, of Penang, 24 tons, against 35 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 332 tons, against 12 tons. The stock on Mar. 5 was, of Penang, 1,938 tons against 861 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 33,651 tons, against 37,035 tons.

CINNAMON.—At the periodical public sales held on the 28th ultimo a considerable supply of Ceylon was brought forward, amounting to 3,448 bales, of which a much larger proportion than usual consisted of very low, coarse, and spurious qualities. Holders having showed a willingness to sell, nearly the whole was taken off, fine and superior quill descriptions sold at an irregular decline of 2d. to 3d. per lb., medium to good kinds at about previous rates, coarse and very low at last sales' rates to a decline of about 3d. per lb. About 3,000 bales found buyers. 523 bales first sort, good to superior sold at 3s. 2d. to 3s. 7d., medium to fair 2s. 7d. to 3s. 1d., very low to ordinary 1s. 5d. to 2s. 6d.; 1,197 bales second sort, good to fine 2s. 11d. to 3s. 3d., middling to fair 2s 4d. to 2s. 10d., very low to ordinary, 1s. to 2s. 3d.; 765 bales third sort, good to superior 2s. 8d to 3d. 1d., medium to good medium 1s. 11d. to 2s. 7d., very low and inferior 9d. to 1s. 10d.; 407 bales fourth sort, superior 2s. 6d. to 2s. 7d., medium to good 1s. 6d. to 2s. 2d., very low and coarse 7d. to 1s. 4d.; 556 bales unsorted, common coarse 6d. to 9d., very low spurious 4d. to 5d. Since the sale about 150 or 200 bales low and ordinary qualities have been resold at a slight advance.

CAMPHOR.—There has been a speculative demand, and for a few days an eagerness to buy enabled holders to obtain a gradual advance, till 97s. 6d. has been paid for Japan, 92s. 6d. for China; and during the fortnight sales of about 1,800 packages have been made (including 650 cases to arrive in Liverpool per "Nestor," sold at 85s. to 87s. 6d.). There are, however, further sellers now at above prices, and much depends on our supplies from the East, as stocks in Europe and America are above an average.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—The market for Ceylon is quiet at previous rates, viz., £41 15s., and £42. The quantity of Ceylon afloat for Great Britain is estimated at 50,526 cwt., against 43,720 cwt. at the corresponding date last year, and 39,660 cwt. in 1868.

COIR GOODS.—Good and fine quality sells well, while common is very dull. Of Yarn, a new parcel, per Channel Light, from Cochin, of 1,094 bales, all sold; good bright £36 5s. to £37 10s.; middling mixed £30 5s., being rather higher. Very large parcels are advertised for the sales this day.

CUTCH.—The market continues very flat, and the parcels offered at auction were all bought in, viz., 123 boxes Singapore at 26s.; 573 boxes Penang at 25s. 6d. to 26s. 6d.; and 1,071 bags Calcutta at 26s. per cwt. Fine Pegu is nominal at 25s. 6d. per cwt. Afloat from Calcutta and Singapore to London and Liverpool 620 tons, against 168 tons same time last year; to the Continent 224 tons, against 170 tons; and to America 471 tons, against 434 tons. From Rangoon, &c., to U.K., 329 tons, against 544 tons.

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed: Rather more business has been done, 8s. 8d. to 8s. 9d. being accepted. Cassia neglected, and there are sellers at 5s.; large parcels of both now afloat. Nutmeg: 3 cases white sold at 7¼d., showing a decline.

GAMBIER.—The market is steady, but there is not much doing; 1,230 bales block in auction partly found buyers, good and fine at 17s. 3d. to 18s.; 1,216 mats 2,000 baskets free cubes being bought in at 20s. 6d. to 21s. per cwt.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Siam steady; 14 cases bold medium almond in loose block sold firmly at £19 10s. at £20 5s.; Sumatra, 2nds firm; 18 cases half sold: fair white almond at £10 10s.; rather brownish £9. Palembang very dull, 150 cases retired; good clean, 90s.; ordinary dull, 65s. at 75s. Copal still in demand, but several parcels coming to auction. Damar very dull; 125 packages retired. Gamboge steady; 5 cases soft clean pipe sold at £15; 11 cases mixed retired.

GALLS.—China have been in fair demand, and about 200 cases sold at 49s. to 50s. Japan are scarce.

HEMP.—The market for Manila continues to exhibit extreme dulness and lower prices are current, about 500 bales fair to good roping having been sold at £54 to £57 per ton.

INDIA-RUBBER.—The demand continues good for clean, and there have been sales of Borneo privately at 1s. 3½d., and of Assam at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 4d., but common earthy and sticky is neglected.

ISINGLASS.—Good qualities are in fair inquiry at former prices, and in some instances at a slight advance; common sorts are not in demand.

JAPAN WAX.—The market is dull, there is a large stock on hand with but little business doing; the transactions since our last report comprising only 30 cases fair saucers, which sold at 71s. 6d. to 75s. per cwt.

MUSK.—The improved tone of the market is still steadily maintained; in auction, 40 caddies Pod sold; good and fine flat thin at 30s. to 34s.; mixed and bally at 21s. to 22s.; 8 tins Grain also sold at 52s. to 55s. for fine, and 44s. to 47s. for middling.

PLUMBAGO.—There has been an active demand for Ceylon, principally for dust, and holders have been enabled to realise rather better prices, as American buyers are again operating. Stocks however are large, and middling lump, being somewhat neglected, is difficult to dispose of. Of 333 barrels offered, a portion sold at 2s. 6d. to 14s. 6d. for dull and inferior lump; 9s. to 12s. chips; 7s. 6d. to 9s. 6d. dust. Finest quality is very scarce.

PEPPER.—Black has been in more active request, and considerable business has been done privately up to 4¾d. per lb for Acheen on the spot. Auctions have comprised 259 bags Singapore retired, and 1,601 bags Penang, all of which were sold at 4¼d. to 4⅝d. Parcels of Singapore offer for arrival at 5d. without finding buyers. White: The improvement noticed in our last has entirely subsided, and business to only a moderate extent, has been transacted privately; 534 bags Singapore have been brought to public sale, and all sold at 6½d. to 6¾d. per lb. for middling to fair. 50 bags Penang were also offered and retired.

RICE.—There is still very little disposition to do business, and the sales which have been effected have been at lower rates. The principal business has been in Madras, of which about 10,000 bags are reported at 8s. 9d. to 10s.; 3,000 bags soft grain at 8s. 6d. to 9s.; and 2,500 bags Bengal, Ballam at 8s., white at 9s. to 11s. 3d. per cwt. A cargo of field Siam off the coast has been sold at 7s. ex ship, and one of new crop Necransie at 9s. 6d., Continental terms.

RHUBARB.—No new arrivals of China have been offered, but 40 chests per overland route are advertised for sale. At the last auction 60 cases old lots were brought forward, and about half sold at steady prices; middling and fair pale pinky at 2s. to 3s.; rather common and rough at 1s. to 1s. 2d.

RATTANS are scarce and in good inquiry; the only sale has been of 565 bundles Singapore at 2s. 11d. to 3s. 1d. per 100.

ROOTS.—Colombo: The maket is very quiet. China: There have been no offers, but arrivals are expected.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea: The market is quiet; 78 bales Vera at auction retired; 10 bales very superior Padang, with exquisite flavour, sold at 2s. per lb.; 3 cases buds were offered and retired. Mace is in limited request, but holders do not press sales, and the parcels offered, comprising 16 casks Java, were bought in at 2s. 8d. to 3s. per lb. Nutmegs sell pretty readily; 41 cases sold. Java 126 to the lb. at 1s. 8d., 95 2s., 87 2s 3d.; Penang, 107 to the lb. 1s. 10d., 106 1s. 10d. to 1s. 11d., 100 1s. 11d., 92 2s. 84 2s. 4d., and 68 3s. 6d. per lb. Cloves are not inquired for.

SAGO.—The market is quiet; all offers at the public sales have been withdrawn or bought in. Flour is slightly lower, a small sale of Singapore being reported at 13s. 9d. per cwt.

STICKLAC.—The market is dull.

SOY.—There is a full supply, with arrivals expected, and but limited demand; the only sale reported is of 6 casks China at 2s. 10d. per gallon.

SAPANWOOD.—All the offers at auction since our last report have been bought in, viz., 20 tons Ceylon at £9, and 41 tons Siam at £9 10s. to £10.

STAR ANISEEDS.—There have been some small transactions at the recent advance, which is firmly maintained.

TAPIOCA.—The market is steady, and fine qualities realise firm prices. The auctions have included 445 bags Singapore, sold at 3¾d. (one lot at 4d. per lb.) for very superior and brilliant; 572 bags Penang and 57 packages Pearl retired. 78 cases of flour of good quality sold at 2¾d. per lb.

TORTOISESHELL.—A quiet tone prevails at previous rates.

TIN.—Owing chiefly to the unexpectedly small quantity offered at the Dutch sale there has been a speculative demand for both Straits and Banca at higher prices, the current rates showing an advance of £3 to £3 10s. for Straits, £5 for Banca, and £4 10s. for Billiton, upon those of our last report, the present quotations being, Straits, £119 10s. to £120; Banca, £123; Billiton, £121.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

TEA.

The following is from Messrs. Beebe's Circular, dated 25th ult.:—The demand for Tea since the 11th inst. has been more active, and sales of Green and Oolong are reported to quite a liberal extent, as compared with the previous fortnight. Included in the transactions reported are sales of 13,300 half-chests Green (2,300 of which are to arrive); 23,100 half-chests Oolong, consisting of 13,000 old crop Amoy goods, ex John Wooster; 1,400 new Foochow, ex Ada; and 8,700 do., ex Mary Whitridge; 8,000 half-chests Japan (to arrive), and 300 half-chests Souchong.

The following are the current quotations:—Greens (Moyune, Twanki and Fychow): Gunpowder, common to good, 70c. to 105c.; fine to finest, 80c. 120c.; Imperial, common to good, 52c. to 95c.; fine to finest, 58c. to 110c.; Young Hyson, common to good, 47c. to 95c.; fine to finest, 50c. to 115c.; Hyson, common to good, 52c. to 85c.; fine to finest, 55c. to 100c.; Hyson Skin, 43c. to 53c.; Foochow Oolongs, common and good, 53c. to 60c.; superior and fine, 62c. to 75c.; finest, 80c. to 110c.; Amoy Oolongs, common and good, 52c. to 58c.; superior and fine, 60c. to 72c.; finest, 75c. to 80c.; Souchong and Congou, common and good, 44c. to 52c.; superior and fine, 54c. to 65c.; finest, 70c. to 85c.; Japans, common, nominal, medium, 67c. to 70c.; fine and finest, 77c. to 85c.; choice, 88c. to 95c.

The total receipts of Tea from China and Japan at the port of New York from Jan. 1 to Feb. 23, 1870, were as follows:—Greens, 4,851,981 lbs.; Japans, 448,540 lbs.; Souchongs, 1,313,278 lbs.; Oolongs, 2,564,679 lbs.; other sorts, 20,000 lbs.; total, 9,198,478 lbs. The stock on Jan. 1 was 9,866,167 lbs.; which, added to the above total, gives a result of 19,064,645 lbs. Subtracting from this total the exports from Jan. 1 to Feb. 23, 572,589 lbs., and the withdrawals for home consumption during that period, 4,764,207 lbs., there remains a total of 13,727,849 lbs., representing the stock on the last named date. The receipts from Feb. 9 to Feb. 23 amounted to 4,912,638 lbs.; the withdrawals for home consumption to 3,428,908 lbs.; and the exports to 269,931 lbs.

COFFEE.—The market for all East India sorts continues quiet, and we have no sales to report; the current quotations, which are without change, are:—Java (mats), 19c. to 21c.; do. (Government bags), 12½c. to 21½c.; Manila, 16c. to 17c.; Singapore, 18c. to 19c.; Native Ceylon, 17½c. to 19½c. gold (duty paid). The stock of Manila on the 1st Feb. was estimated at 2,627 bags, against 6,769 bags on Feb. 1, 1869; of Java (Government) at 1,385 bags, against 2,451 bags; of Java, 18,857 mats, against 27,808 bags; of Ceylon 2,000 bags, against 7,000 bags; of Singapore nil, against 2,270 bags.

CHINA MATTING.—The market is quiet at the following prices:—4-4 white, 30c.; 5-4 white, 35c.; 6-4 white, 40c.; 4-4 red checked, 35c.; 5-4 red checked, 40c.; 6-4 red checked, 45c. There is a stock on hand amounting to about 2,00 rolls, while the quantity afloat is considerable.

CAMPHOR.—China is quoted 18c. gold (in bond).

GAMBIER.—The current quotation is 4⅛c. to 4¼c. gold (duty paid) stock, small.

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed is quoted $2.12½; Cassia, $1.25 gold (in bond).

HEMP.—Manila is firm at 14½c. gold without transaction. The stock of Manila on the 1st Feb. was estimated at 17,813 bales, against 6,214 bales at the corresponding date of 1869, and 19,546 bales in 1868. The imports into the United States during the month of February were 4,875 bales, against 15,829 bales during February last year, and the quantity afloat on the 1st February was 37,931 bales, against 18,968 bales at the same date last year.

INDIGO.—The demand for Manila has improved, and there is a moderate demand at $1.20 to $1.37½ currency, showing a slight advance.

PRESERVED GINGER.—China is quoted $10 to $10.50 currency (duty paid).

RHUBARB.—The quotation for China is $1.50 to $2.50 currency (duty paid).

RICE.—The enquiry for East India continues inactive, and the only sale to record is of 200 bags Rangoon in bond, at $3.12½ to $3.25 gold. The stock of East India on the 1st Feb. was 7,506 bags, against 12,816 bags at the corresponding date last year, and 4,342 bags in 1868.

SPICES.—There are but few invoices of any description offering, either on the spot or to arrive, and the business is chiefly confined to jobbing parcels from dealers' hands; in this way there is a steady demand for most kinds; Pepper is in active request at a further advance in price, the market being very firm at the close at 26½c.; Cloves have moved freely, other kinds are steady and firm; the sales are 100 to 120 cases Nutmegs at $1; 25c. to $30 Mace, $1.25; a few casks, $1.20; 2000 bags Pepper, 26 to 26½c.; 750 bales Cloves, 26c, all gold; also 500 bales (8,000 mats) Cassia, 100 bags Pepper, and 50 bales Cloves, on private terms.

SUGAR.—We note the sale of 16,034 bags Manila, per Harriet Erving, at 9½c. The stock on the 1st Feb. was of Java 810 baskets, against 310 baskets at the corresponding date last year; of Manila 230,253 bags, against 78,808 bags; of China 614 bags, against 1,000 bags.

TIN.—There is slightly less activity in the market, but prices are firmly maintained; the quotations are:—Straits, 32½c. to 32½c.; Banca, 33½c. to 33½c., gold. Sales have been effected of 150 slabs Straits and 50 slabs Banca upon these terms.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKET REPORT.

COFFEE.—The stock is free, and, with a light demand, prices are nominal, there being no sales to report.

CORDAGE.—Imports from Jan. 1 to Feb. 15—coils, 2,832; packages, 1,510. There is an invoice of New Bedford laid Manila now offering upon the market. This, with very liberal local supplies, suffices to keep prices steady.

RICE.—Imports from Jan. 1 to Feb. 15—China, 38,180 mats. The stock is considerable, while the demand is so cut up and divided that the aggregate requirement is large, yet trade seems to be very dull. We quote China at 5¼c. to 5½c. Extra No. 1, 5¾c. to 6c.

SUGAR.—Imports from Jan. 1 to Feb. 15—China, 716 packages; Manila, 29,713 sacks. There are three cargoes known to be en route from Batavia, for refining purposes. These, with other imports, including heavy stocks in bond, cause more or less depression to the market.

TEA.—Imports from Jan. 1 to Feb. 15: China, 1,333 pkgs.; Japan, 3,481 pkgs. There is no special movement observable; prices are therefore unchanged. The steamship Japan has arrived with a large cargo.

SHIPPING.

At New York to China; $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet.

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear or Tyne per keel.—For Yokohama: £35. For Shanghai: £41. For Hong Kong: £30. For Singapore: £26. For Galle: £25. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton.—For Yokohama: £1 15s. For Shanghai: £2 2s. For Hong Kong: £1 7s. For Singapore: £1 4s. For Saigon: £1 5s. For Galle: £1 5s.

CASUALTIES.

The Insulinde, Jollie, which arrived at Texel, from Batavia, March 2, reported having experienced very bad weather from 11th to 26th Feb., and received damage to sails and spars; the master also apprehended some injury to the cargo, as several of the deck seams were started.

Advices from Rotterdam, dated March 7, state that the Eurydice (Eng. ship), Betts, from Batavia to Amsterdam, had put into Brouwershaven leaky.

The Eleanor, Norrie, which sailed from London, Feb. 28. for Penang, has put into Weymouth, having slipped her cable in Prince's Channel.

The Europa, Glen, from Batavia to Amsterdam, put into St Helena Jan. 30. with loss of lower topsails, stavsails, &c., which damage she sustained during a hurricane, Dec. 17, 22 S., 78 E.

The Oceanus, Planten, from Banjoewangie to Rotterdam, put into St. Helena, Feb. 1, and reported that she experienced a hurricane in 23 S., 72 E., which lasted five days from Dec. 15, during which she was thrown on her beam ends, shifted her cargo, and started the seams of her decks.

The Noord Brabant, Van Overklieft, from Batavia, which arrived at San Francisco, Feb. 17, reported that in lat. 31 N., lon. 146 E., she experienced a heavy gale from S.W. with a heavy sea, the ship working badly and constantly under water, and starting deck seams; in lat. 33 N., lon. 152 E., encountered a heavy gale from S.W., tried the pumps and found the water strongly impregnated with sugar: in 34 N., 155 E., the weather moderated, crew came aft and requested the ship should put into the nearest port as she was leaking badly; in 35 N., 161 E., another heavy gale, and in 26 N., 163 E., a hurricane from N.W. to W.N.W., had to pump day and night to keep the vessel free, started deck-house and cabin, carried away rudder head, sprung fore and mainmasts, and lost rigging and sails.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS

BILIOUSNESS AND DYSPEPSIA.—There is no organ in the human body so liable to derangement as the liver; food, fatigue, climate, and anxiety all disorder its action, and render its secretions (the bile) more or less depraved, superabundant, or scanty. The first symptoms should receive attention. A pain in the side or top of the shoulder, a harsh cough and difficulty of breathing are signs of liver disease, which are removed without delay by friction with Holloway's inestimable Ointment. The Pills should be taken without delay. For all diseases of this vital organ, the action of these conjoined remedies is a specific by checking the over supply of bile, regulating its secretions, and giving nervous tone.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility, at moderate charges, for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships and steamers.

Their large Granite Dock has 286 feet length on the blocks, and at average spring tides can receive vessels of 16 to 17 feet draught. It has a caisson-gate and a powerful centrifugal steam pump, and an engineer's workshop fitted with lathes and tools, driven by steam; iron and brass foundries, boiler-makers' shop, a large smithy and carpenters and boat-builders' sheds, superintended by resident Europeans.

Their two smaller GRANITE DOCKS can receive, at spring tides, vessels drawing 12 feet.

Spars, timber, and other Dockyard material kept in stock.

Quarters for officers and a DRY GODOWN for stores of vessels under repair.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMON and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

New Harbour, Singapore, June, 1868.

FOOCHOW DOCK.

RIVER MIN.

THE above granite floored DOCK, of the following dimensions, viz., Length, 300 feet, breadth at bottom, 40, is capable of receiving vessels drawing 13 to 16 feet, as the state of the tides will allow. The Dock runs dry to the blocks, and is pumped out by steam.

The above premises comprise a large Machine Shop containing a

WHITWORTH'S 12-INCH SCREW CUTTING GAP LATHE,
DRILLING AND SCREWING MACHINES,
A LARGE SMITHY, &c., &c., &c.

Large Godowns are on the premises for STOWAGE OF CARGO, &c., &c. A large stock of Woods, Metal, &c., &c., always on hand.

The Dock steam tug Woosung is available at all times to tow vessels to or from sea.

THE MAILS, &c.

—o—

The present inward mail was hardly expected to be delivered until to-morrow, owing to an accident during the transit through Egypt. The next inward mail, due on the 4th April, should bring the following dates:—Yokohama, Feb. 13; Shanghai, 16; Hong Kong, 22; Singapore, March 1; Galle, March 10.

A telegram by Atlantic Cable, in advance of the Pacific mail leaving Yokohama Feb. 23 was received on the 19th inst. Hong Kong telegrams of March 3 were received, via Galle, on the same day; this seems to indicate that the mail timed to leave on March 1 has been delayed two days. By Grant's Kiachta line Shanghai telegrams to March 1 were received this morning.

The outward French mails will be made up on Fridays, instead of Thursdays, as heretofore, commencing next month (see page 196).

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

From this port our advices extend to the 30th Jan. The outward mail of Dec. 3 was received on the 25th Jan., per Bombay and the collision between this steamer and the Oneida forms the principal item of news.

The Japan Herald says, "According to versions gathered from passengers and others on board the Bombay, it would appear that the steamer was coming up to Yokohama. and first saw the Oneida's mast head light about twenty minutes past, six a little on the port bow. The whistle was sounded, and the helm ported, with the intention of passing her according to the recognised 'rule of the road.' The helm was kept a port until the Oneida's starboard light was shut in; but almost directly afterwards the Oneida's lights were both visible again, and the helm was again jammed hard-aport, directly after which the American was seen seanding directly across the Bombay, with all sail set and full steam on. Collision now appearing inevitable, the order was given to reverse the engines, but the P. and O. steamer had still some headway upon her, as the Oneida came down directly across her bows, and was run into on her starboard quarter. She almost cleared herself, then dropped alongside. and finally got clear off. The shock was not so great as might have been anticipated; indeed, so little shaken were the passengers that the current impression upon their minds was that the vessel had grazed a sand-bank. There appeared to be no persons on board the American ship, but some one on board hailed the Bombay. and was answered. Nothing further was heard or seen; neither cries for help nor minute guns, blue lights, rockets or any other signals of distress. Immediately after the collision the chief officer went forward and examined the bows of the Bombay, which he reported to have been pierced by a spar at the waterline, so that she was making water rapidly, while it was generally believed that the ship struck had not suffered such serious damage as themselves, and that she was proceeding duly upon her course.

"Some debate took place (it was blowing half a gale of wind at the time from the N. E.) on the propriety of beaching the Bombay then and there, but it was finally determined to clap on at full speed and make for Yokohama—where, if it was absolutely necessary to run her ashore, willing assistance could promptly be obtained. This course was pursued, and after arrival further examination was made of the injuries sustained in the collision, when it was found that the water in the forward compartment of the vessel was over ten feet; but that this compartment alone had been damaged."

The Japan Gazette says that Captain Eyre gives "a plain account of his proceedings, and his reasons for passing on to Yokohama, such as must produce a very different impression on men's minds from the statement of the men who were saved from the wreck, and, if confirmed by further evidence, must remove the stigma of inhumanity from his name." The Gazette goes on to say:—"The excitement in the settlement has been very great, and, unhappily, some have been so injudicious as to speak of the captain's not having saved any of the Oneida's crew as a matter of national jealousy, as if any but a demon could see even his bitterest enemy struggling in water under such circumstances and not hold out a hand to rescue him. But in this case it was pitch dark. Those on board the Oneida did not know what steamer had run into her, nor were those on board the Bombay aware of the name or nationality of the vessel that had been struck, so that anything like such an unworthy motive is impossible. It is the more foolish and blameworthy even to mention the possibility of such animosity in a port like this, where, if anywhere, the Europeans and Americans have all lived together happily, without those antagonistic feelings that may be left elsewhere; and such a report naturally creates a very uneasy and uncomfortable feeling. As the facts of the case are elicited, no doubt the absurdity of such a charge will be admitted; and, even as we write, feeling is very much allayed, and altogether more reasonable. H E. Mr. de Long, the U.S. Minister, a lawyer by profession—permitted by the Court to cross-examine witnesses on behalf of the survivors—in the opening proceedings showed a great degree of asperity towards the captain of the Bombay, whom he pointed to and spoke of as 'that man,' and otherwise expressed himself in a manner deeply to be regretted. As the case proceeds, however, he assumes altogether a more appropriate bearing; and as the wish of all must be to elicit the exact truth with regard to the misfortune, his searching cross-examination can do no harm. Mr. Barnard, the barrister, is employed on behalf of Captain Eyre, who has also the assistance of Mr. Dalziel, the P. and O. Company's agent, and Capt. Edmonds, of the P. and O. steamer Ottawa, in watching the conduct of the case, and eliciting facts. Of course, both Mr. de Long and Mr. Barnard are merely allowed to act on sufferance by the Court; and as the Court is merely one of inquiry into the facts connected with an accident that has happened to a British ship, the Bombay, we consider that it is a great stretch of good nature on the part of the Court to give such permission."

THE COURT OF INQUIRY.

A court of inquiry was commenced in H.B.M.'s consulate, at Kanagawa, on the 27th January, to inquire into the circumstances attending on the collision. F. Lowder, Esq., H.B.M.'s Consul, presided assisted by Captain Tinkler, R. N., and Staff Commander Moore, R. N., of H.B.M.'s ship Ocean, Captain Gilfillan, master of the Sultan, and Captain Chapman, master of the Rockliff. Sir H. Parkes and the Hon. C. E. de Long, U. S. Minister, were present. Mr. Barnard appeared to watch the inquiry on Captain Eyre's behalf, and Mr. Dalziel, P. and O. agent, was also present. The facts given below are abridged from the report published in the Gazette.

Captain Eyre stated: Am in command of the steamer Bombay—was in command on January the 24th at 6½ P.M. in sight of the lighthouse. Saw a bright light half a point on port bow. Shortly afterwards I made out two side lights, green and red; I ported the helm and kept porting until I shut the green light in. The pilot and the chief officer were standing by me. On shutting out the green light, my pilot said, "we are well clear." My answer was "port still." The steam vessel then turned off. Almost immediately afterwards I observed the coming vessel putting her helm hard a starboard, crossing my bow with full sails and steam. I stopped my engines; when she came nearly ahead of me I put my helm hard a starboard to clear her, immediately after striking her behind the mizen gear, our starboard bow striking her on the starboard quarter—the shock not being more than a graze. I turned round to see what damage was done. I had sent the chief officer down to see if we were making water. I said to the pilot, "I don't think much harm is done, if there is we shall soon see signal rockets." My engines were stopped about ten minutes; the chief officer came and reported the ship making water forward. I then said, "I see no signals of distress, go ahead." Nor did I hear anything; and as the ship was making water I made speed for Yokohama. While looking at the vessel astern, I asked my pilot, "Supposing that ship hurt, or I should require it, where could we go for safety." The answer was, "Not the slightest fear; the Spit is near, you cannot go down." Even after I came to Yokohama I thought little of the collision. I had not the slightest idea of the harm done; I did not know what ship it was. I said when it passed me, "that is an auxiliary screw." . . . The ship was about one hundred feet distant when she crossed my bow; another twenty feet and I should have cleared her. I do not think I was going at more than seven to eight and a-half knots. The wind was against me, the night was dark. When I first saw the bright light I think the ship was a mile distant. The ship must have been going at the rate of fourteen knots. After finding the ship coming right down on me I starboarded my helm to clear her. I was on the bridge the whole time. . . . My engines were stopped a couple of minutes before the collision when I saw the collision was imminent. I did not hail the ship' I was too busy trying to avoid the collision. The concussion was very light. On my bow were hanging afterwards the other ship's gaff and a boom. I was not at all entangled in the ship. The Bombay is an old iron ship, her plates a quarter of an inch thick. A spar from the other ship has perforated both sides of my ship, and is sticking in broken off. It is below water mark. The spar has gone right through in the stem. Supposing I had turned round after the collision I don't think I should have reached her in less than half an hour, because the other ship was flying off before the wind. When two ships come in collision during a dark night I am not aware that it is customary for the one to ascertain if the other has suffered damage. Perhaps in the open sea, not in close proximity to land, blue lights and rockets are the proper signals of distress, also gun-firing, if you are within hearing distance. I did not send up rockets, as I wanted no help. My instructions as captain of a mail steamer are to stop for nothing but to save life. It was at that time my firm opinion that there was no danger. The pilot said, "The Spit is close to, if there is any danger." I cannot account how the spar could strike my ship below the water line; at that time I thought the spar might have struck out from the other ship's quarter. I struck abaft the mizen rigging, and presumed she could, at all events, easily beach on the Spit. . . . This is the first accident I ever have had. When two ships collide I do not consider it usual to communicate or stay by each other, unless you think the other seriously damaged. I did not think the other ship was harmed. I asked the pilot if he thought so, and he said, "No, there is the Spit."

Mr. Loggin, chief officer of the Bombay, corroborated the captain's statement. In answer to Mr. Barnard, he said:—The o her vessel came right against us; her steering caused her to come across us. It was the captain who ordered the helm a port, not the pilot. It was more than an hour after the collision that I found out the spar had gone through our ship. It was only after we had anchored I reported it to the captain, who by no possibility could know it before, and if he had said so, it must be an error. We had no sail set; the other ship had all her sails set; she was barque rigged. The wind was North-east, and she had the wind on her port quarter. The tide was in her favour. I have never been here before. I saw the smoke from the other ship, so she was under steam. I did not know the other ship's quality or nationality. Our speed was eight knots; our course was due North. The other ship's speed I suppose was about eleven knots. I saw no measures taken on board the other ship to avoid the collision. I heard no sound or voices from the other ship, nor saw or heard any signal from her. Until I went below to sound our ship I should have seen or heard such signals if there had been any.

Mr. Barnard, during the second day's proceedings, protested against any American gentleman cross-examining in a British Court. If the American Minister would swear allegiance to the British Queen he would not object to his appearing in this inquiry.

His Honour interrupted Mr. Barnard, and told him that if he persisted in saying that this was no competent Court he would have to treat him as guilty of contempt of Court, and make him leave the room. There was no appeal from this Court.

Mr. Barnard wanted it recorded that he protested against the jurisdiction of this Court in its present form because there had been no complaint made by any one interested in the Bombay, and because the interest of the owners of the ship or the cargo did not require it. He objected to any American gentleman being permitted to examine in a British Court. He had no objection to an American citizen watching the proceedings and making suggestions in writing.

Mr. De Long stated that if he there occupied a false position it was not solely his own fault, as he had conferred with the British Consul, with whose consent he had done what he had hitherto done, in search of truth. He had not stated yesterday in Court that he would prosecute Captain Eyre for murder; he said that he would prosecute him for what crime the evidence of this court of inquiry should bear out.

The matter was subsequently arranged, and the evidence was continued.

Mr. Loggin said further:—When we passed the light-ship we made our mail signal, and fired a gun, two rockets, and a blue-light. I saw no response given from the light-ship. It did not occur to me that the Oneida's injury might be serious. I did not make any suggestion to the captain that it might be better to stop and see. In addition to finding our cutwater taken away, I also found a spar gone right through our bow. The spar is about two feet in length and eight inches in diameter. It has passed through two iron plates, each a quarter of an inch thick.

Richard Connor, the pilot of the Bombay, an American, was not licensed, but had piloted some thirty vessels. After describing the collision almost exactly as Captain Eyre and his mate had done, he said—"If I had thought there was any danger of lives being lost in the other ship I should have desired the captain of the Bombay to stop. If I had been in the position of Captain Eyre I should have gone on as he did. I do not think the captain had any idea of the other ship being seriously hurt. Before the engines were stopped the Bombay was going at seven knots. The tide and breeze were against us; the tide was two knots and a-half, the wind was a full sail breeze. I saw no smoke; if she had not had her mast head light up I should have thought her a sailing vessel until after I saw her fan. After the collision I saw her about two minutes. I did not see her clew up her sails. When I last saw her she must have been a cable's length distant." . . . . I thought of the Bombay's safety; I knew it was a mail and passenger boat. I saw no signal of distress from the other vessel, and I judged it best to go on with all speed to Yokohama. Had I known that the Bombay was in compartments my opinion might have been different. I heard no hail from the Oneida, "lie by us, you have cut us down!" I heard no word of command on beard the Oneida—heard no one speak. I heard a jar and crash of heavy timber cracking. I noticed the Oneida was a smaller vessel than ours, and I thought her deeply laden."

The Court then adjourned.

The following items are from the local papers :—

A sale of Bluff lands took place on the 17th January, when twenty-nine lots brought a total of $13,869.83. The quantity of land sold was 22,387 tsubos, something less than 19 acres. Besides this payment an annual rental is charged of $12 per 100 tsubos, or $82,686 on the entire quantity sold. So that for the privilege of paying a rental of £31 an acre on 19 acres of common arable country land, some of it in very indifferent positions, without any agreeable view, or anything to recommend it except the mere name of being in the country, our good citizens have paid at the rate of about £160 sterling per acre. What will landholders in the neighbourhood of London or New York say to this?

Lady Parkes returned to Yokohama by the P. and O. steamer Bombay, after a visit to England.

The following particulars of the railway, which is to be forthwith commenced in Japan under the auspices of Mr. H. N. Lay, will be read with interest :—The line is to be from Yedo to Osaka, with a branch line to Yokohama, and from Osaka, along Lake Brica, to Tsuruga, a port south of Niigata. It is anticipated that so soon as the line is inaugurated the supplies of rice, which have now to pass by a lengthened water route, will be brought down from Tsuruga by rail; and that the difference in distance will more than compensate for the extra cost of the improved carriage. Mr. Lay leaves for England by the present mail steamer.

An illicit powder manufactory has blown up in the south—five men being killed and fourteen wounded. As soon as the latter recover—if they do recover—they will be executed.

A pretty sharp shock of earthquake was felt on Thursday morning about half-past six, the duration of which, however, was but momentary. The earth-wave apparently vibrated from west to east.

The telegraph to Yedo is now open. The tariff is pretty liberal, being fixed at one boo for every hundred and fifty Japanese characters, and English messages charged proportionately. Messengers are charged half a boo per mile (Japanese).

A great fire is raging in Yedo, which has interrupted telegraphic communication. Rumour alleges that it will prove a terrible disaster to the city. Three thousand houses are said to be destroyed.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

The first section of the proposed railway in Japan is to be from Yokohama to Yedo, a distance of about twenty-two miles. This is to be completed in a year.

Public gardens at Yokohama have been proposed. The Commercial Department is going to undertake a large work in Yedo, reclaiming all the land, which at low tide is left uncovered, between the island (nearly opposite the hotel) and the forts, and make the channel so that good sized vessels can get up.

The Ellery, from Liverpool, has been lost on the coast; she was bringing out material for the lighthouses; this will cause a long delay in its erection. Great competition between the landowners and speculators of Yokohama and Yedo; the latter are afraid that the former will outdo them, and the capital will become deserted. The commercial portion of Yedo is full of life; the official deserted, dilapidated, and where houses formerly stood now gardens. The reclaiming work at Benten is finished; the speculator in this is said to have sold the ground to other speculators when the water was flowing over it, and has made a large fortune by it. The Commercial Department are buying foreign cattle and pigs, and are anxious to improve their breed. No meat can be better—not even English stall-fed—than that now coming from Kobé to Yokohama.

The late Shiogoon, who is now residing at, and who is the owner of, the province of Suringa, has established schools in every town and village, and ordered all the boys to be instructed in one foreign language; English is the most popular one. He has also started schools for medicine, &c., and others for the instruction of the army and navy. He encourages the cultivation of the land in every way, and I think he is the most pushing man of the day.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

Advices from this port are to the 2nd Feb. Since the arrival of the outward mail of Dec. 3 no later news had been received from home. The Chinese New Year holidays had brought the usual stagnation, and there is very little news. The following tems are from the North China Herald :—

A fire broke out in Messrs. Jardine and Matheson's hong last Sunday night, but was fortunately extinguished before it had done very serious damage. It made its appearance in the entrance hall and in the two bedrooms immediately over it, and the injury done by the flames was chiefly confined to these, though much other damage was of course done by the water thrown from the various engines. Had it not been for the ready attendance and timely exertions of the Fire Brigade, the result would probably have been most serious. The fire appears to have originated in the bedrooms, and to have burned through the ceiling.

H.B.M.'s Consul has lately received two visits from deputations sent by the opium guild, at the instance of the Taotai, with the object of securing consular co-operation towards the protection of the inland duty revenue on opium, from the evasion which is now so largely practised. Various schemes were proposed, more or less tending to restrict the free retail of the drug by foreigners to Chinese within the settlement; and it was even suggested that transfers of opium from the premises of one foreigner to another should be prohibited, save under special permit. We hear that H.M. Consul has persistently declined to lend himself to any proposition which in any way militates against the principle laid down in the tariff rule, or which relieves the Chinese from the onus of proving that the drug is Chinese owned, if they wish to claim the right to impose an inland tax upon its admission.

The Chinese steamer Kwa-shing has just returned from a cruise to the Saddle Islands, during which she managed to capture a pirate boat, and one man of the crew who seems likely to be able to throw some light on the murder of Pilot Stevens. The object of her cruise was to inspect the Gutzlaff light, and to enable Mr. Henderson to survey a spot for a proposed light on the Saddles; both of which duties she performed satisfactorily. And, strangely enough, on her way up to Shanghai on Monday, the Kwa-shing passed a mandarin boat towing a pirate junk which she had just captured, and which turned out to be one of the identical consorts. We have more than once urged, when news of piracies in our neighbourhood has arrived, that the Arsenal gun-boats should be employed to cruise about the islands of the archipelago; and the present incident naturally suggests a renewal of the demand. The Chusan archipelago is a natural resort for pirates, and it is little creditable to the provincial authorities that they should keep, lying idle, steamers admirably fitted for policing these waters. We are aware that our paper is translated for the information of the Futai, and we commend these remarks to his attention.

News has been received of the total loss, on the Pescadore Islands, of the British ship Westburn, from Foochow to London. The captain and crew were saved.

Small-pox is very prevalent at Peking; so the residents have been in quarantine, and have spent a dull New Year in consequence. We have had one or two rather cold nights—four above zero. Report says Chung-how, of Tientsin, is to come up to the Tsung-li-Yamên, to take the place of Wen-siang, who has resigned on account of ill-health.

We have received Tientsin letters to the 10th inst., but they contain no news, except that small-pox is as prevalent there as it is at Peking. Several men from the Opossum have caught it. The weather cold, but clear and pleasant.

Messrs. Muihead's new screw pile iron pontoon, recently erected off their Pootung property, offers great facilities for vessels requiring repair, which are enabled to go alongside and are in direct communication with the Workshops and Foundries on shore. We notice that the Steamers Yuentszefei, and Dragon, are at present both at the Pontoon undergoing a general overhaul. The Nanzing is in the Tunkadoo.

HONG KONG.

The outward mail of 23rd December arrived on the 5th Feb. Dates are now down to the 8th February.

A new fire insurance company has been established under the management of Messrs. Augustine Heard and Co., also a steam company for running steamers to the Straits, Saigon, &c. The capital of the first company is $1,500,000, and the latter $600,000. Another company has also been formed by Messrs. John Bond and Co., to run a line of steamers to the Straits and coast of China; capital, $500,000.

The following items are from the China Mail :—

No little surprise has been caused in Hong Kong by the return to its protection of a Chinese who, some twelve years ago, was transported hence to Labuan, upon a charge most conclusively proved of confederating with pirates. Machow Wong, the individual in question, was tried on the 2nd Sept., 1857, and, having been found guilty, was sentenced to a punishment, mild indeed for the offence committed, of fifteen years' transportation. While at Labuan undergoing his sentence he headed a conspiracy or mutiny, on the part of the convicts, for which he received a further sentence of two years, making in all a period of seventeen years for which Hong Kong should rightfully have been rid of his presence. But to universal astonishment he turns up here, having landed some eight or nine days since, just twelve years four months and some days before what is generally believed to be the proper expiration of his sentence. We may of course conclude that he has received a pardon; but a grave question then arises as to what powers are possessed by the local Government over a convicted malefactor who, without its concurrence being asked, is able to again take refuge under its paternal care, owing to his most righteous sentence having been partially remitted.

Machow Wong has, it is said, put in an appearance in order to obtain from the late Tam Achoy a portion of the sum of some $20,000 which he alleges were due to him. Still more strange is the fact that Machow Wong comes from the West Indies. What influence has been at work for his pardon, and what steps can be taken to prevent that relapse into crime to which the Chinese nature is so given, and why is he allowed to return at all without the consent of the local government? We must leave these questions in the hands of the local government for answer. We may add that owing to some successful trading operations in "chandlery" the gentleman in question is said to be worth some $20,000. This latter fact may be a useful hint as regards the native portion of our police.

Baron von Gumpach is, we believe, about to bring an action against Mr. Hart, at least so say the Shanghai papers. But it is not very clear what the action is about, as there does not seem to have been any failure to pay the salary agreed upon. It will be rather amusing if a jury should have to assess the damage inflicted upon a professor by his being made the object of public chaff, as a schoolmaster without pupils. When the action does come off we trust that our North China contemporaries will furnish verbatim reports. For our own part, we are rather incredulous of any such proceedings enlivening the tedium of the legal session at the "Model Settlement."

The case of F S. Huffam, official assignee of the estate of Lyall, Still and Co., v. Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris and Others came on the Feb. 2.

Mr. White, instructed by Mr. Hazeland, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Hayllar, instructed by Mr. Caldwell, was for all the defendants. This Bill in Chancery was filed by plaintiff as official assignee of the bankrupt estate of Messrs. Lyall, Still and Co., and came on for hearing on Feb. 2. The facts and the proceedings connected with the assignment, made by Lyall, Still and Co. of certain property to the Comptoir d'Escompte and the Chartered Bank, are well known; and the main point now at issue is that the said assignment or bill of sale is legally fraudulent and void. Upon this ground the planitiff in his bill of complaint prays, "that the writing or document of the 22nd day of December, 1866, purporting to be an assignment by the said firm of Lyall, Still, and Co., to the said defendants, the Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris and the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, of the said goods therein specified, is fraudulent and void, and that the defendants may be decreed to deliver up the said writing or document to the plaintiff as such official assignee as aforesaid, for the purpose of its being cancelled." Also, the plaintiff prays that all the goods, shares, premises, chattels, &c., which passed by virtue of the said assignment, be decreed to be delivered up to him as official assignee; that defendants might be ordered to render proper accounts of the said property (sums realised and dividends received), to execute transfers, and to pay the costs of the action. Judgment not given.

The half-yearly meeting of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank was held on the 3rd February; Mr. Lemann in the chair. The chairman, having read the notice calling the meeting, presented the report of the directors, which, as it had been circulated, was held as read. The report, the chairman observed, was sufficiently clear as to the position of the bank; but he would be happy to hear any remarks made upon it. After a pause, the chairman moved the adoption of the report; which proposition, having been seconded by Mr. Helland, was unanimously carried. The chairman then suggested that the re-election, or otherwise, of Messrs. Forbes, Joost and Sassoon, as directors, was the next business before the meeting. Mr. Whyte proposed, and Mr. Hart seconded, that the gentlemen named be re elected; which motion was carried unanimously. Mr. Walker proposed that Messrs. Macaulay and Vickers be re-elected as auditors; which motion, having been seconded by Dr. Dod, was unanimously carried by the meeting. Mr. Granville Sharp then proposed a vote of thanks to the directors for the manner in which, in difficult times, they had succeeded in giving so very favourable a report. The chairman returned thanks to Mr. Sharp and the meeting for the kind manner in which he had spoken of them. He hoped that the present year would be as successful as the last. He thought that considerable credit was due to all the officers of the Bank, and that their success was greatly due to them. The meeting, which was a very harmonious one, then separated.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

From this port we have no general news of any importance. The following commercial items are from the Circular of Messrs. W. G. Hale and Co.:—

RICE.—The demand for Japan has continued throughout the month at steadily increasing prices; sales amount to about 200,000 piculs, the market closing steadily at $1.54 (equal to 6s. 3½d. f.o.b.) for No. 1's, round grain; in long grain we note sales of about 20,000 piculs at $1.45 (equal to 5s. 11d. f.o.b.). For Europe there has been no demand, orders from that quarter being at far too low limits to admit of purchases. Recent advices from Japan render it probable that the demand for that country will continue some time longer, in which event we cannot look for such a decline in prices as would render the execution of European orders possible.

FREIGHTS.—The arrival of many seeking vessels has caused some decline in the market, and 43 to 45 cents is now the best rate obtainable for Japan. In home charters there is nothing doing.

EXCHANGE is without material alteration. We quote:—London, 6 months, with documents, 4s. 7d. nominal; Paris, 6 months, f.5.85; Mauritius, 60 days, f.6.10; Hong Kong, 30 days, 3½ to 3¾ per cent. dis.; Singapore, 3 days, par.

SIAM.

—o—

BANGKOK.

Dates from this place are to the 5th Feb. The Summary gives the following items:—

A salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the front of the International Court-house at noon on the 17th January, when F. C. C. Kobke Esq., Danish Consul, with an autograph letter from the King of Denmark to the King of Siam, landed, en route to the place, to have a public audience with H.M the Wang Luang.

His Excellency Adolpho Palxot, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary for the Spanish Government to China and Siam, had a public audience with H.M. the Wang-na at noon on the 23rd Jan.

We are very happy to announce the return of the Rev. Messrs. McDonald and George late in the evening of the 24th from Cheangmai. They appear to be in good health and to have had a very exciting and interesting trip of it. On their way up they left Rahaang on the 13th ult., and were thirteen days thence to Cheangmai via the land route by a caravan of twenty elephants and about four times that number of men. They found the two mission families in quite comfortable health, though living in the greatest simplicity by the sweat of their own faces and doing with their own hands nearly all the work they had been accustomed to give to the charge of their servants. This was a natural result of the two executions that had taken place among the native Christians and the well known hostility of the Chief to the Christian religion. The mission dwellings were large and airy, but, being built only for a temporary purpose, were of frail material.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The dates from this port are to the 15th February. The outward mail of 31st December arrived on the 4th February with telegrams to 27th January. The following is from the Straits Times of 15th February:—The past fortnight has been, as usual during the Chinese New Year, a remarkably dull one. The festivities commenced on the 31st ult., and terminated last evening, with a deafening roar of crackers and squibs, lasting from dusk until a late hour of the evening.

The British ship Dilbhur, which vessel was towed here from Batavia for repairs, having grounded on the voyage from Zebu to London, sailed again for her destination, with her original cargo, which had sustained no damage. The civil sittings of the Supreme Court began on the 24th ultimo, and closed on the 4th instant.

A movement has recently been set on foot for the establishment of a regular line of steamers to ply between this port, Saigon, Hong Kong, Swatow and Amoy, to connect with the North China steamer Company's vessels for ports further north. The scheme will no doubt prove a paying one in the end, and one likely to encounter a lively opposition. If a good class of steam vessels are placed on the route, they will doubtless absorb the greater part of the traffic now carried on by sailing ships.

It is proposed to raise a joint-stock company for the purpose, and, somewhat singularly, two prospectuses were issued in Hong Kong within a day of each other, for the establishment of companies to engage in this traffic. Should the scheme float and become an established fact—and there seems at present little reason to doubt it—it cannot fail to be beneficial to Singapore and increase its importance as a centre of trade and as the "Key to China."

The chief mate and two of the crew of the North German barque Peru arrived at Singapore. They reported the total loss of that vessel on the Bombay Shoal, in the Palawan Passage. The Peru was from Amoy, and bound to Singapore and Penang, with 500 Chinese coolies on board. The chief mate states that, just as he was leaving, the ship was seen to break up, so that there is too much reason to fear that the rest of the crew and the passengers have been drowned. This is such a frightful calamity that we trust it will draw the attention of the North German Confederation and other Governments in Europe to the overcrowding of vessels sailing under their flags with Chinese passengers, and induce them to take measures similar to those adopted by Great Britain some years ago for checking this frightful abuse.

The following is the circulation of the Banks:—Chartered Bank of India, $209,800. Chartered Mercantile, $214,583. Oriental Bank, $208,000.

Commercial Report.

(For dates see First Page.)

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

SHANGHAI.—Grey Shirtings: Considering the season, it being Chinese New Year, there had been more than an average business doing on Chinese account, and a speculative one on foreigners' orders, who seemed to anticipate both a good demand and a rise in price on the resumption of business. Prices were unaltered. T-Cloths: Some speculative operations had been entered into, but no advance in rates can be quoted. White Shirtings: The demand for these goods had not relaxed, and inquiries were made at previous quotations. Drills and Jeans: For the former, outport accounts were rather better; Jeans and Sheetings without activity. Fancy Goods: Dyed, Brocades, and Spot Shirtings firmer. Woollens and Worsteds very depressed. Low prices in Figured Orleans had tempted buyers.

HANKOW.—Cotton Goods: Grey Shirtings: The market had been firm, and a fair amount of business had been done in 8¼ lbs. goods, at 2 to 4 candareens advance. 7 lbs. cloth scarce, and quoted 7 candareens higher. Heavy makes had found buyers at somewhat better rates. The market closed strong at Tls. 2.07 to 2.10 per piece for 7 l s., Tls. 2.22 to 2.26 for 8¼ lbs., and Tls. 2.80 to 2.95 for 9¾ lbs. goods. White Shirtings: A few small sales effected at last quotations. T-Cloths: Some enquiry for 8 lbs. at Tls. 2.06 to 2.09 per piece, and sales to a fair extent reported; 7 lbs goods taken in small quantities, at Tls. 1.75 to 1.77 per piece for good makes. Drills continued very dull. Fancy Cottons: Little had been done. Woollens and Worsteds—Camlets: Favourite makes, of good assortment, had found buyers to a small extent, but for other descriptions there had been no inquiry. Lastings neglected. Long Ells: A few retail sales constituted the business of the fortnight. Spanish Stripes and Medium Cloths not wanted. Figured Orleans and China Crapes: Some trifling sales at low prices. Metals.—Lead: Rather more business had been doing at last mails rates.

FOOCHOW.—The only transaction reported had been 450 pieces 7 lbs. T-Cloths, at $2.60 per piece.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant's Report:—The Chinese New Year Holidays have considerably interfered with business. Cotton Yarn: Previous quotations are repeated, and no special change is noticeable in the state of the market. Settlements of Nos. 16-24 have been upon a liberal scale, as importers have readily met buyers' offers, and at ruling rates a continued good business bids fair to be kept up. Only one or two small parcels of Nos. 38-42 Yarns are on offer, and these continue to be held at dear figures. Piece Goods: Fair settlements have resulted, and the market has shown a somewhat strengthened tone for the staple manufactures. 7 lb. Grey Shirtings have advanced 2½ cents per piece, whilst 8.4 lb. are in steady demand at the extreme quotation last given; 9 to 10 lb. goods are being taken for shipment to the North at a rise of 5 to 10 cents upon previous prices. The inquiry for White Shirtings has strengthened, and fine goods are wanted, at somewhat hardened rates. Values of T-cloths are unaltered, but common 6 lb. have been in strong demand, whilst 7 lb. have met with fair attention; 8 lb. goods are in small supply, and are held at figures over quotations. No demand has as yet set in for Drills, and the late small sales show a decline in values; quotations for all descriptions are now nominally 5 cents lower, in view of the increased stocks; supplies of Jeans and Sheetings are very small, and in consequence former rates are maintained; common Turkey Reds are in some request; good Chintzes are still wanted. Woollens: Beyond a weakness in Spanish Stripes and Camlets there is no change to notice, as nothing of moment has transpired. Metals: Nail Rod Iron has been fairly dealt in, and has advanced 5 cents; Soft Bar is weaker; Hoop is out of stock; Wire is neglected; the demand for Lead has slackened, and values are somewhat weaker; best chops of Tin are held at an advance of $1; Tin Plates are in large supply and but little wanted; Quicksilver shows a further improvement, and Californian is held for still higher rates. Coal: Arrivals have been 3,385 tons Cardiff, the greater portion of which comes to consumers. A single sale comprises the business of the fortnight, being a cargo of 500 tons Sydney taken at the exceptional figure of $6 per ton. Ginseng: Dealers have been inquiring moderately, and a somewhat improved feeling is noticeable, whilst settlements of Crude Root to the extent of 100 casks have been reported, at prices ranging from $90 to $135. The current quotations were:—Cotton Yarn, per bale, 16 to 24, Tls. 140 to 145; 28 to 32, Tls. 142.50 to 150.00; 38 to 42, Tls. 175.00 to 185.00; Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., Tls. 2.45 to 2.55; 8.4 lbs., Tls. 2.80 to 2.85; 9 to 10 lbs., Tls. 3.00 to 3.90; White Shirtings, Tls. 2.55 to 3.75; fine, Tls. 4.20; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., Tls. 1.95 to 2.05; 7 lbs., Tls. 2.12½ to 2.20; Mexicans, Tls. 2.30 to 2.40; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls. 2.65 to 2.80; Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.65 to 0.74; Long Ells, per piece, H, Tls. 7.43 to 7.50; ditto, HH, Tls. 7.50 to 7.60; Blankets, Tls. 0.43 to 0.50; Camlets, SSS, Tls. 13.00 to 13.50; S.S., Tls. 15.00 to 15.75; S., Tls. 17.00 to 17.50; Iron Nail Rods, Tls. 2.30 to 2.50; Lead, L.B., Tls. 6.50; ditto, W.B., Tls. 6.55 to 6.75.

BATAVIA.—Grey Shirtings: There had been very little enquiry, but demand was likely to improve. Small sales of 39 inch 7 lbs. shirtings reported at f.7¼ credit, and for 8¼ lbs. f.8⅛ was offered. Madapollams placed to a moderate extent 8 lbs. saleable at f.3¼. Drills in light stock, but demand languid. White Shirtings very dull, only trifling sales practicable, 45 inch of prime quality offered at f.11, and some sales reported. Stocks of 15s. and 16s. Cambrics increased, holders anxious to realise, but in the absence of demand no reasonable offers obtainable. Last sales at f.4¾ short credit; 24s scarce and wanted at f.3.50 cash. Dyed Cambrics saleable only at very low rates. Grey Twist scarce in second hands, small sales of 40s. reported at f.440 credit; other counts in little request. Dyed Yarns unsaleable. Woollens, generally very dull. The market fully supplied with all descriptions of Metals; sales with difficulty effected.

SINGAPORE.—Messrs. Boustead and Co. report as follows:—After the departure of last mail our Import market continued exceedingly quiet, but during the past few days business has been resumed with activity, and considerable transactions have taken place in some descriptions of goods. 39 inch Grey Shirtings:—8¼ lbs. in demand, and supplies being very scarce the price has advanced to $3; 7 lbs. also wanted and worth $2.52½ to 2.55; 6 lbs. in but limited demand at $2.10. 45 inch in but very small inquiry, rates weak; 8 lbs. only worth $2.80/85. 36 inch White Shirtings: Common descriptions saleable at fair rates; 64 reed in rather more demand, and sales at $3 to 3.15, according to quality; a few well-known makes of fine descriptions saleable at firm rates. 45 inch unaltered. 36 inch White Spots in demand, sales at $2.85/87½. 45 inch White Cambrics: 24s in less demand, a quality counting 16 by 16 sold at $20½ per corge; 15/16s saleable to a limited extent at $31¾ to 33 per corge. 30 inch White Madapollams saleable at last rates. 33 inch Imitation Irish Linens in better inquiry, sales at $2.05 to 2.12½. 32 inch Grey T-Cloths: Light weights in no demand; 5 lbs. sold to a limited extent at $1.55/60; 6 lbs. of good quality, in request at $1.82½ to 87½; 7 lbs. saleable at $2.10 to 12½ to a small extent. 32-inch Grey Madapollams: 3 lbs. sold at $21.75; demand small. 30-inch Grey Drills in increased supply, and but little demand. Small sales of 9½ lbs., English and Dutch, at $65 to 68 per corge. 32-inch Turkey Red Cambrics in rather better demand, but at lower rates. 2 lbs. 4 ozs., placed at $2.10 to 2.15, 2 lbs. 8 ozs., at $2.25 to 2.30, 2 lbs. 12 ozs., at $2.42½ to 2.45, 3 lbs. at $2.50 to 2.55. Grey Yarns: 18-24 in limited inquiry, at $125 to 127½. 30s wanted at $140 to 142½, 40s placed at $148 to 150. Coloured Yarns: Turkey Red sold at $155 to 157½ for 12 lbs.; Imperial Red, saleable at $78; Green placed at $82½ to 85; Orange worth $80 to 82½. Woollens unaltered in value, demand for all descriptions almost nil. Metals: Large clearances of Yellow Metal at $21½ to 21¾. Copper Sheathing in more demand at late rates. Transactions in Iron limited to small sales of Nail Rods and Govan Flat-bar at last quotations. Swedish Steel dull at $3.65. Pig Lead firm and in brisk demand, a sale to arrive at $6½.

PENANG.—The business had been on a very limited scale, owing to the Chinese New Year holidays. Grey Shirtings had hardly moved; one sale reported of 6 lbs. goods at $42¾ per corge. Grey Long Cloths: No transactions. Grey Madapollams not in stock; no business. Grey T-Cloths: A few sales reported of 6 lbs. at $38, and of 7 lbs. at $43 to 44 per corge. White Shirtings continued dull; a small quantity medium quality sold at $60 per corge; in fine no transactions, nor in 45-inch. White Cambrics of medium quality disposed of to a small extent at $26¾ and 27 per corge; stocks of low much reduced; Nos. 15/16 sold at $32⅛ to 32½ per corge. Grey Sheetings: A few buyers at $84 to 88 per corge. Almost all descriptions of Dyed Cottons had been very languid. One sale of Brocade reported at $80 per corge. A few sales of Turkey Red Cambrics at $42½ for 2⅛ to 2¼ lbs.; 2 lbs. 6 oz., at $44; and 2 lbs. 14 oz., at $51½ per corge. Grey Mule, No. 40, quiet, only a single sale at $150 per bale of 400 lbs. No. 30 not in stock; some little request at former prices; for Nos. 16-24 no demand. Small sales of Turkey Red Yarn, No. 40, at $144 per bale of 200 lbs., and of Green at $83. All other descriptions of yarn very dull.

STRAITS, SIAM, CHINA, AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had been quieter during the fortnight, but prices had been maintained, and settlements made at last quotations to the extent of about 2,300 piculs of all grades from common to fine, almost entirely for the New York market. Arrivals having nearly kept pace with settlements, stocks were but little reduced. The P. M. S. S. Company's steamer Japan took 68,682 lbs. for San Francisco, and 106,658 lbs. for New York. The Havelock had sailed for New York with 472,650 lbs. The Crest of the Wave, Benefactress, and Cœur de Lion were loading for New York, and the Alphonsine for Boston. Quotations: Common, $22 to 24 per picul, nominal; Good Common, $25 to 27 ditto; Medium, $28 to 31 ditto; Good Medium, $32 to 34 ditto; Fine, $36 to 38 ditto; Finest, $39 to 44 ditto; Choice, nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A very small business had been transacted. Arrivals from the River Ports had been insignificant, and the stock was unimportant. Prices of the few lots purchased were fully up to those previously current. Settlements for the fortnight, 4,100 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,034 chests; stock, 26 chops, or 6,477 packages. Quotations (duty paid, exchange at 6s. 1d. per tael, freight at £2 sterling):—Hohow, common, Tls. 16½, 11½d. to 1s. 0½d.; Oonam, common, Tls. 17½, 1s. 0½d.; Ningchow, common, Tls. 19, 1s. 1¼d. to 1s. 1¾d.; Oopack, common, Tls. 18¾, 1s. 1¼d. to 1s. 1¾d. Green: Considering the undesirable quality of the Tea on offer a fair amount of business had been transacted, and full rates had been paid, especially for common chops, which commanded high prices when compared with previous settlements of good and fine Teas. The market was cleared of fine chops, and very few remain that can be classed with medium. Receipts of country Tea about 1,500 half-chests in excess of last year. Quotations:—Moyune and Teenkai, Tls. 31 to 41; Fychow, Tls. 26 to 36; Pingsuey, Tls. 30 to 31; Shanghai packed Tls. 25 to 30. Settlements for the fortnight, 10,910 half-chests; reshipments on owners' account, 653 half-chests. Stocks, 101 chops or 41,133 half-chests.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The market must be quoted generally higher. The business done amounts to about 800 bales, and would probably have been larger had it not been for the scantiness of arrivals, the poor selections on offer, and the absence of many of the owners. The principal demand had been for Oshus, and the proportion of this class among the settlements was unusually large—high prices had been paid for it, viz:—$625 to $650 for Hamatsky, and $810 to $845 for best parcels. Quotations: Mybash and Sinchu Hanks, extra, 34s. 6d.; best, 31s. 10d. to 33s. 9d.; medium, 29s. 2d. to 31s. 6d.; inferior, 25s. 4d. to 28s. 5d.; Oshu, extra, 34s. 6d.; best, 32s. 2d. to 34s.; medium, 28s. 5d. to 31s. 6d.; inferior, 25s. 4d. to 27s. 7d.; Coshu, best, 27s. 2d. to 29s. 1d.; medium, 25s. 4d. to 26s. 10d.; inferior, 22s. 8d. to 24s. 7d.; Sodai, best, 27s. 2d. to 28s. 5d.; medium, 24s. 7d. to 26s. 6d.

SHANGHAI.—We derive the following from Messrs. Skeggs and Co.'s report, dated February 1:—The higher prices reported in our last issue were again advanced on an average of about 10 taels for the French mail which left on the 26th January, taking forward 562 bales; since then business has necessarily been limited, owing to the small available supply the Chinese New Year holidays, and the still more exorbitant prices asked by the few holders of stock, so that the present steamer will not likely take more than 300 bales. In Tsatlees, Tls. 565, equal to 29s. 9d. has been offered for Koo-fong-sings and Choopings chops. Tls. 470, equal to 24s. 10d. for Red Peacocks, and the commonest sorts fetch from 21s. 9d. to 22s. per lb. With such a limited business and selection little can be said of the various other descriptions of Silk, further than that all have shared in the higher rates paid, and still being demanded.

SIAM AND STRAITS PRODUCE.

BANGKOK.—Messrs. Markwald and Co. report as follows:—Rice: Supplies of grain have continued very limited, whilst on the other hand a very brisk demand prevailed for rice throughout the past month, which led to a further advance in prices. Our trade returns for 1869 show that the exports of rice during the past year amounted to nearly three millions of piculs, which is 600,000 piculs more than the exports of the previous year. The shipments, especially during the past three months, have been so large that stocks of old grain are now nearly exhausted; supplies of new grain were and are still very small, and in consequence thereof prices advanced towards the end of January even to $1.42 per picul for Steam Mill Garden, and $1.20 per picul for Steam Mill Field Rice. Our natives have endeavoured to despatch most of their chartered vessels before the Chinese, holidays, and there are now only some twenty foreign ships in port most of which are already partly laden. It may therefore be expected that the demand for rice will relax a little, and that a gradual decline of prices will be the consequence. The high rice prices here have of course led to a cessation of shipments to Europe, and some time must necessarily elapse before prices will again be low enough to allow the resumption of business for the home market. Sugar: Supplies of new white Sugar have made their appearance in the market and found purchasers for Singapore and Bombay. Of brown sorts there are no stocks, neither of old nor of new Sugars; supplies of new brown are expected in a month hence. Quotations are for White Superior, Tls. 10¼ per picul; No. 1, Tls. 10 per picul; No. 2, Tls. 9½ per picul; No. 3, Tls. 9 per picul. Quotations for brown are quite nominal. Black Pepper: None in the market. Sapanwood: Larger shipments have been made to China, and prices have experienced an advance. Stocks are light.

SINGAPORE.—Malacca Tin, for China, about 500 piculs of the most approved brand had been placed at $29 to 29¼; other good brands at $28¾ to 28 to extent of about 400 piculs; no demand for Europe or America. Gambier scarce; dealers employed in executing Pepper contracts, small engagements made at $3.07½ to 3⅛. Black Pepper in good inquiry, contracts made at $7.40 to 7.42½. White Pepper: Sales of about 1,000 piculs at $10½ to 11, according to quality. Sago Flour: An arrival of 2,000 piculs Sarawak brought $2.37½. Pearl Sago in good demand, about 3,500 piculs contracted for at $3.15 to 3.06 per picul. Tapioca: Sales of Flake at $4 to 4.15, and of Pearl at $3.75 to 4. Buffalo Hides still in demand; supplies unusually scarce, worth $10½ to 10¾ for good quality. Gum Damar: Good quality inquired for, and worth $17½; no arrivals. Rattans very scarce, no good quality on the market. India-rubber: No arrivals worth $36½. Gutta-Percha: 200 piculs best quality brought $84. Coffee: Sales of 4,000 piculs Bontyne at $12.50; stock small.

PENANG.—Tin: Purchases range at prices from $25.95 to $26.25 per picul. About 1,100 piculs of Black Pepper from Trang purchased at $7.30 and $7.35 per picul; a small quantity of White offering, of very inferior quality. In Nutmegs only one sale reported of 110 per lb., at $53½ per picul; in Mace a purchase of No. 1 at $80. Coffee offered sparingly, and taken at $18½ per picul, good quality. Cutch had been purchased in boxes at $4.40 per picul, and the balance on the market was held for a higher figure. India-rubber in small supply, and taken at $36 per picul. Fish Maws: No sales reported. Gum Benjamin, No. 1, $50; No. 2, T. T. and Co., $20 to $20½; No. 3, $18 per picul. Hides not in large supply; Buffalo taken at $10 to $10.50 per picul, and Cow at $14 to $14.25 per picul; Horns at $10.10 per picul.

NOTICES TO MARINERS.

The following notices have been issued from the Admiralty-office:—

CHINA—YANG-TSE-KIANG.—FIXED LIGHT ON GUTZLAFF ISLAND.—The harbour-master at Shanghai has given notice that from the 1st day of November, 1869, a light would be exhibited from a lighthouse recently erected on Gutzlaff Island, at the entrance of the Yang-tse-kiang. The light is a fixed white light, elevated 270 feet above the level of the sea, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of twenty miles The illuminating apparatus is dioptric or by lenses, of the third order. When it is desired to attract the attention of passing vessels, a gun or guns will be fired and signals made. During fogs guns will be fired in answer to the fog signals of passing vessels.

JAPAN—NIPON, EAST COAST.—FIXED LIGHT ON ROCK ISLAND.—The Japanese Government has given notice, that a temporary light is now exhibited from a lighthouse recently erected on Rock Island, off Simoda harbour, Nipon. The light is a fixed white light, elevated eighty feet above high water, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of fourteen miles. The tower is in lat. 34 deg. 34 min. 20 sec. N., long. 138 deg. 57 min. 10 sec. East from Greenwich.

JAPAN—YEDO BAY.—LIGHT VESSEL IN YOKOHAMA BAY.—Information has been received that a light-vessel has been placed at the extremity of the shoal water off Mandarin bluff in Yokohama bay. The vessel exhibits a fixed red light, elevated 36 feet above the sea, which in clear weather should be seen from a distance of ten miles; has two masts, and carries a ball at the foremast head. From the light-vessel Treaty point bears S.W. ¾ S.; Mandarin bluff, S.W. by W.; and the mouth of the canal, W. ¼ N. (All bearings are magnetic. Variation, 2¼ deg. Westerly in 1870.)

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks.—"The singular success which Mr. Epps has attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in tin-lined packets labelled—JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.

ALTERATION IN THE FRENCH MAIL SERVICE.

THE directors of the Messageries Imperiales have issued a new time-table, showing the alterations in the mail service consequent on the adoption of a new route through the Suez Canal. The most important change announced is that from this time their outward steamers will leave Marseilles on Sunday instead of Saturday; so that the mails will be made up in London on Friday. The French service being thus assimilated with that of the P. and O. Company, the two together will, from the beginning of July, carry a regular weekly mail. The time occupied on the entire voyage will be the same as at present; that is to say, the mails will reach Yokohama one day later than by the old time-table. The due dates of the homeward mails remain unaltered, and the only other new feature presented by the new time-table consists in the substitution of Port Saïd and Ismailia in place of Alexandria. The outward mails are timed to reach Port Saïd one day later than under the old system they would have reached Alexandria.

The Times of Saturday has a leading article on the reply of the China merchants to Lord CLARENDON; the Globe of the same day one on the Transit Dues question; and the Pall Mall Gazette of to-day on Treaty Revision generally. We have not space even for extracts from them.

THE NEW CHINA CONVENTION.

(To the Editor of The Times.)

SIR,—A misapprehension on the part of the Government as to local opinion in regard to the new Convention with China has been referred to in your leading article of this day on the subject.

You say, "It would be interesting to inquire how far the change of local opinion is due to advices from home."

We have informed Lord Clarendon that local opinion did not change, but was always hostile to the Convention; and a comparison of dates will show that nothing from England could have reached China in time to have any influence one way or the other.

The terms of the Convention were first published in The Times of the 11th of January, but the memorials from Shanghai and Hong Kong, both equally condemning its provisions, were actually despatched by the mail of the 25th of January, being dated the 16th and 21st respectively.

In fact, opinions in China were formed before we had even been made aware that a treaty was being negotiated.—I remain, Sir, yours faithfully, CHARLES MAGNIAC.

SPURIOUS TEA.

Another lot of similar quality has since been offered for sale. On th 15th instant, at the meeting of the City Commissioners of Sewers, Mr Hewett drew Dr. Letheby's attention to the sale of fifty chests of tea described by the firm selling them as "Finest new season's scented or Pekoe siftings, per Pakwan," and by Mr. Hewett as "the vilest stuff he had ever seen." He added that he believed the tea was partly made up of cast-steel filings. Dr. Letheby replied that he had received notice of the sale, and secured samples of the tea with a view to future proceedings against the sellers. It was pointed out at the meeting of the Sewers' Commissioners that tea has now been decided to be "food" and also a "vegetable," and that the Act consequently applies in this case. The tea in question, however, appears from Mr. Hewett's description to be rather a mineral than a vegetable. Possibly the sellers may set this up as a defence to any proceedings against them under the Act. Mr. Deputy De Jersey sensibly observed that the Government might stop the matter at once if they would refuse to receive duty on such rubbish.

MR. COOPER'S TRAVELS.

The following letter from Mr. Cooper, the explorer, has been published in the Indian papers:—

"Sudiya, January 26, 1870.

"H. W. I. Wood, Esq., Secretary Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta.

"DEAR SIR,—My telegram of the 24th would inform you of my return to this place, after an unsuccessful attempt to reach Bathang. I was first stopped five days' journey from the Mejee village, but which by dint of bribes I ultimately reached. This village is situated on the south bank of the Brahmapootra, one day's journey from the first Tibetian Frontier Post. At this post 200 soldiers, acting under orders of the Chinese Commissioner living at Rooemah, were stationed to arrest my further progress. I thought it advisable, therefore, not to suffer the indignity of an arrest, but to return from the Mejee village above referred to.

"On January 6 I commenced my return journey, bringing with me Bowsong, the head Mejee Chief, who, in company with nine other chiefs, met me in council on January 1. At this council the chiefs expressed themselves pleased at my visit to their country, and expressed a hope that the British Government would take them under its protection.

"I was very hospitably treated by both the Degarco and Mejee Tribes of Mashmees, and, beyond the, hardship of travelling on foot amongst the mountains, I have suffered but little. The chief Bowsong is with me here, and I am endeavouring to make him pleased with his visit. The Mejees carry on a considerable trade with Tibet; and I hope that ultimately they may be induced to carry tea through their country to the Tibetians.

"I shall probably be in Calcutta about the middle of next month.—I am, dear Sir, yours, &c., T. T. COOPER."

CHINA MISSIONS.

In the Occasional Record of the National Bible Society we find the following on China:—

"After an absence of nearly seven years the Society's esteemed agent, the Rev. A. Williamson, has returned home for a well-earned furlough. His efforts in China have resulted in the circulation, almost exclusively by sale, of 22,175 Bibles and Testaments, and 60,555 smaller Portions of Scripture. To distribute these he has visited the leading cities of Shantung, has traversed the remoter provinces of north-east China, and penetrated, Bible in hand, into the yet more distant regions of Mongolia and Manchuria. In these eleven chief journeys thousands scattered over a territory almost as large as Europe have, for the first time, received from his hands some portion of the Word of Life, and heard from his lips the story of redeeming love. In Mr. Williamson's absence the work will be carried on by Mr. Lilley, who reached China in June. Mr. Williamson urges the engagement of several European colporteurs, to enable the Society to improve the footing it has gained in this vast empire."

At the anniversary meeting of the Society Mr. Williamson delivered a most interesting speech, from which we intend giving some extracts in our next issue.

HONG KONG GAMBLING.—The Graphic has the following remarks on this subject:—"Public gambling-houses were established a year or two ago in Hong Kong, under the authority of the British Government of that peculiar little colony. A considerable disturbance was raised by a number of good people who were greatly shocked at the idea of tolerating and sanctioning the existence of such haunts of vice, but it was explained that the bold measure had been adopted as the lesser of two evils. Scores of secret gambling-houses sprang up all over the China town while the system was illegal, and the police could do nothing that had the least effect in mitigating the evil. These secret houses, moreover, were the headquarters of the criminal classes, and the centres of innumerable criminal organisations. The establishment of the licensed gambling-house proved quite successful in stopping all this. But what was to be done with the money paid to the local government for the licenses? Enormous sums accrued in this way, which the governor was at first—as a concession to the people who were shocked—forbidden by the Home Government, then represented by the Duke of Buckingham, to touch. At last he was allowed to apply the money to purposes strictly connected with the development and improvement of the police force and the suppression of crime. Now, however, Lord Granville has overthrown this arrangement, and has ordered the colony to send home all the license-money in future. The colony must not use money coming from such a corrupt source, but the Imperial Government may. That in the captain's but a choleric word, which in the soldier is flat blasphemy. Forty thousand pounds has already been humbly given up by the colony, and what Lord Granville will do with it nobody seems to know."

MR. JAMES THOMSON, of the eminent shipbuilding firm of James and George Thomson, died yesterday morning at Linnturn, Shandon. The deceased was the senior member in his firm, and continued to take an active management in the business till about six years ago, when he retired. As our readers are aware, the Messrs. Thomson have sent from their shipbuilding yard, which was one of the most celebrated on the Clyde, some of the fastest and finest boats in the world. The late Mr. Thomson was sixty-eight years of age, and has left a widow and grown-up family to mourn his loss.

STEAMER FOR BORNEO TRADE.—The Clyde Shipping Company have just contracted with Messrs. Henderson, Caulborn, and Co., Renfrew, for a screw steamer to ply on the coast of Borneo. She is intended to carry 200 tons dead weight, to be fitted with compound engines of 60 h.p., and to be of light draught, suitable for this trade.

The Lufra, China clipper, the launch of which we have already noticed, has been placed in the new docks at Poplar, lately opened as an extension to the East and West India Company's system. She is loading by Messrs. Robertson and Co., brokers, for Hong Kong.

THE Rodney, 72, screw liner, Captain A. C. F. Heneage, which was commissioned at Sheerness in January, 1867, and left England on April 23 following for the China station as flagship of Admiral Hon. Sir Henry Keppel, is expected to arrive at Portsmouth about the second week in April.

MR. JAMES T. HARDIE, of Hardie and Co., merchants, Leith, has appeared before the Police Court on a charge of forging a bill on Messrs. Ferguson, Davidson, and Co. for £1,282.

BY the India mail we hear that Mr. T. C. Anstey arrived at Bombay on the 12th Feb., and is stated to have received a large sum of money in the shape of retainers as soon as he came ashore.

THE number of Chinese now on the Pacific coast, in statistics furnished to the California Legislature, is given at 89,500.

FOREIGN-OFFICE, March 18.—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Don Domingo Rilova as Consul for Spain at Singapore.

DEPUTATION OF HONG KONG MERCHANTS AND LANDOWNERS TO LORD GRANVILLE.

On Thursday last a deputation of gentlemen owning property in Hong Kong waited on the Colonial Secretary to urge their objections to that clause in the new Convention which empowers the Chinese Government to appoint a Consul in Hong Kong. They were of course courteously received, and thanked for the information they volunteered; but his Lordship declined to pledge himself to anything. The following full verbatim report was prepared specially for our paper :—

A deputation, composed chiefly of Hong Kong merchants, waited upon Earl Granville on Thursday last, the 17th inst., for the purpose of stating their views in reference to the ratification of the Chinese Convention. The deputation consisted of Mr. J. White, M.P., Mr. W. T. Bridges, Mr. L. Weise, Mr. T. Sutherland, Mr. R. J. Gilman, Mr. J. C. Baldwin, Mr. E. R. Mitchell, Mr. J. Fitzpatrick, Mr. R. J. Ashton, Mr. N. Crawford, Mr. W. Lemann, Mr. C. A. Wyld, Mr. M. A. Macleod, Mr. W. Walkinshaw, Mr. R. D. Sassoon, Mr. C. G. Scott, Mr. J. S. Lapraik, Mr. G. Harper, Mr. Henry H. Kennedy, Mr. W. Lamond, Mr. Adam Scott, Mr. Vacher, and Mr. G. H. Heaton.

Mr. WHITE, in introducing the deputation, said: I had the honour to address a memorial to your Lordship on the 21st of February last, and your Lordship will probably remember that the prayer of that memorial was that you would use your influence to induce the Government to press upon Her Majesty not to ratify Article No. 2 of the supplementary Convention of the Treaty of Tientsin. That article, as your Lordship is aware, gives power to the Chinese Government to appoint Consuls in the British dominions. In reply to the communication I made to your Lordship I received an answer wherein it was stated that the Colonial-office expected a despatch upon the subject of our memorial, and the interview which you have kindly granted since then you desired to postpone until after you should have received such despatch. Now, I may tell your Lordship, that since then we have heard that that despatch has been received, and likewise subsequent to that period we have obtained from Hong Kong, through the ordinary channels of information—the public press and so forth—an account of a public meeting which was held there, and the result of which was the preparation of a memorial to be transmitted through the Governor of Hong Kong to your noble colleague the Secretary for Foreign Affairs. I think I may venture to say that I rightly interpret the sentiments of the gentlemen who have accompanied me here, when I state that that memorial is strictly in accordance with their feelings in reference to this question. (Hear.) I should also say that past Governors of Hong Kong have expressed similar opinions, and, by the Hong Kong papers, I find that on the occasion of the presentation to Sir Richard MacDonnell on the 22nd January in the present year, his Excellency told the deputation that he agreed with them in the prayer of the memorial, and, to use his own words, he said, "The peculiar geographical position of Hong Kong, and the exceptional nature of the place, rendered it undesirable that there should be an officer at Hong Kong—a Chinese Consul—who would almost, without doubt, become a despot over the native community." (Hear.) Well, my Lord, I would say that if you are satisfied with the cogency of the arguments adduced by the Governor of Hong Kong in his despatch, I need not take up any more of your Lordship's time, and will only thank you for your courtesy in receiving us; but, if you are not satisfied, I shall be happy to fortify the opinions expressed in the memorial by some further remarks.

Earl GRANVILLE: I believe that what the Governor stated is perfectly correct. In regard to any opinion of my own, I should desire not to advance one prematurely; I am in communication with the Foreign-office upon the subject, but I should like to hear all that can be stated, not by every gentleman here, but by one or two of them, in the shape of a representation of the facts of the case. There are, as it seems to me, two points upon which the question turns. One of them is whether there should be a Consul at all, and the other is whether supposing the Government should be inclined to allow the appointment of a Consul, there should be the article you have referred to in the Treaty or not. There is a great difference between allowing a Consul, when asked, and making it a treaty stipulation.

Mr. WHITE: Well, my Lord, I will proceed. I believe we are authorised to mention the name of Sir John Bowring, and he has expressed the same opinion, as an ex-governor, which we express in our memorial. I believe also that other governors, although we are not, perhaps, authorised to use their names, have the same opinion on the subject. I may be allowed to say that I might have appeared before you on this occasion with an array of members of Parliament, but there is a feeling among us that, although we are always glad to back up each other, nevertheless this is a peculiar case which would be invested with no more importance if we had brought a number of members of Parliament with us. We are here as British subjects, who are owners of house property in Hong Kong, and as such we are very deeply interested in the prosperity of that colony. I thought, therefore, that any arguments we might adduce would command fully as much attention upon their own merits as if they were backed up by the attendance of a large number of members of Parliament.

Earl GRANVILLE: I quite agree with you. In fact, when very large deputations come before a Minister, instead of giving him information they look more like a means of intimidation than a medium for the presentation of facts for the Minister to consider.

Mr. WHITE: I am glad your Lordship agrees with me. I think we ought not to come here mobbing a Minister. I should state that I do not perform the duty of introducing the deputation in a merely formal and perfunctory manner. I am myself deeply interested in the colony of Hong Kong. The best part of my income is derivable from that colony, and I have had a pecuniary interest in it since its first establishment. Indeed, I may say that I put up the first wooden house there, which I imported from Singapore when the Government establishment was in mud huts, and I have continued to have an interest in the colony, not merely pecuniarily, but sentimentally, ever since. I should say that the memorial I have alluded to is signed, as I happen to know,—for we have taken care that it should really be what it professes to be—by the owners of house property to the value of £64,000 per annum on the present rental; and I may add that the rental would have been much more considerable, indeed, it would have been upwards of £100,000 per annum, if I may judge from my own experience of diminished rentals, only a few years ago. You may, perhaps, not be aware of the fact that, owing to the pressure of taxation and the badness of trade, the colony is in a very depressed condition. Our population there is now five per cent. less than it was ten years ago, and our taxation has increased fourfold; for it must not be forgotten that besides the colony of Hong Kong we are also contributors to the Imperial exchequer. I should also state that the majority of the signatures, as your Lordship will see from the memorial, are those of British subjects, most whom have invested the earnings or savings they have acquired in China in the British colony of Hong Kong. There are many of them who are now resident in England, but who derive a large portion of their income from the colony. Among the deputation which I have the honour of bringing under the notice of your Lordship I may be permitted to particularise Mr. Bridges, who was Acting Colonial Secretary in the colony of Hong Kong, and also for some time Attorney-General for the colony. We have here, likewise, the representative of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, a gentleman who was a member of the Legislative Council only two years ago; and gentlemen connected with the great banking corporations, and with some of the leading mercantile establishments in Hong Kong. I should state that one and all of these gentlemen entertain very grave apprehensions as to the consequences of the ratification of the supplemental Convention of the Treaty of Tientsin. They believe that if that convention should be ratified it will be fatal to the prosperity of the colony of Hong Kong. I would point out to your Lordship that this is no trifling question; for, although as landowners it may be comparatively unimportant, nevertheless, there is a much larger question involved, namely, the interests of British commerce. (Hear.) I should here mention what we have learned since the last mail, namely, that we not only represent some 2,000 inhabitants of British and American origin, who are residing in the colony, but also 120,000 Chinese, for we find from the accounts we have received that to a man these Chinese inhabitants protest against a native official being fixed upon the colony. (Hear.) This, perhaps, may sound strange, but hereafter I will give an explanation which I think will satisfy you of the correctness of this remark; but I desire now, in reference to the magnitude of the interests concerned, to point out that, according to the colonial document published by the department over which your Lordship presides, the total tonnage of arrivals and departures in the colony of Hong Kong may be taken to amount to 2,600,000 tons, and it is there stated also that the tonnage of the native craft amounts to 1,300,000, which I need hardly say shows that 50 per cent. of the tonnage employed in the trade of Hong Kong belongs to native craft. But beyond this it is also mentioned that there are fleets of small vessels and boats which, from the contiguity of the colony to the mainland, carry on an active and extensive trade between the mainland and the island. From my own acquaintance with the Chinese, I am persuaded that should a Chinese Consul be appointed in Hong Kong he would be sure to levy a contribution on the whole of this trade. Nor is this merely conjectural; for Her Majesty's representative in Peking has not disguised the fact, but has told us that the Consul is to be a revenue officer; and therefore we hold that such an appointment would practically nullify what is the essential condition of Hong Kong existence, namely, the fact of its being a free port. (Hear.) I would say even more than that exactions would be made upon the trade; our knowledge of the Chinese character would induce us to go further, and say that not even a single article of provision—not even an egg—would be brought into Hong Kong without having to pay toll to the Chinese Consul; and when I state that in the Chinese currency the coin of the realm consists partly of pieces, twenty-five of which go to a penny, your Lordship will not think it an exaggeration when I say that I do not believe a single egg would be brought into the island without having to pay a contribution to the Chinese Consul, should such an official be appointed. I may also venture to say that I think the appointment of a Chinese Consul would be a very premature act. We have all of us been in China, and we know what kind of a Government there is there, and we do not scruple to say that there is no analogy between the Chinese and European Governments. This, indeed, is shown to the world by the very fact that we have been so many years in connection with that country, and we are not now, nor shall we be under this treaty, admitted to unrestricted intercourse with the Chinese. We cannot go where we like, nor can we carry on our trade with any part of China as we wish, under this Treaty; and therefore I say that it certainly gives to the Chinese rights which it does not accord to us. Certainly it will allow us to appoint a Consul, but we allow the most unrestricted power of settlement and locomotion to the Chinese. I say that to graft on a semi-barbarous state a European usage which they can hardly comprehend, except for their own purposes, is, I venture to think, quite premature, and that this is not mere conjecture is shown by the fact that besides not acting on the principle of what we may call European reciprocity, China neither considers nor follows European notions. Great Britain, as your Lordship is aware, preserves, and rightly so, its territorial jurisdiction over any of its subjects who may be sojourning or residing in China. I need not say that no civilised country extends that power to Great Britain, and I believe it is only in Turkey and some other semi-civilised states that Great Britain possesses that power, and yet we are to accord it to China, which is not in the category, so to speak, of nations to whom it ought to be accorded. With regard to a Chinaman's notion of what a British Consul ought to do, if I were to tell your Lordship what that is, it would be quite ludicrous, but at the same time I may state it would be also indecorous, because I happen to know that they think he not only superintends and controls the private habits, but that he also exercises the same sort of surveillance and control over the private vices in which some of our countrymen indulge, not only at home, but also abroad. Your Lordship may perhaps think that my remarks with regard to the Chinese officials are characterised by a rashness of observation, and an indiscreet censure of people whom one does not know very much about; but you will perhaps allow me to remark that I am not guilty in anything I am saying of any needless disrespect for the Chinese authorities. The people out there I like very much. I have no reason to complain of them, from my long intercourse with them; and many of my friends will, no doubt, state that their relations with the Chinese are of the most friendly and amicable description; but, as your Lordship knows, it is not always the fittest and best men who are appointed to govern a country, and in China we have notable exemplifications of the fact. In the last paper laid on the table of the House of Commons (China, No. 3 of this year, containing despatches from Sir Rutherford Alcock), I find under the date August 25, that Consul Medhurst speaks of the rapacity of the Chinese officials and the predatory disposition of the mandarins, and he there gives a notable instance on the Yang-tze river, where, owing to the exactions of the authorities trade was suspended and the books of the merchants closed, but owing to his presence and intervention trade was resumed because the officials were prevented from making those exactions. Therefore, what I would say is this, that we have recent instances showing that the Chinese are immutable in their policy, at least, to the extent I have stated. I may make one other remark on a matter which I dare say has struck your Lordship's attention. Your Lordship may say, "Well, but will these people pay these exactions. There they are, living in a British colony; will they be such fools as to go and pay money to their mandarin?" To that, I would reply that they will pay those exactions to the mandarin. Your Lordship will ask, "Will they not communicate with the British Government?" I answer, decidedly not: they will not inform against their own authorities, because nearly all the Chinese, resident in Hong Kong, have members of their families and relations resident on the mainland, and your Lordship knows that by the Chinese policy a family is responsible for the acts of one of its members. The consequence is, that the Chinese Government has a power which no other Government has of punishing for any delinquency, or alleged delinquency, those persons who may be resident in Hong Kong; and besides this, the practice of what are termed "squeezes" prevails considerably in Hong Kong at the present time, although the Colonial Government is most strongly averse to it, the fact is that the practice is so engrained in the habits of the Chinese, that they really believe that the hangers-on of the police magistrates, or of any other public functionaries, have some indefinite power of doing them either good or harm. Although the Colonial Government has done what it could to suppress the practice, it still prevails to a great extent, that is to say, the system of squeezes or exactions made by persons who either are or allege that they are connected with the Colonial Government. How, then, if this system which is so wholly repugnant to British policy, which has been opposed most strenuously by the Government there, and which I myself, when resident there, did my utmost to put down, be continued, can we expect men, whom I have known to refuse to give evidence even against Englishmen, to give evidence against the Chinese official it is proposed to appoint, even if he persist in the practice, as we believe he certainly would. I do not know that I have anything more to add, except as regards the question of public opinion, so far as that can be accounted for where the people speak a different language from that in which the organs of public opinion are printed. I believe there are not two per cent. of the population of Hong Kong who are of European or American origin, all the rest being Chinamen; so that if we are to have a Chinese official there his position would constitute an imperium in imperio which would be fraught with fatal consequences to the prosperity of the colony of Hong Kong. (Hear.) I beg to thank your Lordship for your attention, and I will now present to you Mr. Bridges, formerly acting as Secretary, and also as Attorney-General for the colony of Hong Kong.

Mr. BRIDGES: I do not propose to trouble your Lordship with more than a very few words, but I may as well state in the first instance that the reason why I am requested to address your Lordship on behalf of my brethren here is that for a considerable period I occupied an official position in Hong Kong, and for the greater portion of the time between the years 1852 and 1858 I was a member of the legislative and executive council. As a practising barrister also, I had a great deal to say to the Chinese, and, therefore, I am able to approach your Lordship with a confidence that is derived from the knowledge I obtained both in official and private life. Your Lordship was kind enough to point out—speaking to Mr. White at the commencement—two points which suggested themselves to your mind—first, whether there was to be a Consul at all, and, secondly, whether he was to be appointed under the Treaty in the same way as other Consuls are generally appointed. Now, different people take different views of the same subject, and I may say that I differ in a great number of points from the view Mr. White takes of the Chinese Government. I, for the sake of this argument, look at the Chinese Government as if it were a Government in every respect to be treated as our equal, and dealt with exactly as we should deal with that of France or Prussia, or any other of our equals; but I am prepared to prove that, even looking at it from this point of view, the appointment of a Consul at Hong Kong cannot be granted to the Chinese Government without being fraught with great danger to ourselves. The first point to be regarded in this question is—what is the meaning of the word "Consul?" Plainly it is a word that is generally understood; but when we consider the position of an English Consul on the mainland of China and the ordinary position of Consuls in English ports generally, we see at once that a wide distinction is established. In China an English Consul has power over English subjects, who are free from all Chinese jurisdiction of every description. English Consuls there can sentence to fine or imprisonment, and even to expatriation from the place where an English subject resides; consequently he occupies a position which is far different from that of any Consul who is appointed to act in English possessions. Therefore, to determine this question it is necessary to determine in the first instance what is the kind of consulship that, under this Convention, it is proposed to establish. Is the Consul to be a Consul of the Chinese English type—a man with full powers in our own colony, or a mere commercial agent such as we find in every place open to navigation? This is a matter that can hardly be passed over by any one who has any knowledge of what an imperium in imperio would be a Chinese Consul with English powers in Hong Kong. And what would be the result. The population of Hong Kong is about 120,000, and at one stroke of the pen, if any one had the power to do it, the whole would be removed from English jurisdiction. But even if the Colonial-office wished such a thing done it would be impossible, because it seems to me that, without an Act of the Imperial Legislature, you could not abstract such a portion of Her Majesty's power as would result from such a transaction, and place it in the hands of a foreign authority; and not only would the consequences be serious to Hong Kong, but what would be the result elsewhere? If you grant such a power to a Chinese official in Hong Kong, in a few years other places would ask for the same concession, and not only would the Chinese be abstracted at Hong Kong, but what answer could you give to a request from the Prussian Government, or the French Government, that wherever Prussian or French subjects are found trading at your ports, they should be abstracted from your jurisdiction and confined solely to the jurisdiction of their respective Consuls? And there is another point. This is the first time in the history of China that the word consul has ever been admitted to apply to an officer to be adoptd by the supreme Government at Peking in any foreign territory. Up to the present time, whenever the Chinese have sent representatives to Laos, Siam, or any of those small kingdoms over which they exercise dominion, they have been sent as representatives of the Sovereign at Peking, and knowing the Chinese character very intimately, I say it would be impossible to separate the idea which a mere commercial agent fills in our mind from the idea which a Consul, as representative of the Chinese Government, must necessarily occupy in the Chinese mind. Granted, however, that he should not be a Consul of this description, but a mere commercial agent, there can be no doubt that when once he has authority to take in Hong Kong an official residence, and is recognised by the English Government as the representative of the Chinese Government, all that has been done for the last thirty years, everything that has taken place since the original Treaty of Peking, will be wiped away. You cannot separate from the Chinese mind the idea that the representative of the Chinese Government is the representative of the Chinese Sovereignty. It might not perhaps be irrevelant here to quote an anecdote that has occurred to my mind while considering this subject, and which shows still more plainly how strongly fixed this idea is. In 1857 or 1858 we were in possession of Canton, and Mr. (now Sir Harry) Parkes was one of the officials who represented the Allied Powers in the occupancy of the city. During that time an inferior mandarin was taken prisoner, and Mr. Parkes treated him as an English official always would treat such a prisoner. He told the mandarin he was at liberty to reside where he wished, that he would be well treated, and that if he behaved himself nothing would be said to him. In the course of events the expedition to the North took place, and Messrs. Parkes and Loch were made prisoners. They were both put in chains while in prison, and the very Chinese mandarin who had been Parkes' prisoner in Canton was one of the visitors of the prison where Parkes was confined. Parkes remonstrated with him, and said, "When you were my prisoner in Canton you were treated well; how comes it that when I am a prisoner of the Chinese Government I am treated thus and herded with common malefactors?" The answer of the mandarin indicates the Chinese mind entirely. "Oh," said the mandarin, "the cases are different. I was a prisoner of war; you are a rebel against the Chinese Government." This was in 1858, and this was the answer of an educated man to an English official. You must remember that with regard to the community of Hong Kong very few of them ever obtain the position or the education the mandarins do, and if this idea was so strongly impressed on the mind of a mandarin, how much more easily would it be fixed in the common vulgar mind by the fact of a Chinese Consul being appointed there? But, assuming it to be impossible that a territorial Consul with territorial powers should be appointed in Hong Kong, and that an ordinary Consul, of whom we have fifteen or sixteen in China—or, at least, had in my time—then I say that no benefit can result to the Chinese Government from his appointment. Hong Kong is an island with several ports, extending three miles in length, and a mere ordinary commercial agent, which a second category Chinese Consul would be, would not have the slightest power to exercise surveillance or adopt means for checking smuggling, which seems to be the idea of Sir Rutherford Alcock, except by resorting to a system of espionage and exaction, which would set him continually at loggerheads with our police and the Emperor's Court, so that instead of the Consul being a help to the Chinese Government there would be perpetual complaints about him, emanating from our authorities. Therefore I submit that a Consul of the first description is impossible at Hong Kong, and that so far from a Consul of the second description being of any use to the Chinese Government, his appointment would lead to endless complications. But there is another element to be considered beyond the British Government and the Chinese Government. I refer to the Chinese population of Hong Kong, and what their position ultimately may be. You have for thirty years had established at Hong Kong an organised Government, you have shown the people the benefits of British rule by putting down extortion and allowing them to settle under the idea that they are to be preserved free from exactions of every description on the part of their own Government; you have accustomed them to our arts and sciences; and here I may say that it was only the other day that the electric telegraph was laid down there, while they have the use of gas and all the appliances of mod rn science; and if there be any means of breaking through the hard rind of Chinese isolation, it is not to be expected from anything that will be done by the Imperial Court at Peking, but rather from the knowledge the Chinese at Hong Kong acquire under our example and good government. Are you willing, therefore, for the sake of an experiment, which is to be tried at the suggestion of certain officials at Peking, with a view to put a stop to smuggling, to risk the evils that may ensue? And here I must refer to the question whether smuggling deserves the name it has obtained in Hong Kong. It is notorious that everywhere where there is a free port you cannot have that surveillance over shipping that you have where there are Custom-house officers. But the Chinese smuggling of which complaint is made is this. The principal article of smuggling is opium, and it is owing to the Chinese Government itself that the Chinese traders attempt to introduce opium into the country. They have not established any port nearer than Canton where those vessels can enter cargoes, and any vessel going to the south coast has, as a preliminary, after leaving Hong Kong, to go up the river one hundred miles to enter its cargo, after which it has to return and then start on its voyage. The consequence is that in order to avoid the trouble the vessels go and land their cargoes at the different ports where there is an ordinary Chinese Custom-house, but not under the control of the Tientsin authorities. This is the reason why the cry that Hong Kong is a depot for smuggling is made from Peking. This interview has already lasted so long that I shall decline to trouble your Lordship with more than a few words in conclusion. I assure your Lordship that as I look at the matter it is not merely one of pounds, shillings, and pence. As long as I live I shall never forget the state in which Hong Kong was in 1857 at the beginning of the war with China. Why, prizes were being offered for the heads of the different authorities in Hong Kong, and we were blockaded in the Canton river. I was discharging the duties of the office of Colonial Secretary at the time, and I can assure you that I am as confident as that I stand here that if at any time a similar state of things should occur, and the Chinese should have a rallying point, such as the proposed Chinese Consul at Hong Kong would be, the whole of the English residents would be swept out of the colony in the course of a night. Therefore, I do press most strongly upon your Lordship that you should consider, not only the actual circumstances of the case, but also the eventualities that may result from placing a person representing Chinese authority in Hong Kong. If this be done, and hereafter circumstances should arise which may lead to a lamentable catastrophe, it will not be our fault. We have pointed out the facts to the Government, and have thus relieved ourselves of the responsibility, so that whatever may happen in the future the onus will rest with your Lordship.

Earl GRANVILLE: I should have liked to have heard a little more in reference to one point. It is stated that it is not to the advantage of the Chinese Government to make the appointment referred to. That is, of course, a matter more for the Chinese Government to consider than for us; but I should have liked to have heard what is suggested by the deputation as a clear answer to the Chinese Government—taking it upon the ground you did that the Chinese Government must be treated on the footing of being a civilised Government. Upon the point that our position there being one which naturally encourages smuggling, and the appointment of a Consul being urged by the Chinese Government as a means of preventing that smuggling, how, in justice, are we to refuse the appointment?

Mr. BRIDGES: I say that the local situation of Hong Kong, and the want of power in a Consul of the second category are such that he could not arrive at the information in Hong Kong.

Earl GRANVILLE: You are supposing that he would be a Consul with the same powers as the European Consuls.

Mr. BRIDGES: That is the only Consul whose appointment I can conceive in Hong Kong.

Earl GRANVILLE: But why should he not have the same sort of powers as were given in former days in China for the detection of cases of smuggling?

Mr. BRIDGES: My view of the matter is this: the harbour of Victoria extends over a distance of three miles, and each mercantile house or Chinese establishment has the power of shipping its goods from its own door. The ships sail out of the harbour, and there are no means of checking in the place itself what the shipments are. The only system that could be adopted would be one of espionage, which would lead to continual fracas; people would constantly be hauled up to the police-office, because those who came to inquire would have their heads broken, and there would be constant actions in the Supreme Court.

Mr. WHITE: Even in the document published by the Colonial-office it is mentioned that the British Government cannot ascertain the amount of the imports and exports. If we are to have a Chinese Consul of the second category there, the fact is that there must be the right of search. As every merchant has his own landing place, there must be a Chinaman at each to watch, and besides this, every boat that goes off must be examined. Indeed, without a system of espionage and supervision of the most rigid character, which would lead to the most lamentable results, it would be impossible for the Chinese Government to obtain the information they want, and if they were able to obtain it, it would be at such a cost, in the shape of evil consequences, that it would be far better that it should not be acquired. I may add that Sir Rutherford Alcock has no knowledge of the colony. He has had no connection with the colony, or I should have pointed out to him the utter impossibility, from the geographical position of Hong Kong, and the local circumstances of the port as a free port, of adopting the recommendation for the appointment of a Consul with any chance of its leading to beneficial results.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: You could not possibly make the appointment without destroying the freedom of Hong Kong as a port, and consequently destroying the whole trade of the place. There can be no question on that point in the mind of any one who has any knowledge of trade there. The fact is, that the trade of Hong-Kong rests upon the freedom of the port, and although our own Government has shown the greatest anxiety to obtain statistics of the trade of the port, it has always been most cautious not to trammel us with anything that could interfere with that freedom. And not only is it certain that the proposed consular appointment would destroy the freedom of the port, but there can be no doubt that smuggling would be continued. The only smuggling carried on there is in goods sent away from Hong Kong to the South in the vicinity of Macao, and those goods would still find their way there and be received by the mandarins, who hav custom-houses of their own, and who are in actual competitio with each other to obtain the goods at the lowest possible rates. Th effect of the proposed appointment would in reality be to destro the native industry which now exists in Hong Kong, becaus the trade of the English and foreign merchants does not con stitute the trade of Hong Kong; the trade of that place is that which is made by the industrial population there, and its prosperity depends on the Chinese in Hong Kong being able to carry on thei business freely and without fear or difficulty. (Cheers.) I might b allowed to give an illustration of the power which the Chinese authoe rities on the mainland exercise over the inhabitants of Hong Kong. Many cases have come within my own knowledge in which men who have come to Hong Kong and succeeded in business have had their families seized and put into prison until ransom was paid; and in one case, that of one of the best Chinese citizens we have, who has been very successful, he was never free from inquisition for ten years while residing in Hong Kong. Your Lordship is aware of the filial piety which exists among the Chinese, and, I may say, that if a man has a great grandfather who can be got hold of, the mandarins will put the "squeeze" on by seizing him. Another point is the influence we have in recalling our servants. Some seven or eight years ago, owing to some question which arose at Canton, the Viceroy issued an order to two or three districts which had the effect of withdrawing the whole of our servant population. Again, a clause was made by the Chinese Government about three years ago, when I was a member of the Legislative Council, for the giving up of people supposed to be spies engaged in the rebellion, and in one case they got hold of a man whom they tortured, and, it is said, put to death. I am quite convinced that the effect of the proposed appointment would be to destroy the spirit of the Chinese people in Hong Kong, and would drive the trade over to Macao.

Mr. BRIDGES: I may perhaps be allowed to read a letter which has been written by Sir John Borwing.

Mr. Bridges then read the following extract from the letter referred to:—As regards the special object of your memorial to Lord Granville, the establishment of a Chinese Consul in Hong Kong, I should hope that the Peking authorities will see that it will lead to more embroilments than benefits. On the one hand, while from the general corruptibility of Chinese officials the appointment will give little profit to the Imperial revenues, and afford small protection against smuggling, it will, on the other, lead to exactions and interferences, which in a free port would be intolerable. If the Colonial Government interferes—as it is bound to do—for the protection of our Chinese subjects, there will be no end of disputes and difficulties; and if our Government do not interfere, there will be annoyances of all sorts. International law will not sanction a Consul meddling with the inhabitants of the country to which he is accredited, but the business of a Chinese Consul will mainly be to meddle, and he will always consider Chinamen as practically, and really, the subjects of his Emperor. During my experience as Governor of Hong Kong, it was impossible to protect the Chinese from the "squeezing" of the mandarins, when they went to the country, and you are quite aware of the unsatisfactory state of things at Macao.

Earl GRANVILLE: I am in communication with the Foreign-office on the matter, and consequently I shall give no pledge of any sort. I beg, however, to thank the gentlemen who have stated their views for the information they have afforded me.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, March 16.

The prospectus has at length been issued of the Steam Navigation Company, "Nederland." The commission has been composed as follows:—H.R.H. Prince Henri, honorary president. Directors: Messrs. C. J. A. den Tex, E. Fuld, E. Mohr, A. R. J. Cramerus, and C. F. Quien. As managers are appointed G. J. Boelen, J. Boissevain, and C. J. Viehoff. The company will be established at Amsterdam. The capital is 6,000,000f., of which only part will be at first subscribed for, viz., 3,500,000f. in shares of 1,000f. and 500f. For this amount steam-vessels and other material will be purchased for the steamline between Holland and Java, via the Suez Canal. The particulars of the contract between the Government and the company are identical with those I gave you a fortnight since. The subscription will be opened on the 24th, 25th, and 26th inst. The company intends to build four steamers of 2,000 tons, with engines of 400-horse power nominal. The arrangements for passengers will be most perfect. The builders of the steamers are under the obligation that each voyage shall not last longer than fifty days. The company is opinion that the net profit will not be less than 16 per cent. on the capital subscribed.

Mr. Nierstrasz, M.P., has again attacked the Company for Promoting the Welfare of the Javanese, in a most offensive and personal manner, especially as regards Mr. W. Bosch, well known in Java as one of the principal members of the company. Of, course, Mr. Bosch cannot prosecute Mr. Nierstrasz, because the latter made his statement in Parliament, but the injured party declares in the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant that Mr. Nierstrasz has not acted as an honourable man, whilst he states his readiness to give him every satisfaction should he desire it. Our M.P.s, however, do not care very much to fight, so that this affair will probably prove another storm in a teacup.

THE FOREIGN-OFFICE AND THE MISSIONARIES.

ON the 14th instant Colonel SYKES very pertinently asked the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether similar redress had been obtained by Sir R. ALCOCK for the recent outrage on English missionaries at Nganking to that obtained by the French Minister for similar ill-treatment of French missionaries. Mr. OTWAY'S reply was, as usual, a fine example of official ignorance. He knew nothing of the ample satisfaction "alleged to have been obtained" by the French Minister; and gave such a version of the experiences of the English missionaries as showed he considered they had, on the whole, a good deal to be thankful for. They had not been in any way injured or molested, but "on meeting a body of students "they became alarmed, and took shelter in the palace of the "Governor, who sent them to a place of safety and gave "them a hundred dollars besides." Lord CLARENDON evidently considers that the Chinese rather deserve applause than censure for their part in the affair. However, Colonel SYKES was not to be put off with such nonsense, and next night returned to the charge with a notice of a further question on the subject. To-night the gallant Colonel will ask Mr. OTWAY whether Her MAJESTY'S Government approve of the same measure of justice not being meted out to the English as to the French missionaries; and also, whether our Consuls in China have instructions to report direct to the Foreign-office all cases of outrages on British subjects. We hope a satisfactory reply may be forthcoming, but are not very sanguine about it. Another question put by Colonel SYKES—namely, whether the Government had any knowledge of the recently reported outrages in Formosa—was met with the usual declaration of official ignorance.

CONSULAR ESTABLISHMENTS IN CHINA.

A BLUE-BOOK has been published containing a series of special reports from Her MAJESTY'S Consuls in China, with an accompanying despatch from Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK. They are in response to a request made by Lord CLARENDON last year, for full information as to the cost of maintaining these establishments and the possibility of making any reduction in their respective staffs. Sir RUTHERFORD has carried out the instructions of the Foreign Secretary to the letter, by obtaining most voluminous and exhaustive reports from all the Consulates. These documents clearly show, and Sir RUTHERFORD himself in his covering despatch forcibly points out, that if any regard is to be paid to the efficiency of the service, the position of Great Britain as a Treaty power, or the safety of British trade, no material reductions can be made, except, perhaps, in the case of the four ports of Formosa, where the value of our trade, he considers, is hardly commensurate with the expense of Consular establishments. These, Sir RUTHERFORD thinks, might be advantageously abandoned in exchange for Ichang, or some suitable port on the Upper Yangtsze, but we are glad to see that at the same time he is fully alive to the danger of giving up even one port without getting an equivalent in some other quarter. If this were not insisted on it would be regarded by China as a retrograde movement. On both these important points Sir RUTHERFORD'S opinions are exactly in accord with those we have always upheld. We give interesting extracts from the Blue-book in another column.

THE LATE MR. BURLINGAME.

WE gave last week a portion of a letter addressed by Mr. BURLINGAME to a friend, shortly before his departure for the Russian Capital. It possesses considerable interest, as showing that in his private correspondence Mr. BURLINGAME maintained precisely similar views to those enunciated in his public speeches. It is certainly indicative of a sincere conviction in the truth of these views, but one cannot help wondering at the strong prejudices exhibited. The statement that "there is a party in England which assumes it will be a bad thing to treat China with justice" is one striking instance, and another will be observed in the concluding boast that "the men who wish to humiliate China will not succeed." Who among Englishmen would wish to withhold justice from China? We believe that China has received more, far more than justice, at the hands of England; substantial aid, for instance, in a struggle involving the very existence of China as an Empire, for which no equivalent has ever been demanded or received. Even an honest fulfilment of treaty-rights is denied us. It is we who ask justice from China, and meet with a contemptuous refusal. In the same way, the "humiliation" is all on the other side. The experience of Englishmen in China is one of constant humiliation. The arrogant Chinese officials treat English merchants and missionaries as dirt beneath their feet, and even our diplomatic and consular representatives are snubbed and slighted whenever opportunity offers. The QUEEN OF ENGLAND'S son is denied an audience at Peking. On our side, we allow the Chinese to revise the treaty entirely according to their own ideas; their envoy is received at our Court with all possible distinction; even the miserable fifth-class mandarins sent some years ago as an "Embassy" were admitted to the Royal presence. On which side, pray, is the humiliation?

IN another column we give the reply of the Committee of China merchants to Lord CLARENDON on the subject of the Convention. The document is a very able one, and most emphatically confutes the arguments used in Lord CLARENDON'S manifesto published in our last number. The question of transit dues and internal taxation is elucidated in a way which ought to set the matter quite at rest. With regard to the imposition of an increased duty on silk, the Committee state boldly that they consider that Sir R. ALCOCK, in conceding this demand, has failed to give just protection to British trade.

THE P. and O. Company's steamer Nubia, which left Bombay on the 10th inst., with a full cargo and passengers for Marseilles, via the Suez Canal, is simply an extra steamer, and the directors have no intention of altering their overland arrangements at present. In regard to the sorting of the mails on board the steamers between this and Alexandria—noticed by us some months since—we understand the practice will be given up in June.

WE observe in the Homeward Mail an account of a cross-examination on the opium question, to which Sir R. ALCOCK has been subjected by the Calcutta merchants. The position must have been rather an uncomfortable one for Sir RUTHERFORD, and we suspect that he would have done better for his own peace of mind had he returned to Europe by the Pacific route, instead of by way of the Straits and India.

WE understand that the Assistant-Judge of the Supreme Court at Shanghai will be transferred to Yokohama. This is a very satisfactory change, as the amount of legal work to be discharged by the Consul there is really quite beyond the powers of any one not trained to the law. If this arrangement is carried out, Yokohama will in future be a Vice-Consulate.

A LETTER from Rome of recent date says that the Bishops are beginning to leave in great numbers, and that among the latest departures are the Bishops of Japan, whom the rumour of a threatened persecution of the Christians has caused to hasten to their dioceses. We are afraid the holy fathers will arrive in the field rather late.

REPORTS ON CONSULAR ESTABLISHMENTS IN CHINA.

The despatch from Sir R. Alcock, which forms the first of this series of papers, contains a review of the extent and value of the British trade with China, showing that of the total foreign trade with China, of £42,070,788, £36,949,604 was in British goods, while of the total foreign shipping employed more than half was under the British flag, 7,165 vessels with a tonnage of 3,332,093 tons out of a total of 13,504 vessels with a tonnage of 6,385,771.

The steady increase of British trade with China is further illustrated by the returns of the Imperial Maritime Customs, which were reprinted in this country and presented to Parliament last year, from which it will be seen that the import of grey shirtings and T-cloths (articles of purely British manufacture) had risen respectively from 2,398.410 pieces and 730,604 pieces in 1867 to 4,768,151 pieces and 2,049,521 pieces in 1868. That this is not an exceptional increase is apparent from the fact that at the port of Shanghai the import of grey shirtings and T-cloths in the first six months of 1869 amounted respectively to 2,933,341 pieces and 1,413,758 pieces, as against 2,070,782 pieces and 588,825 in the first six months of 1868, the imports in the first six months of 1867 being 1,231,710 pieces and 316 211 pieces, and for the same period in 1866, 890,366 pieces and 48,976 pieces.

Sir R. Alcock was especially instructed to report upon the supposed tendency of foreign trade to pass into Chinese hands, and the manner in which such a change in the direction of trade would influence the relations between British and Chinese subjects, so as to admit of the withdrawal, wholly or in part, of Consular protection at the Treaty Ports.

Sir R. Alcock states his opinion that more weight has been given to the assertion that the trade is passing into Chinese hands than a full examination of the facts would justify, and that there are contrary tendencies at work. For instance, a direct trade in imports has sprung up within the last three years at Chefoo, Tientsin, and Newchwang, "which is rapidly increasing, and promises not only to assume larger proportions and be permanent, but also to establish in the hands of foreigners a trade which, as indirect, in the year 1866 was perceptibly passing into the hands of Chinese." He adds that, "Assuming, however, that the preponderating influence tends to restrict or diminish the number of British residents at the secondary ports, it cannot be rightly argued that the necessity for any Consular establishment is by so much diminished; first, because, whether many or few, there must be some Consular authority to protect and control; and, secondly, because the number of British ships and sailors brought to the port increases in a much larger proportion than the residents diminish, and these require much more looking after, and give a great deal more work, than the merchants located at the port."

Consul Medhurst, whose long experience of China enables him to speak with authority on this subject, while his position in the service precludes his being unconsciously influenced by personal reasons in favour of the maintenance of a large Consular establishment, expresses himself still more forcibly :—

"First, as regards direct trade.—The Chinese take no share in importing manufactures and other merchandise from Great Britain, nor are they likely to do so until they establish native agencies at home,—a very remote contingency indeed. . . . Second, coast-trade.—In this branch . . . the Chinese are daily taking an increasing share. . . . Nor is it a matter, I conceive, to be at all deprecated; for, after all, the merchandise which is thereby distributed is principally British, and an increased development of the general trade is the result. It must not be lost sight of, however, that, apart from British influence, association, and protection, and those of other nations in a minor degree, such a trade could not for a moment exist." These views are corroborated in a remarkable degree by the memoranda furnished to Mr. Medhurst by two of the merchants at Shanghai. These memoranda, which no doubt faithfully represent the views of the British mercantile community in China, agree that the entire direct import of British manufactures is in the hands of foreigners, principally Englishmen, as well as the direct export trade. "On the question of this trade passing into the hands of the Chinese there can be but one opinion—such is not the case; and that the Chinese do participate in it at all is solely due to the facilities afforded to them by foreigners, without whom they could do absolutely nothing."

Both the writers point out that the indirect or distributing trade in which the Chinese have appropriated the local business is nevertheless carried on in foreign bottoms, and is dependent on foreign protection. "Foreign protection to trade at all the open ports is and must remain the condition of its satisfactory continuance. So far as the main articles of trade are concerned, everything is carried on under a foreign flag." The reports from the other Consulates are in the same strain.

Consul Robertson, whose knowledge of China is probably unrivalled states that :—

"The old junk trade is entirely annihilated, and Chinese goods and passengers proceed by foreign steamers or sailing vessels only. . . . The tendency is to employ foreign steamers and vessels, and whether their cargoes are British-owned or not is of no consequence, for until they are discharged they are under British protection. Indeed, the probability is goods will always arrive consigned to some foreign firm, who will take delivery, and subsequently hand them over to the real owners, the Chinese; and, on the contrary, I am inclined to think a change in the destination of trade, if change of hands may be so termed, is likely to originate more causes for Consular interference from questions of ownership and contracts, and the many causes of dispute which arise, than exists when it is solely in foreign hands, and the more it increases the greater will be the employment of our ships, both with steamers and sailing vessels."

It is unnecessary to give further extracts from these reports, but the opinion expressed by Mr. Acting-Consul King as to the importance of retaining a Consul at Newchwang, with a view to the prospective advantages to be derived from the more general opening of Manchouria to foreign commerce and industry, and also to the report from Consul Markham of the gradual growth of a direct trade with Great Britain at Chefoo deserve attention.

On a review of the independent statements thus received from various parts of China, it is shown :—

1. That the direct import trade, as well as the export trade, in articles of European consumption remains, and is likely to continue to remain, in foreign hands.

2. That should the indirect or distributing trade be undertaken entirely by Chinese instead of by foreign commission agents, as seems probable, except perhaps as regards opium, the result may be expected to be beneficial to British trade and shipping, as it will be followed by an increased demand for foreign goods, and by the extended employment of foreign vessels.

3. That this indirect or distributing trade, on which the general trade depends, has been created and is maintained by the opening to foreign commerce of the several provincial districts of China by means of the Consular Treaty Ports as ports of entry.

4. That, as in the present condition of the country the distributing trade can only be effectually carried on in foreign vessels, Consular establishments will continue to be required as heretofore at the subsidiary as well as at the primary ports for their supervision and control.

5. That the withdrawal of a Consulate from a provincial district is equivalent to the abandonment of the present and prospective trade of the district, with a proportionate diminution in the general import and export trade, and loss to British manufacturers, merchants, shipowners, shipbuilders, and seamen.

Should the Treaty Revision Convention be ratified, and Europeans be admitted to travel and rent store-houses in the interior of the country for trading purposes, efficient Consular establishments will be more than ever required to insure the new tariff and transit regulations being faithfully executed by the Chinese authorities, as well as to maintain the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects, to which Great Britain is equally pledged. These considerations do not apply to the islands off the China coast, where the Chinese rule is scarcely established on a firm footing among an alien race, where the constant danger of collision with the people renders foreign trade precarious and uncertain, where the demand for articles of foreign produce is limited to the villages on the seaboard, with little promise of any material increase, and where the exports are not of sufficient value to British commerce to entitle the trade to special encouragement or protection on their account.

The right of access to the Island of Hainan, though conceded by the Treaty of Tientsin, and at one time reported to be of value, has never been claimed, and is resigned by the recent Convention. Sir R. Alcock has now advised the withdrawal, on grounds both of policy and economy, of the Consular establishments in the Island of Formosa, and, as a necessary consequence, its exclusion from British commerce. The maintenance of the Consulate at Taiwan and Vice-Consulate at Tamsuy has not been attended with commercial or political advantages commensurate either with the expenses attendant on it, or with the difficulty experienced in the protection of the trade with the island in the face of the open hostility of the population.

The Consular establishments could not, however, be withdrawn without giving at least six months' notice to British subjects engaged in the trade of the island, which, although of trifling national value, could not be relinquished precipitately without inflicting serious injury on individuals. Moreover, it is advisable to make an effort to induce the Chinese Government to exchange the Treaty Ports of Formosa for the port of Ichang in the Upper Yangtsze, which would open to British trade a vast area, to which at present, while the employment of steamers is prohibited, it cannot hope to penetrate. It may also be found necessary to retain a Consular officer at Kelung, where the coal mines are to be worked under the Treaty Revision Convention. The establishments in Formosa when suppressed will, however, supply establishments required for the new Treaty Ports of Wen-chow and Wuhu, under the new Convention. The former is described by Sir R. Alcock as affording a ready exit for a sort of tea that reaches Foochow-foo after a long, difficult, and expensive transit, and as the port of a comparatively populous and wealthy country which promises to take many foreign commodities. It will also be of material service to British commerce as a port in the line of communication between Foo-chow-foo, Ningpo, and Shanghai.

Wuhu is situated on the Yangtsze, in the vicinity of Chinkiang, with which it may be found practicable to combine it in a joint Consular establishment. Its opening to commerce is stated by Sir R. Alcock to be of "immense importance, if only for the reason that it makes the province of Anhui a Treaty-port province, and thus opens that province for the circulation of British manufactures, in accordance with the freedom and easy terms assented to" in the Convention.

The question remains whether, the consular establishments on the mainland of China being necessary for the preservation of political and commercial interests, the staff of officers employed in them is in excess of the demands of the service. A complete answer to this appears to be furnished by the statement that of the limited numbers employed in these services, seventeen were absent from China, five from Japan, and two Siam, all but two on sick leave, and in nearly every instance after an uninterrupted residence of several years in these tropical climates. So far from the numbers of the Consular service in China being excessive, they have been found during the past year to be insufficient, and recourse has been obliged to be had to the employment of temporary clerks, a practice objectionable for many reasons, at Amoy, Kiu-kiang, Ningpo, and Shanghai.

An addition to the permanent establishments may be avoided, at least for the present, by some of the student interpreters, who will have completed their two years' course of study at Peking in the spring, becoming available for duty at the ports; but the numbers of the Consular staff, even when thus recruited from the ranks of the student interpreters, will be barely sufficient to meet the requirements of the service, when allowance is made for the constant absence of a large proportion on account of illness engendered by the climate.

The result, both as regards efficiency and economy, of the system commenced in 1854, for training the junior officers as student interpreters, so as to give them an accurate knowledge of the language of the country before admitting them to the higher posts in the profession, has been highly satisfactory. Were it not that the assistants, who act as clerks in the Consulates, are also, as a general rule, capable, when called upon, of discharging the duties of interpreters, a much larger staff than is at present employed would inevitably be required; while the political advantages can scarcely be overrated of the Consuls and other officers in the service being able to communicate directly with the Chinese authorities and people, instead of having perpetual recourse to the intervention of special interpreters and English-speaking Chinese. Such a command of the language, moreover, enables them to travel freely through the interior, and to procure reliable information as to the commercial needs and resources of many localities, which it would otherwise be both dangerous and useless to visit.

The following table shows the value of the trade of each port in the centre of a consuming and producing district during 1868, in its connection with foreign merchants:—

Sir R. ALCOCK combats the arguments of those who unfavourably compare our trade with China with the more colossal commerce with America, France, or India, and expresses a doubt whether the United States and France together contribute so large a sum to the revenue of the British Empire as £14,500,000, which China does simply by the tea she exports and the opium imported. "As a market for the produce of our looms and manufacturing industry generally," observes Sir Rutherford Alcock, "China ranks very low. But under other auspices and more favourable conditions, neither of which seem altogether hopeless, the Chinese Empire might within the next twenty years offer a vast field of commercial activity, and will soon lead to a consumption of manufactured goods ten times as large as any at present existing. We cannot wisely confine our views, therefore, to the present, and ought not, by a shortsighted economy or any mistaken policy, to risk all that is prospective."

Sir RUTHERFORD proceeds to say in his despatch to Lord Clarendon, under date Oct. 29 last:—

Taking for granted that it is both the interest and the policy of Great Britain to encourage British manufactures and the profitable employment of our shipping, giving occupation to a large maritime class, and that some protection and surveillance is essential in China for the security and development of trade and shipping, the main question is narrowed to one of cost in connection with efficiency. It is of course the interest of the country to obtain a maximum of efficiency for a minimum cost, and to this end it is essential that no consulates should be maintained which are not indispensable, and that those kept up should not be on a larger scale or with a higher rate of expenditure both in salaries and contingencies than is absolutely required to insure efficient service to the extent required.

Your Lordship has accordingly informed me that "the first point to be considered is whether the British trading and shipping interests at the different ports where Consular officers are now stationed are of that amount as to make it worth while to incur the expense of maintaining them, or whether the alternative of breaking up the consulate and with it of putting a stop to British trade at any particular port may not be resorted to."

I can the more readily supply an answer under this head, that I have each year since my arrival in 1865, carefully considered the whole question. In 1867 accordingly I suggested the abolition of the Consular Establishment at Chin-kiang after a personal inspection, because it appeared to me that the British trading and shipping interests did not justify the expenditure incurred.

The act was much criticised by the mercantile community, but it was not the less certainly indicated as a proper measure of economy at the time, not only from the total absence of any valuable trade, but any prospect of increase. Subsequent changes in the course of trade, and the restoration of the city, have induced me since to recommend the re-appointment of a Consul on the equally valid ground that the value of the trade has very suddenly increased, and now gives great promise of making it worth our while, and otherwise necessary, to have an efficient establishment on the spot.

The rapid increase of trade, more especially since the steps taken when Mr. Consul Medhurst was sent up to Nanking on the Yangchow business, with instructions at the same to demand redress for continuous barrier exactions at a station above Yangchow, as shown in Mr. Allen's Trade Report, and the prospective opening of Wuhu on the opposite bank, between Chin-kiang and Kiu-kiang, would either of them furnish good and sufficient reasons for replacing a Consul at the former port, and I must press my recommendation therefore.

The breaking up of a Consulate, and with it putting a stop to British trade at any particular port, is a measure which should only be resorted to after mature consideration, and I have nothing to reproach myself with in the advice to resort to it in 1867, although I now deem it desirable to re-establish what I then destroyed under different circumstances. In most cases there are vested interests in houses and land to be taken into account. Interests, also, in existing trade, whatever it may be, and the probability of the traffic increasing at some later period—a prospect which in many cases will be contingent on a Consular establishment being retained on the spot—must not be lost sight of. Foochow and Ningpo are both cases in point. Nevertheless, taking all these into consideration, I have arrived at the conclusion that the whole of the interests connected with the Island of Formosa, with its four ports, either present or prospective, are not such as to make it worth while to persevere in keeping up Consular establishments which cost some £4,000 per annum.

This is indeed something under the actual cost, which may be estimated at £4,200, while the cost to the country, if we take into account the additional expense of ships-of-war visiting the ports, in coal, &c., cannot be estimated at less than £5,000. The whole foreign trade does not amount to £200,000 annually after a ten years' trial. The returns of last year make it only £160,859. This, and a paltry export trade in camphor and sugar, and a very small import of foreign goods, are all the inducements Formosa offers for retaining an establishment in one of the unhealthiest places in China, entailing an expenditure of £5,000 a-year, and incessant risk of embroilment.

We are the only Treaty Power that goes to the expense of a Consul or Consular Establishment at any of the ports. The sea coast is alone under the authority of the Chinese Government, and the whole of the interior is still inhabited by savages. The scattered colonists from the mainland on the sea-board are but one degree removed from barbarism, and offer no hope of being consumers of foreign manufactures. The natural products of the island, consisting chiefly of camphor, sugar, and rice, can only furnish scant supplies for a coasting trade.

There are other reasons besides economy that would suggest the expediency of such a step. The climate is most trying and unhealthy, and both physically and morally it destroys the energies and health of those sent to reside there more than any other place in China. The isolation is complete; the communication with the mainland most irregular and uncertain; the people and the authorities are both very ungovernable and violent, rendering conflicts with one or both from time to time all but inevitable. Only recently the papers speak of two of the mercantile residents having been attacked and wounded; how seriously I do not know, as none of the details have reached me. The value of any houses or land held by British subjects must be very small. The trading interests I estimate at next to nothing. The number of British subjects at each port, independent of those employed in the Imperial Customs and our own establishment, at the end of last year did not exceed nine—that is, six at Takow and Taiwan (four mercantile and two missionaries) and three at Tamsuy. As regards Her Majesty's Government's property in houses or land, we have fortunately only one building, a Vice-Consulate at Tamsuy, and this the Chinese Government might be willing to take over. The two or three houses there and at Takow, built by British subjects, and the property chiefly of bankrupts—Dent and Co., McPhail and Co., and others—might also be transferred at a reasonable price.

The only argument against such a measure, and the total stoppage of our trade by the withdrawal of Consular establishments, is that, as a matter of policy, it is open to the objection that it may appear to the Chinese a step backwards, and thus become a dangerous precedent, teaching the Chinese that if they only make the place sufficiently disagreeable, or by hindrances to trade worthless to us, they will ultimately succeed in driving the foreigner away from all the ports. I do not deny that this argument has a certain cogency, but I do not think this one objection should prevail against all other considerations. In the present instance it is a question only of degree. I do not, therefore, hesitate to advise the abandonment of Formosa, as soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed, on grounds both of economy and policy. We must set the gain in annual saving against any possible or contingent disadvantage in another direction. The only question, I think, should be the possibility of obtaining something in return from the Chinese. If they would give Ichang on the Yang-tsze as a treaty port in exchange, I do not think there can be any doubt that both parties would be great gainers. And Formosa has been so fruitful in troubles and complications in the past, and so likely to breed more in the future, that the Yamên could hardly fail to hail with pleasure any disposition on our part to withdraw from the island. It does not seem impossible, therefore, that they might listen to overtures of this nature. Independent of this I am unable, after the most careful survey of the different ports, to recommend any material changes.

The economical tendencies of the present Government are of a most determined character, for we find Sir R. Alcock addressing Mr. Consul Robertson, pointing out that eight messengers appear excessive for his Consular purposes. The wages of these messengers range from $6 to $9 per month. The cost of living at each port is also furnished by orders from Lord Clarendon, and some Consular officers have been very full, not to say ludicrous, in details. We find Mr. Consul Mongan entering on the relative properties of meat and fowl thus:—"There is about as much flesh on one English as on four Chinese fowls, and one English is fully equal to two Chinese eggs. Chinese pork is scarcely ever eaten by foreigners."

Mr. Consul PEDDER, of Amoy, writes:—

"It is a common saying in China that dollars go no further in that country than shillings do in England. This is not a correct statement as regards many branches of expenditure, but in regard to the whole cost of residence in China it is approximately correct, if an English standard of living be taken with such modifications as are rendered necessary by difference of climate, &c. I may perhaps be able to prove further on that, even sovereigns would occasionally be necessarily spent in China for what could be done at home at least as satisfactorily for the same number of shillings."

"The undersigned has lost more money than he has saved in trying to get butter from England, as so much has come out entirely spoiled. He has lost as much as £4 10s. upon a single importation of that article. Mutton is sold only by the 'quarter,' at a price irrespective of weight, which brings it to the prices mentioned per pound. But sheep are so thin in this place that the proportion of meat to bone is not half what it is with English meat. Making an allowance for this fact, the cost of this article is considerably over the 'market' prices quoted."

Mr. PEDDER, on the trade of the port, says:—

The diversion of foreign trade at this port into Chinese hands is almost entirely owing to the operation of the Lekim duties, and that principally through the manner in which they are gathered. These duties are divided into several classes, and are farmed out to privileged associations of merchants and dealers for something less than half the sum they should produce; and this gives the members of these associations something approaching to a monopoly of the branches of trade with which they are connected, as having to make up less than half the amount that full duties on the whole trade would produce, they can not only afford to let themselves off free of duty in the first instance, but can also give considerable advantages to those Chinese dealers who do business with them instead of with foreign merchants.

Take the following illustration. A foreign merchant imports a chest of opium in a foreign vessel, paying import duty at the foreign department of the Custon-house. A farmer of the Lekim duty on opium does the same. The latter being a Chinaman should also pay the Lekim duty of about £30 sterling, but of course does not so tax himself. One country dealer buys the chest imported by the foreign merchant, and is at once charged the full Lekim duty. Another dealer buys from the Chinese importer (a farmer of the Lekim duty), and is let off with a payment of half or a quarter of the above-mentioned duty. Such a case of course never occurs, as a dealer would of course not buy from the foreign importer as long as the other man had any to sell. To show how complete is the monopoly enjoyed by the farmers of these duties, I may state that if a man, unconnected with the Lekim office, receives an advance (say) for tea to be supplied hereafter—that advance being as usual partly in dollars and partly in opium—he will at once take his delivery order for the opium to a Lekim farmer, and sell it to him at a considerable loss. The re-sale will in fact have been arranged previously, before he ventured to receive the opium as an advance from the foreign merchant.

Mr. Consul CAINE, writing from Hankow on the trade of the port, says:—

Trade, now that the country is pacified, has reverted to its original channel, viz., Shanghai—the great banking centre—where the extensive banking systems of the Chinese offer greater facilities than foreign banks can or will afford them. Moreover, the expenses of their business establishments, as compared with foreign firms, are very much lighter; and they are content with a small profit, on which a foreigner would starve.

It is the transit-pass system which alone keeps any of the import trade in the hands of the foreigner. When natives no longer fear the exactions of their own corrupt officials, or transit passes cease to be respected, then foreign merchants may retire from Hankow, unless, indeed, permission for the merchant to travel where he likes, to dispose of his goods, be accorded by the Chinese Government. As regards this last point, I believe the Government is willing to permit of residence in the interior to the foreigner, provided he submits himself to Chinese law, under which proviso no one would, of course, enter the country. But could it not be left to the Consul at the port from which the merchant starts, to allow only such as he knew to be trustworthy, to proceed into the interior; and then only if the person so desiring to proceed were a member of a firm at the port in question. A bond should be given also for a heavy amount to insure good behaviour. The Consul, moreover, should have it in his power to recall, for misconduct, a merchant so resident, at any time, and for the slightest offence. By some such method as the above, it appears to me, that the conduct of foreigners in the country might be regulated without giving offence to the native officials.

In the tea districts here the Russians, though dressing as Europeans, receive not the slightest molestation, and live in the greatest harmony with the natives. I had the pleasure of spending a few days last winter at two of these establishments, and was consequently able to judge of the feeling of the people towards them.

The export trade being principally tea, is likely to continue in foreigners hands, unless, indeed, Shanghai, as it has done this season, draws away this trade by paying higher prices for chops than were ruling here. The Hankow merchants were congratulating themselves on having at last a chance of making up for the severe losses of the last two years, when, in consequence of the higher prices at Shanghai, the Chinese teamen shipped off all remaining chops to that port. It is this great competition among themselves which causes these ruinous prices; and if merchants would only combine, as the Chinese do, they would have a good prospect of making money.

Mr. SINCLAIR, Consul at Foochow, writes on the inland transit dues or squeezes:—

With the exception of opium and lead and a small quantity of inferior shirtings, almost all the other foreign goods are imported by Chinese on their own account in foreign vessels from Hong Kong, whith er they go to make their purchases, or else employ Chinese agents there to select what they want. Once the foreign goods, thus Chinese-owned, have passed through the European Custom, they become to all intents and purposes Chinese, and we lose all trace of them. They spread over the neighbouring districts, subjected, even in the port itself, to illegal exactions of a variety of denominations, despite the protection guaranteed to them by the Treaties. As for the goods that are carried inland, they are quite beyond Consular protection, and the local mandarins at the various barriers levy ad libitum, and refuse to acknowledge the transit-duty certificate, excepting for the article lead, with which they are averse to interfere.

Mr. GREGORY, on the trade of Formosa, says:—

In 1866 the camphor was almost all sent away by the Chinese, but in 1867 European merchants again turned their attention to camphor, and made efforts to establish a free trade in opposition to the monopoly. Ultimately, in 1868, the monopoly was overthrown. The trade is now in the hands of Europeans, who purchase of Chinese merchants or of small country dealers, and often go into the country to obtain the camphor. From information kindly furnished me by the Customs it appears that during the six months ending the 30th ult. only about five per cent. of the shipments of camphor were made by Chinese.

I turn to the coal trade of Kelung. Four years ago there was no resident European engaged in this trade. In 1866, and still more in 1868, the trade received a remarkable development. Two or three European houses began to establish themselves. Preparations were made for a brisk trade for the present year, but the neighbouring markets having been flooded with coal from home and Australia, the Kelung coal trade is at present dull. The export for the six months from April to September last is given as follows:—Shipped by foreigners, including a house of doubtful nationality, employing foreign agents, 4,785 tons; shipped by Chinese, 4,221 tons. In tea there is a noticeable and increasing little trade, sprung up within the last four years, in the hands of Europeans.

Mr. Consul MARKHAM writes from Chefoo:—

"The Shanghai houses had no motive to help in building up a direct trade between the North and England that would direct a larger portion of business from their own hands. They naturally preferred to see the Northern dealers flocking down to Shanghai to buy all their goods; and they could not look favourably on an attempt to keep those dealers from leaving the Northern ports by supplying their wants through imports by vessels direct from England. The steamer owners also were opposed to any change in a trade that brought in such profitable returns for transporting vast quantities of goods from Shanghai to the North.

"To open the direct trade with the north of China, and thus check the tendency of the trade to pass from British into Chinese hands, was a hard task. It required an immediate command of large capital, such as it could hardly be expected that they had accumulated since 1861; and also the co-operation of mercantile persons in England to bring about such a result. There could be no doubt of the legitimacy of the direct North trade, from the vast extent of goods sold annually at these ports. Nevertheless, owing to circumstances already noted, no assistance from any British merchants either at other ports of China or in England, could be obtained to start the affair.

"It is a curious circumstance that the credit of relieving the British trade in the north of China from the competition of Chinese, and the commencement of restoring the business into the hands of British merchants, was entirely due to the intelligent liberality of the French bank—the 'Comptoir d'Escompte,' established in China, the director of which, seeing the importance and legitimacy of a business in manufactured goods direct from England to the north of China, afforded ample facilities to begin the trade.

"The result has been most satisfactory for the trade of North China. Since 1867 several vessels have arrived direct from England loaded with piece goods, iron, coal, &c."

Mr. FITTOCK, Consul at Ningpo:—

"For the past five years I have been at this port, and I have had several opportunities of noticing the intimate relation subsisting between compradores and their employers; the connection is frequently so close as to make it difficult to say where it ceases, as between master and servant, and either commences on the equality of partners, or the foreign merchant becomes the constituent of his compradore, by making shipments to Shanghai, Hong Kong, and other ports in China, and even to England on his own account and risk."

THE CHINA CONVENTION—REPLY TO LORD CLARENDON.

To the Right Hon. the Earl of CLARENDON, K.G., G.C.B., &c.

MY LORD,—I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your Lordship's reply to the Memorial of the London merchants on the proposed Convention with China, in which your Lordship observes that Her Majesty's Government are not surprised that we should have learned the nature of its provisions with a certain dissatisfaction. The committee has given the most respectful consideration to the views of the Government, and we avail ourselves of your Lordship's invitation to submit to your notice the following remarks, in further reference to the subject.

1. It is gratifying to us to learn that Her Majesty's Government recognise the validity of the objection we raised to the first article of the Convention, and are prepared to suggest to the Chinese Government its omission or modification. Furthermore, since our Memorial was sent in, we have learned with satisfaction that on the strong representations which had been made by the mercantile community at Hong Kong upon the proposed relinquishment of the right to trade at Kiungchow, Sir Rutherford Alcock had agreed to reconsider that question, and to bring it to the notice of Her Majesty's Government, with a view to procuring the opening of that port, or some other, in that part of China. Seeing that the revision of these stipulations will necessitate the re-opening of the subject at Peking, we must express our very earnest desire and hope that when our statements shall have been further considered, and the gravity of the interest involved shall have been fully weighed, Her Majesty's Government may be led to resolve upon claiming further amendments, which will remove from this measure its most objectionable features, and that limitation of rights and privileges secured under former treaties of which we have so much cause to complain.

2. In regard to the proposed increase in the export duty on silk, your Lordship observes that it amounts to nothing more than a re-adjustment of the duty to the rate stipulated by the Treaty of Tientsin, viz., five per cent., which could not have been resisted by Her Majesty's Government. Your Lordship says, "The intention of the Treaty of Tientsin was that China should receive a revenue calculated at the rate of five per cent. on the value of silk exported, and the specific duty fixed by that Treaty for administrative convenience having been for some years considerably less than that which was intended by both contracting parties, it became a matter of simple justice to allow of its rectification." We readily admit the soundness of the argument, but we beg to point out that this five per cent. basis was made applicable not to silk only but to every other article equally with silk. And we maintain that it is manifestly inequitable for either Government to select, as in this instance, the special case of one article of export for their own sole advantage. If the readjustment is claimed, let it be fairly made, and it will be found, as pointed out in our Memorial, that the existing export duty upon tea must by the same rule be largely reduced. Instead of being 5 per cent., the specific duty levied upon tea is not less than 12½ per cent. upon the average first cost of the article. If the duty on silk be now, at a period of exceptionally high prices, £140,000 per annum less than China is entitled to levy, that on tea is unquestionably £500,000 more than she can rightfully charge. We therefore feel that Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary in acceding to this demand has failed as the representative of his country to give just protection to the trade which is specially committed to his charge.

3. With reference to your Lordship's strictures upon our remarks on the internal taxation on silk, we cannot admit that any principle of international equality is violated by an agreement to commute by a fixed payment the aggregate of local or municipal taxes. Taking the case of France, as cited by your Lordship, we respectfully submit that it would be perfectly competent for our Government to agree with the Imperial Government to commute the Paris duties of Octroi on British goods by a payment at the port of entry as in China, and that it would be illegal for the local authorities to charge those duties a second time. This in fact embodies the general principle for which Her Majesty's Government are now contending, viz., the recognition of the supreme Government only; and it is precisely what Sir R. Alcock, with the approval of Her Majesty's Government, proposed to do, but only in the nine Treaty Port provinces, viz., to exempt British goods from all local taxation whatever in consideration of their paying the additional 2½ per cent. at the port of entry.

With regard to the right to levy licence duties, and your Lordship's comparison between the licence to deal in silk and the old tea-dealer's licence in England, will it be believed that the latter was only a small uniform charge of 11s. 6½d. per annum levied upon the individual dealer, whereas the former is really a burden upon the trade, being levied in respect of transactions, and not at so much per head, and involves a payment by each of the silk dealers at Nanzing of from £500 to £5,000 per annum according as their sales may range from 100 to 1,000 bales each. This licence tax on silk was imposed by the Chinese officials when they found that the commutation of the transit dues imposed a limit upon the power of taxation. It cannot, therefore, be defended, as your Lordship has defended it, on the ground of a right to impose direct taxes; but it is a clear act of bad faith, and affords a flagrant example of that system of evasion by which the Chinese contrive to defeat the intention of treaty engagements when disadvantageous to them.

4. On the subject of transit dues, which has, in our opinion, so vitally important a bearing upon the successful prosecution and extension of British trade in China, your Lordship contends that the mercantile community has laboured under a long continued misapprehension of treaty rights, which appears to have been shared to some extent by Her Majesty's representatives in China, in supposing that the commutation of duties in name of "transit dues," provided for in Article XXVIII. of the Treaty of Tientsin, was intended to free British imports into China from all internal municipal taxation. After the most careful consideration, we are compelled to adhere to the opinion that such complete exemption and nothing less was intended to be secured by that Article of the Treaty to British imports when conveyed to inland markets under certificates. The words of that Article, as quoted by your Lordship, appear to us incapable of carrying any other meaning—viz., "The amount of this charge shall be leviable on exports at the first barrier they may have to pass, or on imports at the port at which they are landed; and on payment thereof a certificate shall be issued which shall exempt the goods from all further inland charges whatsoever." That Lord Elgin so understood the Treaty appears to us incontestable from the following terms used in his explanatory Despatch to Lord Malmesbury, then Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs:—

"I have the honour to transmit herewith a tariff of duties, and accompanying rules or articles. . . .

"Rule 7 applies and extends the principle respecting transit duties, which is laid down by Article XXVIII. of the Treaty of Tientsin. Henceforward, on payment of a sum in name of transit duty, which for simplicity's sake has been fixed at one-half of the tariff rate of duty, goods, whether of export or import, will be free to pass between the port of shipment or entry to or from any part of China, without further charge of toll, octroi, or tax of any description whatsoever. I confess that I consider this to be a most important point gained in the future interest of foreign trade with China. In every representation on the general subject of trade, which I have received from mercantile bodies or individuals since I came to China, the system, or no system, under which transit duties are now levied, has been pressed upon me as a grievance. I have always thought that the remedy was to be sought in the substitution of one fixed payment for the present irregular and multiplied levies. At the same time, in a country where duties of octroi are habitually resorted to as an expedient for supplying the wants both of the local and Imperial treasuries, it was obviously difficult to devise a scheme for the commutation of transit duties, which, without creating great financial disturbance, should prove an effectual protection to the importing and exporting merchants. The rule now under consideration has been very carefully framed, and will, I trust, in practice, afford a reasonable security against both of the two classes of evils which I have indicated."

It will thus be seen that Lord Elgin defines transit dues to mean "toll, octroi, or tax of any description," and he defines octroi to be "an expedient for supplying the wants both of the local and Imperial treasuries." We cannot see how it can be disputed that these definitions cover all internal taxation of every description, the object being in Lord Elgin's words to import certainty into mercantile transactions by the substitution of one fixed payment for the present irregular and multiplied levies. And we are at a loss to understand how Her Majesty's Government should now take a view of these important provisions in the Treaty of Tientsin so opposed to the declared intention with which they were framed, and to the clear definitions of them given in the words of Lord Elgin, who framed them.

5. Under the Treaty of Tientsin the commutation of these duties was optional. It is now proposed to make it compulsory, and for the first time to create a distinction between Treaty Port Provinces and non-Treaty Port Provinces. In the former the use of transit certificates is abrogated, and we are officially informed that in these provinces the total exemption of British textiles, as such, from all further taxation, has been secured in consideration of the commuted payment. We have already expressed our objections to the compulsory payment, believing that in many districts it will not protect the owners of goods from being taxed in respect of them. Your Lordship's reply, so far from removing our objections, we must be permitted to say, rather confirms them. The taxation from which it is professed to exempt the goods is clearly of a local or municipal kind, and any provisions to exempt us from these your Lordship informs us "the Chinese Government would be unable if willing to fulfil, and Her Majesty's Government would be unwilling if able to enforce." Under these circumstances we must be excused if we decline to admit this to be an advantage, for which we are to pay so highly without being reasonably certain of getting an equivalent; and we must still urge the necessity of some provision being made for the due fulfilment of this stipulation. It is perfectly notorious, and no officer of Her Majesty's Government who has ever lived in China will refuse to confirm it, that the Chinese Government has not kept promises of this character in the past, and the reliance which Her Majesty's Government places in the "probability that the Chinese Government has seen its way to executive arrangements for giving it effect" is entirely misplaced, there being no evidence whatever that any such arrangements either have been, or are intended to be made.

6. As regards the non-Treaty Port Provinces, the new arrangement, instead of being similar to the present one, is much less favourable to trade. Words have been introduced into the new Article conveying a meaning into which the most hostile interpretation of the Tientsin Treaty could not be tortured. It is provided not only that exemption from taxation shall be limited to the period when the goods are "on the way," but a positive power is given to tax them "on arrival like native produce" which, of course, has never paid a farthing in commutation of taxation. We are therefore unable to change our opinion that the Convention, in exposing British goods to unrestricted municipal taxation in one half of China, does as we have asserted entail the forfeiture of a former treaty privilege. The insertion of these words will certainly result in placing what is at present an immense, and in the future an illimitable outlet for British manufactures, at the mercy of the prejudice or the avarice of petty local governors. The paramount importance of protection against their exactions has been dilated upon by every one of Her Majesty's representatives in China, including Sir Rutherford Alcock himself, and we feel it our bounden duty in the strongest manner to express our unqualified condemnation of the terms of the clause we now refer to, and the grave apprehensions we entertain that by such insufficiently considered measures British trade in manufactures may lose a footing in China which it may never be in our power to regain for them.

7. With regard to the appointment of a Chinese Consul at Hong Kong, your Lordship remarks briefly that this "appears to be a necessary corollary to its constitution as a Treaty Port." We are at a loss to comprehend how Hong Kong can be called a Treaty Port. It is a free port on British territory. We retain the conviction expressed in our memorial that this concession to China is most unwise, and, while irksome and harassing to the Chinese population in the colony, we believe that it will tend to embitter rather than to render more friendly the relations between Her Majesty's Government and that of China. It may be true, and we regret it, that owing to the corruption of Chinese officials on the coast there is contraband trade to some extent carried on by Chinese between Hong Kong and the mainland; but we never conceived, until your Lordship suggested it, that it was within our province to point out how such practices were to be checked, the Chinese Government being clearly entitled to adopt any measures for that purpose on their own territory, and in their own waters, which they may find to be necessary.

8. Your Lordship has not referred to the serious limitation, contained in the Convention, of the right of residence in the interior, and to the very unwise, and to us humiliating, provisions with regard to travelling only in boats of native build, and to the virtual prohibition which is sanctioned by the Convention of the use of steamers for the conveyance of goods and passengers in inland waters. Without any desire to force these things on the Chinese Government, we may remark that Chinese traders are quick to avail themselves of the facilities offered by steamers for safe and rapid transit, and the prohibition of them which is involved in the provisions of Rule 7 will be a direct hindrance to trade and ought not be agreed to in a Treaty.

9. Your Lordship is pleased to state that if after trial the proposed system is found to fail, Her Majesty's Government is free at any time to reopen negotiations and seek other combinations. It will be well, we think, to remember that the Convention gives to China a clear increase of revenue, from import and export duties, of £600,000, not including in that amount the commuted transit dues of £200,000 more. And that any proposal for the reopening of the negotiations could not fail to bear an appearance of hostility which would be resisted by the Chinese, if, indeed, Her Majesty's Government could be induced to make the demand for it.

10. Your Lordship expressed the belief that "public opinion in the Consular Ports of China, so far as it has been yet collected, appears to be very much divided as to the merits of the proposed arrangements, and that some portion of the mercantile community view them with favour and approval." Your Lordship has been made aware since expressing these views that every public expression of opinion in China has been hostile to the Convention. The Chambers of Commerce at Shanghai and Hong Kong, and the mercantile community of Hong Kong, assembled in public meeting, are, in whatever else they may differ, unanimous in deprecating the ratification of this Convention. Nor can your memorialists learn from their private correspondence, or that of their friends, that there are any exceptions to the one unanimous sentiment of alarm and dismay at the possibility that it may receive the approval of Her Majesty's Government, improbable as such a result has appeared to them.

11. May we, therefore, trust that your Lordship, in no spirit of hostility to China, which has everything to gain by the freedom of commercial intercourse which we advocate, but with a high appreciation of the great commercial interests of this country, will advise Her Majesty to withhold the ratification of this Convention until it shall have been so amended as to give the promise of the peaceful prosecution and progressive development of mutually advantageous commercial intercourse between Great Britain and China.—I have the honour to be, &c.,

HUGH M. MATHESON,
Chairman of the Committee of London Merchants.

MR. MERCER ON THE NEW CONVENTION.

THE following letter from Mr. W. T. Mercer, for twenty years in Hong Kong as Colonial Secretary and Acting Governor, is published in the Standard. The reference to Article XXI. of the Tientsin Treaty is very valuable at this juncture, and should not be overlooked by the committee now in correspondence with Lord Clarendon:—

It seems to me that the resolution to treat China as an equal nation, which Her Majesty's Government put forward as the basis of this Convention, is somewhat of a pretence, and will not bear looking into. In the old treaties the inferiority of China was pointedly and practically asserted by our claim to ex-territorial jurisdiction, and if it were now really intended to recognise the Chinese as on the same footing as ourselves, plainly the first thing to be done was to abandon our right to this jurisdiction, which, however, is untouched by the new Convention, and remains, as before, in full force. I wonder that the evident blot did not occur to any of the gentlemen who formed the late deputation to Lord Clarendon; but the fact is that as far as the British colony is concerned we are not even on a level with the Chinese, for by what I have always considered an oversight in the original Treaty of Nanking, continued in that of Tientsin, and unremedied in the Convention under discussion, serious injury is done to Hong Kong by the Article (Tientsin XXI.) which runs thus:—

"If criminals, subjects of China, shall take refuge in Hong Kong, they shall, on due requisition by the Chinese authorities, be searched for, and on proof of their guilt be delivered up."

Nothing is said about the rendition of criminals flying from Hong Kong to the mainland of China, where they can and do make themselves secure in a quarter of an hour. This want of reciprocity (from which I personally have suffered) is triumphantly quoted by the Chinese authorities at Canton, and will gradually become, as it is becoming, within the knowledge of the large Chinese population of the island. The consequences are so evident that it is needless to do more than point to insecurity of life and property, immunity to crime, increased police rates, and all the evils that flow from taxation unnecessarily augmented.

If the present Convention is to be ratified let there be an amendment of this one-sided article, providing reciprocity of rendition, and thus to some extent remedying a serious mischief. Should this not be done, then let the grave responsibility lie with those who have the power of altering by a stroke of the pen an unequal stipulation, which can only have been framed originally in inexperience, and be now continued by culpable indifference and neglect.

The other point on which I would touch is that of the Chinese Consul. Is this officer to have, on the understanding of equal footing, the same power as a British Consul in China with his specially conceded jurisdiction? I trow not, for an Act of Parliament would be required to give him this unwonted authority, and such an Act would never be passed, nor would any Government venture to ask the British Parliament to sanction a measure so unprecedented as the abnegation and transfer of the Queen's authority within the Queen's dominions. But if he be only an ordinary Consul, who is in law nothing more than a commercial agent, how about the equal footing? And than as to his functions. Is he to look after the Chinese shipping? This is done by us in our territory, and by the Chinese in theirs. If espionage or interference with the local traffic be meant, the Consul's office would in three months be a sinecure, for the shipping would fly the port to the irreparable damage of colonial interests. If his intended duty be to make official reports, secret or open, denunciatory of Chinese who have sought domicile in Hong Kong, then we have disgraced ourselves in permitting a gross act of treachery. It might be the duty of the Governor of the colony to resent such conduct by withdrawing the Consul's exequatur, on the ground that he had exceeded a Consul's functions; but supposing no official check employed, it would be competent to any Chinese resident in Hong Kong damaged by the illegal act of the Consul to seek redress at law, for a Consul has no diplomatic privilege, and I know enough of the colony to think that a lawyer might there be found to conduct such a case, and perhaps a jury to express an ugly opinion upon it.

The plea put forward as to the smuggling will not hold good. If Chinese subjects will evade Chinese custom-houses, let the Chinese Government by all means take repressive measures, but within their own territory and their own waters; otherwise, believe me, a dangerous precedent will be established, and the authorities in Downing-street will lament too late the awkward complications that must inevitably arise.

How much of the responsibility attached to this unhappy attempt at a politico-commercial treaty may be fastened on the several parties to it, here and in China, it were useless to inquire; but it is evident that hostility to the British colony has dictated the points I have dwelt on, and, all things considered, I should recommend that the document be put aside unratified, conditionally forgiven, and, if possible, forgotten. In any case, Article XXXI. of the old treaty should be altered, and the happy thought of a resident Consul at once abandoned.

THE PROPOSED LOTTERIES IN SHANGHAI.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—What will Exeter Hall and the Duke of Somerset say on reading Sir Edmund Hornby's speech at the recent meeting of Shanghai Church pew-renters? Imagine one so high in authority in that sweet spot calmly advocating the establishment of a gigantic lottery for £60,000, and defending this course on the joint grounds of expediency and morality! What next, and next? It is just possible that the recent luck which has attended Shanghai in the drawing of big prizes in the Manila lotteries may have caused the Chief Judge's mouth to water; but this kind of yearning is not easily satisfied, while readily extended, and it is quite possible that we may next hear of a Consul anxious to give the long odds against the passage of a clipper ship, or offering to back heavily a crack pony for the next Saturday's paper hunt.

Perhaps you would be good enough to reproduce the enclosed extract from the Globe of the 17th inst. for the benefit of Sir Edmund Hornby, and what the North China Herald calls the "peculiar community" of Shanghai.—Yours obediently,

March 19, 1870. ONE DOLLAR.

"Just before the entire abolition of lotteries in England a scheme was formed in London luring the greed and adventure of the country with mammoth baits of £20,000, £50,000, and £100,000, and the night following the drawing was immortalised by fifty suicides. Bearing this sad fact in mind, we find it difficult to avoid sympathising with the question put by Mr. Charley to the Chief Secretary for Ireland, as to what steps the Government had taken to suppress an illegal lottery, the tickets for which were headed 'St. Clare's Female Orphanage, Harold's-cross, Dublin.' But Mr. Fortescue's reply, that 'being for a charitable object it had no tendency to encourage gambling,' happens to be singularly opposed to incontrovertible history. We may admit that the promoters of the charity in favour of Roman Catholic orphan girls are perfectly disinterested in turning their bazaar into a lottery; but the very preference of so indirect a method to open subscription, or the sale of their prizes, proves a faith in the inherent superiority of its attractions, and what can these be if not those of gambling? Can Mr. Fortescue really suppose that the ticket-holder's imagination, hitherto fascinated by the love of lucre and the excitement of chance, will all of a sudden be soothed with benign anticipations of the provision in any case in store for the young recipients of his invisible charity? Has it escaped him that when a noxious branch of our lottery system was shot into America its poison was hawked as fruit—that is to say, its deleterious properties were concealed under the bright-coloured rind of useful enterprise? Nothing was commoner than for a 'philanthropist' to start a lottery for the erection of a church, bridge, or school, the endowment of a college, or the excavation of a canal. And what was the result of these "charitable objects?" Simply that in 1837, so far from their having 'no tendency to encourage gambling,' the unparalleled extent of their baneful influence in that direction wrung from the American press the well-founded complaint that 'under their pretence legislative sanction was given to vice.' Would it not be well for Mr. Fortescue, for the future, before on the subject of lotteries pronouncing confident opinions, to acquire elementary facts?"

Messrs. James Nisbet and Co. send us a little volume by the Rev. William Muirhead, of the London Missionary Society, entitled China and the Gospel. We have not time to review it fully this week, but propose doing so in our next issue. A cursory glance over the pages gives a very satisfactory impression, and we are especially struck with the ability and comprehensive views displayed in those chapters which treat of political relations, commerce, and treaty rights.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

(14th.) Colonel SYKES asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, as it appears from despatches published in the North China Daily News that the French Chargé d'Affaires, M. Rochefort, in a personal interview with "Ma," the Viceroy of Nanking, had obtained ample redress for the late outrage by the literati at Ngan-king upon French missionaries, and a grant of a plot of land within the walls of Ngan-king for a church and mission-house; whether Sir Rutherford Alcock, in his personal interview with "Ma," the Viceroy, had obtained equivalent redress for the outrage by the literati upon English missionaries in Ngan-king; whether the following circumstances, as detailed in a private letter published in the China Overland Trade Report of the 25th of January, and dated Tamani, the 10th of January, 1870, had been reported by the Consul at Tamsui, or had come to the knowledge of the Foreign-office—namely, that by order of the Taoutai of Taiwanfoo, the mandarin of Oulan had proclaimed a reward of $200 for the head of Mr. Pickering, a British merchant, travelling with a Chinese pass in Formosa, after confiscating his property to a large amount; and whether Mr. Field, a British merchant, had been put into irons, after being robbed of 1,000 piculs of camphor, he also travelling under the protection of a Chinese pass.

Mr. OTWAY said that in regard to the first part of the question he had to state that the Government had received no information whatever respecting the redress alleged to have been obtained by M. Rochefort for an outrage upon French missionaries at Ngan-king. The circumstances attending Sir Rutherford Alcock's interview with "Ma," the Viceroy, were as follows:—Some English missionaries established themselves in Ngan King, a province where they had no treaty right. They were told that they incurred considerable risk, but they took no heed of the warning. They remained unmolested till April, when the Governor of the province informed them it would be advisable for them to leave the city, as an examination of students was about to be held. They did not think proper to do so, and afterwards, on meeting a body of students issuing from the examination hall, they became alarmed. However, the missionaries, with their wives and children, took shelter in the palace of the Governor of the province, who procured a boat, sent them away to a place of safety, and gave them $100 besides. Sir Rutherford Alcock subsequently had an interview with the Governor, who said that he should repay the missionaries the moneys they had expended, and also punish the ringleaders of the students. The Government had received no intelligence respecting the other statements or reports referred to by his hon. and gallant friend.

(15th.) Colonel SYKES gave notice that on Thursday next he should put a question to the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs with reference to the hon. gentleman's statement last evening respecting the outrages on missionaries in Ngan-king, in China. He should ask whether Her Majesty's Government approved of the same measure of justice not being meted out to the English as to the French missionaries, the former having been expelled from the city, while the latter had a plot of ground given to them for the site of a mission church; also whether instructions had been, or would be, given to our consular agents abroad to report direct to the Foreign-office all outrages upon British subjects, especially in China.

SUPPLY.—CHINA AND JAPAN CIVIL SERVICES.

(14th.) Mr. STANSFELD, in proposing a vote of £218,003 0s. 7d. in order to make good excesses on certain grants for civil services for the year ending the 31st of March, 1869, said that the appropriation accounts for 1868-9, though laid on the table in due time and now in the printer's hands, had not yet been distributed to members, and he must therefore ask for the indulgence of the committee in proposing the vote. Excess votes did not imply a total excess in the expenditure of the year, and the nett saving in civil service grants in 1868-9 was £344,826. These excesses had been already met by advances out of Ways and Means in the current year, and the vote of to-night was, therefore, essentially matter of account. Among the excesses were some upon the Consular estimates for China and Japan, going back to the year 1864-5, and when these came before him he felt that they ought to be subjected to a rigorous departmental audit. They had, therefore, been closely examined and audited at the Treasury, and he trusted that the Committee now sitting on Consular and Diplomatic expenditure would take this question into consideration, and that the vote would be allowed to pass to-night.

Mr. URQUHART said there ought to be time to examine these accounts, and the right hon. gentleman was presuming on the confidence of the committee in asking for a vote under such circumstances.

Sir C. DILKE said that a vote by this House involved responsibility, or otherwise proceedings in Committee of Supply would be a farce. He moved the omission of the vote of £58,000 for services in China, Japan, and Siam.

Mr. LIDDELL protested against the course which the committee were asked to pursue. The Public Accounts Committee was useless unless it examined witnesses and investigated matters of this kind. It was a most startling thing to be asked to vote a lump sum to cover excesses that went back for so many years, and he hoped that this was the last time such a request would be made.

Mr. SCLATER-BOOTH said undoubtedly these excesses for China and Japan were extremely unsatisfactory, and showed that there must have been great irregularity in keeping the accounts of the department. It was, however, necessary to vote these excesses in order that the accounts might be settled within the current financial year, which would end on the 5th of April.

Mr. R. SHAW said it was only last week they voted £14,000 for excesses over estimates in the Consular Department, and now they were asked to vote £63,000 more for excesses over the estimates of the last six years. As to the Committee on the Consular Service, he had arrived at the conclusion that the Foreign-office was the master of the House of Commons and of the Treasury too, and, unless the Chancellor of the Exchequer came to the rescue, there was little hope of anything being done.

Mr. Alderman LUSK said they might have to pay, but they ought to be allowed to grumble. It was all very well to say that this was "a matter of account;" he could not understand this way of keeping accounts, and he did not believe it was "a matter of account" at all. He thought it most irregular to apply in this way for the payment of such charges, and he trusted that in future matters of this kind would be brought forward at a time when they could be properly discussed.

Mr. CHILDERS observed that before 1866 there was no real audit for the civil service expenditure, but in that year the Treasury brought in a Bill to constitute an effectual audit, and nothing similar to that which was now complained of could occur in future years without the Treasury and the departments concerned incurring serious blame.

Mr. WHITWELL thought that some return should be laid on the table showing in detail how these excesses arose.

Mr. STANSFELD appealed to the hon. member for Chelsea not to press his amendment. He was far from defending the irregularity which had occurred, but it arose under the system to which he had already alluded.

Sir C. DILKE felt that the only way in which the Committee could express an opinion on the subject was by a division. No process of voting or not voting could decide anything in reference to the matter to be objected to by his hon. friend.

Mr. R. FOWLER thought some explanation as to the mode of payment—as to by whom the money had been spent—would be desirable.

The Committee then divided, and there appeared—

NATIVE JAPANESE CHRISTIANS.

(18th.) Mr. JAMES WHITE asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether he had received any official information as to the correctness or otherwise of the statements in the London and China Telegraph of the 7th and 14th instant of the expulsion by the Japanese authorities of the native Christians from the treaty port of Nagasaki; and whether Her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary unavailingly endeavoured to induce the Governor of Nagasaki to postpone their expulsion for twenty days, to give Sir Harry Parkes time to confer with the representatives of the other Treaty Powers and the superior authorities at Yedo.

Mr. OTWAY replied that the Government had received official information on the subject referred to in his hon. friend's question, and he regretted to say that the statement it contained was substantially correct. This was the more to be regretted because at the beginning of last year Her Majesty's Government were informed by the Japanese Government that, the authority of the Mikado being now established, it was their intention to pursue a lenient policy towards the native Christians. Sir Harry Parkes was thereupon instructed to convey to the Japanese Government the satisfaction of Her Majesty's Government at finding that such a policy was to be pursued. It appeared that in the month of January last Sir Harry Parkes was on a visit to Nagasaki, and was informed by the Consul there that the Governor of the place was proceeding to deport the native Christians into the interior. Sir Harry immediately called upon the Governor, remonstrated with him, and urged him to abstain from carrying out this deportation until the authorities at Yedo could be communicated with. The Governor, however, stated that his instructions were peremptory. Sir H. Parkes then proceeded to Yokohama, and the representatives of all the foreign Powers there addressed a note to the Japanese Government on the subject. Her Majesty's Government had reason to believe that this representation on the part of all the European Powers would bring about some effect on the Japanese Government. They said they had no intention to persecute Christianity as Christianity, but that the converts were disorderly persons, who adopted a foreign religion in order to obtain foreign protection. The result of the representation made to the Japanese Government was that orders were sent to stay proceedings at Nagasaki, or rather at a place in the neighbourhood, which was not within the terms of the treaty. Her Majesty's Government, he was sorry to say, had reason to believe that those orders arrived too late, as 2,800 Christians had been deported, and only 200 allowed to remain.

Monetary and Commercial.

An extraordinary meeting of the proprietors of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China will be held on the 19th of July, "to fill up the vacancy in the board of directors caused by the retirement of Mr. Ellis James Gilman."

By some arrangement not easily to be comprehended, the mail from Saigon, carried by the steamers of the Messageries Imperiales, is as a rule delivered in London by a post later than that from Singapore, China, &c. The only conclusion is that it is not despatched by the first train from Marseilles. Saigon being a French colony should not be treated thus by the French postal authorities.

The first arrival of Assam teas took place via the Suez Canal, on the 14th, the entire passage from Calcutta having occupied, forty-five days.

Bar Silver is taken for the Continent at 5s. 0⅛d. to 5s. 0⅛d. per ounce, but there is no demand for the East. Mexican Dollars are quoted at 4s. 11½d., at which a moderate inquiry prevails for China.

6th at the Bank of England, when the amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £382,900; and to Madras, £4 600. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 11d., and tenders at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 56 per cent. These results show no alteration from those on the last occasion.

A meeting of London brokers has been held at the London Tavern, Mr. William James Thompson in the chair, when resolutions were passed approving the Bill about to be introduced into Parliament by Mr. W. Fowler to relieve the brokers of the City of London from the supervision of the Court of Aldermen, thanking that gentleman for his active interest in the cause, and appointing a committee to further the object in view.

The report of the Merchant Banking Company (Limited), to be presented on the 17th inst., recommends a dividend for the six months at the rate of five per cent. per annum, which will absorb £9,319. The sum of £20,000 has been written off the "amalgamation account" during the year, and £2,049 remains to be carried forward.

Between the 1st and the 14th inst. one Egyptian, one Italian, one Austrian, four French, and seventeen English vessels passed through the Suez Canal. The Europe steamer, 3,500 tons, 400-horse power, arrived from Bombay at Marseilles with thirty-seven passengers. She left Marseilles on the 1st of January, and has therefore, accomplished the two passages, via the Suez Canal, including discharging and reloading, in seventy days.

The steamer Erl King, which lately passed through the Canal, drawing nineteen feet, had considerable difficulty in accomplishing the passage in three days; it could hardly be called steaming through—it was by bumping amd scraping. The arrangements for loading and otherwise expediting steamers are very bad, and unless better organisation prevails soon the Canal will be blocked in a month. The silting process is more rapid than the operations of the dredges. The Hooghly only draws eighteen feet.

The report of the directors of the National Bank of India, for the half-year ended Dec. 31st last, has just been issued. It states that the profits for that period, including the sum brought forward from last account, amounted to £20,511 3s. 9d., and recommends a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, leaving £6,591 3s. 9d. to be carried forward.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Delta, from Southampton on the 19th instant, was, in gold, to Galle, £315; to Bombay, £500; to Madras, £9,840; in silver to Shanghai, £106,850; total in gold, £10,655; in silver, £106,850.

In reference to our statement regarding the failure of Mr. Severs, in our issue of the 7th of March, we have received the following letter:—

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

London, March 21st, 1870.

SIR,—With reference to your paragraph about myself in your Money Article of your issue dated 7th of March I would just notice that you have exaggerated the actual liabilities and made other errors. I allude to the liabilities in the first place; these are apparently £250,000 about, but as over £100,000 worth of goods had been sold, and closed accounts had not come home from China, the liabilities existed only on paper. Then, again, my individual share in these undertakings was much less, as I purchased goods and shipped them to China and Singapore, in which I had either a half or a third interest—but still the whole amount of the shipments appeared in my books.

With regard to my coming home from China insolvent about three years ago, I have to state that I came home in 1864 to look after my firm's business in this country, and that I went out to and returned home from China in 1866, and it was after then that I established in London. I was supported by firms in China and Lancashire of respectability and wealth. With regard to my being a mushroom firm, I had a capital of over £16,000 to commence with, and a connection of greater value than the capital.

With regard to the cause of my stoppages, you state that it was because could no longer get my bills renewed. I have to state that the amount of my acceptances was insignificant, and I could have easily managed to pay all of them.

The cause of my coming home from China insolvent three years ago I have not dwelt upon, as my friends very well know that I was not to blame it was the fault of my partner.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

HENRY H. SEVERS.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson report as follows upon the state of the market:—Since the 10th instant there has been a little more inquiry, but not yet any active demand from the country. The dealers are simply supplying their actual wants. Foochow Congous: In Dust and Siftings we do not hear of any transactions. Several parcels of common to good common have been sold at 1s. to 1s. 0½d. per lb.; fair, at 1s. 0¾d to 1s. 1d., and medium at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d., remain unaltered. In fine Tea there is very little to operate in. Black Leaf Congous: Moning Siftings have been sold by public auction, at 5¾d. to 6d. per lb.; good common remains as last quoted, at 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 0¾d. per lb.; fair, at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d. per lb.; medium to fine continue to be firmly held, and salves have been made at 1s. 4d. to 1s. 7d.; a parcel of fine has been sold at 1s. 10½d. Tayshan Congous: A break of common to fair sold at last public sale at 1s. 0¾d. Souchongs: A parcel of fair sold at auction, at 1s. 1¾d. to 1¾d. per lb. In Oolongs there is nothing new to report. Scented Teas: Common Canton Scented Orange Pekoe has been sold at 8½d.; and good common to fair at 10d. to 1s. per lb., and anything fine is saleable at full rates. Green Teas: Fine Ping Suey Gunpowder of bold make, and also fine Imperials, are still in demand for export, and the latter descriptions are getting scarce; some few parcels of common to fair Moyune Young Hyson have been realised at slightly improved rates.

The China auctions commenced on the 15th instant, comprising 19,781 packages; they are proceeding rather flatly, and thus far prices are irregular, and in some cases easier.

The market continues firm, and prices are fully maintained, but there is rather less inquiry generally at the asking rates. The deliveries continue very large, and there is no quotable change in prices.

COFFEE.

Up to the 15th inst. there was an entire absence of business in Ceylon, but on that day a moderate supply of the new crop Plantation was brought forward at the public sales, and went off slowly at the rates previously current; this parcel comprised 285 casks, 38 tierces, 27 barrels, 48 bags, which sold, triage and ordinary, at 49s. to 60s. 6d.; small and fine ordinary grey at 64s. to 66s., low middling grey and dull at 66s. 6d. to 71s., bold ditto at 70s. 6d. to 75s., small coloury at 66s. to 69s. 6d., middling coloury at 71s. 6d. to 78s., good middling to good bold at 78s. 6d. to 83s., peaberry, at 79s. to 85s. The landings and deliveries of Ceylon have been smaller than during the corresponding period of last year; the stock still continues larger than in 1869. There have been no offers of East India Coffee other than Ceylon. Further moderate supplies of Plantation Ceylon, of fresh import, offered met a languid demand, and part was bought in, prices of all qualities showing a decline of 6d. to 1s. per cwt., except peaberry, which brought full rates. Native met biddings only at some decline, and was chiefly bought in. 345 casks 39 tierces 22 barrels 66 bags Pantation sold, triage and ordinary 50s. to 58s. 6d., and dull 63s. 6d. to 65s. 6d., low middling to middling grey and dull small gray kinds 65s. 6d. to 70s., bold ditto 69s. to 72s., small coloury 65s. 6d. to 67s., middling coloury 70s. 6d. to 77s. 6d., good middling bold 79s., peaberry 84s. to 85s. 6d.

The quantity of Ceylon Coffee afloat for Great Britain is estimated as follows:—Plantation, 230,468 cwt., against 217,529 cwt. at the corresponding date of 1869; Native, 2.,310 cwt., against 55,166 cwt. The quantity afloat for the Continent is 2,694 cwt. Plantation against cwt., and 1,517 cwt. Native against 1,605 cwt. The quantity of Coffee landed in the ten weeks ended March 12, 1870, was of Ceylon, 2,985 tons, against 3,434 tons during the corresponding period of 1869; of all descriptions, 4,045 tons, against 7,675 tons. The quantity entered for home consumption was, of Ceylon, 1,693 tons, against 1,977 tons; of all descriptions, 3,024 tons, against 3,412 tons. The quantity exported was, of Ceylon, 3,996 tons, against 3,875 tons; of all descriptions, 7.082 tons, against 7,924 tons. The stock on March 12 was, of Ceylon, 11,160 tons, against 8,577 tons; of all descriptions, 18,158 tons, against 15,559 tons.

SUGAR.

We have to report a slight improvement in the market; there is a steady demand, and the business done has been at firm, and in some instances higher prices.

The quantity of Sugar landed in the nine weeks ended Mar. 12, 1870, was, of Penang, 269 tons, against 1,020 tons in the corresponding period of 1869; of Manila, Java, and China, 3,880 tons, against 8 021 tons; the quantity entered for home consumption was of Penang, 653 tons, against 595 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 5,777 tons, against 1,805 tons. The quantity exported was, of Penang, 32 tons, against 37 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 702 tons, against 12 tons. The stock on Mar. 12 was, of Penang, 1,914 tons, against 717 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 33,191 tons, against 38,048 tons.

COIR GOODS.—At the last sales a large supply, comprising 5,985 bale and 177 tons Yarn, 756 bales Fibre, and 63 tons Rope, was brought forward and went off generally with good spirit, nearly the whole being disposed of. Medium to good qualities of Yarn of good colour and make sold with active competition at £1 to £2 advance, and fine to superior sold readily at a further advance, common mixed and roping descriptions, especially in dholls, were slow of sale, and prices were mostly rather lower. Fibre also met an active demand, particularly for fine, and a considerable advance was realised. The bulk of the Rope offered consisted of good and fine, which found a ready sale at about £1 above previous rates. Of 68 tons Ceylon Yarn in dholls about 40 tons sold, very common and common, £22 to £25; good common to middling, £26 to £29; good middling, £31 to £32 5s.; good, £38 5s.; a small lot fine, £60. Fibre: 1,019 ballots Ceylon withdrawn. Of 2,747 coils (57 tons) Ceylon Rope 601 coils (20 tons) were withdrawn, the remainder being sold, good and fine qualities, 5 inch, at £32 to £32 5s.; 4 to 4½ inch, at £31 15s. to £32 10s.; 3 to 3½ inch, at £30 to £30 10s.; 1½ inch, at £32; 1¼ inch, at £34 to £34 15s.; medium and inferior kinds, 3 to 4 inch, at £26 to £30; ordinary, 3 inch, at £22 15s.; 2 to 2½ inch, at £27 5s.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—There is only limited inquiry for Ceylon at the rates previously ruling—£41 15s. to £42; a parcel of Ceylon has been sold for arrival at £42 10s., and 11 casks Manila have been offered, and bought in at £37 10s. The quantity of Ceylon afloat for Great Britain is estimated at 50,526 cwt., against 43,720 cwt. at the corresponding date last year, and 39,660 cwt. in 1868.

CUTCH.—At auction 3,310 boxes (100 lb. net each) good Pegu, Pagoda brand, were all sold at a further decline, commencing at 24s., and rising to 24s 6d., with a few lots at 25s.; 633 boxes good Penang were partly sold at 24s. 6d.

CANES.—Of 154,000 Tonkin offered a few sold at ¾d., 5,000 Partridge were bought in at 3d., and 600 Dragon at 10d. each.

GAMBIER.—The offers at public sales have all been bought in, comprising 100 bags fine pale cubes at 20s. 6d., and 620 bales at 17s. 9d.

GUM COPAL.—We note the sale of 100 cases soft Manila, at higher rates, viz., good soft yellow at 39s. to 40s., and ordinary mixed, chiefly dark, at 30s. 6d. to 34s. 6d.

JAPAN WAX.—The only offer has been 43 cases ordinary mixed saucers of indirect import, which were all bought in at 65s. per cwt.

PEPPER.—Black: The demand has continued active and the price of Penang has further advanced, about 3,700 bags, common quality having been sold at 4 13-16d. per lb. For arrival 130 bags Singapore are reported sold at 5d., and 1,000 bags Penang at 4¾d. White: A better inquiry has been experienced, resulting in an advance of ¼d. per lb.; about 1,500 bags Singapore have been sold realising 6¾d. cash and 6¾d. with prompt.

PLUMBAGO.—The offers of Ceylon have comprised 865 barrels, which were chiefly held above the value, and bought in, only a few barrels selling as follows:—Ordinary to middling small lump at 16s. to 18s.; ordinary small chips at 10s. 6d. to 11s. 3d.; bright small chips at 15s.; common dust at 6s. 3d.; middling at 8s.; fair at 9s. per cwt.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea: 99 cases fair China sold; good first pile at 132s.; middling second, 123s. to 124s.; mouldy, 119s. to 120s. Cinnamon: 98 bags Ceylon sold at steady rates. Cinnamon Chips: 531 bags, 520 half-bags Ceylon sold at a decline of ½d. for common to 1d. for good; coarse bark at 2¾d.; low middling chips, 4d. to 4¼d.; middling to good, 5½d. to 7d. Nutmegs: In auction 22 cases Penang bought in, 78 nuts to the lb. at 2s. 9d.; 86's at 2s. 5d.; 96's at 2s. to 2s. 1d., and 8 cases Java, both limed, 3s.; 98's at 2s.; small limed, 1s. 1d. Mace: 3 cases Penang sold at 3s.

SAPANWOOD.—At auction 28 tons damaged Siam were bought in at £8 10s., and 39 tons dirty Manila at £8 5s. to £8 10s.; 30 tons Manila of indirect import have been sold at £7 15s. to £8 10s. per ton.

STICKLAC.—At auction 224 boxes good free but dusty Siam were bought in at 60s., and 48 cases fine bold free at 62s.

TIN.—Following the course of the Dutch market there is less activity displayed than at the date of our last report; the closing quotation for Straits is £119 to £119 10s., with but few transactions.

TAPIOCA.—126 bags fine Singapore partly sold at 2¾d.; 80 bags Penang bought in at 1¾d. to 2¼d.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.

TEA.

The market is moderately active, but is chiefly confined to immediate trade requirements; prices are without alteration from those given in our last report.

The following is from the New York Shipping and Commercial List:—The barque Benefactress arrived at San Francisco March 1, from Yokohama, having made the passage in twenty-six days. She brought a full cargo of tea, consisting of 11,000 packages, which will be at once forwarded to this market by the Pacific Railroad. This is the first cargo sent across the continent by rail, and the event demonstrates the wonderful change which is now taking place in the trade with China and Japan. The cargo of the Benefactresss is owned by Messrs. A. A. Low and Brothers, of this city, and as the market at the present time is nearly bare of Japan tea, this enterprising commercial venture is likely to prove a great financial success.

COFFEE.—The market for all kinds is characterised by extreme inactivity, and there has been an entire absence of business in East India; prices are nominally on a par with those last given, viz.:—Java (mats), 19c. to 21c.; do. (Government bags), 12½c. to 21½c.; Manila, 16c. to 17c.; Singapore, 18c. to 19c.; Native Ceylon, 17½c. to 19½c. gold (duty paid). The stock of Manila on the 1st March was estimated at 3,600 bags, against 6,769 bags on March 1, 1869; of Java (Government) at 1,475 bags, against 1,541 bags; of Java, 14,558 mats, against 23,808 bags; of Ceylon nil, against 7,000 bags; of Singapore 200 bags, against nil.

CHINA MATTING.—The market is quiet at the following prices:—4-4 white, 30c.; 5-4 white, 35c.; 6-4 white, 40c.; 4-4 red checked, 35c.; 5-4 red checked, 40c.; 6-4 red checked, 45c.

CORDAGE.—The price of Manila is reduced one cent, say to 22 to 23 cents for large and small sizes.

CAMPHOR.—China is quoted 18c. gold (in bond).

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed is quoted $2.12½; Cassia, $1.25 gold (in bond).

GAMBIER.—The current quotation is 4⅛c. to 4¼c. gold (duty paid); stock, small.

HEMP.—There is a continued absence of business in Manila, the stock being wholly in the hands of speculators, who are holding for an advance; the nominal quotation is still 14½c. gold. The stock of Manila on the 1st March was estimated at 19,813 bales, against 7,000 bales at the corresponding date of 1869, and 19,750 bales in 1868. The imports into the United States from the 1st January to the 28th February, 1870, were 27,546 bales, against 26,675 bales during the corresponding period of last year, and the quantity afloat on the 28th February was 29,056 bales, against 20,796 bales at the same date last year.

INDIGO.—The demand is limited, but a further slight advance in Manila has to be noted, small sales having been effected at $1 to $1 40c. currency.

PRESERVED GINGER.—China is quoted $10 to $10.50 currency (duty paid).

RHUBARB.—The quotation for China is $1.50 to $2.50 currency duty paid).

RICE.—Small sales of Rangoon for export continue to be effected at $3.25 gold in bond, showing no change in price although the market for other kinds is lower. The stock of East India on the 1st March was 6,582 bags, against 8,640 bags at the corresponding date last year, and 3,842 bags in 1868.

SPICES.—Prices are maintained at the quotations given in our last report, but the inquiry has fallen off, and but little business is doing.

SUGAR.—No sales of East India are reported; prices are nominally unchanged. The stock on the 1st March was of Java 310 baskets, against 310 baskets at the corresponding date last year; of Manila 263,380 bags, against 21,543 bags; of China 75,518 bags, against 7,825 bags.

TIN.—Advices of a rise of £3 in the London market have effected an improvement, and a large business has been done at advanced rates; the sales have comprised the following parcels:—6,250 slabs Straits on the spot and 900 slabs to arrive at 32c. to 32½c., and 50 slabs Banca on the spot at 33½c. gold. At the close Straits is firmly held for 33c., and Banca for 34c.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—WRONGS MADE RIGHT.—Every day that any bodily suffering is permitted to continue renders it more certain to become chronic or dangerous. Holloway's purifying, cooling, and strengthening Pills are well adapted for any irregularity of the human body, and should be taken when the stomach is disordered, the liver deranged, the kidneys inactive, the bowels torpid, or the brain muddled. With this medicine every invalid can cure himself, and those who are weak and infirm, through imperfect digestion, may make themselves stout and strong by Holloway's excellent Pills. When the system is out of order, and an unusual depression weighs down the spirits, a few doses of this medicine will dispel the threatening illness and spare suffering.

LONDON AGENCY,
" LONDON AND CHINA TELEGRAPH " OFFICE, 2, COWPER'S COURT, CORNHILL.

REDUCED TO TEN AND A-HALF DAYS.

I have the pleasure to announce that I have succeeded in reducing the Contract time for this year by TWELVE HOURS.

Telegrams from Kiachta to Tienstin, and vice versa, will be delivered in TEN DAYS AND A-HALF.

I have made an engagement to pay a Tael for every hour a courier arrives in advance of the time, and I think that many Despatches will be transmitted in Ten Days.

I take this occasion to thank the Gentlemen who subscribed their names to establish GRANT'S TRANS-MONGOLIAN TELEGRAPH SERVICE. Having now repaid the whole of the Capital advanced to me, I have reduced the charges on Telegrams, to prove that I am not unmindful of the confidence they showed me.

C. MITCHELL GRANT.

GRANT'S TRANS-MONGOLIAN TELEGRAMS.

CHINA CIRCULAR.

THE success which has attended the European Commercial Telegram Circular which I have issued for the last two years in China and Japan induces me to think that a China Circular will be approved of in Europe. I have made arrangements to receive Prices, &c., as per annexed form, from Shanghai by the first steamer to Tientsin in February till the freezing of the river Peiho, in the beginning of December; but in order that Subscribers may not be inconvenienced by the stoppage of the Circular, I purpose making arrangements to have it transmitted viâ Galle during the winter months. From four to six Circulars per month will be issued, or from forty-five to fifty Circulars during the Season.

The time occupied in the transmission from Shanghai to London will probably average SEVENTEEN DAYS.

As to the reliability of the information I furnish, I need only mention that the majority of my Subscribers in China are members of the Chamber of Commerce, and the subscriptions are double the undermentioned charges.

CHARGES.

For 10 Circulars, commencing at any time of the Season . . . £3 3 0
For the whole Season (i.e. Feb. to December) £12 12 0

The Circular will be printed in London, and posted a few hours after the delivery of private telegrams.

C. MITCHELL GRANT.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility, at moderate charges, for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships and steamers.

Their large Granite Dock has 286 feet length on the blocks, and at average spring tides can receive vesse's of 16 to 17 feet draught. It has a caisson-gate and a powerful centrifugal steam pump, and an engineer's workshop fitted with lathes and tools, driven by steam; iron and brass foundries, boiler-makers' shop, a large smithy and carpenters and boat-builders' sheds, superintended by resident Europeans.

Their two smaller GRANITE DOCKS can receive, at spring tides, vessels drawing 12 feet.

Spars, timber, and other Dockyard material kept in stock.

Quarters for officers and a DRY GODOWN for stores of vessels under repair.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMON and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

New Harbour, Singapore, June, 1868.

FOOCHOW DOCK.

RIVER MIN.

THE above granite floored DOCK, of the following dimensions, viz., Length, 300 feet, breadth at bottom, 40, is capable of receiving vessels drawing 13 to 16 feet, as the state of the tides will allow. The Dock runs dry to the blocks, and is pumped out by steam.

The above premises comprise a large Machine Shop containing a

WHITWORTH'S 12-INCH SCREW CUTTING GAP LATHE,

DRILLING AND SCREWING MACHINES,

A LARGE SMITHY, &c., &c., &c.

Large Godowns are on the premises for STOWAGE OF CARGO, &c., &c. A large stock of Woods, Metal, &c., &c., always on hand.

The Dock steam tug Woosung is available at all times to tow vessels to or from sea.

THE MAILS, &c.

The next inward mail is the French, with the following dates:—Yokohama, Feb. 20; Shanghai, Feb. 23; Hong Kong, March 1; Singapore, March 9; Galle, March 17. It should be delivered here on Monday next, but the Imperatrice having broken her screw in passing through the Canal, it has been transferred to another steamer.

Telegrams from Hong Kong, via Galle, to March 8, were received on the 25th. Those of March 22 may be expected on the 7th inst., as the British-Indian line is working admirably. Via Kiachta, Shanghai telegrams to March 15 were received this morning.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

From this port we have dates by the P. and O. mail to Feb. 13 The outward mail of Dec. 17 was delivered in Yokohama on the 7th February. The Court of Inquiry on the Bombay-Oneida collision had concluded its sittings.

The Japan Mail says:—"It is much to be regretted that the American Minister, by the way in which he has conducted the case for the U. S. Government, has succeeded in stirring up and keeping alive as much as possible, feelings which it would have been the care of a more discreet man to repress and allay. It is sufficiently lamentable that the care of a matter so full of sorrow to all concerned should have been entrusted to one who so little understands what comports, on such occasions, with international and personal courtesy. It is, perhaps, some excuse for him that the counsel for Captain Eyre, of the Bombay, succeeded with rare ingenuity in trampling on feelings which it would have been more prudent and more delicate to respect; but this cannot absolve Mr. de Long for bad logic and worse feeling."

The funeral of Captain Williams, of the Oneida, is thus described in the Mail:—"At three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the minute guns of the Idaho announced that the remains of Captain Williams were on their way to the French Hatoba, from whence the procession was to start, and where the foreign Ministers, a large body of naval and military officers, the crews of the men-of-war in harbour, and the majority of the residents of Yokohama, were assembled. The procession was solemn and imposing, and moved slowly forward to Christ Church, the bands of the Ocean and the 10th Regiment play the Dead March in Saul. As the body was carried into the church the Rev. W. Smith, chaplain of H.M.S. Ocean, read the appointed sentences, which open the finest and most deeply moving of our Church Services, and in a few minutes every seat and all standing room in the building were occupied. The uniforms of the Navy of Great Britain and America were predominant, the scarlet of our Line contrasted with the dark green of the Russian dress, nor were the naval and military dresses of the French wanting. The British Admiral, Sir Henry Kellett, decorated with the Star and Riband of a Knight Commander of the Bath, and recognised by some who knew him in earlier days as an active commander on the China Station, was present, as were the English, French, Prussian, and American Ministers. The service was impressively read by the Rev. W. Smith, assisted by the Rev. B. Bailey, and in due time and order the procession moved to the cemetery. There, amid many of the members of a profession in which he had served with distinction, and in the annals of which the loss of his ship will form one of the saddest pages, overlooking the bay he recently left under circumstances so fair and promising, the last honours were paid to the remains of Captain Williams, of the U.S.S. Oneida."

Vigorous measures are being taken by some of the most prominent members of the community to remedy the disgraceful and dangerous condition of this settlement. A letter to the Foreign Ministers is in course of preparation, urging them to press on the Japanese Government the importance of conceding municipal rights to foreigners, and undertaking that, in the event of this concession being made, a committee will be prepared to defray the expenses attendant upon the government of the settlement for 80 per cent. of the ground rents now paid to the Japanese.

The Ocean is about to leave us on her way to Hong Kong, where she parts with her crew in exchange for that which the Donegal brought out to relieve it. The regrets her departure will cause will be sincere and universal.

The New Year's festivities in the Odori, the great thoroughfare of Yedo, which is, in fact, the prolongation of the Takaido from the suburb of Shinagwa to the Nihon Bashi, have been sadly interrupted. Persons arriving from Yokohama, after traversing some portion of the long street between the houses, each of which is decorated with a long slender green-branched bamboo—a pretty vista—come upon a scene of entire desolation. The great fire which raged on the night of last Friday week extended along the lime of the Odori from a point a little beyond the new road, leading at right angles to the gates of Hama-go-ten, to another point not far from Kiobashi, the last bridge before reaching the Nihon Bashi. The area laid desolate may be computed at four or five miles in circumference, and every wooden building from the Japanese Foreign-office (luckily unharmed) to the outer moat has been destroyed; the fireproof godowns alone remain standing. The two great mercers' shops, which no one who has been in Yedo can help remembering, are in ruins, and the owner of one of them is stated to have lost property to a very large amount. The dwelling-place of Terashima, Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs, is utterly destroyed, and though the Foreign-office itself escaped, the Yashiki opposite to it, that of Sakai Ukio no Ské, and several in its rear, are razed to the ground. The Shimbashi, a bridge in the Odori, is entirely burnt, and the great traffic over it diverted through less direct thoroughfares. The telegraph posts have gone to feed the flames; ruin has seized on hundreds of houses, and the damage is computed at millions of rios.

H.M.S. Salamis, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Kellett, K.C.B., arrived in harbour, on the morning of Saturday the 5th Feb., and received the customary salute from the flag-ship.

The following refers to the Government railway:—"This scheme involves a loan of one million pounds sterling, made by English capitalists to the Japanese Government, on terms in no sense onerous to it. The money is to be applied to the construction of a railway connecting Yedo and Osaka, the new and old capitals of the Empire, together with a branch line from Yedo to Yokohama, and another from Osaka to Tsuruga along the Biwa Lake, which is the centre of a great traffic, and which branch line will connect the West Coast with the two capitals. The importance of this latter line cannot well be overrated, as it will place the rich crops of the great rice-producing districts within easy reach of the metropolitan populations. The province of Omi with its fine harbour of Tsuruga Bay, the provinces of Kaga, Wakasa, Tamba and Tatsima will all be brought into close contact with Osaka. All the delay and much of the expense of transport from Tsuruga Bay to the head of Lake Biwa will be avoided, as well as that incidental to the slow navigation of the river which runs from the south of Lake Biwa to Osaka. The line will be constructed by the Japanese Government, under the advice of English engineers appointed by Mr H. N. Lay, and every effort will be made to supplement, and not to supersede, the efforts of the Government in connection with it. The plant and rolling stock will be supplied from Europe, but the Japanese will have the power, and, if they wish it, will be provided with the means, of manufacturing it for themselves, under proper guidance. The loan is secured by a mortgage on the Customs' duties collected at the ports, and by the net profits arising from the working of the line. The time fixed for its construction is from three to five years, and by the end of the latter term it is to be hoped the whole will be completed. Of the character of the line, i.e., its weight and the nature of the rolling stock, it would be premature to say more than was published in our Japan Mail Summary. It will depend on the advice of eminent consulting engineers, after a survey has been made of the country and a careful analysis of the requirements of the probable traffic has been submitted to them. The administration of the line is vested in Mr. Lay until the loan is repaid."

The telegraph between Yokohama and Yedo has been thrown open to the public at a charge of one itziboo, about 1s. 3½d., for 150 characters or words. The Japan Mail justly remarks that nothing could show more clearly the contrast between Japan and China than the readiness with which the Government has adopted this greatest invention of modern science, and the ease with which the people have grasped the notions of its advantages. Mr. Lay has left for England, to engage engineers and purchase materials for the railway. The island of Yesso has been partitioned among the princes of the Empire; and the trade of Hakodadi is said to be increasing. A meeting of the Yokohama Chamber of Commerce has been held; the statistics of trade put forward, showed a general decline. Mr. Marshall has been elected Chairman, and Mr. Winstanley Vice-Chairman, of the Chamber.

There is a rumour to the effect that Chosin intends to throw open the port of Shimonoseki to foreign trade.

THE "ONEIDA" CASE.

The following is the decision of the Court. It contains a summing up of the most important evidence, which we have not space to reprint in full:—

The questions before this Court are two—first, was the injury sustained by the Peninsular and Oriental steamship Bombay brought about by the fault of her commander, Mr. Eyre; second, after the collision between the P. and O. ship Bombay and the U.S. corvette Oneida had taken place, what was the conduct of the master of the former vessel.

To enable the Court to decide the first question, we have before us shortly the following evidence.

Mr. Eyre states that at about 6.30 P.M. (corrected time) on the 24th January last, having past the light-house situated on Kanonsaki, his attention was called, by the sound of a gong struck twice, to the fact that a vessel was approaching him on his port bow. He thereupon looked through his glass, and perceived a bright light half a point on his port bow; and immediately afterwards he saw the two side-lights of the approaching steamer. He imagined that this steamer (which it was ascertained was the U.S. corvette Oneida) was about one mile distant from the Bombay, and immediately gave the order to port the helm, thus shutting out the Oneida's green light, and opening her red light. Not content with this, he gave a second order—"hard a-port,"—and turned on his steam whistle. He supposed this to have occurred some five or six minutes before the collision took place, which would place about a mile or a mile and a half between the two steamers at this point. He kept his helm hard a-port until suddenly he saw the Oneida, under full sail and steam, standing across his bows. Upon this he stopped his engines; and then, seeing that a collision was imminent, put his helm hard a-starboard, so as to bring his vessel round, and, if possible, pass the Oneida on the starboard side. The endeavour, however, proved ineffectual to avert the collision, and the Bombay struck the Oneida on her starboard quarter. The vessels separated, and the Bombay's helm was at once put to port, in order to clear her stern and boats and save a second collision.

On the other hand, Mr. Yates, who was the officer in charge of the deck of the Oneida on this occasion, gave the Court a totally different account of the occurrence. He stated that the Bombay's mast head light was reported to him by the starboard look-out man as being in sight some fifteen or sixteen minutes before the collision took place,—say at about 6.25 P.M. by his own account,—and about half a point on his starboard bow. That at this time the Oneida, which had been heading by E.S. by E., was just recovering her former course, viz., S. by E., a quarter E. That the Bombay came round Kanonsaki, passing to starboard and thus opening up her green light,—still one point on his starboard bow. That at this time he thought the Bombay must have been three miles off, but that the Oneida was kept on her course, as both he and the navigating officer thought that the Bombay would pass to starboard. Presently (the navigating officer having left the deck) he saw the Bombay at the distance of about a mile off, three points on his starboard bow, and heading directly for his green light. The opening up of all three lights of the Bombay at this instant, showing him that she was approaching with a port helm, he at once gave the order "to starboard." He believed that he opened the Bombay's three lights, some three minutes before the collision, so that the vessels must have been about a mile apart at that moment.

Now these two statements are utterly irreconcilable; and though the collision is accounted for by each of them, it certainly never could have occurred if both are correct. It is therefore necessary to look farther, and see in how far each is substantiated.

The statement of Mr. Eyre is borne out in all its material points by the evidence of the pilot and chief officer, who were on the bridge with him, and also by that of all the officers of the Bombay, who are able to testify to the circumstances.

With regard to Mr. Yates' statement, however, the starboard look out man of the Oneida affirms that at about fifteen minutes previous to the collision he reported to Mr. Yates that he saw a mast-head light right ahead; and that as soon as he could make out one of her side lights, he reported her green light between half a point and a point on the Oneida's starboard bow. About a minute or a minute and a half after that, he reported the steamer (Bombay) about four or five points on his starboard bow, and coming right for the Oneida's green light; but at no time did he see the Bombay's red light before the collision took place.

The helmsman asserts that he heard the Bombay reported three different times by the look out to the officer of the watch—first, half a point on his starboard bow, second, a point and a half on his starboard bow, and thirdly, as coming right for Oneida;—that he received an order to starboard, then to steady, and then to let the ship come on her course again after the second report had been made; and that after the third report had been made, Mr. Yates again told him to starboard, after doing which he saw the Bombay's mast-head light about five points on the starboard side of the foresail; and that he kept his helm hard-a-starboard until he heard an order given to port;—that as he was in the act of obeying this order the two ships came into collision.

It will be seen that the statements of Mr. Yates, the look-out man, and the helmsman are more or less conflicting; but it may be gathered from them that, when the Bombay's three lights should have been seen by the look-out man, as well as by Mr. Yates, she was about three points on the Oneida's starboard bow, about a mile distant, and porting her helm. Mr. Yates states that at this moment he gave the order "starboard," and then "hard a-starboard." If these orders had been promptly obeyed the Court is of opinion that the ships could not have come into collision. But the statement of Albert Ruggart, the helmsman, shows that the Oneida's head was about S.E. when she struck, by which it would appear that she had only come up about three points in three minutes, so that Mr. Yates' orders could not have been promptly obeyed. Hence it is impossible to account for the collision by the statements of the survivors of the Oneida, if they are unreservedly accepted.

We are of opinion that when Mr. Moldaur said to Mr. Yates that he could not go any further to the port, or eastern shore, and ordered him to resume his course, for fear of running on to the Saragota Spit, he should, knowing that it was his duty to get out of the way of an approaching vessel on his starboard bow, at once have brought the Bombay on his port bow instead of simply resuming his course. That if, when a collision was seen to be imminent, the same promptness had been shown by the Oneida in porting her helm as was shown by the Bombay in putting her helm hard a-starboard, it might possibly have been averted; while its effects, had it occurred, would certainly have been far less serious. It is shown by the evidence of the Oneida's officers that at no time was the Oneida's speed slackened after the Bombay was considered to be breaking a rule of the road by porting, the Oneida's helm was, nevertheless, kept a-starboard; and thus the judgment required to be exercised in order to counteract the presumed mismanagement of an approaching steamer was not shown.

These observations are not made as a judgment upon the management of the Oneida, which is beyond the province of this Court to consider; but simply in order to institute such a comparison as is necessary to show the grounds upon which the Court arrives at its conclusion.

If the statements of Mr. Eyre, his pilot and officers are to be believed, we judge that he was right in keeping on the starboard side of the channel;—that he acted perfectly right in porting his helm as soon as he saw the Oneida's lights on the port bow. We judge that he should have slackened speed as soon as he saw the Oneida's lights; —that he acted rightly in stopping his engines;—that he had no time after stopping his engines to reverse them; and that he exercised a sound judgment in starboarding his helm when he saw that a collision was imminent, and that the Oneida's helm was kept to starboard.

Upon a comparison of the foregoing statements we find, that the damage which has been sustained by the Bombay is not attributable to any default on the part of the Commander, Mr. Eyre.

As regards the second question which this Court is called upon to decide, viz; the conduct of Mr. Eyre after the collision had taken place, it may be observed that it has not been without long and serious deliberation among ourselves, and most careful consideration of all the evidence adduced, that we have arrived at an unanimous decision.

We find from the evidence before us, that on a dark starlight night, the 24th January last the steamship Bombay, through no fault of her commander, Mr. Eyre, came into collision with the U.S. corvette Oneida in the vicinity of the Saratoga Spit, situated some ten miles from Yokohama.

That the effect of this collision on the Bombay was comparatively slight.

That guns were fired from the Oneida as signals of distress from ten to fifteen minutes after the collision took place.

That the report of these guns was not heard, nor were the flashes seen on board the Bombay.

That after the collision the fact of the Bombay having been hailed from the Oneida was reported to Mr. Eyre.

That Mr. Eyre only knew that some of the upper works of the Oneida had been carried away, and was unaware of the amount of injury sustained by the Oneida.

That the Bombay was a mail steamer, carrying passengers and cargo; and built in compartments, only one of which was reported to him as making water fast.

That the whole extent of injury sustained by the Bombay was not ascertained till the day following the collision.

That immediately after the collision it was not considered to be serious; for had it been so it is natural to suppose that the knowledge of the pilot would have been availed of and the Bombay run on to the Saratoga Spit.

That, in our opinion, no danger to his vessel, passengers and cargo was apprehended by Mr. Eyre.

That from the questions he asked the pilot, he evidently thought that the Oneida might possibly have sustained serious injury.

That he waited, at the most, five minutes after the collision, to see if signals of distress were made from the Oneida.

That after his ship again proceeded he gave no orders that a look-out should be kept in the direction of the Oneida.

That had he, or any one else, been keeping a proper look-out, the flash of the Oneida's guns must have been seen, though their report might not have been heard.

Under all these circumstances it becomes our duty to pronounce whether, in our opinion, he was justified in proceeding on his voyage, without waiting to ascertain whether the Oneida was in need of assistance.

We recognise the fact that Mr. Eyre was placed in a position of great difficulty and doubt, and in circumstances under which he was called upon to decide promptly; but we regret to record it as our opinion that he acted hastily and ill-advisedly in that, instead of waiting and endeavouring to render assistance to the Oneida, he, without having reason to believe that his own vessel was in a perilous condition, proceeded on his voyage.

This conduct constitutes, in our opinion, a breach of the 33rd Section of the 63rd Chapter of the Merchant Shipping Act, Amendment Act, 1862, and we therefore feel called upon to suspend Mr. Eyre's certificate for six calendar months from this date.

Signed,

FRED. LOWDER, H.M. Consul, President of the Court, L. S.
ARTHUR TINKLAR, R.N., Commd. H.M.S. Ocean.
DAVID MOORE, Staff Commd. H.M. Ocean.
JOHN GILFILLAN, master British steamship Sultan.

LATER BY THE PACIFIC MAIL.

The news by the Pacific mail steamer leaving Yokohama, Feb. 23 (ten days later than the present P. and O. mail), is telegraphed as follows from San Francisco to the New York Herald:—

San Francisco, March 19, 1870.

At Yokohama the Oneida disaster agitated the community during the entire month. Captain Eyre was allowed to take passage in the Bombay, notwithstanding the repeated requests and final demand of Mr. Delong, the American Minister, upon the British authorities for his arrest and criminal trial. The sentence of the Court suspends Captain Eyre for six months. The Americans are indignant, not only at the sentence, but in consequence of the intolerable English insolence to which Mr. Delong was subjected during the investigation.

Captain Roe, chief of staff of the United States steamer Delaware, had reached Yokohama, and would immediately hold a naval court of inquiry. The only bodies found are those of Captain Williams and the ship's carpenter.

The Japanese authorities were pursuing what few native Christians escaped deportation, and it is said that they now demand that the foreign ministers and missionaries shall be prohibited from teaching the natives, or in any way promulgating their faith.

The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Sunda ran into, and immediately sank, the North German ship Carrie Jane. The crew were saved.

From Hiogo, Nagasaki, and Osaka there are terrible accounts of native Christian persecutions and deportations. Sex and family ties are wholly disregarded. At Yedo, from 4,000 to 5,000 houses were destroyed by fire on the 4th and 5th of February. The American Consulate narrowly escaped destruction. There is a bad feeling towards foreigners in all directions. The foreigners in Japan, and especially the foreign officials, are narrowly watched and guarded.

Business generally is unusually dull. Exports—Silk in good demand at advanced rates; Settlements, 700 bales; Mybash and Sinchu, best to extra, $8.70 to $9; Oshu, best to extra, $8.60 to $9.40; inferior to medium, $7 to $8.10; Coshiu, medium to best, $6.90 to $7.50. Total exports of the current season, 8,899 bales. Tea—The settlements have been light, the stock is small, and prices are firm and unchanged.

The steamer China took 10,890 packages of tea, 5,730 of which are for New York, and 165 bales of silk, 48 bales of which are for New York.

NAGASAKI.

NAGASAKI, Jan. 29, 1870.

I last wrote to you on the 15th inst. and on the next day the London and China Express of October 28th came to hand by the Fusi Yama steamer, from Yokohama. My last informed you of the deportation of upwards of 4,000 native Christians from Ourakami, since then the persecution has continued; even as recently as the 25th apprehensions have been made, and at a time when we were in possession of news from Yokohama informing us that the Government officials here acted without orders; which fact alone would lead foreigners to believe that the Japanese are playing a very deceitful game. Details of the cruelties towards the prisoners, while they were marched overland to Tokeetz, are truly lamentable to those persons who have any feeling at all; little children who fell down while in the crowd were trampled to death as the poor people were not allowed to stop to pick them up, and old men and women who were feeble were beaten to make them keep up with the strong and able-bodied.

The following property, belonging to the estate of Rainbow, Lewis and Co. bankrupts, was sold by Messrs. Underwood and Co. at public auction on the 21st and 28th instant:—

The two latter are believed to have been bought in for the mortgagee.

The proposition made by the Japanese local officials for removing some of the landing places, referred to in my last, is still being urged by them, but finds great opposition from all the Consuls except the representative of Great Britain, and he, strange to say, seems inclined to agree with the Japanese, although he thinks there will be inconvenience to the foreign merchants if the plan is carried out. To the mercantile community it will not only be inconvenient but will entail a much greater expense for coolie hire, thereby increasing the cost of goods to the native consumer, while the danger of robberies, which is already great, will be increased tenfold. How H.B.M.'s Consul can entertain the question for a moment is surprising when he must be aware that complaints have been made to his predecessor in office respecting robberies committed by the coolies running away with the packages entrusted to them to carry to the cargo-boats lying at the jetties which have never been traced out. I do not mean to say that Mr. Annesley would do anything to prejudice the interests of Englishmen, but the feeling here is that British interests in these parts are to a great extent cast aside in endeavouring to carry out to the letter English foreign policy as laid down by the Gladstone Cabinet. In the present instance the jetties, &c., have been where they are for years, and work very well, and why should they be removed, and especially when the only reason the Japanese can have for removing them is to enable them to reduce their staff of officers by some four or five men. We pay enough for ground rents in all conscience; front lots, 200ft. depth by 120ft. frontage, $227.18; and on rear lots same size, $171.92 per year; and if the rear are made more undesirable by having to carry goods the third of a mile instead of 100 feet or so, the rent should be proportionately reduced, which would, in a dollar and cent. point of view, be much worse for the Japanese Government. If the proposition is carried out the Japanese will have inflicted another wrong on foreigners with the full connivance of those who ought to be able to prevent it.

It is very deplorable to see Nagasaki receding in her commercial facilities (while in the northern parts of Japan they are making such rapid strides), and receding under circumstances which require no gunboat to prevent it; which, if not opposed, will bring about the same results which took place here in 1865, viz., a bamboo fence round the entire settlement, with a guard-house at every entrance.

A question has arisen here respecting an item called Bancha in the tariff attached to the British Treaty with Japan, which, when exported from Nagasaki, only pays a duty of 75 boo cents per picul. This article, in other words, is supposed to be very common tea, consisting for the most part of withered leaves and stalks, and is chiefly sent to Tientsin and the Northern ports of China, and costs about $5 per picul. The question to be settled is what is Bancha? On this point very few persons seem to agree, and even the Custom-house officials seem to take a very wide range on the question, and have passed nearly the whole of the tea this year when shipped in the rush mats as Bancha even though it may have cost $15 per picul.

An English firm here applied to the Custom-house authorities for a permit to ship some tea, among which were some which would have been considered Bancha by even the Custom-house officials had they been shipped in mats; but in this instance, although the teas were worth less than many that have been passed with full knowledge and consent of the Custom-house officials as Bancha, they were stopped and taxed with the full duty of Tls. 3½ per picul; the officers contending that, being coloured and packed in wooden and leaden boxes, they ceased to be Bancha. The case has been referred to H.B.M. Consul for settlement. As the Chinese are the only persons who have any interest in real Bancha, it would be much better for all foreigners if the item were struck out of the tariff altogether; and if it was made to pay full duty it would not amount to much, while by striking it out it would save endless disputes with the Customs.

Freights, Exchange on London, and Naboos remain the same as last advised. I append a few extracts from our local papers —the Nagasaki Express and Nagasaki Shipping List:—

The steamer Governor Higginson, lately sold to the Prince of Geyshu, struck on a rock off Hirado, and now lies in a very dangerous position, as the hull of the vessel is completely covered at high water. Mr. Blackie, of the Patent Slip, at the request of the Japanese, left on Thursday last by the Satsuma steamer Swatow for the scene of the wreck, to endeavour to save the vessel. Much valuable time has been lost, however, in the characteristic manner of the Chinese.

We have just heard that the Fe Loong (str.), belonging to the Prince of Simabara, has also struck on a rock off Hirado, and is totally lost. As she had a large number of native Christians on board, we hope this report will turn out to be exaggerated. The Governor Higginson was also supposed to be loaded with ill-fated Christians.

The Express, speaking of the Tackasima mine, &c., has the following among other matters:—"An eight feet seam of coal was struck at the depth of 150 feet from the surface, and, powerful pumping and hoisting machinery having been erected, the efforts of the owners were rewarded towards the end of last year by obtaining good coal at the rate of 100 tons per day, the pumps easily keeping the mine free from water. Many useful appliances yet remain to be adopted before the mine is in thoroughly good working order, when it will be capable, in the opinion of two practical miners lately arrived from England, of yielding 500 tons of coal per day. The coal has a specific gravity of 12.31, and analysis shows the following result:—Carbon, 77.59; hydrogen, 5.28; oxygen, 3.26; nitrogen, 2.75; sulphur, 1.65; approximate ash, 8.49; loss, 0.98; total, 100.00. The coal has also been practically tested by the chief engineer of H.M.S. Ocean, in whose opinion it is equal to English north country coal for steaming purposes, and compares very favourably with Welsh coal. We hear that some of the native Princes have been induced to order suitable mining machinery from Europe in order to properly develop the coal-fields in their territory; so that we may hope, before many years elapse, that Japan will become the great coal mart of the East."

The 19th of this month was the anniversary of the opening of the Patent Slip, the property of the Japanese Government. During the year thirty vessels were docked, giving an aggregate of 11,973 tons, the largest being a steamer of 1,150 tons gross register, having besides her boilers, machinery and 300 tons ballast on board. The success attending the working of the Patent Slip has induced the Japanese Government to commence the construction of a large dry dock at Tackasima, on the opposite side of the bay, which will be of the following dimensions:—Length over all 460 feet, breadth 110 feet, caisson entrance 76 feet, depth of water over sill at spring tides 26, and at neap tides 21 feet. The whole of the bottom and two-thirds of the sides of this dock will be solid rock, and when completed will be one of the most commodious in these parts. Mr. Blaikie, of the Patent Slip, has just returned from the wreck of the Governor Higginson, and reports that she is lying on a rock just off the village of Higaku, in the Island of Hirado. The Japanese either cannot or will not give any information as to how she got into her present position, and Mr. Blaikie can only suppose that her chain parted when at anchor in rough weather, and she was driven on the rock while her crew were probably below fast asleep. The vessel lies over on her starboard side at an angle of about twenty-five degrees, her stern being in shore; at high water her lee rail is completely submerged. There are favourable prospects of floating her again as she lies in a very sheltered position.

Died, at Nagasaki, on January 25, 1870, J. Reinholt, aged 53 years, from injuries received from falling over the cliff near the American Consulate, on the previous night. It seems that he had gone to the Consulate to obtain the letters for the residents at Decima, which were expected by the Oregonian, just arrived from Yokohama, &c., and in the dark missed his footing and fell, and was not discovered until the next morning, and was when found nearly frozen.

H.B.M.'s ship Salamis, Commander Henry M. Miller, having on board his Excelleney Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Kellett, K.C.B., arrived in harbour on the morning of the 27th inst. from Shanghai. We are disappointed at not receiving our English mail of the 3rd December by her, which arrived in Shanghai two days before she left. We are at a loss to know why the postmaster in Shanghai did not forward it; surely it could not have been for want of a notice of the departure of the Salamis, as it was well known that the Salamis would leave for Japan immediately after the arrival of the English mail. We think if the postmaster had taken the trouble to send off to the Salamis and inquire as to her intended departure he would soon have learnt it, but he cannot expect that captains of men-of-war should send to the post-office and give notice of their departure; they have always been kind to us, and carried our mails, &c., when sent on board. This irregularity in receiving our English mail is not only annoying to us but is of great inconvenience to our trade, and may cause heavy losses to many.

TIENTSIN.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

I give you below a memorandum of the principal articles imported into Tientsin in 1869; from it you will see that the nett imports have increased 15 per cent. over the nett imports of the same class of goods in 1868. The direct imports from Europe of ten principal articles of cotton and woollen goods are 378,678 pieces, and amount to one-seventh of the whole imports, and are 81½ per cent. more than the direct imports in 1868, and more than four and a-half times the quantity imported direct from Europe in 1867.

The direct imports in 1868 amounted to 210,397 pieces, or one-eleventh part of nett imports in 1868.

The direct imports in 1867 amounted to 82,488 pieces, or one-thirteenth and a-half part of the nett imports in 1867.

The nett imports of Tientsin in 1869 are 37 per cent. over the nett imports of Shanghai in 1869. In 1868 the nett imports of Tientsin, compared with the nett imports of Shanghai, were 2.15 per cent., but in 1869 the stock remaining in Shanghai is thought to be nearly double what it was in 1869.

In 1867 the nett imports of Shanghai of 11 principal articles of cotton and woollen goods were ...	Pcs. 476,801
In 1867 the nett imports of Tientsin of the same articles	1,114,274
In 1868 the nett imports of Shanghai of the same articles	1,168,438
In 1868 the nett imports of Tientsin of the same articles	2,377,222
In 1869 the nett imports of Shanghai of 10 of the same articles	1,970,818
In 1869 the nett imports of Tientsin of 10 of the same articles	2,708,698

In 1869, while the stock at Tientsin is smaller, the stock at Shanghai in grey shirting is believed to be double what it was in 1868. These figures speak for themselves, as showing where the best market in China is for cotton goods. Freights to Tientsin ought to be no higher than to Shanghai; while insurance ought to be less, there being no dangers or difficulties in coming to Taku. Of the direct shipping in 1869, one, if not more than one, discharged her cargo inside Taku Bar, while one vessel discharged her cargo on the Bund at Tientsin. They are proceeding as fast as possible with lighting the coast.

HANKOW.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The commencement of winter has, as usual, been signalised by the occurrence of several large fires in the native city, and also at Wuchang. One fire at the latter place was more than commonly destructive, and is reported to have lighted up the settlement at Hankow for a couple of hours. It is impossible to estimate the loss of life that attends these great conflagrations; but it must be very serious, for so long as there is a particle of movable furniture in a burning house the Chinese will risk their lives to remove it. None of the fires on the left bank approached the foreign limits very closely.

The arrival of a French gun-boat, the precursor of the fleet, has set the native authorities on the alert. Immediately below the English settlement stands a house formerly employed by the Customs. This has been furnished and put in complete order by the Taoutai at an expense of over 1,000 taels. It is designed for the French officers, who are there to possess a place of recreation on shore independent of the club-house, &c., which are of course thrown open to them. A hint from the French Consul produced this action on the part of the Taoutai. The Chinese have learned that the French are not to be trifled with, and as they can understand this determined attitude they accordingly respect it, and I verily believe, like the French, are all the better for it. At all events, they know what to expect in any given case.

The approach of the Chinese New Year (the 31st of January) had put a stop to all business, and to some extent, no doubt, the early slackness was due to the irregularity, and somewhat problematical character of communication with Shanghai. The Yangtsze is now so low that steamers drawing more than 9 feet find it difficult, if not impossible, to navigate the river between Hankow and Kiu-Kiang. Most of the steamers of both Companies, therefore halt at Kiu-Kiang, the Tunsin (U. S. N. Company), and the Kiangloong (S. S N. Company) managing the traffic for the remainder of the journey.

The death of Mr. Hudson, a very old Hankow resident, and at the time in temporary charge of Messrs. Gibb, Livingston & Co.'s house, had cast a gloom over the settlement at the time of my last advices. Mr. Hudson was very popular amongst the community, and, strangely enough, had, but a few days before his death, learned that he and another person with whom he was for the occasion in partnership had won the grand Christmas prize of $35,000 in the Manila lottery.

Mr. Hart, Inspector-general of Customs, arrived at Hankow on the 22nd of January, and has not yet returned to Shanghai. What the result of his tour round the ports will be no one appears able to anticipate. A circular has recently been issued altering the constitution of the customs service, so as to give definite places to those who do not know the Chinese language. Their promotion will be slower, and they will never be placed in charge of a port.

SHANGHAI.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 15.

The English mail of the 17th Dec., with telegrams to the 4th ult., came to hand, by the Aden, on the 5th inst. The French mail of the 23rd Dec. reached by the Phase on the 13th, bringing London telegrams to Jan. 18. The Aden takes this mail out.

Business, as may naturally be expected, has been all but at a standstill during the Chinese New Year time. The Chinese are beginning to turn to work again.

Mr. Hart, Inspector-General of Customs, has returned from Hankow, and is now at Ningpo. It is said, on most reliable authority, that Baron von Gumpach, now in Shanghai, intends entering an action for damages against Mr. Hart for breach of agreement; the trial will come off shortly. A rumour is also current that the Customs Police will be merged or attached to the police forces of one of the municipalities.

A full dress parade of the members of the Shanghai Fire Department took place on the 8th inst.; afterwards there was practice, which did the department great credit. The British Consul has promulgated the Revised Land Regulations and Bye-laws; they will come into force on the 15th March.

The Titania has brought three immense mirrors, the largest of which is fourteen feet by eight, intended for the Emperor's palace at Peking. The Lahloo has beat the Ariel on the run out by ten days. The Chinese steamer Confucius has been lost in the Yangtsze, off Tiger Hill.

The Glengyle got on shore on Olyphant's Island, she got off with little damage.

The water still continues low in the Yangtsze.

The "Desk Hong List" has been published by the North China Herald office; it reflects the greatest credit on all concerned.

The community have been treated to two theatrical performances since I last wrote to you.

The North China Herald has completed the publication of an admirable retrospect of events of the past year.

There was a meeting of land renters held at Shiukiang on the 7th inst.; it was agreed to levy Tls. 100 per lot for the repair of the bund and other municipal purposes. Messrs. Salter, Bean and Garnie were elected council for the current year. It was decided at the meeting to draw up a code of land regulations for this port.

The Customs Gazette for the quarter ended Dec. 31 has been published. Most of the imports show a decrease from the corresponding quarter of the year previous, viz.:—

898,000 grey shirtings	403,000
490,000 T-cloths	369,000

Lustres, camlets, long ells, lead, coal, iron, show a decrease also. Drills are a little in excess of importations.

Captain Blanche and Mr. D. M'Alister, of the Newcastle, were tried and found guilty of murder on the 12th inst. Sir Edmund Hornby passed the sentence of death upon them, but stated he would recommend Blanche to be imprisoned for a year; M'Alister was liberated on entering into his own recognisance to come up for judgment when called on.

The members of the Gymnasium had a meeting on the 7th inst. The accounts showed a surplus of $854. It was resolved to move from the Masonic Hall into the Main Guard.

Report says that the U.S.N. Co. have purchased the steamer Sultan, now in Japan.

I enclose you translation of a proclamation issued by the Chinese authorities, inviting those who are able to afford it to purchase office. Here is a fact for Mr. Burlingame, speaking volumes as to China's desire to progress. Mr. Taylor has published a letter in the North China Daily News, detailing how peaceably disposed the inhabitants of Yangchow are towards his mission. This change in the conduct of the Yangchow residents is owing to the fruits of Mr Medhurst's admirable management of the Yangchow Affair in 1868.

The Shanghai News-Letter has the following on spurious tea:—"We notice that the practice of hoarding up the leaves of tea drawn in tea-shops and private families, and disposing of them to parties who make it a business to prepare them for the foreign market, has made its appearance in Soochow and other interior cities, where large quantities may be seen drying on the streets any bright day."

We have heard a good deal, says the North China Dai'y News, of Chinese progress lately, but we certainly never saw it more fully exemplified than the other afteroon—a Chinaman riding up the Ma loo on a bycicle, and wearing white kid gloves.

It is rather remarkable that the ships Titania and Caliph have arrived together in Shanghai, after leaving the Isle of Wight together, on the 23rd October. We have thus a repetition, outward, of the close clipper races which have lately occurred homeward. The Titania has made the return trip from Shanghai, home and back in the remarkably short time of seven months and twelve days.

Sir Edmund Hornby, the Chief Judge of the Supreme Court for China and Japan, contemplates returning to England on a two years' leave of absence before the next summer season sets in Assistant Judge Goodwin will, we presume, officiate as Deputy Judge during his absence.

SALE OF OFFICES.

The following proclamation, by a board appointed for the sale of rank and office in Kiangsoo, has been widely posted in Shanghai:—

Kansuh Branch Office for the province of Kiangsoo, for the sale of Office and Titles.

Hu, titular Superintendent of Finances and Expectant Intendant of Fohkien.

Chang, Superintendent of Finances for Kiangsoo.

Wang, titular Superintendent of Finances and late Criminal Judge of Kansuh.

Liang, titular Intendent and member of the Board of Punishments.

We, the above mentioned, received on the 26th of the 9th moon a despatch from H.E. the Imperial Commissioner Tso', Governor-General of Shensi and Kansuh, stating that H.E had received a communication from Grand Secretary Yuan, Imperial Commissary of the Army of Subjugation in the West, and Controller of the Kansuh Hea l-office for sale of Titles, in reference to the establishment of a Branch-office in Kiangsoo, in connection with the Kansuh Office for the sale of Titles. His Excellency Tso' had sometime since memorialised the Throne, recommending the same scheme, and after receiving the report of the Board of Revenue thereon, the Royal assent was given for the establishment of such an office.

Kiangsoo has already a * Shensi office under the control of H.E. Tso', the proceeds of which have been employed to assist the Army. The new office will be under the control of Grand Secretary Yuan, and its name is changed from Shensi to Kansuh. It will be placed under the management of the same experienced officials, and will be conducted on the same principles as formerly.

The Grand S-cretary forwards a copy of the original Memorial to the Throne, the Rules of the new office giving the reduced fees, blank certificates and receipts for use at the branch office of each province. But it will be necessary for each office to appoint high local officials to act in conjunction with the Governor-General, for the prompter despatch of business.

It is intended to send a despatch to the Governor-General of the two Kiangs and the Governor of Kiangsoo, to instruct the Superintendent of Finance for Soochow and Nanking to co-operate with the Governor-General in carrying out this scheme, so as to ine success.

The state of the army in Kansuh is such as to demand immediate attention- The Intendents and Treasurers have been instruted to co-operate with the Governor-General, and Officers have been specially appointed to superintend the office.

Besides the above from H E. Tso', a copy of the same has also been received from the Imperial Assistant Military Commissioner and acting Governor of Shensi, Liu, also a despatch from Grand Secretary Yuan, Imperial Commissary of the subjugating Army of the West. We, therefore, as in duty bound, issue this proclamation for the information of officials, gentry, merchants, and wealthy persons, that all may know that the rank of Intendant, Prefect, Prefect of Department, District Magistrate, sub-Prefect, and other inferior offices; also titular rank or real office in the capital; all personal and family titles, grades and peacock's feathers, may now be purchased, and receipts and certificates for same obtained.

At present, the price at which rice † is reckoned in the Kansuh, is much less than in the Shensi title office; and it is under consideration still further to reduce the rate. It is the duty of all at this crisis to assist in maintaining the army of the North-West, and speedily free it from its present embarrassment. Do not delay or neglect this. A special notice.

Tung-chih, 8th year, 12 moon, 20th day.

AMOY, Feb. 17, 1870.

The news of Amoy is at present of the most uninteresting possible character. It is indeed seldom that anything extraordinary happens to break the ordinary monotony of the every day life of Amoy. After six or seven months' dry weather we are at last beginning to have some rain. There is every reason for believing that our rainy season has at length fairly set in. The country round about has presented a most doleful aspect during the past few months. The fields have been dried up to such an extent that cultivation has been simply impossible. The crops of rice that were sown last autumn, after rising a few inches above the ground, were very universally burnt up by the sun. The sweet potatoe and the ground nut, on which great numbers of people in certain districts depend for existence, have failed so entirely that widespread suffering has been the result. We have sad news from the country districts. People have been reduced to live upon the leaves of the potatoe plant—many have been compelled to sell their very children, not only in the hopes of getting a few dollars, but also because they had nothing to give them to eat. The consequence of all this is, an universal tide of emigration has set in from this port. The streets of Amoy have been crowded to such an extent as I have never before witnessed, with people from the surrounding districts, waiting for ships to carry them away. As many as fifteen hundred have left in a single week for the Straits, &c. There is no doubt but that when the question of emigration to the United States has been settled on a satisfactory basis, there will be a vast number that will go from this region alone. In any case, however, emigration will always be a simpler thing for the people of this region than for perhaps any other in China, Canton alone excepted. The people have long been accustomed to the idea. Emigration to Formosa has been going on from time immemorial. Vast numbers have found their way to the Straits and have returned again—the majority in comparatively easy circumstances; so that the terrible ideas that the ordinary Chinaman associates with foreign countries have long ago been dissipated in the minds of the Amoy people. The present policy, moreover, of the mandarins will tend to accelerate any movement of this kind. The system of squeezing has now attained to such a state of perfection that it is getting more and more a question of how absolute ruin may be averted from many a Chinese home. It is not simply foreigners who have to complain of exactions, but every class of the native population who get their living by trade. Every article of import is taxed so enormously that they find it almost impossible to do any business. War taxes were imposed five or six years ago, when the rebels were threatening this place, and though the cause has been removed years ago the taxes remain unmitigated up to the present moment. It is to be feared that the Convention that has recently been signed will only add to existing difficulties. The imposition of 2½ per cent. on cottons is so much extra gain to some one in China, that it will be impossible to diminish one single tax now in existence. The barrier duties will be enforced as rigorously as ever; for who is to put them down. The whole mandarin fraternity look upon these as their very choicest pickings. These are the golden eggs that are to produce unlimited treasures in the future, and simple-minded indeed must be the statesman who expects that an innate sense of justice, or an inborn love for carrying out treaties with foreigners will suffice to make them give up at the call of any Convention which is so surely filling their pockets. It is to be hoped that our Government will take such a position that it shall see that the treaty is faithfully carried out. It is for the interest not only of foreigners but also of Chinese that this should be done. China, in natural resources, is unsurpassed by any other country in the world. It has vast mineral resources, such as few even of those who have been long resident in the country have any conception of. The country for ages has been lying dormant. The national resources have hitherto been absolutely entombed, with all the elements at hand by which a nation may grow strong and mighty; the people have been sunk in misery and poverty; oppression has been crushing them down for ages, and all to please just one class whose power and avarice have to be maintained at such a cost. It is the duty of Western Powers to see that China be opened throughout its length and breadth. Leave trade for ever out of the question, and the cause of humanity demands this. To accomplish this there need be no war; war with foreigners I believe to be a very remote contingency. The Tartar rule has too slight a hold upon the affections of the nation, and the shock of the capture of Peking was so rude a one that the Imperial authorities will do anything rather than come in conflict again with the outer barbarians. All that is needed is firmness, and, true to his instincts, the Chinaman will at once yield, trying to feel convinced that since evasion may no longer serve his purpose, it must at length be the will of Heaven that the foreigner must have his way.

Two days ago a P. and O. steamer called in here with the crew of a ship which she had run down in a fog in the Lyeewoon Pass, outside of Hong Kong.

(FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.)

AMOY, Feb. 17, 1870.

"Misfortunes never come singly," is a proverb that has been fully verified in the case of P. and O. steamers running down vessels in these waters. Two days after hearing the news of the sad collision near Yokohama, a crew from the N. German Barque Caryand Jane has landed here from the P. and O. s.s. Sunda, on her way to Yokohama with themails. It appears that the Caryand Jane left Nagasaki on the 2nd February, 1870, bound to Hong Kong with a cargo of coal, on the 11th February picked up a Hong Kong pilot at Pedro Branco, and thence steered W. by S ½ S. for the Nine Pins. Variable winds and calms, with fine weather until Saturday evening at eight o'clock, when a heavy fog set in and it became nearly calm, just wind enough from E S.E. to give the vessel steerage way. About 8.25 P M. saw the lights of a steamer. Put the helm a-port and rung the bell, and hailed the steamer to avoid a collision; but in a very few moments the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's Steamer Sunda came right upon her bows, and cut the vessel through from there to the main hatchway. The whole of her crew climbed on board the steamer, except the captain and his wife, who stood on the rail and sunk with the vessel Ropes were then passed to them from the bow of the steamer, where the escaped men stood, by which they held on till they were picked up by the steamer's boat. Position at the time of the collision fifteen miles East of the Nine Pins.

No lives were lost, but no one could save anything but the clothes they were wearing. It may be observed that, though the helm was put hard a-port upon the steamer's lights being sighted, the act was of little real use, as, the vessel being all but becalmed, she could only answer her helm very slowly, and had not deviated half a point from her original course when the steamer struck her. The captain and crew leave for Hong Kong to-day per P. and O. s.s. Azof.

On the 11th February, at the Seaman's Hospital at this port, died David McMillan, late master of the Wisman, of Aberdeen,

* Office and titles are sold, at least ostensibly, to meet the exigences of the army; and the board established for the sale of these titles takes its name from the place or province where the army is operating.

† The price of an office or a title is reckoned by so much rice, but is is paid for in money.

which vessel was wrecked on the Pesendores on the 21st January last on her way from Foochow to London. Small-pox in a very aggravated form was the immediate cause of death.

The acting Consul for Prussia had a great difficulty to get passports signed by the Taoutai here for two Prussian subjects a few days ago. The excuse the Taoutai gave in persistently refusing to sign them was "There was no precedent." It was not until after a long and unnecessary correspondence that the Taoutai would sign them. The Consul told him that the 8th article of the Prussian treaty made it binding upon him to sign the passports, and if he chose not do so he might abide by the consequences. This brought him to his senses, and they were sent back duly signed. This man hates the very name of foreigners, and yet the Peking Government places such an obstructive official in one of the most important ports of the empire. If he had not signed the passports perhaps Bismark might have had a word with him. Chinese officials are reported, by those well able to judge of such matters, as getting very lax and obstructive where foreigners are concerned.

HONG KONG.

Advices from Hong Kong are to the 22nd Feb. The outward mail of Dec. 31 was delivered there Feb. 12. The local news is of little importance, the papers being filled with details of the Oneida case and the proposals for amalgamating the dock companies.

The non-American residents of Hong Kong had drawn up an address to the U.S. Admiral, expressing their regret at the sad catastrophe to the Oneida, and their sympathy with the relatives of those lost with her.

Mah-chow-wong, the notorious confederate of pirates, and ex-convict, has returned to the colony on a pardon from the Labuan authorities. He has been apprehended, and is on bail pending his future disposal. When brought up before the police magistrate for examination the prisoner said:—"I acknowledge that I am Wong Akee who was transported as stated. I was granted a pardon by the Governor of Labuan in Oct. 1868; that pardon I handed to the police when I was apprehended. I asked the Governor, through an interpreter, at the time my pardon was granted, if I had the privilege of returning to Hong Kong, and was answered that I could return. I did not understand at the time I was sentenced that I could not come back to Hong Kong. I came here for the purpose of purchasieg goods at Canton and elsewhere, and then going back to Labuan; my business here will not occupy more than a month. I never left Labuan from the time of my arrival there until my departure, on the 2nd of Dec. last, after my pardon was granted. I believe that I and other prisoners were sentenced to two years' imprisonment for a disturbance and fighting when in jail at Labuan." Mr. May stated that he would remand the prisoner for one week, in order that H.E. the Governor might determine what he would do with him; he would, in the meantime, admit him to bail in $1,000, in two sureties. The prisoner said that he had no friends here, and could not get the money. Mr. May recalled to the mind of the prisoner that he had a wife in Hong Kong carrying on business here, besides other relations—a son, he thought. After a short time two Chinese sureties appeared.

Extraordinary meetings of both dock companies have been held, to consider amalgamation. The feeling at the meeting of the old company was against amalgamation on the terms proposed; but after some spirited preparations by the new company towards further competition, another meeting has been called, and it is expected that amalgamation will be arranged after all. The China Mail says:—"It appears possible that the rival dock companies may, after all, amalgamate. It is rumoured that the directors of the Union Dock Company have submitted, for the consideration of the managers of the other company, a proposition somewhat less imperative than that which has already been rejected, and that the concession now made is likely to meet the views of a majority of the shareholders in the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company. This report may be true, or it may be merely a canard. We know not. This we do know, in the interests of the shareholders of both companies, an amalgamation is most desirable. Competition must prove fatally injurious to one or other of the companies, and in view of the energetic action taken by the Union, and the wisdom of the measures adopted at the late extraordinary meetings of shareholders, it is probable that the older company will have to give way."

The following items are also from the China Mail:—

New fire-insurance shares are being bought up rapidly, but there is no mania.

A bicycle race has been run; time, two miles in 9 min. 10 sec.

It is said that the mint building has been purchased for about a lakh of dollars.

The Peru (coolie ship) has been lost on Paracels, with nearly all her passengers and crew. The Lau-tong, in the Manila sugar trade, has also been lost, on the coast of Samar. Lahloo (China clipper) arrived in this port, on 17th, dismasted, from Shanghai. Off the Ninepins, on night of 12th, the North German barque Cary and Jane was run down by P. and O. steamer Sunda (Captain Cates); crew having been taken into Amoy.

The following are from the Daily Press:—

The route to be taken by Mr. Moss on his journey into the interior to obtain information for the Chamber of Commerce has been decided upon. He is to go up the West River to Yunanfoo, and to return through Kwei Chow, passing the capital of the Province. It is anticipated this journey will take six to eight months in being accomplished.

On Saturday, Feb. 12, at 11.30 A.M., the shock of an earthquake was felt in several parts of the colony. A gentleman at East Point states that he heard a distant rumbling noise for several seconds, and felt the whole house shake; and that he heard afterwards that the shock was felt in several other places at the same hour. It is considered as probable that Manila, being on the same axial line of earthquakes, may also have had a shock.

The Overland Trade Report says:—"The feeling in Hong Kong with respect to the news that Commodore Jones is to be superseded in the command of the Princess Charlotte, is generally one of regret, as that officer is known to be possessed of much valuable experience regarding China affairs, which he has always used to advance the interest of Great Britain in this part of the world. It is considered that there is no doubt the real grounds of his recall consist in the determined opposition on the part of the Government at home to all those, who, being acquainted with the nature of the Chinese, are prepared to adopt such measures as are necessary for upholding the interests and prestige of this country.

"His Excellency the Governor of Hong Kong has for some time been seriously indisposed. He is, however, now progressing to convalescence, though from over-work during a long period it is not likely, in the opinion of his medical attendant, that he can recover without availing himself of leave of absence, long since granted him, to revisit Europe. This he hopes to do about the 12th of next April, via California, though, it is stated, he may be compelled, should his health not improve, to leave sooner."

BATAVIA.

Advices from Batavia mention that the Belgian ship Frederic, from Hong Kong to Peru, about which Governor MacDonnell has been so much abused, put into Batavia with about 400 coolies. While in the roads the vessel caught fire and was entirely burned. A few of the coolies were lost, the others all landing safely.

The Java Bode of Feb 8 contains the following account of the burning of this coolie ship in Batavia roads:—"Last Friday there came to the outer roads here the Belgian ship Frédéric, 803 tons burden, having on board 379 Chinese coolies, and two women, bound from Hong Kong to Callao A. Nicaise being the captain, and also supercargo. At Hong Kong, which the vessel left on Jan. 19, unpleasantness had already taken place, and two attempts to set fire to the ship had been made, which were found out in time, and frustrated, with little trouble. According to the statements of the Chinese interpreter, the coolies were continually talking about, and conversing on the subject of arson. The ship passed through Gaspar Straits to Batavia, to take in water and provisions, and afterwards it was intended to continue the voyage direct to Callao. On the day after her arrival at Batavia, the captain, who was on shore, learnt at four P.M. that his ship was on fire. Shortly afterwards the ship was wholly in flames, so that it was impossible to get on board. The crew had put the Chinese to the pumps, while they themselves took measures to get the vessel into shallow water and sink her. This, however, appeared impracticable, because there was no wind, and the flames shot forth fiercely in every direction from the deck, so that sails and rigging were almost instantly in flames.

Thereupon leave was given to the Chinese coolies to jump overboard, and endeavour to save themselves; there was no possibility of getting out the boats, with the exception of the lifeboat and another, which were attached to the stern. All the wood work obtainable was flung to the swimming Chinese, that they might avail themselves of it in saving their lives. The crew and fifty-two Chinese got into the two boats above mentioned, which would not hold more; however, boats came from all sides and picked up the Chinese, as also did the steam-launch of the guard-ship and the steamer Chilliwong, in which were the Resident and the Assistant Resident of Batavia. Captain Nicaise went on board the steam-launch, which attached a line to the forepart of the burning ship, so as to endeavour to have her towed into shallow water. Through the low steam power of the launch this plan miscarried. The Chilliwong then took over the line, which was, however, reached and severed by the flames shortly afterwards. As the fire spread itself with amazing swiftness, it became impossible to make fast a fresh line. The cathead of the starboard anchor was also consumed by the flames, whereby the anchor dropped, and thus the vessel lay fast; consequently, she was burned to the water's edge. Four of the rescued Chinese died immediately, and twelve are missing. Of the residue of the cargo (cordage and Chinese articles of trade) nothing has been saved. The crew, also, have not succeeded in saving any of their property. Through the good care of the authorities the coolies have been lodged in the buildings of the fish market. Their good condition and outward appearance give evidence that they had not been ill-treated on board.

The fire was first discovered between decks under the after hatch, on the larboard side, around the rice. The hatches between-decks were grated, and if we take into account what occurred in Hong Kong roads, and the conversations on the subject of arson among the coolies during the voyage, and consider their connection with this calamity, it is pretty plain that we may conclude it to be very possible that ill-will may have caused some of the most malevolent of the coolies to throw fire and combustibles among the rice through the gratings of the hatchways.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Our advices from this port are to the 1st March. The outward mail of Jan. 20 arrived out on the 22nd February. London telegrams had been received to Feb. 16. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

Local politics have come to a deadlock for the present, the Legislative Council not having as yet resumed it sittings; the day for its opening is not even yet announced. One of the questions which will be brought before it at the outset is that of the water-works. The Colonial Engineer submitted several schemes, only one of which was approved by the commissioners—that of laying iron pipes through the present conduit to the foot of Fort Canning hill, whence the water could readily be distributed through the town.

Sir P. Benson Maxwell held the Criminal and Civil Sessions at Penang, in the absence of Sir William Hackett, absent on leave. The only case of any interest was a suit against a Chinese, the reputed principal of a firm, or chop, there, against whom the plaintiffs could bring home no positive proof of partnership, and were accordingly nonsuited. The managing partner of the firm had absconded, taking with him or destroying the books, and when the action was brought against the generally reputed principal, he denied having ever been a partner. The result of this case has revealed upon what a precarious footing the business between the European merchants and the Chinese traders—their principal customers—stands, and the Penang folks intend petitioning his Excellency the Governor to have a Bill introduced in the Legislative Council for the compulsory registration of all partnerships—a measure that appears to be sadly needed.

One of the Bills passed during the past year—the so-called Fire Bill—has proved during the fortnight to be of little utility. Fires are becoming of rather frequent occurrence in Singapore, and some measures should be taken for organising an efficient force, under proper supervision, for their suppression. On Thursday night last a fire broke out in the store of Mr. Choo Kong Lan, a Chinese merchant, in Malacca-street, and for upwards of an hour the only effective stream of water upon the flames was that from the Insurance Fire Engine. The signal guns from Fort Canning, too, were fired an hour and a half after the alarm had been given in the town; the steam fire-engines were about the same length of time in getting into operation, and some $50,000 worth of property was destroyed, a great portion of which, under proper management, it is reasonable to suppose, might have been saved. There was no insurance. The proximity of the fire to Commercial-square caused serious apprehensions to be felt lest it should extend its ravages, but the height and strength of the walls of the building prevented the fire from communicating to any of the adjoining buildings

Two singular instances of Mahomedan infatuation have come to light during the fortnight, one of the parties,—a Malay, having buried himself alive in order to become a prophet, and the other, a Rajing, having been frustrated in a similar attempt by the police. The cases afford striking proofs of the credulity and superstition of the natives.

Among the passengers to this by the steamer Clan Alpine, on Saturday last from Calcutta, was Sir Arthur Phayre, Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, who is on his way home via San Francisco, and will spend a few days here.

IN consequence of the representations made in the London and China Telegraph as to the inconvenience caused by the American Pacific steamers refusing to convey the English mails between ports in China and Japan, Her MAJESTY'S Government has caused a despatch to be sent to the British Minister at Washington, instructing him to inquire the reason of the order by which the United States Government has prohibited the steamers from conveying such mails. The despatch was forwarded by the mail of the 19th ult., and we hope shortly to be able to lay the result before our readers.

A PARLIAMENTARY paper just published contains the Memorial of the London merchants to Lord CLARENDON on the new China Convention, and that of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce; also Memorials and Resolutions of similar tenour from the following Chambers of Commerce:—Glasgow, Leith, Edinburgh, Dundee, Manchester, and Macclesfield.

(For dates see First Page.)

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The only demand noticeable was confined to Cottons, and those principally inquired for were Shirtings and Yarns, which had advanced in price slightly. For the former article holders were firm, and apparently looking for higher rates. Woollens continued in a very depressed state, and being without demand, were quoted at rates that must be considered quite nominal. Metals: Quiet, with small sales. Lead in some little request for re-export. Coal unchanged; the stock was again accumulating. Quotations were as follows:—Cotton Yarn, 16 to 24, $53.50 to 54 per picul; 28 to 32, $53 to 53.75; 38 to 42, $58 to 60. Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., $2.70 to 2.75 per piece; 8 lbs., 4 to 6, $3.02½ to 3.07½. Metals: Nail Rod Iron, $2.70 to 3.50 per picul; Lead, $6.25 to 6.75; Tin Plates, $6.25 to 8 per box. Coal, $8.50 to 9 per ton.

SHANGHAI.—The inquiry for Plain Cottons had been more general, and a fair business in nearly every kind had resulted. The bulk of it was still speculative, and on foreign account; prices for Grey and White Shirtings showed an improvement. Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs. quoted Tls. 2.05 to 2.07 per piece, at which sales, both to arrive and on the spot, had been made; 8¼ lbs. firmly held for Tls. 2.25 to 2.28 per piece for ordinary delivery, transactions reported at these figures; best 9 to 10 12 lbs. goods sold at Tls. 3.18 per piece, an advance of 12c. per piece. White Shirtings: Demand continued, and sales had been made to some extent at steadily advancing prices. T-Cloths as last quoted; only the finer Mexicans and the commoner counts of 7 lbs. goods asked for, importers generally willing to supply the demand at about Tls. 1.80 for the finer qualities—18 by 18 picks. Drills: American, one sale reported on the basis of Tls. 3.90 per piece; holders generally firm for 5c. per piece higher than the above. Dutch best chop placed from first hands at Tls. 3.45 per piece. Sheetings and Jeans attracted no attention. Fancy Cottons: few sales reported, but higher prices had been paid, and for Dyed Spots and Brocades a further advance was demanded. Woollen Goods: A true quotation could not well be given, as the chief operations had been in barter against silk. Transactions estimated at 2,800 pieces, Figured Orleans, 2,700 Camlets, 2,550 Crape Lustres, 1,000 pieces Long Ells, and some Medium Cloths and Spanish Stripes. The market was in an unsatisfactory state. Metals: Large business in Nail Rod Iron, resulting in the settlement of 20,000 bundles, at Tls. 2.25 to 2.30 for good assortments. Stocks large, but importers firm, and asking a still further advance, particularly for small sizes. Lead: A great deal of speculation by foreigners had taken place; Chinese were holding off in hope of a further decline. Stock estimated at 24,440 piculs. Coals: For several years the Coal market had not been in a state so unfavourable for shippers. Cardiff: Holders had been willing to accept much lower rates than those last quoted. English: Importers preferred to land rather than accept the rates offered from ships' side. American: A sale at Tls. 9.60; inquiry limited. Quotations (duty paid): White Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2 to 3.0; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.4.5 to 1.6.8; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.5 to 1.8.5; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls. 2.0.5 to 2.1.5; XX Tls. 2.4.0; Camlets, English, SS, per piece, Tls. 11.7.0 to 12.2.5; SSS, Tls. 10.5.0 to 11.0; Spanish Stripes, per yard, Tls. 0.5.0 to 0.5.5; Medium Broad and Habit Cloth, Tls. 0.9.0 to 1.5.0; Long Ells, Scarlet, per piece, Tls. 6.1.0 to 6.0.5; Assorted, Tls. 5.9.0 to 6.0.5. Iron—Nail Rod, per picul, Tls. 2.1.5 to 2.3.5; Lead, per picul, Tls. 5.2.5 to 5.3.0.

HANKOW.—There had been a fair amount of business in Cotton Piece Goods; 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings were quoted Tls. 2.2.8 to Tls. 2.3.2; 7 lbs., Tls. 2.1.0 to Tls. 2.1.2.

FOOCHOW.—The transactions effected had been 800 pieces, 7¼ lbs., T-Cloths, at $2.60 per piece; 500 pieces, 7 lbs.; at $2.40. The closing quotations were:—7 lbs., T-Cloth, $2.30 to 2.50; 6 lbs., ditto, $2 to 2 25; 8¼ lbs., Grey Shirtings, $3 to 3.20; 7 lbs., ditto, $2.70 to 2.85. Lead: $7 to $7.25 for heavy pigs.

HONG KONG.—The following is derived from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Report, dated 21st Feb.:—Cotton Yarn: Sales of Nos. 16-24 have been on a somewhat larger scale, and at higher values, but other numbers show no alteration. The stock of Nos. 38-42 is limited, and holders of same demand higher rates without, however, eliciting any offers. Piece Goods: During the interval a moderate business has been transacted in these manufactures. 7 lb. Grey Shirtings have been in demand, the supply being small, and prices have advanced 2 cents. per piece, whilst 8 lb. goods show a decline of 2 cents on late current rates. 9-10 lb. goods are dull of sale, the stocks being in excess of requirements. White Shirtings continue in steady request, and prices are tending upwards, holders being firm, anticipating higher quotations as the season advances. 6 lb. T-Cloths have been freely dealt in, and rates are dearer. 7 lb. goods are not wanted, and sales can only be made at a decline of 2 cents per piece. Drills continue dull of sale, the few transactions reported have been in Dutch descriptions at a reduction of 5 cents on late ruling quotations. In Jeans and Sheetings no change can be noted; Spotted Shirtings and Brocades have declined 5 to 10 cents, and Chintzes are also lower in value. Woollens: The market is very dull, and Long Ells, Spanish Stripes, and Blankets have declined in value. Crape Lastings have also fallen in common with Camlets, which exhibit a reduction of 25 cents. on our late quotations. Metals: In the absence of arrivals Nail Rod Iron is advancing, and Hoop is 10 cents per picul dearer. Bar Iron of all kinds is slightly lower in value. No change can be noted in Wire. Lead remains quiet, and quotations are unaltered. Quicksilver firmer. Coal: There are scarcely any purchasers in our market, and quotations show no alteration worthy of comment. No arrivals have taken place since the 7th inst., nor can we report any transactions during the interval. The following were the current quotations:—Cotton Yarn, per bale, $120.00 to 132.50; 16 to 24, $140 00 to 145; 28 to 32, $140.00 to 145.00; 38 to 42, $170.00 to to 185.00; Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., $2.49 to 2.55; 8.4 lbs., $2.80 to 2.83; 9 to 10 lbs., $3.00 to 3.90; White Shirtings, $2.55 to 3.80; finer qualities, $4.25 to 4.65; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.95 to 2.05; 7 lbs., $2.10 to 2.40; 8 to 8-4 lbs., $2.65 to 2.80; Grey Twills, per piece, English, 14 to 15 lbs., $4.47½ to 4.65; American, 15 lbs., $4.90 to 5.00; Dutch, 14-8 lbs., $4.55 to 4.67½; Woollen Cloths, $1.70 to 3.35; Spanish Stripes, $0.65 to 0.74; Long Ells, per piece, Scarlet, $7.40 to 7.60; ditto, Assorted, $7.30 to 7.50; Blankets, $0.48 to 0.50; Camlets, SSS, $18.00 to 13.50; S.S., $16.80 to 15.00; S., $16.00 to 17.00; Dutch, $25.00 to 27.00; Iron Nail Rods, $2.35 to 2.55; Quicksilver, $62.00 to 63.00; Lead, Inferior Brands, $6.25 to 6.30; LB, $6.40; ditto, WB, $6.75; Coal, English, $6.50; ditto, Welsh, $7.00.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Hunter, Houghton, and Co.'s Circular reports a marked improvement in the demand for some staples, and a slight advance in values. Cambrics, 45 inch by 12 yards: No inquiry for fine makes; 24's attracted more attention—sales at f.3⅜ to f.3.25 per piece cash. Shirtings, White, 40 yards: 36 inch 64 reed in request at f.8.50 per piece, one month; 40/41 inch, at f.9 to f.9.25 per piece; 45 inch, at f.10½ to f.10⅝ per piece. Grey, 38½ yards: 7 lb. 39 inch, sales at f.7.20, one month. Stocks light; 8¼ lb. command f.8 per piece, one month. Madapollams, 24 yards: More doing in Dutch, but values without alteration. White, 33/34 inch, f.5.25 to f.5.35; 40/41 inch, f.6 to f.6.25. Grey, 34/35 inch, f.5 to f.5.25; 43/44 inch, f.6 to f.6.25. Trifling clearances of English Grey, 32 inch 3 lb., at f.3.10 to f.3.15, one month. English White, fine to common, neglected. Prints, 9-8 by 24 yards: Had not participated to any extent in the revived inquiry. Greens dull at f.7.25 to f.7.50 per piece. Pink Pads saleable at f.7.50 to f.7¾ according to designs and cloth. Steams quiet at f.4.75 to f.5. Dyed Maddapollams, 24 yards: Orange slow of sale at f.4 to f.4⅛ per piece cash. Other kinds nominal. Dyed Brocades: An occasional transaction at f.11 to f.12 per piece. Dyed Spots 24 yards quiet at f.6 to f.7 per piece. Turkey Red Cloth, 24 yards: Scotch dye 30 inch dull, but at f.7.25 to f.7.75 per piece. Drills, Grey 27 inch by 30 yards: Prime Dutch worth about f.9 per piece, English taken at proportionate rates. Twist, Grey: Market barely stocked with 40s. the value of which had risen to f.4.20, 1m., and would probably advance still further business in 20's., 24's., or 30's.

SINGAPORE.—39 inch Grey Shirting, 8¼ lbs., in demand, and market cleared at $3 to 3.10. 45 inch, 8 lbs., in limited inquiry, at $2.80 to 2.80½; other weights not wanted. T-Cloths: Fair sales at $1.55 to 1.60 for 5 lbs., $1.82½ to 1.87½ for 6 lbs., and $2.10 to $2.15 for 7 lbs. Maddapollams, 2¾ lbs. and 3 lbs., sold at $20½ to 21½ respectively. Long Cloths: A sale of 39 inch 7½ lbs. at $2.80 per piece. White Shirtings: Common qualities in good request at fair rates; stocks cleared. Medium and fine in large supply, and no demand. White Spots quiet, at last rates. White Cambrics: No. 24's inquired for at $20 to 20½ per corge for 16 by 16. Medium and fine saleable at last rates; 15/16s placed at $30½ to 33, according to quality. Maddapollams in better request, at $21½ to 22 per corge. A sale of Orange Shirtings at $2.85. Brocades and Spots in no request. Velvets quiet, at last rates. Turkey Red Cambrics saleable, at extremely low rates, 2 lbs. 12 oz. at $2 40 to .45; 3 lbs., at $2.55 to 2.60. Prints in inquiry. Camlets and Scarlet Long Ells dull. Spanish Stripes in no inquiry. Lastings: Sales of Assorted at 41c., Black at 40½c. per yard. Scarlet Bombazetts and Brocade Lustres unsaleable. Grey Yarn: 18's and 24's in very limited inquiry, at $120 to 122½. 30's are quiet, at last rates. 40's sold at $148 to 150. Turkey Red Yarn is quiet, at weaker rates. Coloured Yarns dull. Copper Sheathing placed at $25¾ to 26½. Yellow metal at $21½ to 23. Zinc Sheating at $8¼. Iron nominally unaltered, but no transactions of any moment. Small sales reported of Nail Rods at $2.35 to 2.45, Round at $2.45, and Govan Flat Bar at $2.50. Pig Lead sold freely "to arrive" at $6½ to 6¼, 75 tons LB on the spot placed at $6.32½; market closes quiet.

PENANG.—Grey Shirtings: Small sales of 6 lbs. at $44, 7 lbs. at $52½ to 53 for delivery and $51 to arrive. 8¼ lbs. at $62 and 63 per corge. 45-inch, no transactions reported. Long Cloths not inquired for. Madapollams still out of stock. T-Cloths in a little better demand, sales of 6 lbs. at $39, 7 lbs. at $43½ to 44 per corge. White Shirtings still very dull, small sale of Medium at $60 to 66½. Fine, $85 to 108 per corge. In 45 inch a sale reported at $78 per corge. White Cambrics, low qualities, in some inquiry at $21 and 26½. Small sales of No. 15/16 at $32½ per corge. Grey Sheetings $92 per corge; demand very weak. Dyed Goods very dull. Yarn better inquiry. A sale of Grey Mule reported, No. 40 at $148, lower weights wanted but not in stock. Turkey Red Twist, No. 40, sales reported at $144 and $145½, and of No. 18 to 24 at $138.

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The Tea market had continued quiet, a few transactions only having taken place, resulting in the settlement of 1,500 piculs; these settlements had been made at slightly easier prices, but the market closed firm at last quotations. Arrivals had come in very slowly, stocks consequently were slightly reduced. The Cœur de Lion was loading for New York, and the Alphonsine for Boston. Quotations: Common, $22 to 24 per picul, nominal; Good Common, $25 to 27 ditto; Medium, $28 to 31 ditto; Good Medium, $32 to 34 ditto; Fine, $36 to 38 ditto; Finest, $39 to 44 ditto; Choice, nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Not a single transaction reported during the fortnight. The stock was insignificant, and this, combined with the Chinese New Year holidays, was amply sufficient for the absence of business. The season was about closed; a few parcels of scarcely very fine locally packed leaf will probably bring it to a finish. Green: The business transacted during the fortnight had been small, in consequence of the native holidays. Teamen had resumed business, but there seemed little disposition on the part of buyers to operate at the high prices asked for the common Teas offering. A few chops of medium Tea had been purchased at extreme prices, an advance of one tael per picul on last quotations having been paid; settlements of common to fair had been made at previous rates. Quotations:—Moyune and Teenkai, Tls. 30 to 40; Fychow, Tls. 22 to 35; Pingsuey, Tls. 30 to 31; Shanghai packed, Tls. 22 to 29. Settlements for the fortnight, 7,028 half-chests; reshipments on owners' account, nil. Stock, 87 chops or 36,401 half-chests.

HANKOW AND KIUKIANG.—No business reported.

FOOCHOW.—The market was closed from Jan. 31st to Feb. 7th for the usual Chinese New Year holidays, since when only two small parcels of Congou had been settled. The stock, which amounts to 755 chests, consists of low common kinds, which were held for rates above the views of buyers. Settlements, Congou, 242 chests at Tls. 12.05 to 17.8 per pecul. ship off.

SINGAPORE.—A moderate business in produce had been done during the fortnight. Gambier was coming forward in very small supplies, and prices were firm at $3.12½ to 3.15 per picul; only about 250 tons had been engaged. Coffee steady in price, fair purchases of Bontyne at $12.40 to 12.75 per picul. About 200 tons Black Pepper were bought early in the fortnight of $7.45 to 7.50 per picul, but prices subsequently advanced, and purchases of about 400 tons reported at $7.70 to 7.75 per picul; White Pepper also advanced, $11 offered for fair parcels, dealers asking $11.25. Sago steady at $3.10 to 3.15. Sago flour slightly firmer; $2.42½ paid for Sarawak, 2.40 for Labuan, 2.32½ for fair Singapore, and 2.25 for Linga. Gutta percha and India Rubber higher; $80 to 85 per picul paid for No. 1 Gutta, and $38 to 40 for best Rubber. Small purchases reported of Cutch, Gamboge, Gum Damar, Gum Benjamin, Hides, Horns, Rattans, Sapanwood, Sticklac, Tapioca, Vegetable Tallow, and Tortoiseshell at former prices. Tin in small demand.

PENANG.—The produce market had been very poorly supplied, and purchases of almost all goods had been small. Tin increased, and $26¾ per per picul asked for. The purchases for Europe had not been important, prices ranging from $26 to 26.70 per picul. In Pepper arrivals and purchases of East Coast at $7.30 and $7.15 per picul. West Coast, Trang, and White quotations nominal. Cloves of Penang growth scarce, all offers taken up at $20 per picul. There had been no purchases of Cutch, but there were some boxes on the market held for $5 per picul. Hides, Buffalo, rather scarce, arrivals taken at $10.25 to 10.50. Cow purchased at $14 to 14.60, and to arrive at $14 per picul. Horns: Buffalo in short supply, offers taken at $9.50 per picul. India-rubber in small quantities, taken at $36.50 per picul. In Mace a purchase of No. 1 picked at $80 per picul; and in Nutmegs of 110 nuts per lb. at $53 50 per picul. Sugar in fair supply, prices slightly weakened; purchases of Penang No. 1 at $6.15 and 6.50 per picul; of Chinese manufacture, no sales.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The interval had been for the most part occupied by the holidays, and under ordinary circumstances the silk shops would have been all but closed. London telegrams of the 31st Dec. had, however, induced some buyers to offer considerably advanced rates; sufficiently so to overcome the reserve to silkmen, and a business of 600 bales had resulted. For superior Hanks up to $885, and for superior Oshu up to $900, had been paid, with corresponding prices for other grades and sorts; thus establishing an advance of $40 to $60, and natives were demanding a further rise. Arrivals had been small, as usual at the season, and stocks were further reduced, say to 800 bales.

SHANGHAI.—Messrs. Skeggs and Co. report as follows:—The continued favourable advices from home have induced a larger business here than was anticipated, and notwithstanding a further considerable advance in prices settlements reach nearly 800 bales. In the early part of the fortnight business was renewed at prices about Tls. 10 higher than previously current, but towards the close as much as Tls. 20 to 30 advance has been paid for medium to common Tsatlees and Hangchow sorts. Red Peacocks and such descriptions have been taken at Tls. 480 to 485, equal to 25s. 4d. to 25s. 7d., whilst Tls. 585, equal to 30s. 9d., has been refused for Koo-fong-sings No. 3, it being the only crack chop on the market. No. 2 Hainins have fetched Tls. 480, equal to 25s. 4d., and all Taysaams are bought at very full prices.

JAVA AND STRAITS PRODUCE.

BATAVIA.—Arrack: f.82.50 per leaguer; sales. Cloves: f.25 per picul dull. Coffee: Java, none in the market. Cubebs: f.14.50 to f.16 per picul; sales; crop finished. Gutta Percha: f.60 to f.150 per picul; small supplies. Gum Damar: f.42 per picul; sales. Hides: Cow, f.35 to f.45; Buffalo f.25 to f.28 per pound, according to quality. India Rubber: f.96 to f.105 per picul; scarce. Indigo: Sales at Samarang, f.5.25 to f.5.30 per lb. for first quality. Mace: f.150 to f.175 per picul; scarce. Nutmegs: f.115 per picul; sales, and scarce. Pepper: Black, f.17.50 to f.18.25 per picul, sales; white, no stocks. Rice: First quality, f.165 to f.180 per coyang; second, f.135 to f.155 per coyang; cargo, f.100 to f.110 per coyang. Rattans: Borneo, f.11 to f.13 per picul, none; and Padang, f.8 to f.9 per picul, sales. Sapanwood: Manila in bond, none; Java, f.2.50 to f.3 per picul, sales. Sugar: No. 11 and lower, f.16 to f. 16.25 per picul, small sales; No. 15/20, f.15. to f.15.50 per picul. Tin, Billiton: The auction of 5,017 70-100 piculs averaged f.64.41 per picul.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

The directors of the China Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited) have issued their first report. They state that all the shares have been allotted, and the whole of the allotment money paid. Lieutenant-Colonel Glover, R.E., late Director-General of Telegraphs in India, has been appointed managing director. The report further states that the order for the cable has been given to the Telegraph Construction Company, but that the directors have determined to defer proceedings with reference to the authorisation by resolutions passed at an extraordinary general meeting of the company, held on the 7th of January, 1870, to increase the capital of the company from £525,000 to £825,000 for the construction of the Shanghai section of the cable, until the construction of the line from Singapore to Hong Kong is further advanced.

The British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company notify that messages for India by their cable may now be despatched from any postal telegraph office. To ensure their going by the right route, the words "via Malta" must be inserted after the address of the receiver. A message from Bombay dated 6 A.M. this morning was received at 8.50 A.M.; London telegrams of the 1st inst., 7.30 P.M., were received in India next day at 8.2 P.M.

With reference to the letter from Mr. Severs, published in our last issue, that gentleman states that he did not intend it to be printed, but merely wrote to enable us to contradict the statement contained in a paragraph in a previous issue, of which he found reason to complain. We regret to find from the explanation given by Mr. Severs that we were misled as to the circumstances on which the paragraph was based. The failure having arisen from circumstances beyond his control, Mr. Severs is clearly exonerated from any such imputations.

SCHMIDT—On the 28th Jan., at Nagasaki, Captain Henry Schmidt, a native of Altona, Holstein, Germany, late Commander British barque Lightfoot.

THE Suez Canal Company held a meeting on the 1st inst. at Paris. The directors reported that they had, on December 31st., about twenty millions of francs in hand or coming in from different sources, but that the expenses of the present year for supplementary works to the Canal, and for the coupon of January, will require thirty millions of francs. It would, therefore, not be possible to pay any dividend in July. Between the 21st March and the 1st April the following vessels are said to have passed through the Canal:—Statesman, Numero-Telateh, John Dryden, Hawk, Leith, Delaware, Imperatrice (M.I. str.), Severington, Hibernia, Nubia (P. and O.), Babel, Doussouk, Apis, William Cory, and Far East (?). A telegram from Alexandria, dated April 2nd, states that the Imperatrice has reached Port Said with her fan broken, and that her passengers and mails will consequently proceed to to Marseilles by another steamer.

WE understand that Sir WILFRID LAWSON will bring forward the opium question in the House of Commons on the earliest open day after the Easter recess, and that his motion will declare that it is inexpedient for the Indian Government to depend upon opium as a source of revenue.

THE appointment of Mr. JAMES W. W. BIRCH, to be Colonial Secretary for the Straits Settlements (which has already been announced by us), was gazetted on the 28th March.

THE LOSS OF THE "BENVENUE"—On Saturday, the 2nd inst., the official inquiry directed by the Board of Trade into the circumstances attending the loss of the ship Benvenue was brought to a close at the Greenwich police-court, before Mr. Maude, the magistrate, and Captains Hight and Watson, nautical accessors. Mr. Cumberland conducted the inquiry on behalf of the Board of Trade; and Mr. C. J. Cottingham appeared on behalf of the owners and captain. From the evidence, which was very voluminous, it appeared that the Benvenue, Captain James Brown, master, was on her homeward voyage from Penang, with a crew of 17 hands. On the 15th February, when coming up Channel, the Start light was sighted bearing N.E. by E., distance about eight or nine miles. The course steered from this point was E. by S., and on the following day the ship was hove-to, and a cast of the lead was taken, giving 17½ fathoms of water. The weather shortly afterwards became very foggy, and at 3.50 A.M., the vessel struck on the Owers rock. The crew at once left her, and she went down in a few minutes. No lives were lost, the captain and crew succeeding in landing at Worthing. They, however, lost everything but the clothes they were wearing. Mr. Cottingham, having addressed the court on behalf of Captain Brown, the Court, after consulting for two hours, gave an elaborate judgment to the effect that the loss of the Benvenue was caused by the serious omission of the captain to take soundings at regular intervals. The Court therefore adjudged that the certificate of the master be suspended for three calendar months.

COCHIN CHINA.—La Patrie publishes extracts from a letter dated Saigon, Feb. 10, which give some details of the state of this French colony:—"A great activity prevails in the port. The majority of vessels are foreign, and have nearly all come to load with rice. The crop of this grain has been very good, and promises to be still greater in future years, in consequence of extended cultivation, which has been going on for two years. The Emperor Tee Duc sent to the capital of the colony one of the chief officers of his household, with a numerous staff, to congratulate the Governor on the occasion of the new year. At his reception this personage made a speech, in which he declared the warm desires of his Sovereign to continue upon the most friendly relations with France. He also brought with him a number of young Annamites belonging to the first families of Hué, who had come to Saigon to be educated at the College of Saigon. The accounts from the provinces are excellent. The language held by the delegates of the people chosen at the last election shows that the natives are animated with the best spirit, and that they appreciate the value of the institutions which France has conferred upon them."

SPURIOUS TEA.

The case of the six chests of tea seized some time back at Nicholson's-wharf has been brought to a conclusion. Dr. Letheby gave in evidence the results of his examination of the compound and stated the conclusion at which he had arrived regarding it which was to the effect that it consisted of a little good tea mixed with a quantity of decayed and exhausted leaves. Other medical testimony to the same effect was produced. Mr. Vinen found that an effusion of it produced a grey weak tea, with a sickening smell, containing various dirty masses insoluble in water; and Mr. John Stenhouse expressed his opinion that it had gone through some process of putrefaction. The only witness called on the other side was Mr. Theophilus Redwood, who had found no evidence of putrefaction. This witness, however, agreed with the other doctors as to the component parts of the tea, and added that he thought if he took any of it himself it would do him no good. Upon this evidence Mr. Alderman Stone ordered the tea to be destroyed, but giving time to the owners to appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench on the point of law. We extract the following from a letter signed "Anglo-Chinaman," which appeared in The Times, and append also some pertinent remarks from the Produce Markets Review:—

The traffic has existed to my knowledge since 1859, and it has continued more or less ever since, according to the yield of the crop of genuine tea. For the last two years the London market has been spared this quality, an increased cultivation of the teaplant has produced as much real leaf as foreign demand could keep pace with; but this season the re-dried article has appeared again, as the genuine crop was 10 per cent. less than the previous one.

Of the ingredients of this rubbish something in justice must be said to correct misapprehensions, for, bad as it is, I think reports have exaggerated the case. I do not believe there is any impurity in it when it is packed, beyond what it may have gathered in being exposed to dry; but, being composed of the infused leaves collected from the caldrons at the tea-shops or restaurants throughout the vicinity of Shanghai, which are the remains of a class of tea unsuited to the English market, and what quality they ever possessed having been exhausted with the hurried drying and careless packing to which they are subjected, the condition has been insufficient for a tropical and protracted voyage, during which the leaf has gradually decayed till it has assumed the stage of decomposition in which Dr. Letheby discovered such a considerable proportion of what he examined to be.

But, while to some extent defending the Chinaman who sells this tea to buyers who are supposed to be competent to judge of quality, I do not wish for a moment to shield those who ship it under false descriptions, such as "fine" and "finest" Oopack or Moning, and it is high time that Government interfered to put down such imposition by the strong arm of the law. When tea is so injured by fire or the effects of the voyage as not to be worth the duty, the custom is to send it out to sea to be thrown overboard, and if the authorities would employ a qualified inspector to search the warehouses for this Shanghai rubbish, and have it similarly dealt with, it would produce a wholesome effect, and teach a lesson not only to the merchants in China, but also to the banks to be a little more circumspect as to the security they get in their exchange operations, for should a quantity of this peculiar description of tea find its market off the Nore, the banks which hold the shipping documents attached to the drafts may have to present those bills at maturity to Messrs. Neptune and Co.

In conclusion, allow me to remark that if a grocer is found to be selling coffee adulterated with chicory as "pure" coffee the Excise would at once interfere, and confiscation and a fine would quickly follow. Then, why should they not be equally vigilant with the vendors of damaged and spurious tea, who impose it on a credulous public as "pure tea," and with other such enticing but false descriptions? There would be no difficulty whatever in establishing this supervision, as professed judges of tea could easily be added to the Excise Department, and the importance of such a step cannot be over estimated, else the confidence of the public in the "cup that cheers, but not inebriates" will rapidly vanish, and the hope that reductions of duty and other encouragements which various Governments have given to extend the use of tea as a means of dimiuishing the frequenting of the gin-palace will prove delusive and abortive.

SIR,—With reference to the allusion made in the Court of Sewers yesterday to adulterated tea, I beg to assure you that the siftings ex Pakwan are not by any means the worst now in the market. In proof of this I give you the following extracts from my laboratory journal:—

March 11.—Sample of tea-dust, ex Sophie (representing 3,375 lbs., and advertised for public sale), was found to contain 6·5 per cent. of iron filings.

March 14.—Sample of "Scented Caper," ex Cheetah (representing 5,280 lbs., and advertised for public sale), was found to contain 7 per cent. of iron filings. Sample of Orange Pekoe siftings, ex Pakwan (the tea referred to in court), contained 2 per cent. of iron filings.

March 15.—Sample of S. O. Pekoe, ex Cheetah, contained several large and tolerably lively maggots.

It is thus evident that our local authorities have not yet got to the worst phases of the "vile traffic."

(PRODUCE MARKETS REVIEW.)

A good deal of attention has lately been bestowed by the papers on spurious teas of different kinds, and no one has condemned these more strongly than ourselves. We however fear, from the nature of the comments made upon the subject, that the public may form erroneous conclusions, and be led to believe that the adulteration of tea, either here or in China, is carried on to a great extent, and that the tea stocks of the grocers generally are to be regarded with suspicion. For instance, there appears to be an idea that all tea dust is a spurious compound, simply because a filthy mixture has in a few cases been sold in one or two low shops in London, under that name; and because some instances have transpired in which it has been adulterated in China with steel filings. A mistaken impression on this point would be greatly to be deplored, as a large and perfectly legitimate trade has been done for many years in broken teas, and for many of the poor, the only chance they have of getting tea at all is to buy these less sightly leaves. It may be desirable to explain that large quantities of genuine dust must necessarily occur in preparing parcels for shipment. The tea, to stand a long voyage, has to be highly roasted, and is therefore in a very brittle condition; and all China teas are bulked before export—that is, a quantity of small parcels are mixed together, to form a single large parcel, or "chop," of even quality. The broken tea that must be made during this operation is, in the majority of cases in China, generally left with the whole leaves: but it is sometimes separated and sold as Dust or Broken Leaf. The quality is precisely the same as the original parcel, and may be either fine or common. From the greater care used with fine teas, the comparative smallness of the parcels, and the fact that broken fine tea hardly fetches more than the commonest, the great bulk of the China dust sent here is of ordinary quality, but is quite as wholesome and pure as the common or low medium Congous which form the principal part of our consumption. Broken tea, however, from the ready access which the water has to the whole of the cells of the leaf at once, gives a stronger infusion in the first water than whole leaves of precisely the same quality. In the second water, however, the whole leaves uncurl thoroughly, and are completely permeated by the water, and therefore give a stronger infusion than the second water of broken tea. It is well to point out that, owing to the barbarous and ridiculous excess to which the separation of the different sized leaves is carried in India, nearly one-half the tea coming from that country is more or less broken. The Chinese practice of generally leaving the dust in the tea, is however, not followed in India, but the whole of the broken leaves are carefully sifted out and sold as Broken Tea, Siftings, Fannings, or Dust. From this explanation it is evident that it would be folly on the part of the public to object to tea simply because it is called Dust or Broken Leaf. There is nothing in which any adulteration is so easily detected as in tea, and it is for this reason that adulteration is almost impossible. To the respectable members of the trade, the practices lately disclosed in the police courts are even more novel than they are to the public, who still entertains the ridiculous idea that tea is adulterated with sloe leaves and similar substances. The disgraceful efforts made to foist off the spurious Maloo mixture as Moning tea have, we trust, been completely stopped, and the heavy loss that this will inflict upon the importers is certain to prevent similar efforts for some time to come. There is another class of so-called tea which requires the attention of the authorities. We allude to the "lie" Gunpowders and Capers imported occasionally, and in small quantities from Canton. We have no hesitation in saying that these compounds are quite as bad as the Maloo mixture, while the green kinds are likely to be even more deleterious to health, as they contain a large proportion of paint. The quantity of paint on genuine and on spurious Green tea is simply a question of degree; but no one can mistake "lie" teas when he tastes them, and we have no hesitation in saying that they ought all to be seized by the Health Officers, as it is a question whether many of these parcels contain any tea at all. The officers' attention should also be directed to the injurious and reprehensible practice of colouring Capers and then selling them as Gunpowders, which we regret to say is occasionally resorted to in London. It is strange that Government should render itself "an accessory before the fact" to the poisoning of the public by Maloo mixtures, and other spurious teas; yet, by accepting the duty upon them, it clearly does so. The Customs ought to destroy every pound of these villanous compounds directly on import, but the Honourable Commissioners are, as is well known, monomaniacs on the subject of the revenue, and so long as they add to their receipts, they appear to care nothing for the health of the public.

THE "BOMBAY" AND THE "ONEIDA."—The Standard of March 25 has an article on this catastrophe, which concludes as follows:—"It is peculiarly unfortunate in this case that the injury was done by an English vessel, and suffered by an American crew. In the present condition of our national relations such a circumstance is sure to create hostile and excited comment. The American papers have vapoured and protested over the case till they have convinced themselves that Captain Eyre's neglect was a direct act of national hostility. The whole affair needs to be sifted to the bottom. It is impossible that it should be hushed up or remain where it now stands. A British captain, engaged in a popular and important service, stands accused before the world of sending a hundred American seamen to the bottom of the sea, and steaming away from the scene of the disaster as unconcerned as though he had merely swamped an empty cockleshell or run over a floating barrel."

THE CIVIL SERVICE (FOREIGN-OFFICE).—Mr. T. R. H. M'Cletchie, Mr. J. D. Crawford, Mr. W. L. B. Neale, and Mr. R. W. Mansfield have been appointed student interpreters in China or Japan.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps has attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in tin-lined packets labelled—JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.

PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE OPIUM TRADE.

(March 29th.) Sir W. Lawson gave notice that on an early day he should move a resolution condemning the revenue raised from the opium trade. (Hear, hear.)

THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE NAVY—THE CHINA SQUADRON.

(29th.) Mr Rylands called the attention of the House to the present distribution of the foreign naval squadrons, with special reference to the number of vessels stationed on the West Coast of Africa and in China waters. He moved that the African squadron should be materially reduced at the earliest practicable date. The hon. member supported his motion not only upon the ground of economy, but of justice, alleging that the conduct of some of the officers in command of the foreign squadrons was most arbitrary towards the weaker nations with which they were brought in contact. Mr. Rylands said there had been several wars with China produced by our armed interference and keeping up a large naval squadron, making an Englishman detestable there, where he was looked upon as the representative of brute force. ("No, no,") He had been told by a gentleman, whose name was not unknown to many members in that House, who had been long in China, and who at the present moment had large interests there, that if he went back to China he would leave behind him the name of English man and pass under that of an American. (Laughter.) Hon. gentlemen might laugh, but if they read over the China papers presented to the House last year they would find that the manner in which the Chinese had been treated was a disgrace to Englishmen. The Blue-book of last year he had perused with feelings of shame, containing as it did evidence of atrocities perpetrated on the natives by our naval officers and their subordinates which were a disgrace to the British flag. The unjustifiable bombardment by the gunboat Algerine of the innocent town of Formosa was a specimen of this species of brutal warfare; and although it was vindicated by our plenipotentiary in China, it met with the severe censure of Lord Clarendon, whose opinion was that these subordinate officers were unfit to be entrusted with such responsibilities. A British merchant having bought a lot of camphor, a dispute arose out of the transaction with the Chinese authorities. The British Consul then appeared, the representative of the Majesty of Great Britain, and because he was not treated with all the respect he conceived his due, he demanded from the poor islanders compliance with certain terms as a recognition of British rights. That was refused, and then the Consul, whose name he would mention, as it ought to be handed down to posterity—it was Mr. Gibson—called on the senior naval lieutenant commanding the Algerine—a suitable name—to vindicate British rights, and the result was that the town of Amping was bombarded for a couple of hours. Immediately it was dark the lieutenant entered the town, surprised the guards, and in the morning, when a number of Chinese soldiers were seen approaching, he fired into them and drove them away. He then proceeded to destroy the ammunition and arms, and to blow up the magazine. From a deputation of Chinese merchants who waited on him he required a deposit of $40,000 as a guarantee, and upon that demand being agreed to he next required another sum of $10,000 to repay the British Government for the expenses they had been put to in bombarding the town and blowing up the magazine. The House might perhaps think that this was the proceeding of a young man acting without authority; but the Admiral on the station wrote home to the Admiralty that the lieutenant was deserving of praise for the promptitude and gallantry with which he surprised the place at night, and warmly solicited a favourable consideration of his services. The First Lord of the Admiralty, in his speech in 1867, referred to China, and said that the main cause of the increase in the number of vessels in the Chinese seas was the fact that the British were maintaining the entire police of those waters, and that he described as a Quixotic duty. In reference to that matter he would give another instance to show how matters were conducted there, and it also had reference to the same gunboat, Algerine, commanded, however, on this occasion by Lieutenant Domville. In 1868 Lieutenant Domville fought an action with thirteen armed junks, which he chose to call piratical; and in a despatch he gave a full account of the action. After describing the efforts he made to destroy the junks, he said that at length he passed three times alongside the line of the junks and poured in grape at close quarters. It must, he added, have told with fearful effect by the yells that ensued. One vessel was injured and captured, while the others escaped into shallow water. Now, the House would perhaps be surprised to hear that these junks were not pirates at all, but armed trading vessels, and the captured junk was afterward released on that ground. He was backed up by the Admiral, who spoke in his despatch of the skill and gallantry displayed by both officers and crew in engaging and dispersing a force so vastly superior, and expressed a hope that Lieutenant Domville would meet with some mark of their Lordships' approval. But fortunately the Foreign-office again condemned the proceeding of the Algerine and the conduct of the lieutenant in command. He would trouble the House with only another instance, which occurred in the same year. A party of the men belonging to the Cockchafer went up a creek at Swatow; the villagers were known to be hostile, and they yelled at the barbarians, as they called them, and threw stones at them. What was the consequence? The blue-jackets resorted to their arms. They said they were the first attacked, but no doubt the Chinese would say the contrary. The Consul called for protection from the British navy, and the commodore chastised the villagers. He fired into a number of the villages and burnt several. The villagers sued for pardon, and the naval despatches were written. The commodore praised the acting-lieutenant, and Admiral Keppel, as usual, came in at the end and reported the conduct of all engaged as worthy the approval of the Admiralty. The correspondence would not be complete without the notice of our Plenipotentiary at Peking, and accordingly Sir Rutherford Alcock sent home a despatch, in which he said that, although the object had not been effected without a good deal of damage to the offending villagers and many of their piratical forces, there was not much to regret; and he went on to praise the gallant spirit which had been displayed by the naval force. He was glad to say the authorities at home had condemned both the naval and consular officers. Admiral Keppel no longer commanded in those seas, and he hoped the Admiralty would take care that he had not a similar command given him elsewhere. He had alluded to the questions of trade and piracy, and he would not dwell on disputes in connection with the missionaries. He hoped they were all anxious to see the doctrines they believed, of peace and goodwill, carried to the ends of the earth; but when these doctrines were backed by gunboats they did much to prevent the spread of Christianity. On this subject Lord Clarendon, much to his honour, in a despatch to Sir R. Alcock, said:—

"The active interference of Her Majesty's naval forces should only be had recourse to in cases of sudden emergency and of immediate danger to lives or property."

But these cases of emergency were to be judged of by their Consuls Gibson and Lieutenants Gurdon, as in their justification of the outrage committed on Formosa. At a dinner given to Admiral Keppel at Hong Kong on leaving, and at which the whole of the leading merchants and officials seemed to have been present, a certain English Colonel responded for the "Army." One of the China papers thus reported his speech:—

"As regarded China, he contended that the Chinese were an inferior nation, and should be brought down and shown that they were the inferior nation. (Loud cheers.) He strongly objected to the tampering policy followed by the present economical Government, and styled it a most pernicious policy, and a policy which would not have been tolerated for a moment 200 years ago."

(A laugh.) The Overland China Mail on the 19th of October last spoke thus:—

"Let us say to China, 'This must be done because we choose.' There is no other way of appealing to the nation. . . . What can avail but threats? We may be thankful that just at this moment the hollowness of their pretended desire for progress has become apparent. Should another war, as is most probable, occur, the peacemongers will no longer be able to weep over the injuries inflicted upon a 'meek and progress-loving people.'"

A similar feeling appeared to animate all our officials in China. It was no doubt very well to talk of 300,000,000 backs to be clothed with English calico, but we had no right to compel men to take what they did not want. We were in danger from this state of feeling of being lugged into another war with China, and he, for one, was very much afraid of it. It was said the Chinese were so broken in spirit, so sat upon, that there was no chance of their going to war; but the feeling in Peking was different. He would read an extract from a letter which had appeared in The Times. It was written by a correspondent of The Times in Peking, and, judging from what they knew of the correspondents of The Times, they might fairly believe that the writer was a man of intelligence, on whom reliance might be placed. The correspondent, speaking of the China merchants, said:—

"The opening up of the country is their cry, 'progress' is their motto, war is their object. Trade is slack at present. It is necessary to live, and, Micawber-like, they hope for something to turn up in the general disruption it would infallibly produce. Nor is it wholly impossible that an Abyssinian expenditure in China might be to their advantage; while, at the same time, it is evident they would not have to contribute to it. House-rent would go up, old steamers be chartered, and older stores find a ready market, and the Chinaman would be treated like the dog they think him to be for presuming to imagine that his own country belongs to him."

Under the present system he complained they were placing the honour and power of the British nation in the hands of people like Consul Gibson and Acting-Lieutenant Gurdon, and involving the country in all chances of war. It might be said they could not change their policy in a moment; but they ought to proceed on the principle of concentrating the trade in China in certain entrepots, and leaving those who created disputes to settle them as best they could, without backing them up by Consuls or gunboats. They should withdraw the Consuls from the distant ports, and lessen very considerably the number of their gunboats. If a man, from a love of enterprise or a desire for increased profits, chose to go beyond the region where there was a certain amount of British support and of commercial civilisation, he ought to feel that in doing so he went there on his own hook—(hear)—and that with the advantage of extra profits he must be prepared to take the extra risk. If a Britisher under such circumstances felt that he had no Consul or gunboat to rely upon he would be much better disposed to be of good behaviour. The general question of the distribution of squadrons was one on which such different opinions were entertained, and such important issues depended, that he had not ventured to move any substantive resolution upon the subject, though it was one upon which it would be well that the country should be enlightened by a discussion in Parliament. But at both sides of the House there was such a concurrence of opinion as to the West African squadron that he felt himself justified in challenging a vote upon that subject.

Mr. Liddell said he believed no member of the House could have anticipated, from the terms of the motion, that they would find themselves launched into a Chinese debate, without the least opportunity for preparation being given to those—and there were many—who took an interest in that important subject. (Hear, hear.) The hon. member had brought a heavy bill of indictment against several public servants engaged on the China station, and he thought there was just ground of complaint in the fact that no hon. member would be able to say a word in their defence without trusting to the delusive aid of memory. It would be recollected that a debate on this very subject took place last session, when every one of the transactions alluded to by the hon. member was passed in review, and explanations were given by the right hon. gentleman opposite (Mr. Childers) and others. With regard to Acting-Consul Gibson, of whom so much had been said, he had been removed by Lord Clarendon, by an exercise of authority which met with general approbation. (Hear, hear.) He had not the honour of Admiral Keppel's acquaintance, but he regarded him as an honour to the service; and Lieutenant Gurdon was a young officer of great gallantry and enterprise, who, of course, had little or no choice when he was called upon to act by a Consul. On the subject of the African squadron he entirely concurred with the hon. member, who had offered very good reasons why it should no longer be maintained, and he very cordially joined in the hope that the maintenance of the police of the seas, a duty which we had assumed in too many quarters, would not be thought imperative on this country by a reformed Parliament. (Hear, hear.)

Colonel SYKES thought there was good reason to complain that the hon. member for Warrington should have made a speech of which the greater portion had little relation to his motion. With regard to Lieut. Gurdon's engagement with the Chinese junks, that officer was acting upon that occasion at the request and under the direction of the Chinese mandarin; and there was no doubt that the junks were engaged in an illegal trade, that of smuggling opium.

Mr. MAGNIAC said that had it not been for the extraordinary remarks which had been made on worthless authorities he should not have taken any notice of this subject; but as negotiations were proceeding at the present time with the view of improving the relations of this country with China, he was anxious that the House should not take for granted all that had been said for the want of a specific and distinct reply. The hon. member had revived an old but unfounded calumny, and because he was not personally acquainted with the circumstances of the case he had quoted The Times' Commissioner and Admiral Keppel—neither of whom was qualified to speak on behalf of the China merchants—and on their authority had stated that war was the object of the China merchants, who wished to force their goods upon the Chinese. Although the hon. member might not be aware of it, yet it was a fact that merchants were not in the habit of sending their goods into the interior of a country when a warlike expedition was being carried on, and from an extensive experience he (Mr. Magniac) could state that a war caused merchants to lose in one year more than ten times as much as they gained during the same time of peace. China merchants were not unknown to this House, while out of it they were distinguished for the noble manner in which, during very difficult times, they had discharged their obligations, and one of them had been rewarded by Her Majesty for the noble manner in which he sustained the lives of thousands of his fellow-countrymen. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the "good behaviour" which had been alluded to by the hon. member, he (Mr. Magniac) might inform the House that, since the date of the treaty by which British merchants with passports were allowed to travel into the interior of China, not an instance of misbehaviour had occurred, nor had there been the slightest difficulty with the Chinese authorities. (Hear, hear.) That fact he had occasion to represent to the Government when he recently asked them to endeavour to obtain an extension of the privilege, to which the China merchants attached great importance, and he repeated it to the House without fear of being contradicted. This subject would probably come before the House again when what he and hon. members near him had stated would be fully sustained; but they did not desire to embarrass the Government in the negotiations which were now going on. He left the matter with confidence in the hands of the Government, and asked the House to suspend its judgment except as to those statements which he could confidently allege were made in utter ignorance of the subject. (Hear, hear.)

Sir J. PAKINGTON was happy to be able to bear his testimony to the high character which Lieutenant Gurdon had established for bravery and skill in his profession. It was a mere farce to put Chinese mandarins on board our ships in China, if their commanders were not to be influenced by their advice and wishes. For his gallant conduct in the action with the thirteen junks Lieutenant Gurdon had been promoted to the rank of commander, and the fact was sufficient to exempt him from censure on the course he had pursued. The Lords of the Admiralty, in acknowledging the despatch of Admiral Keppel, had expressed their inability to concur in that part of his despatch which declared that the fact of Chinese armed vessels firing into one of Her Majesty's ships rather than permit their papers to be examined was prima facie evidence of their piratical character. If that was so, he (Sir J. Pakington) could not help considering this a very dangerous doctrine. Were such armed vessels to be allowed to fire into ships of our navy with impunity? He could not think this was the meaning of the Admiralty, and he could not sit down without entering his protest against the view they had taken in this portion of their despatch.

Mr. READ protested against the course taken by the hon. member for Warrington in making an attack on two officers very dear to the people of Norfolk.

Mr. CHILDERS remarked that the hon. gentleman had not given him notice of his intention to refer to the transactions in China, and therefore he could not reply as fully as he should otherwise be prepared to do. He did not agree in the wisdom of certain proceedings in China, but could not join in the general censure that had been indulged in with reference to Admiral Keppel, who was a most gallant officer. If that admiral's conduct as an officer had been brought in question, it would have been his (Mr. Childer's) duty to state—though he could not endorse all his views—that he entirely approved of the course taken by him in a number of cases. With regard to another officer, he entirely endorsed what had been said of him by the right hon. baronet (Sir J. Pakington). It appeared that a China junk having been cut off, it was found to be a merchant junk, and not a pirate's vessel. There was, therefore, some reason for supposing that the other vessels that were attacked were merchant junks also. There was not certainly sufficient prima facie evidence to show that they were pirates. Lieutenant Gurdon was promoted to the rank of commander, for though he had committed an error of judgment, about his conduct as an officer there was no question whatever. He should now refer to the subject of the motion. The force on the China station, according to the proposal made by him last year, was reduced to 2,750, and he hoped still with advantage to make further reductions. In consequence of distinct proposals received by them from foreign Governments with respect to the reduction of forces in the China seas, he hoped they would be able to reduce the strength of their squadron there, but he could not now state to what extent that reduction would take place. They had a larger force on the Indian station than he had anticipated last year, in consequence of an arrangement with the Indian Government, who contributed towards the expense. The slave trade on the East Coast of Africa had for some years increased, and required a greater force to put it down, but this was not the time to go into the subject in detail. On the Australian station there was the force he mentioned in 1867, and which he had stated to the House he would keep there. In consequence of the nefarious practices in connection with the deportation of natives from the Fiji Islands, it was necessary to keep vessels on the station to assist in putting an end to that practice. With respect to the squadron on the West Coast of Africa, they had carried out a beneficial operation in connection with the Cape station. After a short service on the West Coast the squadron was sent to the neighbourhood of the Cape to get the benefit of the cooler weather. That, of course, had caused some expense, but they hoped it would have a decidedly beneficial effect on the health of the crews. The combined squadron consisted of two corvettes, five gun-vessels, three stationary ships, a small paddle-wheel steamer used for transport purposes at the Cape, a small river steamer, and a store ship. He would repeat what he had already said, that there was no squadron they were so anxious to reduce as the squadron on the West Coast of Africa. He promised they would leave no stone unturned to reduce it, and thinking that he saw his way to its gradual reduction, he hoped his hon. friend would not press his motion.

Mr. RYLANDS withdrew his motion.

THE BRITISH NAVAL OFFICERS IN CHINA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "STANDARD."

Sir,—It is with extreme surprise that I read in this morning's papers the virulent attack that Mr. Rylands made on the British navy last night in the House of Commons. As my name happened to be mentioned amongst others, I am sure you will pardon me troubling you on the present occasion.

Taking the occurrences referred to as they happened, I venture to make the following remarks. In the first place as regards Commander Domville's action. All gunboats leaving Hong Kong in search of pirates takes a Chinese Government mandarin on board, whose business it is to ascertain the haunts of the pirates, and to acquaint the commander of the gunboat when reliable information is obtained. Commander Domville had an officer of this description on board, who informed him that the fleet of junks he fell in with were pirates, and to confirm this information, the vessels in question refused to show their papers, and fired on the Algerine. I think the world in general will think that a British officer was not wrong to return their fire.

Secondly, as regards the Formosa affair. When I arrived at Taku, in the Algerine, on the 5th of November, I found things in a very serious state, as everybody will allow; and to add to our difficulties, a Chinese official of high rank, who arrived a few days after I did, and who had been sent to settle these difficulties, laughed at us at an interview that took place on the 17th, informed us that the complaints were trivial, and that he intended to return to Amoy immediately without settling them.

To show you what view an independent authority took of the situation, I will quote an extract from a despatch of General Le Gendre (United States Consul at Amoy) to the United States Minister at Peking:—

"Ever since the signing of the treaty of Tientsin the position of the consular body in Taiwan has been most difficult. The Formosan authorities had been led to believe that they could with impunity commit the greatest wrongs. Being located at a great distance from Peking and from Foochow, on an island, where the population is composed of the scum of China, rendering their administration the more difficult, they understood that a great deal must be left to their discretion by their provincial and Imperial masters, whose means of control over them, under the slow process of investigation of the Chinese, must be almost null. Had he (Mr. Gibson) longer hesitated, no one can tell what may have happened. Tsing-Ta-gin gone, probably the entire foreign settlement would have shared the fate of Dr. Maxwell's house, and all the community put to the sword."

"Clear and decisive evidence this that a man of great nerve and experience, well acquainted with the locality and the people, but living out of reach of infection from any momentary panic or popular excitement, was deliberately of opinion that the danger was imminent and the necessity great for some decisive action. It was in his opinion at all events one of those exceptional cases such as your lordship's recent instructions contemplate as sanctioning an appeal to ships of war for protection."

Lastly, as regards the case of the Cockchafer boats. The Cockchafer's boats were fired on before they used their arms, which were simply used in self-defence. I was with Commodore Jones's force when they punished the villagers for their unprovoked attack, and these unoffending innocents did not wait for us to attack them, but came out 1,500 strong from Ou-ting-fou and attacked us.

These facts speak for themselves, and I need not comment on Mr. Ryland's behaviour.—I have the honour to be, your obedient servant,

THORNAUGH GURDON, Commander R.N.

AUSTRIA.

VIENNA, March 22.

The second experimental voyage made by the Austrian Lloyd from Trieste to Bombay does not appear to have met with better success than the first. The steamer is the Sphinx, and she left Trieste on the 7th inst. with a cargo of 3,020 centners, or 150 tons (just one-eighth of what she could conveniently carry), consisting of 1,505 centners of lastres, 1,012 ditto flour, 183 ditto paper, 136 ditto cotton manufactures, 44 ditto liqueur, 33 ditto beer, 20 ditto ironmongery, 17 ditto woollen manufactures, and 23 ditto colours. It is therefore quite clear that Trieste is not likely to monopolise the trade of the East, nor is it to be expected that the Austrian Lloyd will make any more such costly experiments, having done quite enough to show their public spirit and given their fellow-countrymen an opportunity of opening up a trade with India by the new route. In the meantime the affair has entered into a new phase; for the Emperor of Austria, who all along has manifested a great interest for the success of the undertaking, and labours under the firm conviction that the Suez Canal will eventually prove to be of the utmost importance to the trade of the Empire, has just written to the Prime Ministers of Austria and Hungary requiring them to lay before him proposals for subsidising the steam company to carry on the service for some period of time, or till it becomes a paying line. It remains to be seen whether the two Parliaments of the Empire can be persuaded to vote the needed subvention in the face of their shattered finances.

RUSSIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.

If nothing can tend to mitigate the sorrows of a widow, or help to console her for the loss of her husband, it must, at all events be gratifying to Mrs. Burlingame's feelings to witness the general respect paid to the worth of the deceased head of the Chinese Embassy, and displayed almost with ostentation in the very highest quarters. On the very day of his death the Empress wrote an autograph letter to the disconsolate widow, full of sympathy and condolence on her irreparable loss, and, in the name of the whole Imperial family, expressing the earnest hope that the bitter bereavement would not create in her mind any feelings of unkindness or animosity towards Russia, but rather those of pride and satisfaction at the hearty reception he had met with at Court and in the highest circles of social life at the Russian metropolis. On the day after the funeral the Emperor paid a visit in person to the house of mourning, and spoke words of sympathy and consolation to the widow and her sons in their affliction. His Majesty had expressed his intention of attending the funeral, but was prevented from doing so, as there was no precedent for such a display of honour and condescension on the demise of other Ambassadors accredited with him by foreign potentates as their diplomatic representatives. Prince Gortschakoff, the Chancellor of the Empire, was prevented by illness from attending the funeral, but was represented at the ceremony by his adjunct, Herr von Westmann. The ends of the pall were borne by the Ambassadors of England and France, the United States Minister, the Director of the Asiatic Department in the Foreign-office, the Russian Ambassador for Peking, General Vlangeli, the Consul of the United States, and the Secretary of the Chinese Embassy. A large number of general officers, Imperial aides-de-camp, and others belonging to the Emperor's suite, as well as many of the Ministers and high dignitaries of the State, performed the last honours to the deceased. The only member of the Corps Diplomatique absent on the occasion was the Prince Reuss, Ambassador of the North German Confederation, who was prevented from attending by a painful illness that had confined him to his bed for ten days previously, but who is now slowly recovering. The Russian Chargé d'Affaires at Peking (in the absence of the Ambassador, who, as above stated, is still here) and the Minister at Washington received instructions by telegraph to express to the Courts where they are accredited the sorrow felt by the Emperor and the Russian Government at the premature death of the distinguished diplomatist. The son of the deceased has written a letter to the Emperor, expressing his gratitude and that of his widowed mother for the numerous proofs of sympathy and attention they have received from all sides. It is understood here that Mrs. Burlingame and her sons will stay some time in Germany before they return to America.

The Russian official organ contains some interesting particulars of the last fair at Nijni-Novgorod, from which it appears that the trade of that place, which may be considered as the chief emporium of the inland traffic of the country, has much increased by the great facilities of transit afforded by the opening and extension of the railway system. The total value of the goods last year brought to the fair amounted to 144 millions of silver roubles, being eighteen millions more than in the previous year, whilst the total circulation was 145 millions, against 127 millions in 1868. Notwithstanding this apparent prosperity, the result of the fair is described as being by no means brilliant. The linen manufactures were sold without realising a profit, and the Kiachta tea produced a positive loss. The competition of the so-called Canton tea (meaning that imported by sea) has of late given such a blow to the overland trade that it will probably never recover from its effects. It is only the very finest descriptions of high-priced teas that are in demand and leave a profit, whilst the inferior sorts are neglected and unsaleable, even at a heavy loss. The tea sold at the last fair produced only 2,500,000 roubles. But the concourse of Asiatics regularly attending the fair to make purchases is on the increase, especially those from Persia, Bokhara, and Western China; so that the general appearance of the fair, from the assortment of numerous quaint and strange costumes, and the Babel of languages and dialects spoken, is unique in the extreme.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, March 26.

The Second Chamber of the States General took some days rest after passing the Java Agrarian Bill. The rhetorical forces of the members seemed quite exhausted, and it was perceptible that there was not the least disposition to deal at once with the other pending questions. The principal matter for discussion by the Lords is the Agrarian Bill, of which the examination in the sections will only last a few days, so that the debate can be opened early next week. The Opposition papers advise the members to defer the debate till such time as the Lower House will have finished with the Bill concerning the sugar culture in Java. This plan was adopted by these papers so soon as it became known that the Second Chamber would not deal with the Sugar Bill before the fate of the Agrarian Law was settled by the Upper House. If, however, the First Chamber should adhere to this proposition of the Opposition journals, it then becomes of the greatest urgency that the Second Chamber should deal at once with the Sugar Bill. Of course the Opposition have good reasons for this course; the fate of the Sugar Bill is not at all certain; two events being probable—first, that the Bill will be amended in such a way as to entirely change its character, or that it will be outvoted. It seems quite impossible that it can pass in the form it was laid before the members. The Opposition is of opinion that either events would have some influence upon the vote of the First Chamber as regards the Agrarian Law. I need scarcely add that the Opposition feels itself so feeble that it has to have recourse to underhand means; but I am of opinion that their efforts will not be crowned with success; indeed, it is most reasonable that the Second Chamber, before dealing with the Sugar Bill, should wish to know the fate of the Agrarian Bill. However, I have no doubt that it will be carried by the Lords with a very short delay, convinced as they must be that the first step must be taken to bring Java under a better rule. The last sittings of the Second Chamber were not very important. The Bill of the Minister of Justice, regarding the punishment of captains who designedly destroy their vessels, was rejected by the proposition of an amendment, which gave a different character to the Bill. It must now be laid before the members in another form.

In to-day's sitting of the Second Chamber a curious incident occurred on the occasion of a Bill being laid before the members to grant a credit above the East India Budget for 1869. It transpired that in the first month of last year the Governor-General of Java granted to the East India Railway Company a sum amounting to f.320,000, in order to prevent the company being obliged to suspend operations, which, had the money not been granted, would have been inevitable. The sum lent to the company was returned in July. A section of the Opposition violently attacked the Governor-General for having done this, especially Mr. Van Sypensteyn, who accused Mr. Myer of favouritism, nepotism, &c. This speech was seconded by Mr. Nierstrasz, who was of opinion that, should the measure then under discussion be carried, this and following Governors-General would have plein pouvoir to lend the money of the State to any private person or company they might choose. The act of Mr. Myer was defended by Mr. Fransen van de Putte, and by the Minister of the Colonial Department, who stated that the Governor-General had acted quite right, because the State would have been obliged to continue the railway works had the company been obliged to stop. As a result, the Bill was carried by 37 against 20 votes. Messrs. van Sypensteyn and Nierstrasz asked at the close of the sitting whether, if it should be found necessary, the State would grant any further aid to the East Indian Railway Company. The Minister declined to answer so foolish a question.

The Union in Twenthe, for the promotion of industry and commerce, has established a company for extending our trade in the Levant. Prince Henry has become both an important shareholder in, and the protector of, the scheme. That the industry of our "Dutch Manchester" is of great importance is proved by the fact that last year no less than 421,865 pieces cotton goods were exported to East India, against 498,000 pieces in the preceding year.

His Majesty has approved the appointment of Mr. Arnold Jacob as Vice-Consul for Sweden and Norway at Samarang.

In our commercial circles great fears are entertained that the English vessel County of Lanark, with a rich cargo from Java to Holland, is lost; 170 days have already elapsed since the vessel sailed from Java. The losses which our insurance companies have experienced this year are very heavy, and it is said that the premiums for foreign vessels, conveying produce from the East to our harbours, will be raised.

Mr. Ruyssenaers, Consul-General of the Netherlands at Alexandria, has had conferred upon him the Grand Cross of the Order of the Crown of Oaks; and Mr. Anslyn, Vice-Consul at the same place, the Cross of Officer of that Order.

My Trip to the Suez Canal and Home Again, is the title of an anonymous pamphlet just published by Messrs. Hamilton, Adams, and Co, Paternoster-row, and contains probably the most readable account of the Canal that has yet appeared, and is not only amusing but full of information. There are many indications that the writer is familiar with China.

We have received the San Francisco Directory for 1870. It is a bulky volume of nearly a thousand pages, containing (besides the commercial sheet, and general directories usually embodied in such publications) a description of the City of San Francisco, and much varied information of a nature useful to all concerned in the Pacific trade.

CHINESE CONSULS.

A LARGE portion of the space in our last number was devoted to the deputation of owners of property in Hong Kong, who waited on the Colonial Secretary to explain their objections to that clause in Sir R. ALCOCK'S New Convention whereby the Chinese Government would be empowered to establish a Chinese Consul in Hong Kong. The arguments of the speakers were unanswerable—so Lord GRANVILLE very wisely refrained from attempting to answer them; but that Her Majesty's Government will have to act on them there is little doubt. Their position is so clearly untenable, that the communications which his Lordship said were taking place between the Colonial and Foreign-offices cannot be much more than a matter of form, and the sooner the farce is played out, and this unfortunate attempt at a compromise fairly thrown overboard, the better. An attempt to establish a Chinese Consulate in the Straits would be fraught with evils almost, if not quite as disastrous as at Hong Kong, and we are therefore glad to learn that a letter has been received from Lord GRANVILLE by the Honorary Secretary of the Straits Settlements Association, intimating that it is not in contemplation to authorise the establishment of a Chinese Consulate in the Straits, and that the resolution on the subject lately passed by the Association has been transmitted to the Foreign-office for the consideration of the Earl of CLARENDON. It is satisfactory to learn that no such appointment as that of a Chinese Consul in Singapore or Penang is contemplated. So far so good, and we can readily believe that the Government really never intended to vest such powers in the hands of Chinese officials, as might be claimed under Article II. of the Supplementary Convention. The "shut your eyes and open your mouth" game which Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK has been amusing himself with has ended by his Government finding themselves with a larger mouthful than even they are inclined to swallow. He has proposed to them a re-arrangement of duties manifestly unjust to his own countrymen, and besides this he has allowed himself to abet the Chinese Government in the tyrannical and cruel espionage which they would fain be allowed to exert over their subjects in British possessions. The Straits Association wisely declined to wait till the steed was stolen before locking the stable door, and it is to be hoped that the prompt measures they have taken, followed as they were by the fuller and more detailed representations from the colonists of Hong Kong, may lead the Government to retire decisively from the false position into which their too industrious representative has led them.

The discussions which have taken place raise again the question so often before considered, viz.—On what principle are we to deal with barbarous and semi-barbarous nations? Without recalling all that has been written on the subject, one point comes out clearly from amid the controversy excited by Sir R. ALCOCK'S ill judged proceedings. To attempt diplomatic relationships with such people on terms of perfect equality is a simple absurdity. Objection has been now taken to our adopting this system with the Chinese, on the ground that it will lead to inevitable complications; but the strongest argument against it may be gathered from past experience. No instance can be brought forward in which we have proposed to ourselves to deal with uncivilised nations on terms of strict equality where we have not had, sooner or later, to put ourselves right by the waste of money and the shedding of blood. While the governing class in China cherish and openly avow towards us the feelings evidenced for the thousandth time in Consul SWINHOE'S report, all our attempts to negotiate with them after the ordinary usage of European diplomatists will only expose us to insult, and can terminate in nothing but war. The Government of China is past redemption; no earthly power can save a thing so weak, false, and cruel, from ultimate subversion; and though meantime we must recognise it as a de facto institution, it is not for us to help it to forge chains for its subjects who in English colonies are as yet beyond its reach. Our efforts should be directed, not to propping up a rotten dynasty, but to disseminating among the Chinese people who are friendly to us, the leaven of Western civilisation, a purer morality, and the highest truths.

THE DEBATE ON THE CHINA SQUADRON.

THERE are some very eccentric gentlemen in the Reformed House of Commons, and in many cases the liveliness they impart to the debates is rather advantageous than otherwise. The eccentricities of genius are always pardonable, but then genius is so very rare! The mirth-provoking eccentricities of Mr. BERNAL OSBORNE, again, are not only pardonable but often delightful; while the gloomy, suspicious forebodings of Mr. NEWDEGATE and Mr. WHALLEY, eccentric as they are, cannot be said to exert any injurious influence, and command a certain amount of respect. But there is yet another sort of eccentricity, that has of late been largely exhibited in the House of Commons, of which we cannot even say this; indeed, so far from inspiring respect, it is rather calculated to provoke a feeling of irritation, not unmixed with contempt. Its outward and visible sign is an affectation of omniscience. We all admire a man who, to a wide range of experience adds a sound matured judgment and the faculty of deep thought. The opinions of such a man, on almost every subject, are valuable; but on the other hand, the possessor of these high qualifications is generally slow to pronounce judgment on any subject he has not thoroughly mastered. Such considerations have little weight with the class of would-be politicians alluded to above. "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." One takes a flying trip round the world, and on the strength of the experience thus gained (which would have been just about as valuable could he have travelled by balloon or submarine telegraph) sets himself up as an authority on foreign, as well as home, affairs of every imaginable variety. Literature, art, science, religion, commerce, education, politics—he is, or pretends to be, master of them all. He cannot content himself—as many wiser and better men have done—with striving for eminence in any one path, but insists on playing a prominent part in every movement of the day. He is irrepressible, ubiquitous, and (as we have said) would be thought omniscient. Many people regard him as an officious, meddling busybody. Never mind his name; for a wonder, he took no part in the debate on China affairs recently provoked by another M.P. of very similar propensities—Mr. RYLANDS. This last-named gentleman bids fair to become a formidable rival to the versatile and aspiring young baronet, who has travelled round the world and written a big book. He questions Ministers on every imaginable subject, apropos of anything—or nothing. He has somehow got himself nominated to serve on the Select Committee on the Consular and Diplomatic Services, at whose sittings he disports himself in the most remarkable manner—examining such men as Lord MALMESBURY and Mr. HAMMOND very much in the style in which an Old Bailey practitioner would deal with reluctant witnesses in a criminal case. But his last achievement is the most striking of all. Having given notice to call the attention of the House of Commons to the present distribution of the Navy, and having entirely deceived members by heading his notice with the words, "The African Squadron," he proceeded, with more than asinine stupidity, to deliver an oration on the Algerine's operations last year in Formosa, and thus dragged an unprepared and unwilling House into a debate on China affairs.

Digitized by Google

Mr. RYLANDS liberally avails himself of two powerful aids to a weak cause—the use of very strong language, and an entire disregard of truth; so he experienced no difficulty in making out a strong case. Englishmen in China, are "detestable," being only "representatives of brute force." Their conduct towards the Chine is in all cases "disgraceful." The gunboat operations at Am-ping and elsewhere were "unjustifiable atrocities" on the "poor islanders," and specimens of "brutal warfare." Admiral KEPPEL, Colonel GIBSON, Lieutenants DOMVILLE and GURDON come in for unmeasured abuse; and Mr. RYLANDS wound up a furious diatribe against English merchants in China by recommending the withdrawal of our Consuls and naval forces. He also formally moved that the African Squadron be reduced, but his arguments on that subject need not be noticed here. His speech elicited from both sides of the House a protest against being launched into a China debate without due notice. Mr. LIDDELL, Col. SYKES, Mr. READ, and Sir J. PAKINGTON warmly defended the naval officers assailed by Mr. RYLANDS, though we are sorry to note that not one of them had a word to say for Consul GIBSON, whose life was, so to speak, crushed out by the persecution he was subjected to, and the unmerited censure heaped upon him. Mr. MAGNIAC boldly stigmatised Mr. RYLAND'S statements as "unfounded calumnies," and warned the House not to place confidence in assertions "made in utter ignorance of the subject." Had the hon. gentleman used even stronger terms of reprobation we would have cordially endorsed them. Mr. CHILDERS wound up the debate with a weak speech—half of excuse, half of justification—and Mr. RYLANDS withdrew his motion. The matter, however, should not be allowed to rest here. The state of public business is certainly not very encouraging at present, but surely Irish measures should not be allowed to absorb a whole session, to the entire exclusion of a subject so important as the foreign relations of Great Britain. We strongly urge those members who are interested in the matter to insist on a full discussion of China affairs on the earliest possible opportunity.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

WE continue to receive somewhat conflicting accounts as to the present condition of the Canal. The Hooghly, which recently passed through with the French mail, drew only eighteen feet, and a correspondent of one of our contemporaries writes that she broke one of her screw blades in passing through the Canal by striking it against a rock a little to the south of the Lake Ballah, where the bed of the Canal is said to traverse a sheet of rock. Interested parties of course deny the existence of this impediment, but an experienced naval commander states that he has seen it. On the other hand, it is asserted that the steamer Danube, which has arrived at Liverpool from Bombay with 4,000 bales of cotton, passed through the Canal in sixteen hours, and found twenty feet of water throughout. The truth is, probably, that in the shallowest portions of the Canal there is a narrow channel of this depth in the middle, but it is not wide enough for two vessels to pass one another. The Canal might probably be maintained in its present state at a comparatively low expenditure; but to widen the central channel, so that the least deviation from it would not (as at present) put a ship aground, to line those portions of the banks that suffer by the wash from passing steamers, and in short to carry out all the improvements needed to make the channel available for the free passage of a large steam traffic, will require a further outlay of some millions.

WE hear that Mr. EDWARD MOREL, who has been appointed engineer of the Government railway in Japan, reached Galle, on his way to Yokohama, on the 22nd February. Mr. MOREL has been engaged in the construction of two lines of railway in South Australia. We believe Mr. EDWIN CLARK, C.E., will have the appointment of consulting engineer to the Japanese State railways. The gauge is to be three feet six inches. Mr. LAY, who is now daily expected in this country, is to be congratulated on the success that has attended his effort to establish railways in Japan. Will he try next to bring the Chinese Government to a sense of the advantages of rapid locomotion? Should he attempt this, and succeed, his name will deserve a high place in the list of pioneers of civilisation.

PREPARATION OF TEA IN CHINA AND JAPAN.

(FROM OUR PARIS CORRESPONDENT.)

There have always been queer notions afloat respecting the preparation of tea, and certain recent events are not calculated to improve the general stock of information; I think, therefore, that it will not be amiss to make a few quotations from an author who certainly holds an entirely independent position—M. Champion, who, with M. Sanislas Julien, produced the highly interesting work, noticed at the time of its appearance in our columns, upon the Ancient and Modern Industries of China. M. Champion studied the growing of tea in the province of Che-kiang, visited several factories both in China and Japan, and obtained trustworthy information in other ways, while his education as a chemist would have prepared him to seize upon and expose any noxious processes or adulterations. Many of our readers will, we think, endorse at once what M. Champion says on the subject, while those who have not studied it may safely accept what he says as trustworthy. The tea plants are of different varieties; some never exceed one foot in height, while others commonly attain to two and a-half or even three feet. The gathering of the leaves commences about the end of April and continues for four months, but the first leaves, young, tender and curled up, are of much greater value than the rest, while those plucked last, which have attained their full development yield a bitter infusion with scarcely any perfume. The seeds of the tea plant supply oil, which is highly esteemed and rather costly; the Chinese say that it possesses the peculiar property of never turning rancid. M Champion classes tea under three principal heads—1. Green teas prepared by the Chinese and Japanese for their own use. 2 Green teas prepared for exportation. 3. Black teas of various qualities.

Nothing can be more simple than the preparation of the green tea used in China; the leaves are placed directly they are plucked in very thin cast-iron basins, a large number of which are set in masonry and heated by means of a kind of dry wood which gives no smoke. M. Champion found the temperature in the factories he visited to be between 140 deg. and rather less than 160 deg. Fah. When the leaves begin to curl up they are stirred about by hand until they are sufficiently dried, and the operation is finished. When cool the tea is packed either in chests or in bamboo baskets lined with dried leaves, and is ready for sale. Sometimes, however, it is passed through sieves of various degrees of fineness, and thus different qualities are produced. Europeans find this kind of tea poor in flavour, but the Chinese and Japanese prefer it to all others. In certain districts oderiferous leaves or petals, such as those of the rose and jasmine, are mixed with the tea, which then sells at high prices. M. Champion witnessed the manufacture of green tea for exportation both in China and Japan. The leaves are first dried either on mats exposed to the sun or in cast-iron basins slightly heated, the various qualities being carefully ascertained by tasters, who exhibit great ability in ascertaining the market values of the different samples. A certain quantity of each is placed in small tea pots and allowed to draw for five or six minutes, the tasters then take a mouthful of each sample in rotation and reject it, as in the tasting of wine. The next operation is to separate the leaves according to size colour, and general appearance; this is done by women, of whom two or even three hundred are employed in large factories. They use chop-sticks for the purpose, and sort the tea with marvellous dexterity, clearing it of impurities and of small bits of wood, which are frequently mixed with the leaves. Each woman has four or five wooden bowls before her, into which the different qualities of leaves are sorted. These women earn from sixpence to eightpence a day. The leaves after being sorted are, in Japan, heated in thin metal basins, of which copper forms the principal element; these basins frequently wear into holes, but workmen attached to the factories mend them with solder very quickly, so that an accident of the kind causes little interruption; in China it appears all the basins used are of cast iron. Two or three hundred furnaces united together with masonry, and a large number of workmen, are usually employed in these factories. The basins are first heated, and the leaves only put in when the proper temperature has been reached; during the heating the workmen roll the leaves with their hands, in order that the tea may occupy as little space as possible in packing. According to the destination of the tea, it is mixed with a certain quantity of indigo, gypsum, or slacked lime reduced to an impalpable powder, sometimes small quantities of each of these substances are mixed and applied together; they are introduced into the basins at the commencement of the heating, or as soon as the heat causes a slight moisture to appear upon the surface of the leaves, to which they adhere and give the peculiar tint which characterises green tea. Various kinds of indigo of lighter and darker shades of colour are employed, and in certain factories a colouring matter called "Prussian blue" is substituted; but M. Champion was unable to discover, and does not believe, that any noxious substances are made use of, and all his endeavours failed to detect the use of any salts of copper, or the employment of sheets of copper for the drying of the leaves. The basins in which the leaves are heated become covered with a black coating, which can only be removed by means of a knife; this is formed by the dirt of the tea, mixed with a little oil from seeds which have not been separated. It is employed as a medicine by the Chinese.

It will be seen that the ordinary mode of preparing tea requires much time, great care, and attention, and is consequently expensive. Messrs. Glover and Co., of Nagasaki, have been engaged for some time in establishing a better or cheaper mode of preparation; in their factory the series of basins is replaced by a large heating pan of a semi-cylindrical form, within which an archimedian screw revolves continually; the pan has double sides, and is heated by steam. With this apparatus the operation is continuous, the leaves are introduced at one end of the pan, the screw forces them onward and presses them against the surface of the pan, and by the time they arrive at the opposite end they are sufficiently prepared and fall into baskets, in which they are left to cool; the rate of movement of the screw is regulated according to the nature or quality of the tea. Gypsum, lime or indigo is thrown into the pan, as in the native process. Messrs. Glover and Co. send the tea prepared by them to the United States, and it is said to be in no way inferior to that prepared by hand.

The difference between green and black tea is said to be simply this—the former is merely subjected to a greater or less degree of heat sufficient to dry it; while the latter undergoes a kind of fermentation which develops the aroma, and, at the same time, causes it to assume its characteristic black or brownish colour; the same kind of leaves will produce either black or green tea, but in some provinces the Chinese choose special kinds for each. For black tea the leaves are purchased of the growers, after having been partially dried in the sun, and are then enclosed in covered tin boxes; in this condition the moisture remaining in the leaves soon causes fermentation, especially in hot weather, which is chosen for the operation. After remaining from ten to fifteen days in the boxes, the leaves are fired in the same way as for green tea. From the above statement we may, perhaps, derive that lime or plaster is used in the preparation of green tea for exportation as a preventive against fermentation by absorbing the moisture driven to the surface by heat; and that the indigo is added to cover the white powder and give the tea a good face. It may also be that the fermentation of black tea destroys the principle which in green teas affects the nerves of most people in a marked manner. It is said that the Japanese did not understand the method of preparing black tea until lately, but that it soon grew popular, and is now preferred by some connoisseurs to green.

Brick tea is produced in the province of Hu-kwang, almost exclusively for the Tartars of the North and Siberia; it is formed of the dust and other refuse of the tea factories, compressed into moulds from eight to twelve inches long, and about half-an-inch deep. It possesses no good quality but that of occupying little space. When used the necessary quantity is scraped off the brick with a knife. Sometimes good green tea is also made up into bricks, but this seems rare. I suppose that the delicious tea lately imported into England pretty closely resembles the raw material of brick tea—or, in other words, is the sweepings of the factories; and it is to be hoped the exposure will warn tea drinkers against tea which costs next to nothing and is worth less.

A committee has been formed in Paris for the protection of French interests in the East, a subject upon which M. Daru, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, is just now particularly engaged. The committee has determined to publish a journal, which it is said will appear in a few days, under the title of France in the East. We shall look for this new contemporary with interest, and hope it may aid us in combating what we regard as fatal concessions to an effete policy.

LAYING OF THE BRITISH-INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH CABLE FROM BOMBAY TO ADEN.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT WITH THE EXPEDITION.)

The Great Eastern left Portland on the afternoon of the 6th Nov. last, drawing on an even keel about 34 ft. 6 in. Her approximate load was as follows:—Cable, 5,633 tons; water in cable tanks, 1,880 tons; machinery, tanks, &c., 1,000 tons; coals, 12,000 tons; ship's stores, &c., 2,000 tons; total, 22,513 tons. Notwithstanding the great weight and her immersion, the trip from Portland to Bombay occupied but eighty-two days, from which may be deducted thirteen days spent in coaling at St. Vincent and the Cape, leaving only sixty-nine steaming days. She was, however, favoured with fine weather the whole of the time, not having experienced anything worthy of the name of a gale of wind. Her consumption of coal between England and Bombay was about 14,000 tons, or at the rate of about 200 tons per diem under steam.

The Great Eastern lay in the harbour of Bombay for seventeen days, taking on board 8,000 tons of coal, during which time she was open to the public on two days on the payment of two rupees per head, it having been stated that the money received in that way would be be divided amongst the well-conducted portion of the crew on their return to England. About 2,600 persons availed themselves of this privilege, but probably twice as many more visited the ship on other days. On the 7th Feb. the commencement was made in laying the line, for on that day the underground wire required to connect the end of the cable to be landed near the Cotton-green at Colaba with the office in Rampart-row, was placed in its trench some 1,578 yards in length and three in depth. This cable was landed under the superintendence of the telegraph construction staff, and was placed in the trench between the hours of 5 P.M. and 4 A.M. the next morning, the tropical sun therefore had no chance of injuring the insulation of this portion of the work. Soon after the Great Eastern arrived the Chiltern came alongside, and received some five miles of the heavy Bombay shore end, weighing nearly fourteen tons per mile. This five miles of cable was successfully laid, the Government rendering every facility by placing at the disposal of the contractors a steam tug and a large barge, and many other conveniences which their dockyard afforded.

The place selected for the landing of the shore end was in Back Bay, fortunately on a sandy and muddy bottom, protected on both sides by reefs of rocks. Captain Cruickshank, the agent of the Telegraph Construction Company, who was the first of the expedition to arrive at Bombay, made a most careful selection of this locality, in which he was aided by local advice; in order that there should be no mistake the soft bottom was actually staked out. This selection afterwards met with the entire approval of the engineer to the British-Indian Submarine Telegraph Company on his arrival at Bombay.

The Chiltern proceeded out of the harbour, and dropped anchor about 1½ miles to the south of Malabar Point. The Government barge was soon placed under her stern, and about 2½ miles of cable, weighing in all about thirty-five tons, were coiled on board. The tug steamer, directed by Captain Halpin, of the Great Eastern, then took charge of the barge, and guided her over her tortuous course, Mr. London, the contractors' engineer, directing the paying out of the cable. It was 3 P.M. before the end was taken on shore and connected with the instruments in the cable-house, when the ceremony of wetting the end of the cable with champagne was most religiously performed by all engaged in the work, together with some of their friends who were present. The inhabitants of Bombay showed the extreme interest they take in the success of the undertaking by being represented on this occasion by a native cotton broker, whose principal costume consisted of a large pink turban. This gentleman was evidently of an inquiring turn of mind, as he nearly sent Mr. Laws, the company's electrician, into a fit by touching the end of the cable while it was being tested from the ship. The effect of this proceeding would not only be to give the illustrious stranger a mild shock, but, for the moment, would leave those on board the Chiltern under the impression that virtue had gone out of the cable through a fault instead of through the native's swarthy body. The tests of the cable were soon pronounced to be satisfactory, when the Chiltern proceeded to sea, and paid out the remainder of the length on board, carefully buoying and marking the end; and thus the first real commencement was made in the laying of the British-Indian Cable, neither guns, flags, nor cheers from the Bombay inhabitants, having performed any part in doing honour to the occasion.

On the 11th Feb. Captain Halpin gave a dejeuner on board the Great Eastern to about 150 of the elite of Bombay, and there is every reason to believe that the five senses of the invités were gratified to the utmost extent, for every one seemed highly delighted at the treat that had been given them. The toasts were of the usual loyal and business character, and the enterprising contractors on that, as on former similar occasions, received their due amount of laudation for their well-earned energy and enterprise. Long may they live and prosper, to enjoy the laurels they gain for themselves year by year, and may many associations such as the British-Indian Telegraph Company spring into existence to assist in raising capital, and thereby bring grist to the Telegraph Construction Company's mill!

Perhaps never on any former and similar occasion was the electric thread deposited in its final resting place at the bottom of a deep sea with such success, ease, and freedom from casualty. This will be seen from the brief description of the actual process of laying between Bombay and Aden. At 8.30 A.M. on the 14th three guns fired in quick succession from the Great Eastern announced to the apathetic population of Bombay that steam was up, and the anchors off the ground, and, that in fact, she was under way, accompanied by the Chiltern, to take up her position off Malabar Point, close to the buoy at the end of the five miles of shoal end already laid. As she approached, a very pretty steam yacht, conveying the Governor and his party, was observed leaving Malabar Point, and about noon his Excellency, with his family and suite came on board the Great Eastern, under the usual salute of seventeen guns. The Chiltern lost no time in taking up the buoy and the end of the submerged cable, and in the presence of his Excellency and party the end of the Great Eastern's cable was passed through the paying-out machinery on board, and hauled on to the deck of the Chiltern, about 300 yards off, the depth of water at that spot being rather too little for the big ship. After tiffin and a speech from the Governor, in which he wished hearty success to the British-Indian undertaking, Sir Seymour Fitzgerald and many of his party accompanied Captain Halpin and the principal engineers of the expedition on board the Chiltern, and witnessed the all-important operation of making a good electrical and mechanical splice in one of the heaviest class of shoal ends made. The party then returned on board the Great Eastern. At five P.M., after the splice had been lowered into the water from the Chiltern, the engines of the big ship began to turn, and paying out was actually commenced, the Governor of Bombay signifiying the same to his Excellency the Viceroy by a telegram from the ship. The Governor and his party remained on board to witness this operation for over half an hour, when they repaired on board the steam yacht, but no sooner were they safely on her deck than the yacht, which had naturally dropped astern of the Great Eastern, put on full speed, and about six P.M. came alongside, when the crew and party on board gave us hearty parting cheers, which were returned in a similar manner from the Great Eastern. Thus we parted company, and went on our way rejoicing, feeling confident that, with God's blessing, we should find ourselves at Aden in about fifteen days, with the cable safely laid behind us. The tests proved to the satisfaction of the company's engineer and contractor's electrician that a better or healthier specimen of a cable had probably never been placed on board ship; no trace of weakness nor unsoundness could be discovered by the most delicate tests.

The Chiltern now took up her permanent position on the starboard quarter of the Great Eastern, at a short distance astern. Before sundown every one on board had shaken well into their places, and paying out went on with the regularity of clock work; but as the sun was succeeded by nearly a full moon, there was ample light on board all night to facilitate the operations. Out of the 2,374 miles on board about 920 miles were permanently joined up as a convenient length of coiled cable to test and speak through. No embarrassment as to speaking (which often happens in a coiled cable) was experienced, the shore receiving messages from ship and ship from shore most readily without any repetition. At 6.30 P.M. the splice between the shore end and the intermediate cable, No. 1 (the latter weighing over 6½ tons per mile) passed overboard in 10 fathoms of water about 10 miles from the landing place, and the paying out of this cable continued all night until 11.30 A.M. (ship's time) the following day, when 86 miles of this type of cable had been paid out, in addition to the ten miles of heavy shore end. We now, in 50 fathoms of water, changed to another type of cable, viz., the intermediate No. 2., weighing, per mile, about 3½ tons. At noon of the 15th the ship's position was 18° 35′ 30″ N. lat. and 71° 11′ 15″ E. lon., about ninety-six miles of distance from the cable-house and with 98.44 miles of cable paid out; giving as near as possible three per cent. of slack from the commencement. In the last nineteen hours the Great Eastern's load has been lightened by about 800 tons, and as all this had come out of the after hold, she was now getting into better trim, she having drawn thirty-five feet aft before starting. About 8 P.M. we got to the end of No. 2 intermediate cable, when we were well off the Bombay bank, in 300 fathoms, when the paying out of the deep sea cable commenced, which is destined to reach to about thirty miles from Aden.

On the 16th everything continued smooth and prosperous. At noon we were in lat. 18° 12′ 31″ and lon. 69° 8′ 0″—215 miles from shore, with 229 miles of cable paid out, giving about 6.17 per cent. of slack from commencement and 8.62 per cent. during the last twenty-four hours, the water having deepened from fifty to 1,890 fathoms. The steepest gradient down which the cable was laid during the last twenty-four hours was one in sixteen from the 100-fathom line on the edge of the Bombay bank for a distance of about twelve miles; the following twenty miles the sea deepened at the average rate of one in sixty-three, and for the following thirty miles at the rate of one in forty-three, the first gradient given representing a very steep hill on any country road. Over these steep gradients there was no indicated strain on the dynamometer, so that the retarding force must have been under seven cwt., and consequently it may be presumed plenty of slack cable ran out to take the inequalities of the bottom. The average speed of ship to noon to-day was 4.97 miles per hour, and the cable paid out averaged 5.28 miles per hour from the commencement.

On the 17th the weather remained as from the beginning, perfect; and there was positively nothing to report of interest, further than the continued uninterrupted progress of the ship and cable. At noon the ship was 327 miles from shore, and the cable paid out was 360, giving an average rate for ship of 4.85 miles per hour and 5.33 for cable, the total slack being equal to 9.77 per cent.

On the 18th, at noon, the ship was 467 miles en route, and the cable paid out 513 miles; the average speed per hour being respectively 5.73 and 6.36 miles. With regard to the tests, the submerged cable in circuit is now longer than the portion in the ship, and the insulation therefore shows marked improvement, having risen 72 per cent.; due not only to the coldness of the water at the bottom of the sea, but also to the great pressure due to depth.

On the 19th, a little before two A.M. in the morning, the ship presented a more animated appearance; all on board were on the alert, and hanging lamps illuminated the whole length of the ship, in anticipation of a change of hold from the after to the fore tank. The trough through which the cable runs on its way from the fore part of the ship to the paying-out machine aft is about 600 feet long, and it is all important that no hindrance to the free exit of the cable should exist, or that the cable should get kinked as the last bight comes up from the hold. It was very remarkable how all this was performed without fuss or flurry of any kind—every man was in his place, and knew his work so well, that almost complete silence was maintained, and few orders given. More weights are, however, added to the brakes, levers fixed, and men are placed at the stoppers between the dynamometer and the stern sheave—not with a view to bring any undue strain upon the cable, but simply to have full control over it, so as to stop it dead should the necessity arise. An ingenious mechanical arrangement of a spoked wheel (similar to a steering wheel) places it in the power of one man to completely control the strain on the cable, between certain limits. At 1.45 A.M. a voice from the hold exclaims, "Ten turns left in hold!" whereupon the order is given by Captain Halpin to stop the paddles; eight minutes after the fifth turn is announced, and the order given to stop the screw engines. A perceptible change is soon seen in the speed of the cable going out, for as the cable astern assumes a more perpendicular position the brakes are gradually tightened until at the last turn in the hold paying out is eased down almost to a stand-still—by reversing the screw engines the under portion of the cable is carefully and quickly passed through the rings of the crinoline—the foreman's voice in the hold is heard ordering the crinoline to be raised; the bight is then carefully passed up from hand to hand, and the next moment the paying-out has commenced all along the 600-foot trough from the fore hold, the entire operation of change of hold only occupying fifteen minutes from the time the paddles were stopped. Paying-out is now gradually increased in speed, first by the easing of the brakes, and five minutes after by the screw engines. "Easy a-head!" followed soon after by a similar order to the paddle engines. In less than an hour after this all has settled down as before, and paying-out proceeds at the usual speed. 596 miles of cable, weighing 1,700 tons, has up to this time been discharged out of the hold; and when to this is added 400 tons of coal consumed, and about 300 tons of water let out of cable tanks, it will be seen that the ship has been lightened about 2,400 tons—principally aft—bringing her up at the stern about four feet; but to counteract this in a measure some 500 tons of water is let into the ship astern, between her two skins—a compensating arrangement that no other vessel afloat admits of.

The distance from the hold to the paying-out machinery is now so great that three signal-men are placed along the trough with green and red flags in the day and lights at night to signal any foul flake or other obstruction that may occur, and to warn the men at the paying-out machine either to raise the jockey pulleys to allow mill marks or other inequalities to pass with ease, or to further retard or facilitate the paying-out of the cable by regulating the brakes accordingly. The moon, up to this time, has kindly facilitated our operations, but is now perceptibly on the wane, and only appearing at early morning; but we look forward to a reappearance of this useful luminary when the Red Sea operations commence. The 323 miles of main cable in the fore hold continued to run out with uninterrupted success, at a rate of 5¼ to 7 knots an hour, until about 6.45 on the morning of the 21st of February, when a change of hold to the main tank took place. This work was as well and skilfully performed as the change previously described. The change from fore to aft is a more critical operation, as the bight of the cable has to be followed down all along the deck, and passes through the hands of a double chain of men, until it arrives at the paying-out machine, when it gradually gets straightened, and at the same time is placed comfortably in the conducting trough.

The fore part of the ship has now been lightened by about 600 tons of cable, and 350 tons of coal and water, making a total discharge of cargo of 3,350 tons, and thereby improving the trim of the ship. We have now, however, passed over some 825 miles of distance, leaving but 335 to complete; the splice between these two holds is, therefore, situated about the halfway house, at a depth of 2,000 fathoms of water, according to the charts. Fortunately no exciting incidents worth recording have so far occurred during the paying out of this cable, but the anniversary of the captain's birthday having occurred yesterday, the event was duly celebrated by an after-dinner speech of Mr. J. C. Parkinson, and warmly responded to by all the party. On this night, at nine o'clock, we were rather astonished and somewhat alarmed to see the Chiltern a short way astern of us, treating us to a display of blue lights and rockets. It being dark, the flash light signals had to be called into requisition, consisting of a bright and a red light used on the principle of the telegraphic Morse code. After a few ineffectual attempts on the part of the Chiltern to understand our signals, she informed us by return flash lights that she was celebrating Captain Halpin's birthday. This was a relief to all on board, as we at first feared some accident might have happened to her engines, which would have entailed the necessity of our having to take her in tow and pay out cable at the same time.

By this time the work of paying out had become so regular and monotonous that at times one was almost tempted to forget there was such a thing as a submarine cable on board; hour by hour about 6 to 6½ knots of cable were registered as going overboard, and a corresponding distance run by ship, making due allowance for slack. It is perhaps worth while to remark that, owing to the admirable manner in which the cable is coiled, and especially in the large main tank of 75 feet in diameter—containing 1,100 miles of deep sea cable—it would be safe even to pay out cable from 8 to 10 knots an hour; and there is just sufficient adhesiveness in the cable itself to prevent more than one piece of cable coming up at a time, and consequently we have been free from alarms of those much dreaded "foul flakes."

It would be too monotonous to attempt to describe the daily progress made up to this time (Thursday, Feb. 24), now only two days' run from Aden; nothing has occurred with regard to the paying out, except the ordinary work incident on such an operation; it will be therefore only necessary to give a short tabular statement at the end to complete the facts previously recorded. About nine P.M. on Tuesday a light on our starboard bow was reported, and soon after blue lights and rockets were displayed, which were duly answered by the Great Eastern and Chiltern. This was to all appearance the P. and O. boat on her way to Bombay, having probably left Aden on Sunday. When abreast of the Great Eastern Captain Halpin made the Great Eastern's night signal, viz., three blue-lights, one at the bows, one astern, and the other on the 'paddle-box—with a rocket from the paddle-box, all displayed at the same time; this, with the numerous paying-out lights on deck, must have shown the proportions of the ship, and made her identity undoubted. And so it proved, for immediately after, through two miles of darkness, fell on our ears the lusty British cheers, which all on board appreciated as they deserved.

On the 26th February we passed our last noon observation, about sixty-two miles from the Aden landing place, having made in the last twenty-four hours one of our longest runs, viz., 157 knots, with 165¼ knots of cable overboard; giving an average rate of ship during that period of 6.49 miles per hour, and for cable 6.84 miles per hour. The following is a summary of proceedings which will complete the statistics of the Bombay-Aden section.

At about thirty miles from Aden on the evening of Saturday, the Great Eastern was brought to a standstill for three hours, to make the splice between the main and the intermediate cables. This operation was skilfully performed, where the depth was about 500 fathoms, when the wind was blowing fresh and with a strong current running, tending to drift the Great Eastern from the end of the cable. Too much praise cannot be given to Captain Halpin, and the officers and men under his command, for the manner in which he handled the Great Eastern, and prevented any undue strain coming on the laid cable. About one A.M. on Sunday morning the end of the cable was buoyed in forty fathoms, about ten knots from the shore, and it was not until the Tuesday following the sea was calm enough to enable the shore end to be landed and laid. To sum up the proceedings so far, results have proved that, taking length and depth into consideration, there probably has never been a better cable manufactured and laid than this one.

The French Atlantic Cable, 2,584 miles long, and covering a distance of 2,327 miles, was laid at an average speed of four and a half miles per hour—the average speed in this case being 5.83 or about 25 per cent. faster; in the former case several stoppages had to be made, and some miles of cable hauled back at each place, on account of imperfections that presented themselves during paying out. The weather in the Atlantic was for several days stormy and foggy, but in this case nothing could have been more delightful than the weather and sea. The temperature at times rose as high as 87° under the awning in the middle of the day, but there generally was a gentle breeze to make the weather enjoyable. From the great success in laying this line, and the strain on the cable in the deepest water, viz., 2,170 fathoms never exceeding one-eighth of its ultimate strength, one can have little doubt but that if it had been three times the length and even twice as dead it would have been laid equally successfully. The navigation of the ship has been by no means the least successful part of the work, as the track is as near a straight line from end to end as it is possible to get it—the slight deviations being due to varying currents, for which it is impossible to estimate exactly.

The contractors and their staff, with Captain Halpin, Mr. J. C. Laws, and Mr. Loudan at their head, have used every exertion to insure as perfect work as possible; and this cable, from its commencement to its final laying, has also been most carefully tested and inspected by the engineers to the British-Indian Submarine Telegraph Company, Messrs. Clark and Forde. Mr. H. C. Forde, with three assistants, Messrs. Theophilus Smith, L. Winter, and Lambert, have accompanied the expedition to watch over the interests of the British-Indian Telegraph Company, and to take the tests of the cable after laying, upon which to grant the final certificate to the contractors.

To carry out this work eight different types of cable have been adopted—viz., three types for the Suez-Aden section, and five types for the Aden-Bombay section, all of which vary in weight, strength, specific gravity and construction, in accordance with the depths of water and other conditions under which each type of cable will find itself in its final resting place. The positions of these cables will be more particularly pointed out hereafter. Their gross weight amounts to 8,865 tons, or about 965 tons heavier than the total of the French Atlantic cable, their average weights per knot being 2.46 tons and 2.22 tons respectively; therefore it will be seen that, as regards weight, the British-Indian cable has the advantage. The following abstract gives an approximate idea of the length of material and workmanship required for the manufacture of the cable, viz.:—

Copper wire	25,200 knots in length (taking into account the different coverings).
Gutta percha	12,850	do. do.
Iron wire	37,034	do. do.
Hemp strands	136,672	do. do.

Total length of materials ... 211,756 knots, or more than 8¼ times the circumference of the earth. The whole of the above materials have to be well examined, tested, and spun into cable; and the distance they have to travel through the various machines, including coiling on board ship, amounts in the aggregate to above 110,000 miles; consequently the total aggregate length of work to be done during manufacture is not less than 320,000 nautical miles. This work was performed in about six months' time, or at the rate of about 2,078 miles per diem. This calculation will afford a small idea of the enormous amount of machinery and hands required in order to turn out a long submarine cable.

To carry this cable to its destination in iron tanks filled with water, required five steamers as under, their aggregate carrying tonnage capacity being 29,580 tons, viz.:—

	Nett Registered.	Horse Power.	Length in Knots.	Weight in Tons.
S.S. Great Eastern ...	13,343	2,600	2,374	5,633

We can very well understand the excitement created in Holland by the passing of the Agrarian Bill for the Dutch Indian possessions; and there can be little doubt its Conservative opponents are right in proclaiming it the precursor of a social revolution. It seems to decide the question which has been so long and hotly debated in the Parliament at the Hague, and sign the death warrant of the Dutch colonial system. Independently of the radical changes introduced in that system by the Bill, the very fact of foreign witnesses being invited behind the scenes—of the workings of Dutch colonial policy being laid bare to public opinion—seems to make the inevitable revolution in it merely a question of time. That revolution must have come sooner or later was certain. Its advocates had all the arguments in their favour except utilitarian ones. The telling and hitherto conclusive reply of their opponents has been that their present system pays, and pays enormously. Not only is there no difficulty whatever in establishing an equilibrium in Javanese budgets, but Javanese labour and taxation contribute immensely to the home treasury. Now the new measure not merely introduces the wedge—that was done some time ago, when free labour was admitted on the new railway works—but drives it home into the very roots of the system; one or two blows more must follow in logical sequence, and it will be rent into fragments. The two leading features of the Dutch system are the ownership by the State of all the lands in the island, and forced labour. With regard to the former, the Dutch on their occupation found the native princes enjoying over all the soil of their dominions what resembled much more nearly actual ownership than a bare feudal superiority. Stepping into their places and rights, they pensioned these local magnates, and governed or oppressed from behind their names. The Dutch resident drew the lion's share of the gains; the native prince had a handsome commission and the whole unpopularity for his share. If he were slack in turning the screw, he abdicated under pressure in favour of some member of his family with a hereditary claim equally unimpeachable with his own. All the island is administered in this footing, with the exception of a couple of quasi-independent States, ruled by puppets under the eyes of a Dutch political agent and the guns of a Dutch garrison. The whole population is not only bound down to the soil, but limited rigorously as to the productions to be raised upon it. Over certain districts the cultivator cannot exercise his discretion, but must satisfy Government inspectors on their periodical visits that he grows a certain number of trees of a certain kind. His produce is brought into Government markets and bought at Government prices, and the margin between the sums it fetches in Java and at Amsterdam is always great, and often fabulous. Then, in one form or another, Javanese labour is absolutely at the service of the State, and the marvellous prosperity of the island—regarding the matter from a Dutch, not a Javanese, point of view—dates from the impulse given to this principle by General Van den Bosch. Be it observed, it is a system highly practical and profitable, but essentially vicious, and with this radical defect in it, that if you once subject it to criticism you invite its condemnation in all its parts. Modification can only lead on to annihilation. We presume the party who has carried the measure in the House will have the power and the will to see that it is carried out in the colonies, although we may well imagine the local officials will offer it all the opposition they dare. It is not pleasant seeing nearly absolute power tempered down to constitutional authority, and rich salaries and allowances passing into the crucible of reform. A paradise as the island is in some ways, it wants strong counter-inducements to the climate to make life in Java an enviable thing; and if the Dutch residents have had to work and think, and turn night to day, hitherto at least they have lived in the licence and luxury of Oriental despots, and enjoyed the slavish reverence of their subjects. Now, if the revenues dwindle to or below the point at which they stood before Van den Bosch set to work on them with his rough and ready finance system, officials will find themselves the victims of their economical home Government; and, moreover, the proposed changes will probably suggest a very material reduction in their numbers.

Article sixty-two provides that land leases may be granted for periods not exceeding seventy-five years. It invites, in fact, to the immigration and colonisation which for so long have been studiously discouraged. It assures extreme fixity of tenure, and offers every facility for converting occupation into permanent property. It admits and confirms the strange principle of native ownership, and permits, under certain restrictions, that lands shall vest in foreigners, or be rented by them. Holland, in short, throws open to all the world the rich garden she has hitherto made a close monopoly of, and renounces the right of the Crown—a right at once shadowy and substantial—to all the lands cultivated by the natives. There can be no doubt the Conservatives are right in saying it will annihilate the present system of cultivation, and it will be hopeless to think of maintaining the Government monopoly of markets. No European colonist would dream of farming subject to the condition that some three-fourths of his fair profits should become legally the property of the State—that he should have to sell for half a dollar in Java what the telegraph informed him was selling for four in Holland. And although the natives have hitherto been treated and have regarded themselves as an inferior caste, it would be impossible to attempt to make distinctions on a point on which they are sure to be so sensitive as the pocket. The Government system must go, and with it the Government profits. How far land leases and taxation may replace them is another question, and one that, when we contrast results from the British and the Dutch Indies, cannot be answered very hopefully for the Dutch treasury. We are told the Dutch Conservatives are uneasy as to the advent of English adventures and its consequences. We have no doubt the restrictions referred to have been naturally arranged so as to impose some check on that. It would be contrary to human-nature, and to Dutch nature especially, to suppose that all of a sudden they should push free trade and self-abnegation to sentimental lengths. But, in any case, of all the climates in the East, the climate of Java is among the most trying to Europeans; and that consideration alone, we should fancy, would operate against any such influx as the Dutch affect to apprehend. That the Bill will endanger their hold on their colonies we do not believe. On the contrary, a weak State always does wise to shelter itself behind "the principles eternal of justice;" and daring filibusters, or even acquisitive Governments, have lost an excellent chance of having public opinion in their favour in a crusade against the taskmasters of the Malay race. And for the Malays, when the islands have ceased to be close colonies, the Dutch may venture to turn their tardy attention to raising their Eastern subjects in the social scale. Hitherto they have not merely been neglected, but degraded as matter of policy; for any enlightenment among the population was absolutely incompatible with the system of serfdom and corvée on which they were governed. It is impossible to deny that Holland may have legislated away her splendid colonial income; but we have every reason to believe she has strengthened her hold on her colonies. Better perpetuate a connection that must always be profitable than continue a scandal to civilisation, and gains as insecure and uncertain as great speculative profits generally are.

OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.

(SATURDAY REVIEW.)

The reply of the China merchants of London to Lord Clarendon's statement of the intentions of the Government increases the doubts which had been previously entertained of the merits of Sir Rutherford Alcock's Treaty. Lord Clarendon probably knows more of foreign politics than any other Englishman since the death of Lord Palmerston; but it is impossible for a Minister to rival in special knowledge the residents in any foreign country, and China perhaps lies somewhat outside the region with which Lord Clarendon is most familiar. His experimental attempt to treat China as a civilised State is laudable and probably judicious, although it is not likely to produce a successful result. If representations made to the Court of Peking are found to produce redress of grievances, it will be clear that the old-fashioned methods of local coercion involved an unnecessary abuse of superior power. The failure of diplomacy, if it occurs, will sooner or later tend to the renewel of those vigorous irregularities which have rendered European life tolerable in China. Until the provisions of Lord Elgin's Treaty were made the rule of intercourse with the Chinese people and Government, it was impossible to justify the practices which may hereafter be necessarily revived. The incredulous mercantile community unanimously rejects the assumption that ordinary diplomacy is suited to the circumstances of China. Compacts between parties who adopt two opposite and incompatible rules of morality are likely to create misunderstanding. Mr. Burlingame's mission, though it may perhaps have been justly appreciated by Lord Clarendon, furnished an additional reason for feeling or affecting confidence in the Chinese Government. The recall of Admiral Keppel, and the reprimands addressed to some zealous consular agents, proved that Lord Clarendon was thoroughly in earnest. The dispassionate impartiality of the Imperial Government, although it produces irritation in the mercantile community in China, is dignified and possible wise. The English Government had, by concluding the Treaty of Tientsin, recognised the absolute sovereignty of the Emperor, and there may have been some convenience as well as propriety in the formal recognition of his exclusive responsibility. If Vice-Consuls and lieutenants commanding gunboats find hereafter that their active services are once more required, they will have the satisfaction of knowing that their superiors have seriously tried to attain their objects by pacific means. Mr. Burlingame, who insisted that China should be admitted into the community of civilised nations, obtained a ready hearing in Downing-street, as well as at Washington and at the Continental Courts. In substance his instructions required him to facilitate retrogression and abuse, by professing the desire of his employers for every kind of improvement. In one of his last despatches the Chinese Ambassador cited Sir Rutherford Alcock's Treaty as a proof of the liberal and sound enlightment of the statesmen of Peking. The document in fact does credit to their ingenuity, and they may fairly boast that they imposed on Lord Clarendon.

The vexed question of the increased customs duty has at last been made perfectly clear. By the former treaty merchants had the option of commuting internal duties for an increase of fifty per cent. on their payments at the port of entry; but they have not been in the habit of profiting by a facility which has now been converted into a compulsory rule. In practice it was found that the central Government was unable or unwilling to restrain provincial cupidity. The goods which had already paid the legal rate of taxation were subject to overcharges whenever they crossed an internal frontier. Lord Clarendon, who throughout the discussion has found or deemed that he was bound to advocate the cause of the Chinese Government against his own countrymen, had used the singular and paradoxical argument that commercial treaties impose no check on internal taxation. The proposition was in itself highly questionable, and it now appears that it was peculiarly inapplicable as an apology for the exactions of provincial Governors in China. The merchants in their reply quote Lord Elgin's statement that the duty of 7½ per cent. was to secure the importer against all taxes, tolls, and octrois. The use of the word octroi was the more unlucky for Lord Clarendon's doctrine, because it included all municipal imposts. It would have been a strange evasion of an international compact if the French Legislature or Government had taxed English cottons and hardware by an excise, although the charge might have been equally applied to domestic produce; but something might have been urged in excuse for a charge which would not have involved additional protection. As European imports into China have no competitive character, domestic taxation beyond the stipulated amount was utterly inconsistent with the letter and spirit of Lord Elgin's Treaty. It may be hoped that it is not yet too late to re-open negotiation on a point which has evidently been misunderstood by Sir Rutherford Alcock. The merchants who are most thoroughly acquainted with the details of Chinese administration are fully convinced that the commutation of internal exactions will not secure exemption from the charges which the increased import duty is supposed to cover.

Lord Clarendon's plausible defence of the additional export duty on silk is conclusively answered by the merchants. As the price of the article has fallen, the Chinese Government has received less than the estimated amount of five per cent. on the value of the silk. It was not obvious to outside observers that the Chinese Government was entitled to the relaxation of a contract which had been deliberately concluded; but the merchants are sufficiently confident in the justice of their cause to admit, for the purpose of argument, the soundness of Lord Clarendon's reasoning. They are perfectly willing to readjust the tariff in accordance with the calculations on which it was originally framed; but they insist on including all Chinese articles of export in the proposed revision. While silk has paid less than five per cent., a change in the price of tea has benefited the Imperial revenue by an increase of a hundred and fifty per cent. in the amount of export duty. By paying twelve and a half per cent. on tea, the merchants are mulcted in more than double the amount of their gains upon silk; and as the Chinese Government clear several hundreds of thousands a year on the balance of both classes of transactions, the memorialists are perfectly justified in objecting to a one-sided rearrangement. It was quite unnecessary to send a mission round the world for the purpose of convincing foreign nations that the Chinese are fully a match for their most civilised rivals in commercial and diplomatic astuteness. In the late negotiation they appear to have confused and puzzled Sir Rutherford Alcock, and they have misled Lord Clarendon into an adoption of their delusive calculations. It is perfectly true that the new treaty is open at any time to revision, whereas Lord Elgin's arrangements could not be disturbed until ten years had elapsed; but there is nothing to compel or to induce the Chinese Government to renounce at any future time the advantages which it has obtained. The fanciful convenience of substituting a voluntary compact for a treaty imposed at the close of a successful war is not highly estimated by practical traders. It is not improbable that to the Chinese mind the most valid of all obligations may be those which are imposed by superior and irresistible force. Lord Elgin was too prudent and too just to exact unreasonable terms as the reward of victory. The Chinese Government will not be equally considerate when it has redeemed its losses in the field by success in the diplomatic struggle.

In most instances the English merchants resident in China represent the wishes and opinions of the foreign mercantile community. At Shanghai, if in no other part of the world, the American lion or eagle lies peaceably down by the side of the English lamb; and there is probably a general agreement that Sir Rutherford Alcock has made an injudicious bargain. The London memorialists, who have the best information on the subject, assure Lord Clarendon that the division of opinion to which he referred no longer exists. If the Treaty is ratified as it stands, French and American merchants may perhaps discover without regret that their English competitors have been unfavourably handicapped in the commercial race. While they are entitled to share in all the privileges which may be conferred on the most favoured nation, they are not conversely liable to the disabilities and burdens which may be imposed on English trade. It would be a strange result of diplomatic activity if the duty on silk imported into England were higher than the tax paid by French shippers of the same commodity. Other foreign merchants may perhaps claim the use of steamboats on the lakes and rivers of the interior, while the English Minister has submitted to the perverse restriction on the use of any kind of navigation which is not ordinarily practised by natives. The Portuguese who are no longer troubled with the presence of Chinese officials at Macao will learn with surprise that a Consul is to be allowed to reside at Hong Kong, which Lord Clarendon, by a singular oversight, describes as a Treaty port. If it is not too late to revoke the ratification of the Treaty, it would be well to reopen the negotiation, or perhaps to postpone it.

THE REV. J. WILLIAMSON ON CHINA.

The following very interesting passages from the speech delivered by the Rev. Mr. Williamson at the meeting of the National Bible Society were omitted in our last issue for want of space. Mr. Williamson's views on our political and social relations with China are worthy of notice:—

"My time is limited in view of the speakers who are to follow, and so I beg your attention to a matter of pressing importance at the present moment, viz., intercourse with China, and the means through which it can be best promoted. There are some who say that we have no right to force ourselves upon the Chinese, and, above all, no right to intrude our religion upon their notice. Now, Sir, I do not believe this. I believe that we are all the children of the same great Parent, who has provided this world for us to dwell on with its different zones, climates, and productions, and that it is the design of Almighty God, our common Father, that the different peoples of this world should mingle with one another and help one another on; and so I do not think that any portion of the human family has any right either in nature, or reason, or morals, or religion to say to all the other portions of that family, We will not allow you to trespass in our country, or participate in the productions of our soil. Any nation, therefore, which refuses to obey this law and enter into the comity of nations, rebels against the design of Providence, and so places itself in a position which justifies other nations to use force, if need be, to compel it to give way.

"This principle has been acknowledged and acted upon by our Government so far as commerce is concerned; but it seems overlooked that buying and selling is not intercourse. We might buy and sell over a wall or through an iron railing. Intercourse means intercommunion—the exchange of thought, feeling, views, and sentiment as well as commodities. This alone constitutes true intercourse, and only in proportion as it is attained is the idea of Almighty God realised. But this principle covers missionary operations. An embargo on missionary operations might as well be laid upon newspapers, magazines, and books, or intellectual intercourse of any kind. I therefore think that the messengers of our religion should have free access to China, and that Christian Governments are fully justified in demanding liberty for the preaching of the word.

"In making these remarks I have been proceeding on the assumption that the Chinese nation, as a nation, is indisposed to intercourse with us. But such is not the case. The Government of the country has done what it could to resist our approaches, and the literati have, especially of late, stirred up the people against us. The people of course have their prejudices against us, as will be afterwards seen, but no ill-will towards us, nor inherent opposition. In all my journeys I have never been molested, or have any others, as far as the people are concerned. Nor do I advocate force in the sense of armaments in the Chinese seas, and such things. There are other forces than fire and steel. Lord Elgin's treaty and the American treaties embody all that we care for. We only wish that these treaties be adhered to—the force of consistency, the force of a well considered policy—firmly adhered to—not a fast and loose policy. The Chinese are particularly amenable to this. They will not readily risk war and as has been well said, there is as much force in the tense string as the flying arrow.

"So much on general grounds. But I take higher ground than this, and humbly maintain that the true opening up of China, and all satisfactory intercourse with this people, depends in a great measure on missionary operations. There are peculiarities in the Chinese system, and barriers on their part to progress, which can only be removed by forces which lie in our hands. First among these barriers stands the position and pretensions of the Emperor. In fact, this is the backbone of Chinese exclusiveness. So clearly is the uniqueness of his position understood, that he is acknowledged and called the 'Tien tsze,' or the Son of Heaven, and sometimes the Holy Son of Heaven. He thus recognises no equal upon earth, and scouts the very idea of being placed on a footing of equality with any royal family. The usual apothegm is 'There cannot be two suns in the heavens, or two Emperors in the world.' This assumption is no modern invention. It is one of the most elemental ideas of the Chinese system. This most exclusive claim stands before us firmly as it did centuries ago. Witness the imperial edicts; the reference made by the late Emperor to the President of the United States, and, above all, the conduct of the Chinese Government in reference to the visit of H.R.H. Prince Alfred to Peking, in autumn 1869. But this is a most serious obstacle, for it is clear that as long as the Emperor of China claims to be superior to the Queen of Great Britain, or other European Sovereigns, and the mandarins refuse to acknowledge the full equality and authority of our plenipotentaries and Consuls, there never can be satisfactory or amicable relations.

"Another great hindrance to the foreigners of China is the opium traffic. Notwithstanding that the Indian revenue is implicated in the question, and several large private commercial firms are involved, we make bold to say that it is unquestionably the interest of the commercial world as a whole to put an end to this terrible vice in China. Whatever injures a nation, injures commerce in all its departments and aspects. At the same time, it appears clear that this traffic is now beyond Government control. It might be stopped in India, but that would make little difference in China. They would only grow more there. The traffic may be fulminated against from Peking, but as long as mandarins are what they are, such edicts will be practically a dead-letter. There are literally several millions in China to whom opium is more valuable than life. The only hope is the creation of a public opinion against it among those who abstain from the poison, and among the young; so that the generation of opium-smokers may in due course die out. This reformation has already commenced, and only needs to be fostered and systematised. This matter, therefore, lies with the missionaries.

"The last obstacle to progress I shall only hint at. I refer to the want of truth and honour which characterises the Chinese of all parts of the Empire and classes of the people. Lying is cleverness; deceit may be almost called a science; and the object of a Chinaman is not fair play, but how he will gain his object or get to the windward of you. This is a terrible evil, and it meets you in every quarter, speaks in almost every voice, and glances in every eye. Such are the chief barriers in the path of true progress and the elevation of the people of China. The question is, how are they to be removed? . . .

"Foreign legations have been established for some years at Peking, but they have made little or no impression on the Chinese. The very latest news from China reveals to us Her Majesty's plenipotentiary standing with his suite outside the gate of a beggarly mandarin's office, waiting for admittance. They have wrung from the Chinese, it is true, a New Convention with some good points, but is the wrong side of almost all the good points. So much so as to nullify all good that otherwise would exult, and make us all devoutly hope that the new treaty will not be ratified in its present form. I therefore repeat, that the true opening up of China greatly depends on missionary operations, and therefore ought to be supported, not only on religious, but on commercial and political grounds.

"The Chinese people are not unwilling to receive us, as could be abundantly shown. All our late troubles have originated with the mandarins and the literati, who are all expectants of office. These men oppose our action, inasmuch as they see that the progress of Western civilisation will overthrow their ill-used power. All we want is room to let the light in, and then the darkness will flee away, and commerce flourish, and intercourse of all kinds become satisfactory."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE TIMES."

SIR,—A good cause sometimes suffers from injudicious advocates. The Chinese merchants do well to oppose the ratification of the Convention, but the arguments advanced by those who have undertaken to discuss the matter with Her Majesty's Government against conceding a higher rate of export duty on silk to the Chinese Government, will no more bear examination than a sieve will hold water. There is no warrant for Mr. Matheson's assertion, or statement, that tea was ever included among those articles upon which duty was to be levied on a general basis of 5 per cent. The facts of the case prove the contrary. The tariff rate of 2½ taels or ounces of silver per picul, or Chinese cwt., as fixed in 1842, was equal to, not 5, but about 10 per cent. of its average value. And when it is noted that the tariff was framed to operate prospectively and not retrospectively, like a patent of Chinese nobility, and that after the opening of the new ports tea was obtained at a cheaper price, up to the war of 1857, than has been paid during the last ten years, it will be found that tea, from the date of the first treaty, has been subject to a duty on export of at least 12½ per cent., the rate at which it is now stated.

The Chinese Government is entitled to a higher rate of duty from the simple fact that silk, which, prior to the appearance of the disease in the worm in Europe in 1856, was worth in London 12s. to 15s. per lb., has since then been worth 20s. to 30s. per lb., and is likely to continue high for many years to come. In justice, then, it must be allowed at least an addition of Tls. 5 per picul. The proposal is to raise the duty from Tls. 10 to Tls. 20.

On the other hand, we must resist all attempts to impose heavy charges on silk in the interior, whether under the name of licence fees or transit dues; but it may be well, first, before denouncing in severe language the proceedings of the Chinese authorities, to ascertain correctly the amount of their unauthorised exactions, and not to accept every vague statement of the Chinese dealers as essentially true.

The most serious objection to the Convention is the proposal to commute the transit duty of 2½ per cent. on our manufactured goods by making its payment at the ports compulsory on the foreign merchant. This scheme, instead of being "an advantage," would be found at present impracticable and delusive. It is altogether premature, the Chinese Government being too feeble to enforce on its provincial authorities a strict observance of any such orders or regulations. This change must be opposed with all vigour, because at no distant date the prosperity of Lanchashire may depend in no small degree upon the demand in China for our cotton goods, and for other reasons on which I must not now dilate.

In reopening negotiations with the Chinese Government it should be considered a main point to obtain another port at the head of the navigation of the Yang-tsze River, in Szechuen province, as likely to be of real value in supplying all Western China with our goods. To induce the Chinese Government to concede this let us relinquish the right to trade at Hainan Island, in the south, of which we have never availed ourselves. Let us also sacrifice all the imaginary advantages of the newly-conceded ports of Wenchow, on the east coast, and Woo-hoo, near Nanking. Let us, even, if necessary, throw in the Island of Formosa, that place being likely to give more trouble than it will ever be worth. Our true policy in China in the present day is to concentrate our trade at a few great centres of communication, and not to multiply small points of contact all over the Empire. Two great ports in India suffice for carrying on the bulk of our vast commerce with that Empire; and the Chinese, like the Hindoos, will be found better distributors of our trade over the country than we ourselves can be. In requesting that you will courteously publish these remarks, I will conclude by expressing my hope that our new Minister at Peking, Mr. Wade, will be able to negotiate a new Convention based on justice and moderation, and thus calculated to promote our permanent interests, while at the same time neither incompatible with fairness nor altogether unacceptable to

THE NEW ROUTE TO THE EAST.

(PALL MALL GAZETTE.)

At last we see the visible signs of the revolution the Suez Canal was sure to work in our communications with the East, and the days of the "overland route" for Indian travellers are clearly numbered. Competition will force all competitors for the passenger-carrying trade to avail themselves of the through-water way provided them by M. Lesseps, and spare their clients the manifold discomforts of transhipment at the Isthmus. Already the Messageries Impériales had arranged to run their steamers through the Canal from France to the Indies; already Liverpool and London owners had advertised and despatched by the new route vessels with comfortable cabin accommodation for first-class passengers. Now the Dutch are following suit, and following up their liberal legislation for Java and their colonies in the Malay seas by facilitating intercourse with the countries that used to be peopled by officials, troops, and "niggers." The new company to be launched at Amsterdam starts under Government auspices with a very considerable capital. It is presided over by Prince Henry of Holland, who, during the course of a lengthened stay in Egypt last autumn, gave himself every opportunity of studying the advantages of the new route. When a single great company once decided on establishing a line of through steamers, it did more than try a simple experiment. It compromised itself beyond the possibility of drawing back, and it compromised its rivals as well. Considerations of expense were eliminated, for, cost what it might, travellers who had tasted the luxury of the new mode of transport would decline to be carried by the old one. Our English character for enterprise notwithstanding, it was evident the French association would set the example. The Messageries Impériales ply on velvet, hedged by elastic Government subsidies against the possibility of loss, and fostered by their Government on the understanding that political considerations shall be paramount to commercial ones in their board-rooms. It was in their power to give an immense impulse to the success of M. Lesseps's scheme, and it was natural they should not delay. Meanwhile Anglo-Indians, Anglo-Chinese, and Anglo-Australasians may bless the interested philanthropy that will spare them so much misery in the future. Travellers to the East who had scrambled for a good berth and got it felt they had only won the first point in a long and doubtful game. They lived in harrowing suspense as to the character of their quarters in the steamer that awaited them on the other side of the Isthmus. Most of us have proved in our time how favourable to the action of corroding care is the monotony of a sea voyage, and, unless the suffering of the body distracted it, the mind brooded darkly on its prospects. Whatever waited the experienced traveller on the Red Sea, he might well shudder at what he had to go through between Alexandria and Suez. We have witnessed few more harrowing spectacles than that presented by the interior of Abbat's great caravanserai in the former city when swamped by Indian and English boatloads at a meeting of the mails. We do not talk of the hardships of the coarser sex, who, weak from sea-sickness or suffering from disease, scramble in a Babel for the privilege of waiting on themselves. But upstairs groups of ladies and children and ayahs are to be seen squatting in corners of the corridors, or trying in vain to snatch some broken repose on the doormats, while they look wistfully at the doors of unattainable bedrooms. Then the accommodation in the special train provided by the Egyptian authorities per contract with the company at the moderate sum of—we believe—£5 per head; carriages badly lighted or not lighted at all, cramped in space, cramped in every seat; the interstices between the individuals of the living freight plugged up with those endless packages which are the indispensable concomitants of a journey to India. The darkness, the delays, the jolting, the option between closing the windows upon the stifling contents of the carriage or opening them to the clouds of penetrating desert sand that parch your tongue and irritate your skin, making you horribly feverish and preternaturally wakeful. The morning struggle for refreshment of the tub and the table at Suez, where you arrive savage or sullen, weak and weary. The embarkation under the blazing fires of an Egyptian sun, and perhaps the glowing breath of an Arabian sirocco; the settling down to cool yourself in heated cabins. Any one who has passed through these fiery tribulations, and seen his ailing wife and fragile babies withering under them, would no more consent to be forced back on that exploded mode of travel than the inhabitants of Marseilles to abandon their sixteen hours' Paris express for the lumbering old diligence.

On their side the Canal authorities have still a great deal to do towards expediting the rate of transit. From two to three days is much too long for mail steamers to waste over some 100 miles, when, moreover, there are no locks to offer unavoidable causes of detention. Four knots is a great deal too low for an average rate of speed, when even on the opening day steamers placed in the long line were frequently moving twice as fast. Under proper arrangements there can be no reason for necessarily anchoring at night, and if the Canal has anything like the success we predict for it, it will be essential that its direction economise all of the twenty-four hours they can for the purposes of its traffic. Of course, now and for long to come their expenses will grow with their custom; but with that, doubtless, they are prepared to lay their account. They must go forward with the work of softening the bends, they must multiply passing places, and in self-defence they must strengthen their banks against the wash from the growing traffic. But when competition fairly sets in, the "scour" of money through their hands ought to be so strong that we shall hope to see their financial affairs marche toute seule. Next to the Canal comes the question of the navigation of the Red Sea. We believe its perils have been exaggerated, but we do not need cases like that of the unfortunate Carnatic to convince us they exist. We have no wish to croak, yet we must say we lay our account with hearing of occasional accidents, and we only hope shipmasters and pilots may look out more carefully for collisions than they seem to do elsewhere where the risks are less. Doubtless we shall see the day when the narrow sea from Suez to Aden will be as thoroughly lighted and buoyed as science and money can do it. Its perils always existed for passengers by the overland route, and we suspect the Egyptian transit has been far more fatal to travellers than all the rocks and shoals of the Red Sea.

THE NEW POSTAL ROUTE FROM AUSTRALIA.

(AUSTRALIAN AND NEW ZEALAND GAZETTE.)

We gave last week full details of the proposal which has been submitted to several of the Colonial Governments for a new postal route by the "Californian, New Zealand, and Australian Mail Packets;" and we learn by telegraph from Point de Galle that it was fully intended the first steamer should leave Sydney on the 26th of March.

According to the proposals which we published last week, the following time table may be calculated; but we must confess that we have some doubts whether the long ocean voyage from Sydney, calling at Auckland and Honolulu, can be accomplished in the specified time —

Leave Sydney.	Auckland.	San Francisco.	Arrive in London
March 26 ...	April 1 ...	April 26 ...	May 13
April 27 ...	May 3 ...	May 29 ...	June 15
May 28 ...	June 3 ...	June 29 ...	July 15
June 30 ...	July 6 ...	Aug. 1 ...	Aug. 17

The above dates are computed from the proposed contract time, which allows 744 hours from Sydney to San Francisco. We allow from thence per Pacific Railway to New York and by ocean steamer to Liverpool seventeeen days, in which time, we believe, the journey from London to San Francisco has been actually accomplished. As the first date of departure is proposed for 26th March, and the month's P. and O. steamer with the mails via Galle and Suez is despatched from Sydney on the same date and Melbourne on the 28th March, a fair opportunity will be afforded of judging of the merits of the new undertaking. The mails via Suez of 26th March will be due in London on the 15th May, and the new route via San Francisco on the 13th May; but in order that the mails by the new route should arrive as above on the 13th May, it is essential that no time whatever should be lost in moving from the steamer to the railway at San Francisco and in promptly catching at New York a steamer just about to depart for England.

Monetary and Commercial.

It has been officially announced that after the 1st of this month registered newspapers for all places abroad, without distinction, will be chargeable according to weight; and each newspaper, whether sent singly or in a packet containing more than one, will be liable to a separate rate of postage for every four ounces or fraction of four ounces. There will be no alteration in the present rate of postage for single newspapers weighing four ounces. The change is strongly opposed by newspaper proprietors and others, on whom it will entail a heavy loss, but the Postmaster-General has declined to reconsider his decision.

On the 30th March Mr. Lowe received a deputation of gentlemen wishing to urge upon the Government to repeal the duties on sugar, tea, and coffee. Mr. Lowe declined to anticipate his Budget speech; but he told the deputation that he had no intention to remove the import duties and sacrifice an entire branch of the revenue. He added that he did not wish to see the most numerous class in the community wholly free from taxation. Mr. Lowe, however, said nothing to indicate that some reduction in these duties may not be admissible.

The prospectus of the Netherlands Steamship Company (the formation of which has several times been alluded to by our Rotterdam correspondent) has been issued in London by the agent, Mr. Henry Pawle, 31, Throgmorton-street; Prince Henry of the Netherlands is honorary chairman. The object is to establish a line of steamers through the Suez Canal between the Netherlands and her Eastern colonies, this being the first steam shipping company promoted in Holland for the purpose of trading between the mother country and the Dutch possessions in the Far East. The service will be opened in the spring of 1871, when four new screw steamers will be supplied by the firm of John Elder, of Glasgow. The first issue of capital is fixed at 3,500,000 florins, divided into 3,500 fully-paid-up shares of 1,000 florins, which may be divided into half-shares of 500 florins, payable by equal instalments. Over two-thirds of the capital has already, it is stated, been subscribed, and applications will be received for the rest till the 4th of April.

The directors of the Agra Bank (Limited) have recommended a dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, for the half-year ended the 31st of December, making, with the ad interim dividend, at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, previously declared, a distribution for the year of 5½ per cent. on the paid-up capital. The sum of £6,000 is carried to reserve account, and £690 is carried forward.

The ordinary general meeting of the members of the Agra Bank (Limited), including those of the late Agra and Masterman's Bank (Limited), will be held on Tuesday, the 5th of April.

The dividend to be recommended at the meeting of the Oriental Bank on the 21st of April will be 6 per cent. for the half-year, making, with the previous distribution, 12 per cent. for 1869.

The directors of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China will recommend at the annual meeting on the 20th prox., a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 6 (six) per cent. per annum, free of income-tax.

At the meeting of shareholders in the National Bank of India its progress was described as satisfactory, and a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum was declared. The most marked and eventful part of the proceedings was a recommendation from the chairman to the shareholders to insist upon their auditor doing the work himself and not by deputy, and the expression of an opinion that the auditor's personal supervision of the accounts was as essential for the protection of the shareholders as his signature to the balance-sheet.

The report of the Credit Foncier of Mauritius states the amount of investments to be £278,377, secured by landed property estimated at £625,000. The available total is £12,468, and a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. is recommended for the year 1869, leaving £4,467 to be carried forward.

The Messageries Imperiales Company will pay from 1st April 15f. as half-a-year's interest on 6 per cent. Obligations; 12f. 50c. on the 5 per cent. Bonds; and 9f. 37½c. on the Provisional Certificates. On the latter a call, the last one, of 125f. is made.

A meeting of the creditors of Mr. Frederick Hogg, trading with China, &c., is called for the 7th April.

The business of De Coningh and Co., Amsterdam, will in future be conducted under the firm of Schont and Co.

By a Circular, dated King William-street, 31st March, Messrs. H. Elias, N. Elias, and George Barnet announce that, having determined to retire from business, the partnership, which has heretofore subsisted between them under the firm of Elias and Co. in London, and George Barnet and Co. in Shanghai, has been dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Ellis Elias (the son of Mr. Hyman Elias) and Mr. Edward William Batt will, however, continue the business as hertofore, under the firm of Elias and Co. in London, and George Barnet and Co. in Shanghai, and will liquidate the affairs of the old firm.

The Silver market has been flat, at 5s. 0½d. per ounce for bars. This metal has been taken to a moderate extent of late for transmission from London to Bombay by steamer, via the Suez Canal, the charge by that route being less than the cost by the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Tanjore, from Southampton on the 2nd instant, was, in gold, to Galle, £590; to Bombay, £40,500; to Madras, £1,160; in silver, to Bombay, £30,000; to Calcutta, £600; to Penang, £10,010; to Singapore, £14,950; to Shanghai, £39,120; total in gold, £42,250; in silver, £94,680.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns for February purport to show an increase of £970,353, or rather more than 7 per cent., in the declared value of our exportations, as compared with the corresponding month of last year. Contrasted with February, 1868 (when there were twenty-nine days in the month), they showed an increase of £114,400, or not quite 1 per cent. The cotton trade appears to have been relatively active, owing to the extent of the shipments to Turkey, Egypt, India, and China, and an increase of 6 per cent. is shown in those of cotton yarn, and 16 per cent. in those of manufactured goods. Of iron the figures are again very favourable, an increase of 25 per cent. being shown, caused chiefly by the railway demand for the United States and India. There has also been an increase of 8 per cent. in the shipments of earthenware, 7 per cent. in hardware, 5 per cent. in machinery, 15 per cent. in silk manufactures, and 6 per cent. in woollen manufactures. In woollen yarns, however, from a falling off in the German and Dutch demand, a decrease is shown of 28 per cent. Haberdashery shows a diminution of 5 per cent., and linen goods are likewise on the unfavourable side, yarns showing a decrease of 19 per cent., and manufactured articles 10 per cent. The figures detailing the total value of the exports are as follow:—February, 1870, £14,455,379; 1869, £13,485,026; 1868, £14,340,979; for the two months 1870, £28,378,564; 1869, £27,106,140; 1868, £26,593,667.

Among the imports free of duty, grain still holds a leading place; but the increase in wheat is less conspicuous than in many previous returns, and in flour, barley, and Indian corn there is a considerable decrease. The quantity of cotton was about 20 per cent. below that in February, 1869, and wool shows a falling off of almost 40 per cent. on the month. In the articles subject to duty entered for home consumption there are some more than usually unfavourable changes, caused in part by diminished duty payments through uncertainty as to the provisions of the forthcoming Budget. There is a marked falling off under the heads of coffee, fruit—the duties on which, it has been anticipated, will be totally repealed—sugar, molasses, tea, and wine. Those commodities which have been taken in larger quantities are cocoa, spirits, and tobacco. The changes in the stock of bonded goods also illustrate the uncertainty as to the fiscal provisions contemplated by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Compared with February, 1869, there was a smaller stock on hand of cocoa, spirits, sugar, tea, and tobacco, while coffee, fruit, and wine had accumulated in larger totals.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East:—

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Since our report of the 21st ult. there has been but little change in the market; the transactions effected have been limited to the actual requirements of buyers, and prices have not shown any important variation. Importers exhibit a disposition to withhold their stocks until the result of the duty question is made known.

Public sales of China Teas were held on the 29th and 30th ult., when 19,741 packages were brought forward, of which 10,800 packages found buyers; the bulk of those withdrawn were printed with a "reserved price." Common to fair red leaf Congous sold at 1s. to 1s. 1½d. per lb., showing rather easier rates for the lower grades. Boxes fair red leaf with all faults brought 1s. 1d. to 1s. 1½d. Fair black leaf Congou realised 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2¾d., and some parcels of better quality 1s. 4½d. to 1s. 5¾d. A break of common black leaf sold at 11¾d. to 1s. Three breaks fair Souchong realised 1s. 4d. to 1s. 4½d., being firm rates. Two parcels of good medium Moning brought 1s. 6¾d., being steady rates, but a mark of common black leaf sold easier at 1s. Common Canton Scented Caper sold at 8¼d. to 11½d. per lb.

SILK.

Messrs. Jacomb, Hogg and Co. report that available descriptions of Tsatlees are now becoming inconveniently scarce, recent unloadings being mostly of undesirable quality and indicating that the season in China must be nearly at an end. The last quotation for Red Peacock was 28s., but it is doubtful whether buyers could now be found at that price. Chop Silk is scarcely to be met with here, but some parcels which appear to be in stock in Lyons are offering on this market at very high prices. In Japan Silk the "spurt" at the commencement of last month has died away, leaving the market firm at the recent advance. The Deliveries, 5,115 bales of China and 934 bales of Japan, are on a scale that has not been equalled since 1862.

COFFEE.

The auctions of plantation Ceylon have been more extensive, but, the demand being slow, have gone off with little competition at 1s. per cwt. decline, except for desirable bold and coloury qualities, which continue to find purchasers on fully previous terms. There is little demand for Native, and previous rates are with difficulty maintained:

The quantity of Ceylon Coffee afloat for Great Britain is estimated as follows:—Plantation, 261,067 cwt., against 287,876 cwt. at the corresponding date of 1869; Native, 24,970 cwt., against 62,253 cwt. The quantity afloat for the Continent is 2,694 cwt. Plantation against — cwt., and 1,517 cwt. Native against 1,605 cwt. The quantity of Coffee landed in the eleven weeks ended March 19, 1870, was of Ceylon, 3,424 tons, against 4,284 tons during the corresponding period of 1869; of all descriptions, 4,550 tons, against 8,817 tons. The quantity entered for home consumption was, of Ceylon, 1,807 tons, against 2,152 tons; of all descriptions, 3,244 tons, against 3,694 tons. The quantity exported was, of Ceylon, 4,357 tons, against 4,437 tons; of all descriptions, 7,689 tons, against 9,139 tons. The stock on March 19 was, of Ceylon, 11,124 tons, against 8,690 tons; of all descriptions, 17,836 tons, against 15,204 tons.

SUGAR.

There is slightly less activity displayed, and rates are lower. Manila: At auction 20,300 bags clayed sold, duty 8s., at 30s. to 30s. 6d.; duty 9s. 7d., at 32s. to 32s. 6d.; 2,000 bags unclayed Zebu at 26s., and 27,900 bags Taal also at 26s.; privately no sales are reported Penang: There have been no offers at the public sales; by private contract 400 bags middling yellow have realised 36s. Java, China, and Siam: No sales.

The quantity of Sugar landed in the eleven weeks ended March 19, 1870, was, of Penang, 269 tons, against 1,126 tons in the corresponding period of 1869; of Manila, Java, and China, 3,880 tons, against 8,134 tons; the quantity entered for home consumption was of Penang, 660 tons, against 704 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 6 204 tons, against 2,361 tons. The quantity exported was, of Penang, 32 tons, against 40 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 940 tons, against 236 tons. The stock on March 19 was, of Penang, 1,907 tons, against 711 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 32,526 tons, against 37,381 tons.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—The market continues quiet at the rates previously ruling; the sales including about 20 casks Ceylon at £42 for good quality; 17 casks Padang and 11 casks Manila were offered and bought in, the former at £41 to £42, the latter at £39. The quantity of Ceylon afloat for Great Britain is estimated at 51,814 cwt., against 46,409 cwt. at the corresponding date last year, and 25,442 cwt. in 1868.

CHINA MATTING.—Of 1,836 rolls offered only a few lots sold, 4/4 red check at 32s., good at 40s. to 44s. 6d., the remainder bought in, 4/4 white at 35s. to 44s., 5/4 red at 45s. per roll.

CHINA GRASS.—An offer of one bale only was bought in at £68.

CAMPHOR.—The eagerness to buy noticed in our report of the 14th ult. has subsided; with some difficulty about 500 cases China on the spot and to arrive were placed at 90s. per cwt.; but subsequently a new parcel of 186 tubs, 150 cases from Bombay, was retired thereat, and there were sellers at a little less. Advices of further shipments from China do not tend to strengthen the market. Japan is well held the stock being small.

CINNAMON.—At auction, 168 bales Ceylon partly of common quality mostly sold, fourth sort 9d. to 1s.; third, 1s. 5d. to 2s. 3d.; second, 1s. 9d. to 2s. 11d.; and first, 2s. 4d. to 3s. per lb. Of Chips, 1,051 packages have been offered and mostly sold, but at lower rates, bark, 2¾d. to 3d.; low middling to good fair thin shavings, 4d. to 6¼d.; good, 7d. per lb.

CUTCH.—At auction 535 boxes Pegue (Pagoda) realised 24s. 9d. per cwt., and the market now has a healthier appearance. Afloat from Calcutta and Singapore to London and Liverpool 712 tons, against 218 tons same time last year; to the Continent 224 tons, against 220 tons; and to America 540 tons, against 346 tons. From Rangoon, &c., to U.K. 329 tons, against 594 tons.

GAMBIER.—There is not much doing, but steady prices have been obtained; at auction 620 bales fair block party sold at 17s. 6d., and 1,000 bags pale Cubes were bought in at 20s. per cwt.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Siam steady; 30 cases retired above the value. Sumatra, 2nds firm; Palembang very dull. Penang 3rds, TT and Co., firm at £4 10s. to £5. Copal: 221 cases Manila, part retired above value; part fine clean yellow sold at 39s. to 40s.; drossy, 32s. 6d. to 34s. 6d. Damar, 5s. higher, and a good deal sold privately at 75s. for Singapore sorts. Gamboge firm, 5 cases blocky part sold at £14 10s.

Digitized by Google

GALLS.—There is a good inquiry but a great scarcity; the only parcel brought to sale, 78 boxes ordinary Japan, was bought in at 50s. per cwt.

HEMP.—The dulness which has so long pervaded the market continues; at auction 1,180 bales Manila were offered and nearly all bought in; common at £51, fair roping to superior at £53 to £55, only 700 bales being sold; superior at £54, fine white at £64 10s., chiefly damaged common at £46 5s. to £46 10s. for second class.

INDIA-RUBBER.—The demand continues good for clean quality, further sales of Borneo privately at 1s. 3½d.; 367 baskets Assam in public sale were mostly retired at 1s. 2d. to 1s. 5d.; common earthy and sticky continues neglected.

ISINGLASS.—Sells at higher prices, but only the better descriptions, sound and clean. 10 cases Straits sold, fair and middling tongue at 3s. 7d. to 3s. 9d., cake as 2s. 7d., leaf at 3s. 7d.

JAPAN WAX.—The public sales have included 765 boxes, part of which were offered without reserve; about two-thirds sold, realising good and fine, 70s. to 73s. 6d.; mixed, 63s. to 68s.; inferior greasy, 52s. to 62s. 6d. per cwt.

MUSK.—The improvement we lately reported has continued; in auction 17 caddies Tonquin Pod sold; fine flat thin, 33s. 6d. to 35s. 6d.; mixed and bally, 21s. 6d. to 22s. 6d.; of 2 tins Grain, part sold at 55s. for fine; 44s. middling; 17 caddies Cabardine Pod half sold at 17s. for fine thin.

OILS.—Aniseed: More business has been done, 8s. 8d. to 8s. 9d. being accepted. Cassia: Neglected, and sellers at 4s. 10d. to 5s.; large parcels of both now afloat. Nutmeg: White would sell readily.

PLUMBAGO.—The demand has continued pretty active, and holders have been enabled to realise firm prices, as American buyers are again operating. Stocks, however, are large, and middling lump, being neglected, is difficult to dispose of. Little is offering except at an advance, and of 1,114 barrels at sale, mostly old lots, a fair portion sold; fine silvery lump, 27s. to 28s.; inferior and middling, 11s. 3d. to 18s.; dust, 8s. to 11s. Finest quality is very scarce.

PEPPER.—Black continues in fair demand, and about 600 bags Singapore have been sold privately at 5d. per lb. for damaged on the spot, and 5d. to 5¼d. sound afloat, near at hand, but sellers for distant arrival at 4⅞d.; also about 5,000 bags Penang, on the spot, at 4¾d. to 4 13-16d.; 1,000 bags, now landing, at 4⅞d., and 1,500 bags, to arrive, price kept secret; only 645 bags Penang, salvage, ex Dharwar, offered at auction, and retired. White has fluctuated since our last to the extent of ¼d. per lb., and about 2,000 bags are reported sold at 6⅜d. to 6⅝d. per lb., but the market closes quieter, and with sellers at lower prices. Auctions have embraced 1,022 bags Singapore; half sold at 6⅝d. to 6¾d. for good, and 138 bags Penang retired.

RICE.—Slightly more inclination has been shown to buy, cleaners finding a better sale for their produce, but the transactions are still of limited extent; 5,000 bags Rangoon first-class sea-damaged have been sold at 8s. 3d. short prompt. On the spot about 12,000 bags have been sold, Necransie at 8s. 9d. and Rangoon at 9s. 3d., and common Ballam at 8s. per cwt. A parcel of 150 tons new table Bengal, just arrived, has realised 15s., and a cargo of New Rangoon, spring shipment, 9s. 7½d. landed, or 9s. 3d. quay terms.

RATTANS.—There is a good inquiry but no supply, and there are no transactions to report.

RHUBARB.—A new arrival of 40 chests per overland route fairly trimmed, good coat, even pinky and pale fracture, sold cheaper at 4s. 7d. to 4s. 1d., there being less demand. Other parcels of old import, 72 cases, were partly disposed of, good middling at 2s. 3d. to 2s. 6d.; common rough at 11d. to 1s. 3d.

ROOTS.—Colombo: Dull, at lower rates. China: Of 257 bags medium quality offered a portion sold at 38s. per cwt.

SPICES.—Mace is in fair inquiry, and 7 cases Penang partly sold at 3s. for fair reddish. Nutmegs are not inquired for, and the parcels offered were all bought in. Cloves: Penang, owing to the loss of the entire quantity on passage have met some demand, but no business has transpired. Zanzibar quiet, at 3¼d. to 3½d. per lb. Cassia Lignea is rather easier; 329 cases mostly sold, fair to good second quality, 127s. to 129s; rather coarse thirds, 120s. to 124s.; mouldy, 119s. to 120s. per cwt.

SAGO.—The market is steady; of 691 boxes small Pearl at auction a fair proportion sold at 18s. 6d. to 19s. per cwt. for good. Flour is very dull.

SAPANWOOD.—Low prices are current for Siam; 58 tons are reported sold, good and fair at £7 15s. to £8 10s.; coated and dirty at £7 10s. per ton; No business in Manila or Ceylon.

SHELLS.—Mother-o-Pearl: All descriptions are scarce, and realise high prices; small sales of Manila by private contract are reported at £9 10s. per cwt. Tortoise: Quiet, no transactions.

SOY.—There is no demand, and all offers at the sales have been withdrawn.

STICKLAC.—The market continues dull.

STAR ANISEEDS.—The tone of the market continues firm, the supply being short of the demand; private sales are reported at £6 5s.; nothing done at auction.

TAPIOCA.—The market is not very active; fine qualities bring extreme rates, whilst good sorts of Singapore are easier. Auctions have embraced 632 bags Singapore, the greater portion quitted at 3⅛d. to 3⅜d. per lb. for very superior small and granulated, and 2¼d. with 1 lot at 2½d., for good bold. 164 bags Penang retired.

TURMERIC.—Of 200 bags greenish bulby Java offered, a part sold at 20s. per cwt.

VERMILION.—There are buyers of China at 3s. per lb., but no business is reported.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.

TEA.

There has been a good demand for uncoloured Japan, and greens have also met with a fair inquiry. Other descriptions are in limited request, but as there are very few desirable lots offering, prices are sustained. The sales have been: 1,014 half-chests Green, per Willy Rickmers, 11,200 do. ex Benefactress, to arrive from San Francisco, via the Pacific Railroad; 770 do. green and 9,000 do. Japan, vessels not named. These sales have been made at the current quotations, which rule as follows:—Gunpowder and Imperial, Canton-made, common to fair, 75c. to 90c.; superior to fine, $1.8 to $1.30; extra fine to finest, $1.49 to $1.75. Myson Skin and Twankay: Canton made, nominal; common to fair, 18c. to 63c.; superior to fine, 65c. to 68c.; extra fine to finest, 70c. to 75c.; uncoloured Japan: common to fair, 73c. to 78c.; superior to fine 80c. to 90c.; extra fine to finest. 95c. to $1.15; Myson, common to fair, 65c. to 75c.; superior to fine, 89c. to 95c.; extra fine to finest, $1.5 to $1.20.

COFFEE.—The market for all kinds continues to present an inactive appearance, but holders being firm prices are well sustained at about the previous range, the current quotations being:—Java (mats), 20c. to 21c.; do. (Government bags), 20c. to 21½c.; Manila, 16c. to 17c.; Singapore, 18c. to 19c.; Native Ceylon, 17½c. to 19c. gold (duty paid). The stock of Manila on the 1st March was estimated at 3,600 bags, against 6,769 bags on March 1, 1869; of Java (Government) at 1,475 bags, against 1,541 bags; of Java, 14,558 mats, against 23,808 bags; of Ceylon nil, against 7,000 bags; of Singapore 200 bags, against nil.

CHINA MATTING.—The market is quiet, at the following prices:—4-4 white, 30c.; 5-4 white, 35c.; 6-4 white, 40c.; 4-4 red checked, 35c.; 5-4 red checked, 40c.; 6-4 red checked, 45c.

CAMPHOR.—China is quoted 18c. gold (in bond).

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed is quoted $2.12½; Cassia, $1.25 gold (in bond).

GAMBIER.—The current quotation is 4⅛c. to 4¼c. gold (duty paid); stock, small.

HEMP.—There has again been an absence of business in Manila; the nominal quotation is, as last reported, 14¼c. gold. The stock of Manila on the 1st March was estimated at 19,813 bales, against 7,000 bales at the corresponding date of 1869, and 19,750 bales in 1868. The imports into the United States from the 1st January to the 28th February, 1870, were 27,546 bales, against 26,675 bales during the corresponding period of last year, and the quantity afloat on the 28th February was 29,056 bales, against 20,796 bales at the same date last year.

INDIGO.—The market is unusually quiet, but with moderate stocks, and encouraging advices from abroad, prices of all descriptions are steady and firm. We note the sale of 16 cases Manila at $1.10 to 1.35, currency.

PRESERVED GINGER.—China is quoted $10 to $10.50 currency (duty paid).

RHUBARB.—The quotation for China is $1.50 to $2.50 currency (duty paid).

RICE.—A further reduction is reported in prices of all kinds except Rangoon, of which 450 bags have been sold for export at $3.12½ to 3.25 gold in bond. In other descriptions of East India no business has been done. The stock of East India on the 1st March was 6,582 bags, against 8,640 bags at the corresponding date last year, and 3,842 bags in 1868.

SPICES.—For most articles under this head there has been a fair inquiry, and we note the following sales:—50 cases Nutmegs, at $1 to 1.05; 250 cases do., private terms; $30 to 40 do., in lots, $1 to 1.02½; Mace, $1.18 to 1.25 for casks and cases; 1,200 bags pepper, 26½c. for Sumatra, and 27c. for Singapore; 100 bales Cloves, 26c; 200 bags Pimento, 18c. to 18½c.; and 3,000 to 4,000 mats Cassia, 45c. all gold.

SUGAR.—No sales of East India are reported; prices are nominally unchanged. The stock on the 1st March was of Java 310 baskets, against 310 baskets at the corresponding date last year; of Manila 263,380 bags, against 21,543 bags; of China 75,518 bags, against 7,825 bags.

SILK.—There has been a fair amount of business doing at fully previous rates; the demand has chiefly run upon Re-reeled Tsatlees and Canton Silks, and for these kinds a slight advance has been paid; finer qualities of all descriptions are scarce, and would command high rates. The following are the current quotations:—Tsatlee, Nos. 1 and 2, none; No. 3, $9.50 to 10; Nos. 4 and 5, $8.50 to 9; Re-reeled, $9 to 9.75; Taysaam, Nos. 1 and 2, $8.50 to 8.75; Nos. 3 and 4, $6.50 to 7.25; Re-reeled, none; Hainan, $9 to 10; Canton, extra, $8 to $8.50; Re-reeled, No. 1, $7.25 to $7.50; No. 2, $7; Japan, Mybash, $10.50; Sodai, $9 to 10; Oshio, Re-reeled, $10; Koshu, $8 to 9.50.

TIN.—A quieter tone pervades the market than when we last reported; the demand has entirely ceased, both for Straits and Banca, and no business has transpired; transactions might be effected at lower prices, but holders firmly resist any concession, and the closing quotations are 32¼c. for Straits, 34c. for Banca.

BOSTON MARKET REPORT.

COFFEE.—Small sales of Java are reported at 24c. to 25c. per lb. Stocks on the 1st March were of Java nil, against 42,550 pockets at the corresponding date last year; of Manila, 4,000 bags against 3,700 bags; of Singapore, 1,000 bags, against 2,796 bags.

HEMP.—The market for Manila is quiet at former prices.

SUGAR.—A dull tone prevails in the market; the only sale of East India recorded is of 50 baskets choice Java at 12¼c.

TIN.—There has been a limited business doing in Straits at 33c., and in Banca at 34c., gold.

TEA.—There has been a fair business doing in Oolongs, the low price of cargo Teas attracting the general attention of buyers. Sales are reported of 900 half-chests old crop. We quote common to fair at 60c. to 65c.; good to superior, 70c. to 85c.; fine, $1 to 1.20. In Japans but little doing, but market very firm. We quote inferior to common at 65c to 75c.; fair to good, 80c. to $1; fine, $1.10 to 1.30. Greens are a trifle lower, and, though offering at less than cost of import, sell slowly.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKET REPORT.

RICE.—Imports from Jan. 1 to Feb. 28—China, 39,644 mats. For China the range of the market, for fair to good, is 5¼c. to 5¾c. Extra No. 1, 5¾c. to 6c.

Digitized by Google

SUGAR.—Imports from Jan. 1 to Feb. 28—China, 716 packages; Manila, 29,713 sacks; Batavia, 3,001 packages. The stock in the hands of importers is considerable, amounting to several entire cargoes, aggregating six months' consumptive supply; holders, however, manifest no disposition to attempt forced sales. 500 bags No. 3 China sold to California refinery upon terms withheld.

TEA.—Imports from Jan. 1 to Feb. 28—China, 2,333 pkgs.; Japan, 5,481 pkgs. There are said to be divers orders here from New York for purchases of low grades of Green, and of which description our stock is comparatively light. The market for Japans and favourite brands of Oolongs exhibits a considerable degree of firmness, at rates heretofore current, with a disposition evinced in certain quarters to advance upon those prices.

CASUALTIES.

The Allahabad, Holmwood, from Samarang to Amsterdam, went ashore near Ambleteuse, March 17, crew saved; all efforts to get her off have as yet been unsuccessful. A large hole in her side had been stopped, and about 3,000 bags coffee taken out 21st inst., not very much damaged; the sugar must be considered as almost totally lost.

The Benvenue, Brown, of and for London, from Penang, with a general cargo, went ashore on the Owers Rock, 16th inst., and sunk during a fresh gale and heavy fog; crew landed at Worthing; steps have been taken to recover salvage by means of divers.

The Leopold Graaf van Limburg Stirum (Dutch brig), Campbell, from Batavia to Amsterdam, put into St. Helena Feb. 22; she had stranded in the Straits of Sunda Dec. 21, but got off with loss of an anchor, port chain, and warps, and without making any water; she was provided at St. Helena with an anchor and rope, and proceeded.

Advices from Alexandria, dated March 18, state that the Otterburn (str.), Stevenson, from London to Ceylon (via Suez Canal), which arrived at that port March 10, after being ashore near Rosetta, had been surveyed, and it was found that the rudder post had been carried away, the rudder badly injured, screw shaft bent and screw broken, and the afterpart of the vessel leaking considerably for a length of twenty-five feet on each side. It was recommended that temporary repairs should be made at Alexandria, and that the vessel should return to England to be repaired effectually.

Advices from New York, dated March 28, state that the George Becker, from Yokohama to that port had been in collision.

The Nettie Merryman, Rollins, which arrived at New York March 15, from Shanghai, experienced in 16 S, 86 E., a heavy hurricane from S.E. to N.W., which lasted thirty six hours, during which she sprung mainmast, lost fore-yard, sails, and spare spars, and stove bulwarks and one tank.

The Jeanie, Cromwell, which arrived at Boston March 21, from Foochow, put into Holme's Hole, March 17, for medical assistance and provisions; she had encountered a succession of heavy W. to W.N.W. gales from lat. 28, during which she started bowsprit, bulwarks, &c., and opened deck seams badly.

The Danube (str.), Hopkins, which left Liverpool, March 30, for for Singapore, China, &c. (via Suez Canal), with a general cargo, went ashore at Holden's Bed, near Wexford, on the 31st, was making about eighteen inches water per hour, and had five feet water in her hold; she was got off with the assistance of tugs, &c., and anchored in ten-fathom water. A portion of her cargo (about 30 tons) has been landed at Wexford.

The Scawfell, from Bangkok, arrived at Table Bay on Feb. 7, making three inches water per hour, and discharged cargo; the vessel was to be hove down.

THE STEAMER FUH-LE.

A short time since we stated that a tug, intended for service in the Chinese rivers, was being built at Hartlepool, and that she would be fitted with the new aëro-steam patent. She was completed some weeks ago, and received the Chinese designation of Fuh-Le, or "The Great Hong," but when making her way to the Thames through a fog she came into collision with a collier off Flamborough Head, and sustained considerable damage. Partly for repairs, and partly by litigation arising out of the accident, she has been detained at Gravesend; and a few days ago she made a trial trip, preliminary to her departure for China, in order to exhibit the working of her engines to some gentlemen who desired to test the value of Mr. Warsop's invention. Among those present were the Duke of Sutherland, Captain Tyler, of the Board of Trade, Mr. E. J. Reed, the Chief Constructor of the Navy, Captain Reed, R.N., Captain Mayne, C.B., the Rev. F. Tremlett, Mr. Holtz, and Mr. Wright. The party went on board at Gravesend where they were received by Captain Gibbon, who commands the Fuh Le. It was at first intended to go out to sea, but, as the tug was deeply loaded, and the weather rough, it was determined to take her down the river into smooth water, and to run her on the measured mile opposite Purfleet. Mr. Reed was anxious to satisfy himself with regard to the speed that could be attained, and also with regard to the effect of the aëro-steam system in preventing priming. In the middle of the first run it unfortunately happened that a loose or misplaced key rendered it necessary to put the air-pump out of gear, so that the question of speed was not determined. The moment the air was cut off the engines began to prime, and it was necessary to reduce the boiler pressure at once. It was not practicable to replace the key immediately, and therefore the experiment came to an end for the time. The speed, of course, had not been tested, but the evidence about priming was such as fully to substantiate the statements of the inventor.

The Fuh-Le was built by Messrs. Irvine and Co., of West Hartlepool, and is very strongly made of iron, schooner rigged, with screw propeller. She is 95 feet long, 18 wide, with 9 feet depth of hold, and of 100 tons gross tonnage. The engines are of 60-horse power nominal, with multitubular boilers of great strength, tested to 120lbs. per square inch. The patent aëro-steam apparatus was applied by Messrs. Eaton and Warsop, of Nottingham; Captain Gibbon having witnessed practically the value of the invention in preventing priming, promoting a great economy of fuel, enabling steam to be raised more rapidly and kept up more freely, and having also evidence of the great diminution of saline incrustation, decided to carry the patent out to China, where the muddy water of the rivers on which the Fuh-Le is to ply as a tug promotes priming to an aggravating degree. She left Gravesend on the 28th ult., wind and tide against her, and was seen passing Dover in the best possible style. On the way it had been discovered, on examining the patent part of the engines, that a principal inlet valve had been maliciously tampered with, and screwed so tight as to throw a back pressure on the air-pump and the donkey-engine working it. The moment this was rectified all the apparatus worked most satisfactorily, and the fuel consumption was so much reduced as to throw the stoker into ecstacy at the relief given him. In being the pioneer of improvements of such value to all owners of steam power in the Far East, where fuel is so costly, Captain Gibbon is a public benefactor, and we cordially bid him and his craft God speed. The Prince of Wales has taken a lively interest in the description of the invention, as illustrated to him by Mr. Eaton, by the aid of a model and drawings; and his Royal Highness was also informed of the fact of the Fuh-Le being about to make the passage to China via the Suez Canal.

NINTH REPORT

Of the COURT of DIRECTORS to the ORDINARY YEARLY GENERAL MEETING of SHAREHOLDERS, held at the BANKING HOUSE of the CORPORATION, HONGKONG, on THURSDAY, the 3rd February, 1870.

To the Proprietors of the HONGKONG AND SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION.

Gentlemen,—The Directors have now to submit to you a General Statement of the affairs of the Corporation and Balance-sheet for the half-year ending on 31st December last.

The net profits for that period, including $116,791.51 brought forward from last account, after paying all charges, deducting interest paid and due, and making full provision for bad debts, amount to $373,424.27, of which, after taking out rebate on bills not yet due, and remuneration to Directors, there remains for appropriation $356 280.12.

From this sum the Directors recommend the distribution of a Dividend of $7.50 per Share on the Paid-up Shares, and of $3 per Share on the New Shares, being equivalent to 6 per centum for the half-year; this will absorb $210,000; and of the balance, the Directors propose carrying $100,000 to the Reserve Fund, and $46,280.12 to the credit of New Profit and Loss Account.

If this appropriation of profits be confirmed by the Meeting, the Shareholders will have received as Dividend for the year 1869 the sum of $390,000 (12 per centum on the Paid-up Capital), and the Reserve Fund, on the 31st December, 1869, will be raised to $800,000, independent of the sum of $46,280.12 undivided profits to be carried forward.

Although these results are not equal to those realised in the two previous years, the Directors think they must be considered satisfactory, if the Proprietors bear in mind the difficulties which the Corporation, in common with all other Banking Institutions in the East, have had to contend with, in consequence of the cheapness of money at home, and the unexpected and unremunerative turn taken by Exchanges at various times during the period under review.

The other sources of revenue of the Bank have not only remained unaffected, but have shown a steady increase, so that with better prospects in Exchanges for the present year, and a revival of Commercial activity now apparent both in China and in Japan, the Directors feel confident that the general profits of the Corporation will resume their former proportions.

AGENCIES.

The various Branches of the Bank and the Agencies of recent organisation are working satisfactorily, and a new Agency is being organised at Hiogo.

CALLS.

The third Call of $25 per share on the new shares in the capital of the Corporation will fall due on 1st July next. In view of the probable development of business which may be created in Japan by the introduction of railways, and also to facilitate the working of one or two Agencies of the Corporation, contemplated to be established in the course of a year or two, the Directors believe that it will be consistent with the true interest of the Bank to advance the date of payment of the last two Calls (each of $25 per share) on the new shares, and to make the same fall due on 1st July, 1871, and 1st July, 1872, respectively, instead of the dates previously fixed, say 1st January, 1872, and 1st January, 1873; timely notice will be given of the ultimate resolution of the Court on the subject.

DIRECTORS.

Several changes have taken place in the Board.

The Directors have to regret the death of Mr. J. P. Duncanson; and Mr. W. Lemann having resigned, on leaving the Colony, the vacancies have been filled by the nomination of Messrs. H. B. Lemann and Thomas Pyke.

Mr. H. B. Lemann has been appointed Chairman for the year 1870 and Mr. J. B. Taylor, Deputy Chairman.

According to the provisions of the Deed of Settlement, three members of the Court, Messrs. W. H. Forbes, A. Joost, and S. D. Sassoon, retire from the Direction, but are eligible for re-election, and offer themselves accordingly.

AUDITORS.

The Directors have much pleasure in recommending the election, for the year 1870, of the present Auditors, Messrs. M. Macaulay and J. M. Vickers.

H. B. LEMANN, Chairman.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).

OPENING OF THE NEW SUBMARINE ROUTE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND INDIA.

The Cable between Suez and Bombay having been successfully laid, the new submarine line is now open for traffic, and messages for India will be received at all the Postal Telegraph Offices in Great Britain and Ireland.

Until the opening of the Falmouth and Malta line, telegrams from the United Kingdom will be sent by the Anglo-Mediterranean Company's line from Turin to Egypt, and thence by the British Indian cable to Aden and Bombay. Both Companies' lines are worked throughout by English clerks.

To insure the transmission of messages by this route, it is necessary that the sender should insert the words "Via Malta" in the text of the despatch, immediately after the address of the receiver.

(By order) JOHN T. BURT, Secretary.

THE MAILS, &c.

The present inward mail was transferred to the P. and O. steamer Nyanza, owing to the accident to the Imperatrice in the Suez Canal. The Nyanza was detained some thirty hours at Alexandria for it, but reached Marseilles in good time nevertheless. Our despatches were delivered somewhat late in the day.

The next inward mail, due next Monday, should bring the following dates:—Yokohama, Feb. 27; Shanghai, March 2; Hong Kong, March 8; Singapore, March 15; Galle, March 24. Telegrams in advance of the succeeding mail (Hong Kong, March 22) were received on the 7th. Via Kiachta, Shanghai telegrams to March 21 came in this morning. The British-Indian line continues to work well.

A Post-office notification has been issued, to the effect that mails for the French packets will in future be made up twelve hours (not twenty-four hours) later than hitherto—viz., on Friday morning, with a supplementary mail on Friday evening. This will commence with the outward mail of the present week.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices by the present mail are to the 20th February. The outward French mail of Dec. 23 was received Feb. 17. The excitement aroused by the Oneida case had apparently died out, and no new topic of interest had arisen to supply its place. The only items mentioned in the local papers are an amateur concert in aid of a fund for a church organ, and a subscription ball—the former a great success, the latter rather a failure.

Materials have reached Osaka for a tramway from that place to Temposan, and a telegraph is to be erected between Kobe and Osaka. The Hiogo News says:—A rumour has been current amongst the Japanese for some time past that Chosiu intends to throw the port of Simoneseki open to foreign trade. We have made inquiries about its correctness, and can only find that the intention is not known to any of the people who should have a voice in the matter. That the rumour should gain credit even is a fact which shows that foreign trade is no longer looked upon with the feelings of dislike and dread which were current a few years ago; and in choosing Simonoseki as the port for the first experiment of voluntary admission of the world, Chosiu may be influenced by his experience in 1863.

TAKASIMA COAL MINE.

We (Japan Weekly Mail) have received from Nagasaki the following interesting account of the Takasima Coal mine, which promises to reward with rich fruits the untiring exertions bestowed on it by Mr. T. B. Glover. It was recently visited by H. B. M. Minister, Admiral Kellett, and some of the officers of the Salamis, and is an object of great curiosity and attraction to travellers in Japan. One of the galleries has been named after Sir Harry Parkes, and one is called the "Caird Gallery," in honour of a young lady who, accompanied by her brother on a tour round the world, recently visited Nagasaki and descended the mine.

The island is about five miles from the entrance of Nagasaki harbour, is exceedingly picturesque of itself, rising abruptly from the sea to the south, and sloping gradually towards the north, in several broken valleys and contortioned hills. A steep conical island, some 400 yards from Takasima, marks the entrance to the harbour, where there is deep water close up to the rocks, and where, except only in gales from the N.W., the largest sized vessels can safely lie at anchor. A short breakwater will, however, soon remove the only inconvenience that ships could suffer in loading here during any time of the year. A roadway already leads from the mouth of the shaft to the shore, and on this the first railway in Japan is now actually working; the distance is but small certainly, and instead of a locomotive the only power employed is coolie labour; but the excitement of the latter in racing the coal trucks along the road is quite as great as the passage now of an express train through a Somersetshire village.

The coal strata of the island crop through the southern slope and dip to a gradual decline towards the north. For years the Japanese have been working from the southern end, following the coal in its dip through uneven and tortuous passages. During the past five years they have penetrated to a very considerable distance, the coal having been long the favourite of any found in the south of Japan, and even in spite of their great difficulties they have found much profit from its working. Water has naturally been their greatest enemy, and during three months of the year it has been more than their system of water wheels could keep under. The labour also required to carry the coals from the extreme working has been excessive and has added largely to the cost of production, during those months of the year when the mine could be kept open.

Glover and Co.'s shaft, struck upon the opposite end of the island to the Japanese workings, reaches the first principal seam of coal (one of eight feet) at a depth of about 150 feet below the surface—the same seam at the southern extremity of the island coming through the hill-side at about the same height above the level of the sea. A further ten foot seam is known to be but a short distance below the one now opened, and will, ere long, also be opened; but meantime the present winnings show an unlimited supply of coals for at least ten years' hard working.

A report upon the seam of coal is attached, made by two practical miners who have just come out from England to take charge of the workings below ground.

The ventilation of the mine has been easy to attain, and is now most complete; a drive of some three hundred yards intercepts a gallery cut by the Japanese in our direction, and the result is a thorough draft of air right through the island. The same result could not even have been obtained so effectually had the ordinary plan of sinking another shaft been adopted, whereas the saving in expense has of course been immense.

A large party of visitors descended the shaft the other day, and, after an apparently interminable walk, first through the high galleries of the new workings, then sloping through the uneven passages of the old (which, having been made too broad, had allowed the floor and roof gradually to contract), emerged into daylight upon the opposite side of the island, a distance of about a mile.

At present the coal is brought up to the harbour of Nagasaki in native junks, but a great step will be made when permission is obtained for colliers to load down at the island, for assisting in which it is proposed to employ a suitable tug-boat. Application for the necessary permission has been made, but so far the local Government fail to see that it would be an advantage to them to encourage the mine to the utmost of their power, and even refuse permission for the construction of a coal jetty to the depot formed in Nagasaki. They fail to see, so far, that it is wealth to their country if the revenues of one of their princes is increased, and an addition to their Custom-house receipts if the consumption of a duty-paying article is encouraged.

CHINA.

NEWCHWANG.

A correspondent of the Shanghai Evening Courier writes as follows:—

Our weather is now very cold. On several occasions the thermometer has fallen three and four degrees below zero. The river became frozen from bank to bank on the early morning of the 6th inst., and so severe must the frost have been that by eight o'clock of the same evening the river was used as a highway by dozens of Chinamen.

It seems that greater damage was done by the heavy rains of last summer than was at first estimated. In several places there were considerable patches of millet completely destroyed from the rain rotting the roots, and in many of the northern districts of the province where this result did not take place our unusually early winter prevented the grain reaching maturity. Already the almost, if not altogether, invariable effect of such misfortunes is seen in small bands of mounted robbers traversing the country between two and three hundred le to the north of this port. These bands are generally not large, but occasionally several of them coalesce when they are in special need of supplies, for the purpose of attacking a large village or a small town. Their wants supplied, these bands again resume their former proportions, and wander about appropriating a horse or two here, and money, food, and clothing wherever they can be found. It seems strange that Imperial forces do not at once put down these vagrant bands, for as there is only a comparatively small proportion of people suffering from actual want, these bands are principally, if not altogether, made up of the very lowest of the poor—those who never work when they can eat without doing so.

It is very fortunate that with a poor harvest there are not also bad roads. If much snow had fallen the roads would have been soft, and in a country like this bad roads would have very materially added to the hardships of an indifferent harvest. The thoroughfares are not nearly so crowded with carts as they usually are at this season; some people think there will not be one half the amount of grain stored in the native hongs this year that there was last. The indifferent harvest will not, I think, account for this great reduction. Millet, peas, and all grains, are dearer than they were last year.

HANKOW.

From this port we hear that when the mail left the river had nearly reached its lowest winter level, being forty-five feet below highest flood mark, and so shallow as to prevent the larger river steamers coming up to Hankow. Great gulfs and vacancies appear underneath the native houses all along the margin of the river, which from the city level appears to have sunk to a surprising depth, revealing the fragile supports upon which an important part of the city is built. This style of architecture, if indeed it deserves such a name, is surely as primitive as that of the post-diluvial inhabitants of the pile-built houses of the Swiss lakes. Present utility at the least possible cost seems to be the ruling idea; elaborate and costly measures, for the sake of public convenience or ornament, the people of themselves never combine to effect. Their guilds are but club-houses, and form no exception to the general lack of public spirit. A correspondent writes:—

"With the exception of a few frosty days, the weather up to February 10 has been mild and fine beyond precedent. Two or three days last week resembled summer days for warmth, the thermometer registering 84 in the sun at 3 P.M. This appears to have brought matters to a crisis; a tremendous storm of thunder and lightning making the night of Friday the 4th inst. hideous. Rain fell plenteously, and, breathed on by the north wind, froze as it fell till every branch and twig was cased in icy tube, and every leaf was sheathed in a glove of ice. Icicles hung pendant from the leaves, and every breath of wind as it swayed the branches (of only poor willow-trees, alas!) gave out a strange unwonted crackling sound from rupture of the icy bonds—cold enough to kill but too frail to bind the trunks and branches they invested. We wanted but the glory of a pine forest or beech grove to arrest and fix the magic wonders of the night—wonders which nature seems almost to waste upon the dead level and treeless, bleak monotony of these dreary flats."

CHIN-KIANG.

The Commissioner of Customs at this port writes:—"The statistics for the quarter show an immense increase in all our principal foreign imports, such as cotton goods, woollens, sugar, and sandalwood. For these articles the demand has been most remarkable, particularly for shirtings, the import of which for this term nearly equals that of the entire year of 1868. The demand from the northern inland marts continues to improve, and notwithstanding the rumours of dull business, owing to recent floods, our quarterly return of cottons sent inland exceeds the high figures of the previous quarter by about 50,000 pieces. The towns of Tsi-nan-fu Tung-ch'ang-fu and Tsi-ning-chou, in Shantung, have taken about five times the quantity of shirtings they took last term, and the demand from many other cities has increased in the same extraordinary manner. The largest consumer of grey shirtings supplied by Chinkiang is Hsu-chou-fu, which alone took 13,750 pieces during the three months."

SHANGHAI.

From this port we have advices to the 23rd Feb. The English mail of Dec. 31 was received on the 21st Feb. We take the following items of news from the North China Herald:—

The new Land Regulations, as finally amended and approved by the Ministers for England, Prussia, France, Austria, and America, have been at length printed and circulated. A minute bearing the joint signatures of these gentlemen, explains, at the outset, that they have effect only on the north of the Yang-king-pang, the settlement on the south being under certain regulations promulgated by the French Consul. Provision is made that individuals wishing to sue the Council may do so before a "Court of foreign Consuls," to be established by the whole body of Treaty Consuls.

A meeting of shareholders in the French Gas Company was held on the 16th Feb., when a satisfactory statement of accounts was put forward. Tls. 4,000 had been earned during the past year, which had, however, been absorbed by extraordinary expenses. The 8 per cent. dividend guaranteed by the French Municipality is again claimed, and will be devoted as before to reducing the company's debt, which now stands at Tls. 10,800. A letter was read, from the Secretary to the English Municipal Council, asking at what rate the company would be prepared to light the lamps in this Concession. The matter was left for the directors' consideration. The very satisfactory statement was incidentally made that the Shanghai Gas Company intends to reduce its charge from $4.50 to $3.50 per 1,000 feet, during the current year.

A meeting of the Shanghai Female School Society was held on the 17th Feb., at which the report and accounts for the past year were submitted. The receipts had amounted to $986.54; the expenditure to $770.24. The number of pupils at present in the school is fifteen; but it is hoped to increase these to thirty, if sufficient accommodation can be obtained. The scholars are taught plain sewing, household work, and Christianity, and their progress is satisfactory. Two of the oldest are also being taught English.

A meeting of members of the Race Club was held on Feb. 21, at which the accounts were presented, showing a total income of Tls. 10,210, and expenditure Tls. 8,065. There is a balance in hand of Tls. 2,145, Tls. 1,550 of which is to go to payment of interest on, and reduction of, Mr. Keswick's mortgage. It was also resolved to impose a tax of Tls. 5 per annum on pedestrians using the racecourse. This is a favourite promenade with many who pay nothing towards its support, and the claim for this small sum towards its maintenance is a fair one. Sir E. Hornby, Messrs.

Anneke, Coutts, Cordes, Dallas, Hyslop, and Little were elected stewards for the ensuing year.

We are glad to hear, on good authority, that the report mentioned by the London and China Herald, that the North German Confederation entertained an idea of giving up the extra-territorial rights guaranteed in its treaty is entirely without foundation, and that the news concerning the appointment of the Commissioner of Customs to act as North German Consul, at Swatow, is also founded on a misconception, which will shortly be explained. Very probably the first of these statements is another of Mr. Burlingame's devices to make believe in the success and importance of his mission.

The Recreation Fund has been at length rescued from the chaos of conflicting interests in which it appeared hopelessly sinking, and placed on a clear and legal footing. The decision of the Court appears virtually to extinguish the shareholders, and to vest independent control in the hands of five trustees—the right of the former to repayment of their $50 shares being alone reserved. The Chairman of the Municipal Council and Messrs. Johnson, Reid, Forbes and Groom are appointed the first trustees, with power to fill vacancies in their number, so long as three remain; if, through absence, death or other cause, their number should fall below two, the Court is to be appealed to, to appoint new members. Seeing the difficulty there has always been to get together a meeting of shareholders, we imagine the latter will readily acquiesce in a decision which places the fund in a clear position, and gives them a definite chance of recovering the value of their shares.

A Tientsin correspondent mentions a report that Chung-how is said to view the introduction of road steamers with favour, and that it is not unlikely one may be allowed to ply some day. The project of a railway from Tientsin to Chaitang has also come up again for discussion.

A meeting was held of the Asiatic Society on Wednesday evening, at which Dr. MacGowan read an interesting paper on "Chinese Lotteries and Money Jobbing." A rather animated debate on the recognition of lotteries, and of gambling generally, followed.

Chen, the Native Magistrate of the Mixed Court, has just taken a second wife—that is to say, having lived forty years with his wife without issue, he is allowed to promote one of his concubines, by whom he has had children, to the dignity of wife; the first wife, however, still retains senior rank.

The last two numbers of the China Magazine contain some excellent photographs of Shanghai, amongst them the Min Pagoda, the Masonic Hall, and a view of the English side of the Yang-king-pang. The books contain interesting translations of Chinese tales, and are in every respect superior to the earlier numbers.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

(Before CHAS. W. GOODWIN, Esq.—Feb. 18)

IN RE BARNES DALLAS.

Present.—Messrs. E. J. Hogg, A. Michie, F. B. Johnson, and E. Lavers.

Messrs. Hogg Bros. proved debts to the amount of Tls. 7,433.83 less Tls. 353.08 for brokerage, and as attorneys of William Hogg, England, debts to the amount of Tls. 23,473—admitted.

F. B. Johnson appearing for Jardine, Matheson, and Co., proved debts to the amount of Tls. 12,891.87, which were admitted.

A. Michie, representing Killick, Martin and Co., London, put in a claim for balance of insurance on a steamer in 1863, Tls. 1,733 36.

In reference to this claim Mr. Dallas said: In 1863 a steamer belonging to Mr. Richardson and myself was insured in London by the agents, Messrs. Dallas, Pearson and Co. It was insured for £481 17s. 6d. I was told of this subsequently, and that the amount was owing to Messrs. Killick, Martin and Co. This was after Mr. Richardson's death. I said I had paid a previous insurance, and it was the place of the executors of Mr Richardson to pay this amount. They paid a portion of it, but were unable to pay the full amount.

Mr. Michie explained: Killick, Martin and Co. sent me this account in sterling to collect. I converted it into taels, adding interest. I applied for payment to Mr. Dallas. He said that Mr. Richardson, as joint owner, ought to pay it. He did not dispute his liability, but merely said the other ought to pay. I wrote to to the executors of Mr. Richardson. They acknowledged their liability, but first for one half only. I received from them Tls. 400, part payment. The balance now due is Tls. 1,733.36.

The Judge reserved the claim, and advised Mr. Michie to write to Messrs. Killick, Martin and Co. to explain that these proceedings were started before the new Act came into force.

Bankrupt to get his discharge on March 21.

HONG KONG.

From this port we have advices to March 2. The outward mail of Jan. 14 was received on Feb. 28. The following items are from the Daily Press:—

The long negotiation with reference to the amalgamation of the docks has now so far progressed that the matter will be decided finally within the next few days. Opinion upon the question has now become almost unanimous, and it is to be hoped that the amalgamation will be duly effected. It is perhaps worthy of note that the shareholders who were appointed to form a committee in conjunction with the directors consisted chiefly of gentlemen who had expressed themselves rather against than in favour of amalgamation—a circumstance which is in some degree a matter of congratulation, as it forms a guarantee that the final decision on the subject will not be come to except after those who are least anxious for amalgamation have felt themselves justified in concurring in the measure.

Mr. Chaloner Alabaster, H.B.M. Vice-Consul at Swatow, who was recently appointed Vice-Consul at Shanghai, takes his departure by the present Messageries Imperiales steamer for Europe, on leave for eighteen months.

It is currently reported that further large grants will be required for the completion of that unlucky undertaking, the Pokfolum Reservoir. The information is not official, but if it prove true, as has been stated, that the works so far as they have gone are in many respects a failure and will have to be overhauled, the public of Hong Kong may look to the pleasure of paying additional taxation before the much-wanted waterworks can be completed. The incident will show the gravely pernicious results of the financial policy so patly enunciated at the Legislative Council, and the public will have an admirable opportunity of judging of the correctness or otherwise of the principle of finance enunciated by the Colonial Secretary, which involves the astounding proposition that when once the money has been voted by the Council, the Government may devote it to any purposes they see fit. If large additional funds are now to be asked for, to complete the reservoir, the heavily-taxed public of Hong Kong will be able accurately to judge how far the sum of $38,000, which was voted for the reservoir, and was put down as a "saving" in the last accounts, and so made use of for objects, with regard to which no money had been voted at all, was of the nature stated. No wonder, when the finances are managed in this manner, that gambling money is indispensable!

Ma-chow-wong has been ordered to find security as before, to be forthcoming at any time within the next two months. He was told that it was not considered advisable to interfere with his business arrangements, provided they occupied a reasonable time, say a month or five weeks. If it should be found necessary he would be brought up again within the two months, and then he would be sent to the Governor, who would probably carry out the ordinance which empowered him to deport him. He was desired to call at the magistracy, when his arrangements should be concluded, and report the fact. There were special reasons, which it was unnecessary for his Worship to specify, why it was necessary to deal thus with him, though it was a principle of English law that a man having once expiated an offence was afterwards free on that particular score. Wong-a-kee insinuated that he was different from ordinary old offenders, who he acknowledged were frequently treated as suspects. His Worship: "Why that's exactly what the police think! It was just because he was different from ordinary old offenders that he was differently dealt with."

The accounts received of the proceedings of the London merchants regarding the new Convention had naturally attracted much attention. The Daily Press, alluding to the letter drawn up by the Committee appointed at the meeting at Messrs. Matheson's, says:—"Arguments such as these, it is certain, will not stand against a plain matter-of-fact representation by an influential combination of the mercantile men at home, who are interested in China; and there is every indication, at the present time, that the Burlingame Mission will, in a very different manner than it intended, have the effect of bringing to the notice of the Home Governments the true bearing of the Chinese question. It is inconceivable that, if their attention be properly called to the matter, the Home Government can think of accepting a Convention so defective as that which has been concluded by Sir Rutherford Alcock."

The China Mail says:—"The London and China Express by this mail is unusually interesting, and though we transfer numbers of items of news from it, we cannot reproduce all which deserves special note in its enlarged edition now to hand. In the copious comments which have been made upon the Alcockian Convention, and the general discussion of its conditions by Chambers of Commerce, at public meetings, and in the columns of the London press, there is at least one comfort, viz., to know that people at home at least are beginning to consider that the question of British interests at this distance is their own interest at home, and includes the tradal and other interests of Western nations generally. Another satisfactory element which presents itself, on a general review of the present state of the China question, is that, in the presence of the writers to the London and China Express, the Standard, and the Globe, such unaccountable vagaries of illogical composition as that given to the world by the otherwise sane author of the work entitled 'Greater Britain' must fall innocuous upon the stronger crust of English common sense which finds expression in better-informed quarters.

"From the articles which appear in the home papers to hand, a general estimate may be formed of the relative value attachable to the statements of the upholders of the present 'conciliatory' policy of Lord Clarendon. Sir C. Dilke's letter to The Times has been already well and ably answered by the Standard, the Globe, and the China Express; but it contains one or two statements bearing on the press in China, which at present we can only characterise as rash, reserving fuller vindication for a more convenient season. If Sir Charles would compile a book containing all he does not know about China, its size would be, to say the least, cumbrous and unwieldy; but as he has set up as an author, and his ignorance, when blazoned forth by The Times, may do harm in some quarters, we shall put his admirers and ourselves right with the world on another occasion.

"In contrast to the blast of Sir Charles' penny trumpet, we have the large meeting of well-informed and clear-headed, practical, business men, who give their whole weight against the latest feeble ebullition of the 'peaceful action' of Sir Rutherford Alcock, viz., the new Convention. This may be said, of course, to be a purely commercial opposition; but it proves nevertheless—what must be very satisfactory to those who swear by the policy 'which would not have been tolerated 200 years ago'—that we are not so far advanced by it now as we were in 1858!"

The address of sympathy at the sad and unfortunate disaster which befell the U.S. Oneida, from the community of this port, other than Americans had been presented to Rear Admiral Rowan, commanding the U.S. Asiatic Squadron. The address was signed by the entire community, with scarcely an exception. Admiral Rowan, in receiving it, thanked the gentlemen presenting it, on his own part and that of his officers, and the Government he represented, for this warm expression of sympathy on the part of the Hong Kong community, and expressed the pleasure he would have in forwarding it to his Government, by whom it would be received in the same cordial spirit in which it had been dictated.

We (China Mail) learn that in the allotment of shares in the two fire insurance companies, applications were as to allotments in a proportion of fifteen, or twenty to two, and that a large number of applicants have not even got a solitary share allotted to them. This looks well for the prospects of both companies.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The cremation ceremonies of his Majesty the late King of Siam were to commence at Bangkok on the 7th March, and from all accounts we have heard will be one of the most magnificent spectacles afforded in the East for many years. The preparations have been on a most extensive scale, and the expense is almost fabulous. The ceremonies were to continue until the 18th March, when the pyre was to be ignited, and the remains reduced to ashes. The ashes would then be collected and placed in a golden urn, and treasured up with those of his predecessors.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

The Batavia Handesblad gives the following additional information regarding the Belgian coolie ship Frederic, the burning of which, in Batavia roads, was noticed in our last issue:—

"We understand that the local authorities here, after having brought on shore the 365 Chinese from the Frederic, have provided for their maintenance in the most economical way possible, by concluding an agreement with a contractor for the food needed by them at 18 cents per day per head. Already twenty of the Chinese have had to be taken to the Chinese Hospital. The sudden change in their residence and mode of life, as well as the circumstance that most of them have been taken out of the water, will sufficiently point out a cause for sickness. It is not, however, to be denied that the situation of their present abiding place is by no means conducive to health in the long run. With an eye to this, the local authorities have sought for a better situation, where a bamboo shed for the lodging of the Chinese will be set up. The care of them at the present moment rests wholly on the police, as the captain, through want of an agency for the owners of the ship, or of the firm in Peru on whose account the coolies were engaged and shipped, is powerless to defray their expenses on shore, say, for their residence and subsistence, and medical treatment at Batavia; and the Belgian Consul, owing to the presence of the captain, and perhaps influenced also by the circumstance that these natives of the Heavenly Kingdom are not Belgian subjects nor never will be, seems to have no call or authority to concern himself more particularly with the progress or lot of the rescued coolies. We understand the captain intends to look out for a ship which may be engaged to convey the coolies to the place of their destination."

The N. B. Handelsblad says:—"The railway from Samarang to Soerakarta is now open to the public. A commission has been appointed, to hear the difficulties regarding some land-holders, who placed difficulties in the way of the expropriation of plots of ground for the Batavia and Buitenzorg line of railroad, at which people are already hard at work."

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The outward English mail of Jan. 28 was delivered at this port on the 3rd March. Advices by the present mail are to March 9, but, like those from other ports, bring little news of importance. The following items are from the Singapore Daily Times:—

The colonial steamer Peiho leaves this afternoon (March 9) for Malacca, to convey the Chief Justice, who will hold the sessions there. Unfortunately, he was prevented from going on Monday, owing to the Peiho being despatched in search of the Ellenborough. Some inconvenience will no doubt be occasioned by the fact that the proclamation fixed the day for opening the session on the 8th inst., while the Chief Justice will not arrive there before the 10th.

We stated a few days since that the case against the owners of the powder hulk Statesman had been concluded, but that judgment had not yet been given. This is a mistake. It appears that the case is not yet closed, but will come on again for hearing after the return of the Chief Justice from Malacca.

The steamer Japan, we learn, has been purchased by Messrs. Kim Seng and Co., for $40,000, and is to be placed on the line between Singapore, Malacca, and Penang, in conjunction with the steamer Fair Singapore.

Colonel Glover, one of the directors of the British-Indian Telegraph Extension Company, has arrived at Penang from Ceylon, for the purpose of making preliminary arrangements, such as selecting a site for the landing of the cable, establishment of offices, &c. The place at which the cable will be landed will probably be in the neighbourhood of Tanjong Tokong.

The Daily Times reprints the protest of the Straits Settlements Association in London to Lord Granville against the construction of the new steamer for the colonial service, with some comments concluding with the following suggestion:—"We are of opinion that should Lord Granville, with the knowledge he now has, sanction—or in fact not at once countermand—the construction of the steamer, the only dignified course for the unofficial members to pursue is one and all to tender their resignations with a declaration of the grounds on which they do so. We are not given to advocate extreme measures such as this, and it is only after the most earnest consideration that we do so now. At no former time was there so distinct and palpable an issue between the official and un-official elements of the Council—and it is, moreover, one directly affecting the expenditure of revenue—and if the former is to be allowed to prevail over the latter by force of numbers only, we may presume the same course will be pursued on all future and possibly very much more important occasions. By the resignation of the un-official members, the legislature of the colony will doubtless lose much practical wisdom, but the occasion is worth the sacrifice, and we may find good come of it in the end; but whether or no, we have no right to ask our independent men to sit in a Council merely to give a constitutional colour to proceedings they are powerless to control."

THE TANJONG PAGAR DOCK COMPANY.

The half-yearly accounts of this company have been presented at a general meeting, and show a very improving state of things. After paying a dividend of seven per cent. to the preference shareholders and nine per cent to the debenture holders, the directors commence their new half-year with an amount at the credit of profit and loss. Full repairs to the works have been charged against revenue, and the wharves, dock, and machine shops are stated to be in a thoroughly efficient condition. During the past half-year no less than thirteen steamers and twenty-three sailing-vessels have been docked and repaired, and the business at the wharves has been added to by the steamers of two new companies formed to ply packets between the Straits and China.

It is understood that the full amount is subscribed to enable the directors to replace the 9 per cent. debentures falling due next October, at the lower rate of 7 per cent., and thus a further increase to the company's income is ensured. Mr. Lipscombe, of Messrs. Boustead and Co., has joined the board, and to them we offer our congratulations, not merely on the prospect of their undertaking proving a great success financially, but upon the important service they have rendered to the colony of the Straits Settlements.

Commercial Report.

IMPORTS.

SHANGHAI.—The business in Grey Shirtings had not been on a very large scale, and had consisted chiefly of resales by speculators; prices showed little change on those previously quoted. The market had a firm aspect, although the native dealers were unwilling purchasers at quotations. White Shirtings: The demand had been less active, but holders seemed indisposed to part with their goods at lower rates. T Cloths: A fair inquiry had existed for the finest and commonest kinds of 6 and 7 lbs. goods. The prices offered, however, had generally been under the ideas of holders, and hence operations had been curtailed. The position of the market, especially for 7 lbs. makes, was not very satisfactory. Drills: English and Dutch had commanded some attention, but beyond sales at auction of damages nothing had transpired in American fabrics. Sales of English had been made freely at Tls. 3.55 to 3.60 per piece, and of Dutch at Tls. 3.47 to 3.50 per piece. Jeans: Still neglected. Sheetings, of which the stock was not heavy, would be taken if holders were a little less firm in their demands. Fancy Cotton Goods were no less reported upon. Woollens: The market showed no change worthy of remark. Some Crape Lustres had changed hands at Tls. 4.15 to 4.25 per piece, but the inquiry for them had been by no means active. Metals: Nail Rod Iron, during the week 10,000 bundles had been taken at Tls. 2.25 to 2.30, the latter price being for a parcel containing a fair quantity of small-sized Iron. For this kind, however, importers were very firm, and would not do business at current rates; quotations unaltered. Coals: The market remained in a very unsatisfactory state for shippers; Cardiffs sold at Tls. 6.55; for other kinds rates were nominally the same. The current quotations were:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.4 to 2.0.7; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2 2.3 to 2.2.8; 9 to 9.12 lbs., Tls. 2.6.5 to 3.1.8. White Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2 to 3.0; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.4.5 to 1.6.8; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.5 to 1.8.5; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls 2.0.5 to 2.1.5; XX Tls. 2.4.0; American Jeans, 30 yds., Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.8 5; American Sheetings, 40 yds., Tls. 3.6 to 3.8; White Figured Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2.3 to 2.2.6; Dyed, Tls. 2.7.5 to 2.8 5. Brocades, White, 40 yards, Tls. 2.2.4 to 2.3; Dyed, Tls. 3.2 to 3.2.5. Damasks, Dyed, 40 yards, Tls. 4.2 to 4.4. Gentian Shirtings, Tls. 2.9 to 3. Chintz, Tls. 1.6 to 1 9; Turkey Reds, 24 yards, 2.0.5 to 2.5.5. Camlets, English, SS, per piece, Tls. 11.7.0 to 12.2.5; SSS, Tls. 10.5 to 11; Spanish Stripes, per yard, Tls. 0.5.0 to 0.5.5; Medium Broad and Habit Cloth, Tls. 0.9 to 1.5.0; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yards, HH, per piece, Tls. 6.1; CPH, Tls. 6.0.5; Assorted HH, Tls. 5.9.0 to 6.0.5; CPH, Tls. 5.9 to 6. Lastings, 30 yards, Tls. 11 to 11.5.

HONG KONG.—There was no change to note in the position of the import market, a fair amount of business having been transacted at previous rates.

SAIGON.—A fairly active business had been done, especially in 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings; arrivals had been, however, very important, and would soon meet the demand. White Irishes, there being very heavy stocks, were rather neglected. Quotations:—Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., $3.10; do., 7 lbs., $2.70; Grey T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.95; do., 5½ lbs., $1.75; do., 5 lbs., $1.65 to 1.67½; do., 4½ lbs., $1.60½. White Irishes, $2.20, nominal.

SINGAPORE.—The closing quotations were:—No. 40's Mule Twist, $150; 8¼ lbs. Shirtings, $3.05 to 310: 7 do., $2.55; 5 do. T-Cloths, $1.60 to 1.62½; 6 do., $1.87½ to 1.85; 7 do., $2.10 to 2.15.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—The market in Black operations had been very trifling, the purchase of one small chop at Tls. 19, and the shipment on native account of another parcel, being the only transactions recorded. In Green there had been rather more activity, and prices for common classes had slightly advanced. Settlements amounted to 8,500 half-chests, and stocks were estimated at 30,000 half-chests. Prices paid had been:—Shanghai packed, Tls. 19 to 22; Fychow, Tls. 21½ to 27; Teenkais, and Moyunes, Tls. 30 to 41; Fingsuey, Tls. 30½.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—The active demand noticed in our last report continued, but owing to the inferiority of the stocks on offer only a limited business had been transacted, the present steamer being expected to take about 300 bales. Prices had remained very firm, and, in some instances, an advance had been paid. "Koo-fong-sings" chop (water mark) was reported to have been sold at Tls. 590 for No. 3, with an assortment, including Nos. 3½ and 4. In the interior there appeared to be great excitement, and prices were said to have advanced considerably. The unsold stock at Shanghai, consisting of 400 bales, was very inferior; and this fact, coupled with the great difficulty experienced in finding silk in the interior, led to the expectation of an export not exceeding 40,000 bales.

SAIGON PRODUCE.

The following is from Messrs. Kaltenbach, Engler, and Co.'s Market Report, dated 6th ult.:—Rice: Round Gocong grain. Owing to a quite extraordinary accumulation of shipping under charter for Japan in coincidence with the usual interruption of arrivals from the interior during the native holidays prices experienced a further advance, reaching the high figure of $2.10, which we have not been accustomed to see for the last three years. At that rate about 100,000 piculs have been contracted for towards the end of February, when want of money and important supplies of rice operated a sudden change in our market and caused prices to decline within three days to $1.80. Of late arrivals have however been very moderate again, and Chinese were therefore induced to raise their pretentions, so that already before arrival of the China Mail $1.90 had been vainly offered for short delivery, and the fresh orders laid down for the Japan markets met with a very firm market. To-day several contracts have been passed at $2, but at present $2.10 are asked for again. Long Vinlong grain, although only in moderate demand, has been still more scarce than round rice, and was for some time entirely wanting in the market, so that several vessels came on demurrage before sellers could provide their cargoes. A contract for long delivery was passed at $1.72½. During the last fortnight this corn came however freely to hand and was obtainable at about $1.50. Present stocks being of good quality and regular grain, which hardly justified such a large difference of price made for Gocong rice the former was equally directed to Japan, and is, therefore, following the upward tendency of round rice. We may quote to-day $1.70. The monthly exports of rice amount to 447,600 piculs. Paddy has not been much affected by the advance of rice prices, and may be quoted $1.05. Hides continue in good demand, and command higher prices. Quotations are $8¾ for Buffalo and $12 per picul for Cow. Horns: Buffalo, in absence of any stocks, we quote nominally $8¾ to 9 per picul. Black Pepper: No transactions to report; the price offered for delivery in March is $9 per picul. Cocoa Nut Oil. Some sales have been effected at $9.80 per picul. Of late the market has been better supplied, and we may quote $9.50 per picul. Gamboge: No change to report; prices are nominally $62 per picul.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

The directors of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, have issued their report prior to the meeting to be held on the 20th inst. They state that the general balance-sheet of the bank, made up to the 31st December last, shows a net profit for the twelve months of £62,588. The directors regret the diminished amount of profit, as compared with that of last year, attributable chiefly to the adverse state of the exchanges between England and the East, and the general depression of trade. There is, however, no deduction to be made in respect of the old bad debt account, the liquidation of which has progressed so favourably as to reduce the amount to a comparatively small figure. The directors have therefore determined to recommend a continuance of the dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum free of income-tax, absorbing another £24,000, or the same amount as the interim dividend declared at the half-yearly meeting in October. The surplus remaining, inclusive of the balance brought from last account, is £37,953, which the directors have carried forward to profit and loss new account, as a provision against contingent loss by the Batavia failure, announced a year ago. None of the legal questions involved therein have yet been finally decided by the Dutch and German law courts, to which they were necessarily referred, and where the suits are still pending.

The Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company notify that the manufacture of the Gibraltar and Malta Telegraph Company's cable is completed, and that the steamship Scanderia, with her portion of the cable, leaves the Thames for Malta to-day, to be shortly followed by the steamships Edinburgh and Hibernia with their respective portions.

The Indo-European Telegraph Company's wires have now been permanently completed, and a staff of English clerks provided all through from this country to India. Messages are now arriving in from four to six hours.

The report of Reuter's Telegram Company, to be presented on the 13th inst., recommends a dividend of 7½ per cent., making, with the previous distribution, 10 per cent. for the year, and leaving £290 to be carried forward.

The annual meeting of the Singapore Gas Company (Limited) will be held on the 26th inst., when a dividend will be declared for the half-year ending the 31st December.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks.—"The singular success which Mr. Epps has attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in tin-lined packets labelled—JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.

WE are glad to learn that a good-service pension has been awarded to Admiral KEPPEL. The Army and Navy Gazette observes that Mr. CHILDERS did not include this piece of intelligence in his reply to Mr. RYLANDS. It may, however, be received by the hon. gentleman as another proof of the satisfaction with which the Admiralty regarded Sir HENRY'S doings in China.

A TELEGRAM from St. Petersburg, dated Saturday, mentions a rumour that bears strong evidence of probability, to the effect that the negotiations between the Russian Government and the Chinese Embassy have come to a standstill, having been broken off on the return of Mr. BROWN to St. Petersburg. We shall not hear much more of this "Embassy" now.

FROM Washington we hear that the project of converting the monthly Pacific Mail service into a fortnightly one is likely to be carried into effect shortly, the Post-office Committee of the American Senate having agreed to a Bill to subsidise the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for carrying mails between San Francisco and China semi-monthly to the amount of $1,000,000 per annum.

MR. H. A. KRAMERS, 47, Geldeische-Kade, Rotterdam, is appointed agent in Holland for this paper and London and China Exrress, and will receive subscriptions.

NOTES OF A VOYAGE ON THE RIVER HAN.

Mr. A. Wylie has sent to our contemporary, the Revue Orientale, of Paris, the following highly interesting account of his late voyage, which is equally important from a geographical, commercial, and general point of view, and which we feel sure will be highly acceptable to our readers :—

Since the ratification of the treaties with European Powers, more than twenty years past, our knowledge of the interior of China has been gradually enlarging. Journies into the country have been extending both in frequency and distance, and much information has been gathered regarding the physical features and the means of locomotion. Many of these journies have been given to the public in permanent records, and have proved incentives to the more cautious to swell the number of such adventures.

Few of the eighteen provinces have been left unpenetrated; most of the main rivers have been traced hundreds of miles from their embouchures; the principal lakes have been visited; the recent changes in the current of the Yellow River investigated; every city and town explored for a thousand miles up the Yang-tsze, and many more important places visited even five hundred miles beyond that.

A rich field of investigation still remains untouched, in the numerous affluents of the latter stream. One of these the Han, from its length and importance, is almost entitled to rank higher than a secondary river; indeed, it is so described in the oldest Chinese record. The venerable Shoo having stated that "the Keang and the Han pursued their common course to the sea, as if they were hastening to court," proceeds to tell us afterwards that "from Po-chung (hill) the Great Yu surveyed the Yang (the ancient name of the river near its source) which flowing eastward became the Han. Farther east it became the water of Ts'ang-lang; and after passing the three embankments went on to Ta-pee, south of which it entered the Keang. Eastward still and whirling on, it formed the marsh of P'ang le; and from that its eastern flow was the northern Keang, as which it entered the sea."

If any confidence is to be placed in the "Tribute Roll of Yu," four thousand years ago the rude inhabitants of the Province of King-chow might be seen navigating its waters with their tribute cargoes of feathers, hair, ivory, and hides; gold, silver and copper; the ch'un tree, wood for bows, cedar and cypress: grindstones, whetstones, arrow-head stones, and cinnabar; the k'wan and loo bamboos, and the wood of the hoo tree; three ribbed rushes, silken fabries and pearls. Such we are told was the traffic of ancient times, and although the commodities of commerce may have changed with the exigencies of advancing civilisation, yet we may fairly believe that there has been an uninterrupted transit from that time to the present, and that the river crafts of to-day, laden with cotton, pottery, and the interchangeable products of north and south, are but the continuators and antitype of those old world pioneers.

Now, as of old, the Han rises in a mountainous region in the south of Shen-se province, the source being found at the Po-ch'ung hill, E. long. 106 deg. 25 min., N. lat. 33 deg. With a general easterly course of some 500 miles, it enters the province of Hoo-pih, and passes the city of Kwang-hwa, in the prefecture of Seang-yang. From that, with a prevailing southward course of about 500 miles more, after two or three sharp bends, it reaches Han-kow, where it discharges its waters into the Yang-tsze. Through its entire length it drains eight prefectures and a department, in the provinces of Shense, Honan, and Hoopih, and runs past or very near six prefectural, one departmental, and twelve district cities.

The Ta-pee, a hill of very moderate size, better known by the natives as the Kwei-shan, which marks the entrance of the Han, is a during memento of the Herculean, not to say fabulous, labours of the ancient hydrographer, Yu. The extraord nary assemblage of junks, of all sizes and varieties of build—the shear masts, the high poops, the round bows, and other distinctive characteristics, marking the vessels from Tze chuen, Hoo nan, Seang-yang, and other places with the gay parade of pennants and streamers in fair weather, give an exceedingly picturesque effect to the first two miles from the mouth. Such was the day on which I embarked, towards the middle of October, 1866, in a Seang-yang boat, commodicus and in good condition, our party consisting of six, four of whom were natives.

The water, which at times retains a clear blue tint till it enters the Yang-tsze, has now, in consequence of recent rains, assumed the same appearance as the turbid waters of the latter, which it retained till we were near the City of Keen-chow. There had been a fall in the water for several weeks, it being in places near twenty feet lower than the summer level.

At Tsae-teen, the first considerable town, which lies on the right bank, twenty miles from Hankow, there is a custom-house, where every boat passing up or down has to be examined; but on a simple declaration that our object was the circulation of the Christian Scriptures, we received a ticket to pass, without the slightest delay. Little more than a day's sail beyond brought us to the city of Han-chuen, where the Seaou-pee hill stands on the opposite bank, famous as being the place mentioned in the Spring and Autumn Annals, where the troops of Woe crossed the Han, and were drawn up to resist the forces of Tsoo. Up to this point a few hills occur at intervals on the south, but beyond this the country is almost a dead level till we reach the Ma-leang Hill, which we did on the twelfth day of our journey, another spot of historical interest being the Nuy-fang hill, surveyed by Yu in the course of his engineering labours. On the east of Tsae-teen stream from the Ch'ih-yay Lake flows into the Han, and twenty miles higher up the Yun-kow tang, a much more formidable stream, emerges on the left bank, after a course of nearly two hundred miles, in which it passes the cities of Suy-chow, Tih-gang, and Yun-mung. Many of the water courses marked on the maps were dry as we passed, it being only during the wet season that they retain a supply of water.

Among the more important towns that we visited along the banks may be named the following, with their successive distances, beginning from Han-chuen :—

Yih ma kow	30 le
Fun shwuy tsuy	60 ,,
Ma wang tsuy	30 ,,
Seen tao chin	60 ,,
Pang se ho	52 ,,
Yo kow	45 ,,
Hih nen t'ow	30 ,,
Chang tseih keang...	30 ,,
Ye kea tan	75 ,,
To paou wan	70 ,,
Sha yang chin	30 ,,

At most of these there is a considerable trade, and the people seem generally in a prosperous condition. Where there is a large boating population, there are usually a number of unruly characters, which require some considerable caution in their management. As a rule, however, we found the inhabitants most friendly, and the good feeling was sufficiently dominant to overrule any tendency to tumult.

Just beyond Ma-leang-hill a stream leads up to the Chow city of King-mun. Two or three hours' further sail brought us to the landing place for Shih pae, a large town standing three miles inland from the right bank. Some conspicuous hills soon appear on the same side, known as the San tseen shan, being the terminus of a range of some tens of miles, lying east and west.

At several points along the left bank we found pyramidal brick structures at sharp turns of the river, to resist the force of the current. The face is about an angle of 60 degrees, and probably thirty or forty feet in height; the bricks forming steps up to the top, which is a level terrace. Are these the modern representatives of the San she, "three embankments," spoken of in Yu's survey of the Han? The identity appears extremely probable. In this part of our course we found ourselves daily in contact with barges laden with barrows of a peculiar construction, having double wheels. These were the execution of a contract for fifteen hundred, to be used as vehicles of transport for the Imperial forces acting against the Mohammedans in Shense. The principal cargoes bound southward appeared to be cotton grown in the province. The specimens of the crops of this plant that I saw were miserably poor and stunted, and the produce was said to be below the average this year. The vessels ascending the stream were laden with pottery and miscellaneous cargoes, including European goods. An inferior slatey anthracite coal is exposed for sale, which comes from some of the hills not far distant.

At the village of Le-ho-Kow, on the right, an insignificant stream emerges from an opening between the hills; but in the summer this forms a considerable river, a hundred miles in length, passing several busy towns. As we were against this village a search was going on for the body of a person who had fallen into the water. Inquiring what method was adopted by the natives for the restoration of life in cases of asphyxia, I was informed that it was customary to suspend the patient head downwards, front to front, with his legs fastened round the neck of a living person, who walked about a mile or two with him in this position, shaking the body and pressing it against his own. A range of tolerably lofty hills now appear nearly parallel with the river, about a mile from the right bank, and some low-lying hills on the left, consisting of a coarse red grit stone, which is much used in building about Hankow.

The following day we arrived at Lew shwuy kow, a busy town standing on the declivity of a rising ground, a range of hills appearing at no great distance to the east.

Much of the next day was spent in E-ching, which stands about a mile and a half from the right bank. This was the first walled city we had come to since leaving Hau-chuen. The people were very peaceable and friendly. Ground nuts and tobacco are grown largely in the neighbourhood.

SIR C. W. DILKE ON CHINA.

(CHINA MAIL.)

What does Sir Charles Wentworth Dilke know about China and Chinese affairs, and whence does he derive his authority to teach all mankind, through the columns of The Times, what they ought and ought not to think on questions affecting British interests in China? He has made a voyage round the world, passing through the whole or nearly the whole of the English-speaking countries of the globe. He has published a very readable account of his travels, entitled "Great Britain;" he has met Chinamen in San Francisco, and again in the Australian colonies, and he has given utterance to a few common-places on the subject of Chinese emigration and on the future of the Chinese race. But he has never been even to Hong Kong; has never had anything to do with China, politically or commercially, so far as is publicly known, and beyond the circle of his reading he is ignorant of everything connected with the country or its inhabitants.

Will he favour us with a list of the authors whose works on the Middle Kingdom he has read, and of the men versed in Chinese affairs with whom he has conversed? Till he does so the public cannot, under the circumstances, be expected to credit him with very much knowledge on the subject on which he presumes to write, and must always doubt his ability to deal with that subject, and his common sense while he continues to favour the readers of The Times with the follies contained in his last letter to that journal, published in another column for the amusement of our readers. He is an advocate of the peace-at-any-price policy, an admirer of Lord Clarendon as he has exhibited himself lately in his despatches on China. He is a dear lover of "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." He condemns the whole of the newspaper press of China as scandalously mendacious in matters of fact, and as utterly illogical and unfair in its criticisms and conclusions. He condemns the telegraph (instruments, wires, posts, insulators, officers and offices, we presume, included) as a notorious liar, and heaps up a pyramid of charges against the press and the telegraph, bewildering at first sight, and almost enough to convince us off-hand that we and our brethren of the press have been falsifying the known truth in all our statements. Not content with condemning us in the past, Sir Charles warns his readers against us in future, and declares us to be concocting additional false items of intelligence in preparation for the next session of Parliament. The man himself is, in fact, guilty of the misrepresentations with which he charges the European communities in China, and the press of China and the telegraph are innocent of everything but of faithfully stating every fact, and every reported fact—every rumour even which is thought to be of importance for the information of the public. If Sir Charles Dilke has heard of the confirmation at Peking of the American Treaty, he has heard it through the press of China, doubtless, or by telegraph. He heard of the rejection of the Treaty in the same way, and it is true that the Treaty was rejected by the Chinese at its first presentation. Mr. McLeavy Brown was rumoured to have been recalled. The rumour came first from Europe. The China press repeated it as an important rumour. The China press also informed Sir Charles Wentworth Dilke that the rumour was unfounded. Sir Rutherford Alcock did state in a despatch to Mr. Medhurst, what was fully the equivalent in as many words of the condensed report sent home. China will not progress but by the application of force. That statement was not false, although Sir C. W. Dilke says that it is. No one in China complains of the refusal of "an audience" to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh. The complaint is that he was totally ignored at Peking. Sir Charles condemns the foreign communities in China for refusing to see the many proofs which the Chinese Government and people are, he fancies, daily giving of their willingness to move forward in the path of progress. He himself shuts his eyes to such documents as Tseng-kwo-fan's memorial to the Emperor—to such facts as the Yangchow difficulty, the two affairs at Formosa, the troubles at Foochow, Amoy, and Swatow, the insults offered Sir R. Alcock on his leaving Peking and later at Nanking, the attacks on the Roman Catholic Missionaries in several of the interior provinces, the attacks on Protestant Missionary establishments and the reports and threats in circulation regarding them. Sir Charles Wentworth Dilke ignores all these things, which are certainly not inventions of the China press, or telegraphic aberrations, and says in the conclusion of his letter under review, "the experience of the year (1869) would seem to prove that there is no amount of progress which may not be hoped for, provided that the temperate policy, &c., &c." What language is too strong to characterise the unblushing impudence of the man who, with a history of the events of the last year in China before him, if, indeed, he has troubled himself with facts at all, puts forth such an opinion as that, and charges falsehood, bad logic, and want of common sense on the press of China, and on the professional and mercantile men who support that press?

THE TRAFFIC ON THE SUEZ CANAL.—The report read at the meeting of the Suez Canal Company last week contains various statistics of the tonnage which has passed through the Canal since its opening. Between the 17th of November and the 15th of March the total was 209 ships, of 146,631 tons, and 606 smaller vessels, of 1,960 tons, including the tonnage which passed through at the inauguration. The nationality of the ships is exhibited in the following list:—English, 80, 56,052 tons; French, 44, 54,390 tons; Egyptian, 23, 17,666; tons; Austrian, 18, 14,625 tons; Italian, 14, 7,386 tons; Russian, 11, 4,178 tons; Norwegian, 4, 4,000 tons; Dutch, 4, 3,200 tons; German, 4, 880 tons; Spanish, 3, 528 tons; Prussian, 2, 3,015 tons; Portuguese, 1, 369 tons; Turkish, 1, 342 tons. Total—209; 146,631 tons. According to this the English tonnage is a third of the entire traffic, but the table, unfortunately, does not show the share of each nation in the business of the Canal—many ships of war being present at the inauguration, and England being far from proportionally represented. Actually the transit dues have only been levied on 79 ships, of 56,644 tons, representing the whole traffic to the 15th of March since the inauguration, and it is the nationality of these ships of which an account would have been most interesting. The statistics show one or two important facts. One is the use of the Canal by steamers almost to the exclusion of sailing ships. The above 146,631 tons is composed as follows:—Steamers, 142,217 tons; sailing ships, 3,715—total, 146,631 tons. The prediction that the Canal would be useful for steamers and hardly at all for sailing ships could not have been more accurately confirmed. It is important to observe again that although the beginning is small, the traffic is increasing. The following is a comparison, month by month, of the number of ships passing through the Canal, exclusive of those present at the inauguration:—November, 1; December, 9; January, 16; February, 29; March, 52. Unfortunately the tonnage is not specified, so that the comparison is not complete; but we may anticipate speedily a large addition to these beginnings, though there is no foundation for some extravagant calculations forward.

CHINAMEN IN THE UNITED STATES.—Senator Lawrence delivered lately in the Californian Senate a speech in favour of the protection of white labourers from the immigration of Chinamen. The Senator said that "the presence of this moral gangrene in our midst, spreading gradually but surely as it does, should in itself be sufficient to arouse thinking men, irrespective of party, to united action. Better by far that a wall of fire, high as heaven and broad as the Pacific, should separate us from this loathsome race than that they should obtain a foothold on this coast—better even in a pecuniary point of view."

THE Bishop of Colombo, the Right Rev. Piers Calveley Claughton, D.D., will, it is believed, resign his see, and will accept the Vicarage of Dudley, vacant by the death of Dr. Browne. The Bishop of Colombo has been in England for some time, on account of health, and had just received a further extension of three months' leave of absence from his diocese, to which he was appointed in 1862. Bishop Claughton, who is the younger brother of the Bishop of Rochester, was Fellow, Tutor, and Dean of University College, Oxford, Public Examiner and Select Preacher.

PRINCE MONING MAIN, son of the King of Burmah, who has for some time been a student at one of the military schools on Woolwich-common, has received the permission of the War Department to prosecute his studies in the manufacturing departments of the Royal Arsenal, under the tuition of Lieutenant Lamb, of the Indian service.

COLONEL NORTH has a notice of motion on the paper for "Returns of all the ordnance captured by the late Field-Marshal Viscount Gough during the operations in China;" and Sir W. Lawson, one for "Copies or extracts of correspondence with English missionary societies or missionaries on inland residence in China."

WE are informed that Captain Chandos S. S. Stanhope, the officer in command of H.M.S. Ocean, flagship on the China station, will in all probability be offered the post of private secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty, vacant by the advancement to flag rank of the present private secretary, Rear-Admiral F. B. P. Seymour.

WE understand that the Duke of Edinburgh will not return, as was at first expected, in Her Majesty's ship Galatea, via the Suez Canal, but by the Cape of Good Hope, where he is expected to arrive early in the month of June.

A MESSAGE, dated Calcutta, Saturday, half-past twelve noon, was received by the Indo-European Telegraph Company at half-past ten, thus beating the sun by two hours.

THE CIVIL SERVICE (FOREIGN-OFFICE).—Mr. T. R. H. M'Cletchie, Mr. J. D. Crawford, Mr. W. L. B. Neale, and Mr. R. W. Mansfield have been appointed student interpreters in China or Japan.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, April 6.

A hitch has occurred in the North German Parliament which has delayed the passing of the new Criminal Code of Laws, the difficulty being to reconcile the abolition of capital punishment with the existing military code, which orders soldiers in time of war to be shot for treachery, cowardice, or attempted desertion. The Reichstag have refused to proceed with the Criminal Code till a revision and modification of the military regulations has been made. The subject of flogging in the Navy has also given rise to a stormy debate, one of the members of the House having brought forward a complaint that one of the sailors of the Vineta had been lashed with the cat-o'-nine-tails. Admiral Jachmann was obliged to confess the truth of the statement, but urged in extenuation that the culprit had been degraded to the lowest class, and then for a fresh offence had received corporal punishment, as the only means of preserving intact the discipline of the service. Count Bismark defended the necessity of such acts under certain circumstances, and which, if allowed to go unpunished, might create a mutiny, and endanger the safety of the ship and the lives of the officers and crew. The House then busied themselves with home subjects, among which was the Budget, which is still being proceeded with. The item of "Post-office" caused great interest, as the Postmaster-General gave some particulars of the results of his department for last year. The present system was introduced at the commencement of 1869, and from the great reduction in the postage created in that year a considerable deficit. The system is very simple. There are now only two rates of postage, one and groschens; the first franks a letter all over Germany if not weighing more than a loth (rather better than half an ounce), and the second for letters weighing from one loth up to half a pound. Unfranked letters pay a fine of a groschen, and newspapers as well as all other printed matter pay a one-third of a groschen for two and-half loths for any distance. As a groschen is a fraction more than a penny, and a loth is a tenth more than half an ounce, it will be seen that postage in Germany is considerably lower than the English penny post system. The number of letters that passed last year through the German post offices was 275,694,084, showing an increase of 10 per cent. on the previous year. The number of unpaid letters had diminished by 28½ per cent., with a corresponding augmentation on the prepaid ones. There are 1,700 mail trains on railways that cover every day 1,693 German miles of distance; 713 of the trains have travelling post-offices in them. The sale of postage-stamps produced $10,729,117. Of money orders 9,440,260 were issued for the interior of Germany for the sum of $116,957,280, and 418,107 for $7,462,043 for other countries with which treaties have been concluded.

Money appears to be very plentiful in Germany, if one may judge from the vast sums subscribed by capitalists for new enterprises of various descriptions; among others I may mention the formation of two new joint-stock banks here and one at Berlin. The "International Bank of Hamburg" is formed for the object of liberating the foreign trade of this city from its subjection to the English money market in negotiating its remittances and bill business, which it will for the future undertake by means of its branch establishments in different foreign countries. The purpose of the new "Commercial and Discount Bank of Hamburg" is mainly to facilitate the trade of this city by freely discounting local bills at three and six months. The system hitherto in force here is to sell all goods for immediate payment, and local bills are regarded with distrust and even suspicion; but as a different system obtains at Bremen, where goods are sold on credit, for which bills are taken, and is found to work well and require comparatively less capital to do a large business, whilst the Bank of Bremen discounts freely the local bills; it is proposed to imitate the course pursued by the Bremen merchants, and no longer throw suspicion on local bills, and with this main object the bank has been established. It was originally proposed to establish the International Bank at Berlin, but so many formalities had to be overcome, accompanied by such loss of time, that the Hamburg houses that had promised their support lost all patience, returned home, set to work, and established the bank in a single week, with a capital of ten millions of marks banco, of which the promoters furnished one half, and the other half was offered to the public at par, which was immediately taken up, and now commands a premium of 10 to 12 per cent. In the meantime the people at Berlin, nothing daunted by the promptitude and success of the spirited Hamburg capitalists, plodded on with their usual perseverance, obtained their "concession" and the royal consent to their "statutes" or bye-laws—things unknown and unnecessary at Hamburg—and at length were in a condition to offer their shares to the public. It must certainly have been very gratifying to the feelings of the Berlin promoters to witness the extraordinary success of the subscriptions. It was decided only to call for two millions of dollars, and, lo and behold, two hundred and eighty five millions were subscribed for in one day, so that a repartition had to be made, and those who subscribed for less than 105 shares got none, and the larger subscribers had to submit to a reduction in proportion. The institution is known by the name of Die Deutsche Bank, or the "German Bank."

By the Treaty of Vienna in 1815 it was decreed that the navigation on all the rivers in Germany should be free, but the abolition of river dues has not yet been accomplished. The same stipulation is contained in the Constitution of the North German Confederation made in 1866, and on the Rhine and some other rivers the concession has been put in practice, but not so on the Elbe. The time appears, however, to have now arrived for their abolition, the difficulty being to devise some plan of compensating the States through which the river passes for their losses by no longer raising toll. Count Bismark has now taken up the matter with his usual energy, and has brought it before the Federal Council, where at his suggestion the question has been quickly disposed of, and it will probably be brought before the Reichstag or Federal Parliament shortly after the Easter vacation. There are now only three States that require pecuniary compensation; these are Mecklenburg-Schwerin (who by the new arrangement is to receive $500,000), Anhalt ($85,000), and Lauenberg ($36,000), the last-named, though belonging to Prussia, not being as yet thoroughly incorporated, and having still its own separate Government and finances—all the other riverine States (Austria, Prussia, Saxony, Hanover—now Prussian—and Hamburg) having renounced all claim to compensation. Mecklenburg is still a malcontent, and claims a larger amount ($1,250,000), but there is good reason to believe that the King of Prussia will easily find means to persuade him that half a loaf is better than no bread, and that if he maintains his demand the half million may slip through his fingers. The compensation money is to be borne on the Federal Budget.

The "entre filet" of the Nieuwe Rotterdamshe Courant, alluded to by your correspondent at Rotterdam in your last issue, of a steam company being in course of formation here for communication with Java, China, and Japan (via the Suez Canal), is entirely without foundation, and the learned Theban probably confounded it with the extension of the field of operation of the Hamburg-American Steam Company, by the creation of a new line of steamers to Central America and the West Indies, and a reinforcement by a set of new steamers on their already existing line to Havana and New Orleans. The additional capital required for this new service is not six million thalers, but only two millions, one half raised by a mortgage loan on the property of the company, and the other half, or two millions marks banco, being offered to the present shareholders at par in the proportion of one new share for every two old ones. As the old shares command a premium of 30 per cent., and the company has just declared a dividend of 15 per cent., there can be little doubt of the new shares being eagerly taken up.

COMMERCIAL.

Recent large arrivals of Cassia Lignea at first created a dulness in the market, and threatened a fall in the quotations; but that danger is for the present removed, as considerable orders have come to hand, the execution of which has cleared off more than 7,000 chests, and since then the prices have recovered their former position. None is now to be had under 12½ schillings banco per lb. Pepper is firmly held, but the dealings have been limited. Cleaned rice commands a moderate sale at steady rates, but rough is neglected. No alteration in tea, and business confined to the execution of orders for consumption. It is stated in the London papers that the 240 chests of the wretched stuff, of which six chests were seized and condemned as not fit for consumption, have been sent over here for sale. It is very possibly the case; but if so the importers, before attempting to sell them, will first mix them up with other descriptions, which they can do in their own warehouse, free from all supervision and control, the right of "manipulating" (that is the expressive word) being one of the great privileges of a free port. Nothing to say about Spelter.

ROTTERDAM, April 8.

The First Chamber is discussing the Agrarian Bill for Java, the debate upon which was opened on Monday last; several members have taken part in the discussion, but not one new argument has been brought forward. It is impossible to foretel what will be the definite result of the debate, of which the Section Report does not give the least indication. It is, if possible, less colourless than those reports commonly are. Some members complained that the Bill was unsatisfactory in not going far enough, while, on the contrary, there were others who judged it too Radical, and some again wanted further explanations. The report overflows with these vague expressions; but we are not told what was the opinion of the majority. This much is certain, that there is in the debate, as there was in the sections, a good deal of party spirit displayed, and that the Opposition papers become from day to day more furious in their attacks upon the measure, and in their appeals to the Lords to reject the Bill. They even assert that, if it should be rejected, the King would not dissolve the Upper House, although not one Liberal paper has said that such a course would be adopted if, indeed, the Lords should prevent the Ministry from taking this first step towards the introduction of Liberal reforms in India. As I hope to be able to telegraph the definitive result before the mail closes, I think it is of no use to reproduce any speculations as to the possible fate of the Bill. For my own part, I have great confidence in the political wisdom of our lords, and feel sure that they will listen to the good advice given them. Just before the opening of the debate a liberal pamphlet was published by the well-known Mr. de Kinder de Camerecq, in which he adduced several new and weighty arguments in favour of the Bill. This author writes with great authority, and his knowledge and experience are disputed by no one. The pamphlet is, consequently, of much greater interest than that published by Mr. van der Wyck, the tenour of which was so incomprehensible that the Conservatives took him for one of their warmest supporters, but he has since said, in the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant—which paper criticised the work severely—that he only attacked the Bill because "it was not radical enough." Mr. Philipse, the President of the First Chamber, is dangerously ill; and the Conservatives regret this very much, because they believe that he would have used his influence to have the Bill outvoted.

The Second Chamber has been occupied with Bills which are of but slight interest to your readers. The principal measure carried was that to establish a State academy for sculptors, painters, and engravers.

The promoters of this Bill are of opinion that Dutch art will be revived by this institution. Qui vivra verra, but I think that it will tend to create a great many mediocrities. Some rumours are circulating which are not very flattering to the Minister of Justice, who has had to defend the blunders made by some learned, but not infallible, judges, who, amongst other mistakes, had condemned to death an idiotic girl of fifteen years. This fact was brought to the notice of the Lower House, and the behaviour of the Minister created the greatest disgust amongst some Liberal members. I have reason to believe that some of them will continue to support him, because they desire that he should have the opportunity of defending his Bill to annihilate capital punishment, but their indulgence is not at all founded upon a confidence in his wisdom or prudence. But revenons à nos moutons. It is my duty to state some particulars with regard to two interpellations. The first refers to the telegraphic communication between Java and other countries. Mr. Heems kerk Az, who interpellated the Minister of the Colonial Department about some concessions which have been asked for but not yet granted, was of opinion that the Minister had not done so much as he might to promote the several plans for giving the telegraphic net in our colonies the necessary extension. The Minister stated, in reply, that it was impossible to grant to the concession-hunters all they asked for, and he declined to give anyone of them a monopoly or exclusive right; but, nevertheless, he was able to assure the members that within a very short time a concession would be given for the communication between Java, Ceylon (via Singapore), and China; and between Java, Timor, and Australia. The other interpellation concerned H.M.'s screw-steamer Argus, built according to the plans of the former (Conservative) Cabinet in a private yard. Mr. de Casembroot asked some questions of the Minister about this vessel, which started some days ago from Hellevoet for Java, but which has since put in to Plymouth. Mr. de Casembroot was of opinion that the vessel was not built as it ought to have been, and that it was not seaworthy, and he further stated that the commander made objections to proceed further with the voyage because the vessel pitched in a dangerous manner. The answer of the Minister was not so satisfactory as it might have been. He denied that the vessel was so bad as was stated, but on the other side he owned that she pitched. He, however, gave the assurance that the ship should not proceed with the voyage until a minute inspection should have been made, and said that the voyage to Plymouth ought to be regarded merely as a trial trip. This fact has made a painful impression, and some papers regret that no more care is taken in order to prevent money being thrown away. The members of the Second Chamber will take their Easter recess on the 9th inst., and will not meet again before the 10th of June, at the end of which month they will again leave the Hague until the close of the session.

I regret having to confirm my communication that our capitalists have shown some reluctance to subscribe the capital for establishing the Steam-line Company "Nederland" (Holland and Java). Notwithstanding that Prince Henry is honorary president of the Commission, that its other members are of the highest respectability, and that the plan was promoted on a most efficient basis, the subscriptions only amount to 2½ millions of guilders, and it was stated publicly by one of the members of the Commission that the greater part of this sum was subscribed by only a few gentlemen. In our financial circles it is said the Commission made three mistakes, by which this reluctance may be explained. In the first place, the profit of sixteen per cent., promised in the prospectus, was regarded as humbug; it was known that several members of the haute finance were among the promoters of the plan, and if such an enormous profit could be made they of course would have furnished the capital themselves. In the second place, it was considered to be an error that the vessels were ordered before the Commission had any certainty that the capital would be subscribed, which fact caused the public to believe that their money was not wanted. The third mistake was the stipulation that the vessels should be built on the Clyde; our Protectionists with good reason complain of this, and do all they can to prevent the success of the project. The Commission, after the first échec, reopened the subscription, and in two days the last million—3½ millions were wanted—was furnished. It is said that the Prince and the Trading Company, who subscribed each for f.100,000, have doubled this amount, whilst his Majesty the King has also become a shareholder. Early in 1871 the first steamer will start from here direct to Java. That the undertaking will be a profitable one is quite certain, and it would have been a matter to regret if the endeavour had not been crowned with success. It was, indeed, a vital question for our trade, and it would have made the worst impression in Java if such a trifling sum as 3½ millions could not have been obtained in Holland for such an undertaking.

About the Court I hear great news. Our Queen returned, via Brussels—where her Majesty took a luncheon at the Royal Palace, from England, and it is now widely rumoured that she crossed the canal to negotiate a marriage between our Prince of Orange and Princess Louise of England. It seems that this is a well founded on dit. The niece of this prince will be married in a few months to the German Prince of Wied, and on that occasion a commission (Mr. Messchert van Vollenhoven, Member of the First Chamber, president) will offer to the princess a national present as a mark of homage and respect. According to a private letter from Palermo, Prince Alexander will, on the 10th of May, return home on board H.M. steamer de Valk from his trip to the Mediterranean.

The Section report has been published upon the Bill, by which the Minister for Foreign Affairs asks a credit for a diplomatic establishment in China. Several members are of opinion that this Bill should have been withheld until the next Budget is brought forward, and the general opinion expressed is not very favourable to the measure. The promoters consider it desirable that in view of the extension of our commercial relations with the Far East, this mission ought to be established, but many other members feared that if we are represented by an Ambassador in China, it would become necessary to station several of our men-of-war in China water.

Messrs. T. G. Bunge and C. A. Commelin have been appointed president and vice-president of the council of managers of the Nederland Steam Company.

The Java Agrarian Bill was carried this day in the First Chamber, by twenty-five against twelve votes; there were two absentees from the division. General satisfaction at this result is expressed.

COMMERCIAL.

The rate of discount remains unaltered, and in the open market a good demand for money is apparent. The market for public securities is generally flat, but the closing tone is somewhat better. The variations in Foreign Bonds are of no importance. Dutch Two and a-Half per Cents., 55¾; Three per Cents., 67¾; Four per Cents., 86¾; Trading Company, 120½; Obligations of Railway Company, East India, 91.

The result of the March coffee sale, for account of the Trading Company, and that of their sugar sale, the particulars of which were communicated in my last letter, have been equally favourable with that of their tin sale. Prices for these articles have continued to be well maintained at the advance established at the sales, and although there has been but little doing privately, this is mainly to be attributed to the firmness of holders. The general aspect of our market for other leading articles of produce has undergone but little alteration. Arrivals are light, in consequence of contrary winds, rendering the private supply moderate. The deliveries of coffee last month were very large.

COFFEE.—There is a steady demand for the lots resulting from the last sale, but holders decline to operate without a further advance. Some parcels have changed hands chiefly for export, including 2,000 bags Java, ex Prinses Amalia, at 44c. to 46c.; 750 bags do., ex Fop Smit, Vesta and Allegonda Jacoba, at 31c. to 36c.; 500 bags do., ex Eudora; 1,006 bags do., ex Pinella, at 32½c. to 35¾c.; 997 bags Padang, ex Waalstroom, at 38c. to 40c.; 2,426 bags Macassar, ex Norsk Flag, at 31½c. to 35½c.; 866 bags Rio, ex Nanette, on secret terms. The stock was on the 1st inst. on warrants, 214,200 bags. Unsold Trading Company's stock, 262,000 bales; private stock, 49,900 bags Java. 2,000 b. Java, ex Ellen, and 500 b., ex Eudora, sold on secret terms. Gutta-percha: 4,450 kilos. were realised at very high prices. Rice: 10,469 b. Java Cargs, ex Ida Elisabeth, changed hands. Rattans: The auction held by the Trading Company went off as follows:—42,700 b. sold—Borneo, at f.8.90 to f.14; Banjermassing, f.9 to f.9.70; Padang, f.8.40 to f.9.30; Koetie, f.7.80 to f.8.20. Silk: 359 b. Japan sold in auction at the following prices:—83 b. Aecheran, f.28 to f.35.75 per kilo.; 79 b. Sodai, f.30.50 to f.38.25; 48 b. Oshio, f.33 to f.46; 26 b. Ida, f.32 to f.33.25; 32 b. Maibarh, f.36.75 to f.39.75; 75 b. Sinshiu, f.33.25 to f.43.50; 4 b. Shida, f.31 25 to f.32.25; 4 b. Goshio, f.33 to f.36; 4 b. Mastah, f.30.50; 4 b. Tamba, f.31; 37 b. were bought in.

RAW SUGAR.—The business done privately has been confined to the sale of about 6,000 baskets Java, at f.½ to f.1 under March value. The market is somewhat depressed, by the uncertainty which prevails about the question of an alteration in the English duties. The private stock was on 1st inst. 3,956 mats.

JAVA TOBACCO.—The public auction, which was held on the 30th ult., at Amsterdam, went off as follows:—1,710 b. Java, trade mark PK/, Blitar partly sold at an average price of 34c.; the rest bought in at 36c. to 65c.; 1,132 b. Tempeh, partly sold at 36½c. in average; the rest bought in at 42c. to 70c.; 369 b. K sold at 31½c. in average; one lot bought in at 40c.; 62 b. Amat sold at 27½c. to 29c.; 3,126 b. JN sold at 20c. to 52c.; 230 b. Djarit sold at 53½c. in average; 147 b. Blitar/Walter bought in. The stock was, on the 1st inst., 7,637 b. Java, 250 b. Sumatra, and 432 b. E. I.

RICE.—A late arrival of 9,880 Java table, ex Noach II., was brought into the market, and sold at various prices, ranging from f.8½ to f.12, according to quality. A lot of 248 mats Java, ex Peri, also changed hands.

ARRACK.—Sales have been closed on secret terms of 34/1 and 34/2 cases Batavia, ex Northumberland; 50 casks do., ex Eastham; 100 casks do., ex Equator.

SPICES.—Sales have been closed by private tender of 32 casks Nutmegs, 8 casks and 2 cases Mace, imported on private account, per Noach II. and Zephir. The markets looks very healthy; the deliveries of the Trading Company last month were important. Nutmegs: No. 1 is quoted 120c. to 121c.; No. 2, 116c. to 117c. Mace: 195c. to 200c. Cloves: No. 2, at 29c.; No. 3, at 27½c. The stock was as follows on the 1st inst.:—

	Nutmegs.	Mace.	Cloves.	Cinnamon.

TEA meets with a steady demand, and prices are firm. There is, however, but little doing, in waiting for the forthcoming auction, ex Panuco, which will take place on the 22nd inst. The stock comprises 7,300 chests China and 10,700 chests Java, of which 8,728 chests Java will be offered on the 28th inst. The valuations are as follows:—Pekoe Souchong, 115c. to 130c.: Pekoe, 150c. to 500c.; Tonkay, 115c. to 140c.; Sehin, 80c. to 100c.; Hysant, 130c. to 150c.; Uxim, 160c.; Joosjes, 170c. to 180c.; Boey, 65c. to 80c.; Congou Boey, 80c.; Congou, 80c. to 90c.; Souchong Boey, 80c. to 85c.; Souchong, 80c. to 105c.; Pouchong, 85c.

PRESERVED GINGER.—In auction, of 500 chests China from Macao, via London, per Castayr, 310 chests were sold, at 79c. to 81c. The remainder was bought in. A lot of 250 chests offered for sale was bought in at 80c.

TIN.—Before the Trading Company's auction Banca was selling at f.71 for usual prompt, and some transactions also took place for delivery ex the public sale, at f.69 to f.72½, at which latter figure there continued to be sellers. The auction went off very favourably, and not only the whole quantity of 76,863 slabs Banca was sold at f.72½, and 1,691 slabs Billeton at f.72¼ to f.72½, but buyers will only obtain two thirds of what they bought. More than half the quantity was bought by one house, which had previously a stock of 31,000 slabs. Since the auction there has been a most animated demand, and lots have changed hands; Banca, at f.74, f.75, f.75½, and f.76. Billiton, at f.73½ and f.74; and floating, f.72½. Stock of Banca on warrants, 30,958; unsold stock, 102,922 slabs; floating, 26,300 piculs. Billiton, unsold stock, 1,691 slabs.

INDIGO.—The market looks very healthy; for good and fine quality from 25c. to 30c. has been paid above the December prices, whilst for ordinary quality at the prices of 250c. to 325c. an advance was paid of 70c. to 80c. Under these circumstances the forthcoming auctions, on which 316 chests are to be offered, will have a very favourable result. The valuations run between 225c. and 710c. The private stock comprises 225 chests.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—Small parcels have changed hands at f.28¼, and but little is offered at this price.

HIDES.—In a few days important lots will be offered by private tender. The stock of Java was, on the 1st inst., 9,651 Rinder and 4,126 buffalo.

DRUGS.—Cassia Fistula: 479 b., ex Amstelstroom, and 69 b., ex Eurydice, sold on secret terms. Gutta-percha: 1,900 kilo. Macassar, ex Norsk Flag, sold at secret, but very high prices.

RATTANS.—The following lots have been sold:—300 piculs ex Strathblane, 238 piculs ex Peri, 185 piculs ex Norsk flag, 300 piculs ex Almo, and 15,000 bundles ex Europa.

SHIPPING.

UNITED STATES.

The decline of American commerce consequent on the diminution of American shipping is giving great concern to Congress. Projects of various kinds have been suggested with a view to restore to the flag of the Union that commanding position on the seas which it once held. Americans are not unnaturally humiliated at the circumstance of every ocean line of steamers between the United States and Europe being in the hands of foreigners. As a remedy for this state of things, it is proposed to subsidise lines of steamers between America and Europe, and thus to remove in part the existing inequality. President Grant shares the desire of his countrymen to re-establish the American Mercantile Marine. He avows his dissatisfaction at the sight of foreigners reaping a rich harvest by doing work which ought to be executed by Americans; he has characterised the annual payments of from twenty to thirty millions of dollars made for freight as "a drain upon the revennes of the country equal to casting money into the sea, as far as America is concerned."

The Chinese immigration question is still being agitated. A Memphis paper announces that an English company, the Merchants Trading Company of Liverpool, is going into the business of importing Asiatic labour into the United States, and has appointed an agent to reside at Vicksburg, Mississippi. This agent, a Colonel Gowan, says he can supply 100,000 Chinese labourers within twelve months if necessary, his company having nine steamers and twenty-nine sailing vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 56,000, available for the trade. The Merchants Trading Company has issued a circular stating the terms upon which Chinese immigrant labour can be secured, all their rules being strictly in accordance with the treaties between the United States and China. The price of each labourer, delivered at Charleston, Savannah, Pensacola, Mobile, or New Orleans, is $250 gold.

THE LOSS OF THE "ONEIDA."

On the 14th ult. the collision between the Oneida and Bombay off Yokohama was referred to in the Senate. Senator Morton (Republican), of Indiana, offered a resolution requesting the Naval Committee to report to the Senate a series of joint resolutions expressing the deep sorrow of the nation for the loss of the officers and men on board the United States war-ship Oneida, testifying to the national admiration for their gallant conduct, and expressing the national abhorrence at the inhuman and brutal conduct of the commander of the Bombay. Senator Conkling (Republican), of New York, said he thought the resolutions prejudged the case, and he suggested a modification, so as to leave it discretionary with the Committee to make such a report if the facts warrant it. Senator Morton said he was willing to accept the modification, and the resolution was finally laid aside, with a view to securing further information on the subject.

In compliance with a resolution passed by the House of Representatives, the Secretary of the Navy has transmitted the information in his possession relative to the loss of the Oneida. The Secretary says, from an examination of the testimony before the Court of Inquiry, and evidence in the possession of the Department, and also of the testimony of the master, Yates, the officer on board the Oneida at the time of the collision, it is the opinion of the Department that the Oneida, when she was struck, was steaming her proper course out to sea from the harbour; that the ship was well commanded; that the discipline on board was good; and that all necessary precautions had been taken by her commander to insure the safe navigation of the vessel and prevent a collision. The rules of the road were conformed to agreeably to regulations of the United States' navy, and no blame attached to the officers or crew of the Oneida for the collision. The Secretary says it is asserted by the captain and some officers of the Bombay that the Bombay, on rounding Kanonsaki Point, approached the Oneida ahead, or a little on the port bow, and then took a course which would have carried her well clear of the Oneida. This assertion is, in the opinion of the Department, inconsistent with the real result of their evidence when closely examined, and it is forced to the conclusion, on evidence now before it, that this disaster occurred through the bad navigation of the Bombay. No means appear to have been taken by the captain of the Bombay to render any assistance to the Oneida, although it seems inevitable that he should have had reason to suppose that damage had been done which was serious and dangerous. Whatever doubt might exist as to the responsibility for the collision, there could hardly be a question as to the conduct of the captain of the Bombay after the collision, and the department was constrained to say it appeared to have been the result of reckless disregard for human life and of the common obligations of humanity. Immediately upon receipt of the document containing these statements a resolution was carried by the House ordering the Secretary of the Navy to have an inquiry made into the Oneida disaster, with a view of ascertaining the responsibility for the disaster and the conduct of the captain of the Bombay after the collision. This resolution has been confirmed by the Senate, and approved of by the President, and the inquiry is to be immediately commenced.

THE AMERICAN NAVY IN CHINA.

Since the withdrawal and sale of a portion of the United States squadron stationed in the Eastern waters the Naval Department have been busily engaged in fitting out and overhauling three of the finest vessels in the service preparatory to sending them to China and Japan.

The Benecia, a magnificent sloop of war, carrying a battery of fourteen guns of heavy calibre, sailed from the Boston Navy yard on the 5th ult., and will soon be followed by the Alaska and Colorado. The Alaska is a wooden sloop of war, built from the latest and most approved models. She was launched from the Boston Navy-yard in July, 1869, and was placed in commission in November. Her armament consists of fourteen guns, ten of which are nine-inch shell guns, one an eleven-inch Dahlgren, throwing a two hundred pound solid shot, and two brass howitzers on the main deck. She is clipper-rigged out and out, and after leaving port will pursue her voyage under sails alone, except when necessity requires the use of steam. Her length is 251 feet, depth of hold fifteen feet, with a draught of sixteen feet of water. Among her officers are several who have distinguished themselves during the late war. Her commander was the recipient of a valuable sword, presented to him by the citizens of New York, for his gallant action with the Alabama, while in command of the gunboat Hatteras, off Galveston, in January, 1863, during which engagement his vessel was sunk. The following is the full complement of officers:—Commander, Homer C. Blake; Executive Officer and Lieutenant Commander, C. M. Chester; Lieutenant, A. S. Snow; Ensigns, R. M. G. Brown, J. B. Smith, C. W. Chipp, C. T. Forse, A. V. Wadhams, and N. L. Roosevelt; Chief Engineer, W. H. King; Second Assistant Engineer, S. L. Cooper; Paymaster, Frank Clarke; Surgeon, J. Clark; Assistant Surgeon, S. W. Latta; Lieutenant of Marines, J. B. Breese. Her crew consists of 241 men and 36 marines. The Colorado is considered by naval critics one of the finest American frigates afloat, not excepting even the Franklin and the old Niagara. She is being rapidly provisioned and supplied with ammunition. Her battery consists of forty-four nine inch guns, twenty-two on a broadside, each throwing a one-hundred pound shot. The subjoined is a list of her officers:—Rear-Admiral commanding Fleet, John Rodgers; Fleet Captain, E. T. Nichols; Captain in Command, Geo. H. Cooper; Lieutenant Commander, Silas Casey, jun.; First Lieutenant and Navigator, H. F. Pickney; Second Lieutenant, O. R. Hagerman; Lieutenant, W. W. Mead; Masters, Talten, McIlvane, and Keyes; Ensigns, Moore, Drake, Welsh, Selfridge, Stevens, and Pillsbury; Fleet Paymaster, J. N. Carpenter; Fleet Surgeon, H. O. Mayo; Assistant Surgeons, C. J. S. Welles and C. L. Cassin; Fleet Engineer, A. Henderson; First Assistant Engineer, J. S. Finney; Second Assistant Engineer, H. Slosson; Fleet Marine Officer, M. L. Tilton; Second Lieutenant of Marines, Wm. J. McDonald, jun. Her crew consists of 600 men, with 55 marines.

SIR R. ALCOCK'S CONVENTION.

To the oft-repeated question, Will the new China Convention be ratified? we may now safely answer, No. From the beginning of the negotiations there was an understanding that it could not be finally concluded with one, unless accepted by all the Treaty Powers; for endless complications would have arisen had British merchants in China paid duties on a different scale, and been placed in many other respects on a different footing, from those of other nations. The United States Government, in its present humour, would be ready to accept a treaty even more favourable to China than this. Holland and some other Continental nations might have been content to follow in the wake of England and America; but France certainly would not, and the adhesion of Russia is more than doubtful. Count LALLEMAND, the French Minister to Peking, is now in Paris; his leave of absence has expired, but his return to China is postponed until the question of the ratification or rejection of the new Anglo-Chinese Convention is settled. We have good reason for believing that the views of the French Government are in accordance with those expressed by the deputation of London merchants to Lord CLARENDON, and that the consent of France will therefore be withheld.

But if even we put aside the question of the assent of other Treaty Powers, it is no less certain that the thorough exposure that has taken place here of the defects in the Convention will necessitate its rejection by Her MAJESTY'S Government on its own merits. Already one important provision—the right of the Chinese to establish a Consul in Hong Kong—has been abandoned by the Foreign-office. The first breach has been made, and the fall of the entire fabric must follow. Nothing will be made known officially until after the arrival of Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK, who has reached Paris (via Brindisi), and will probably be in London to-morrow. No reply has yet been received to the last communication addressed by Mr. MATHESON (on behalf of the Committee of London merchants) to Lord CLARENDON, and there is little doubt that Sir RUTHERFORD'S assistance will be required in framing one. We may look for a further justification or defence of the Convention; for we understand Sir RUTHERFORD still believes that if allowed a fair trial it would be found to work well. Admirably, no doubt, for the Chinese; but we do not for a moment believe that in its present shape it will be ratified. What will be the next step—whether we are to remain on the old footing until a new Minister shall have been despatched to make yet another new treaty, or whether Sir R. ALCOCK will return to Peking with his rejected one, and try to make it more acceptable by another process of revision—remains to be seen.

ADMIRAL DE LA GRANDIERE, lately Governor of Saigon and Commander-in-Chief in French Cochin China, has finally resigned the post, and Admiral OHIER, it is believed, will not return to that country, on account of his health. A new appointment may therefore be expected to be made shortly.

THE "BOMBAY-ONEIDA" CASE.

WE have now before us the whole of the evidence given before the Court of Inquiry held to investigate the collision between the Bombay and the Oneida, and some of the questions most involved in doubt are to a certain extent cleared up. The statement that the shock, terrible as it was to the war-steamer, was but slightly felt on board the mail-packet is corroborated. The assertion that the Bombay was going full speed at the time, and did not even slacken speed after the collision, is conclusively disproved. The fact that the Oneida's guns were not heard, and no signals of distress seen by those on board the Bombay, is also accounted for by the fact that the "primers" for the guns and all the blue-lights and rockets on deck were carried away by the collision; and, as the ship was under full sail and steam, with a fair wind, she had run some miles away from the spot before others could be found. Even then a gun had to be loaded; for the statement at first put forth, that several guns were loaded at the time of the calamity, now proves to be incorrect. In the meanwhile, Capt. EYRE, not seeing or hearing any signs of danger, and reassured by his pilot, resumed his voyage after a stoppage of some few minutes only. All these circumstances tend very much to modify the impression made by the accounts first received through American sources. Still, the Court found Capt. EYRE guilty of culpable negligence, and suspended his certificate for six months. In this country there is a general feeling of dissatisfaction with the decision, and the press calls for a further and more searching investigation. We do not advocate this course for the sake of invoking any increased penalty on Capt. EYRE, for a vindictive punishment is not called for. The recollection that over a hundred fellow-beings were struggling in a watery grave at the moment when, impatient of delay, he gave the word to proceed, will, we should think, be in itself a life-long punishment. But there are many irreconcilable points in the evidence on which the decision of the Yokohama Court was based, and for this reason a further inquiry is, we think, very desirable. It would at least prove to the fellow-countrymen of those lost that the sad fate of their fine ship's crew was not viewed with indifference in England.

THE SUEZ CANAL COMPANY.

SEVERAL members of the direction of the company—Admiral EXCELMANS, MM. G. MILLOU, the Marquis DE RAIGECOURT, G. COUTURIER, and G. FLEURY-HERARD—seceded lately, and, in consequence of some misunderstanding, have addressed a joint letter to a journal (the Messager de Paris), stating that their resignation was connected with questions generally interesting to the company and the shareholders. We are not aware what may be the differences at the board, but we know of one question now pending which has some importance for British merchants and shipowners; this refers to the mode of calculating the tonnage of vessels passing through the Canal. Heretofore the rating has been on the registered tonnage, but it is proposed that in future, when the actual cargo surpasses the registered tonnage, the charge shall be made on the former. We are not aware what are the probabilities of this proposal being carried, and we understand that three months' notice will have to be given, but it is known that such an arrangement would fall principally upon British shipping, and we suggest to the company whether it is wise at the present moment to add to the causes which may possibly deter British owners from using the Canal; we wish it all imaginable success, and we should be sorry to see any new impediment. It has already been shown how large a proportion English trade is likely to furnish to the funds of the company, and we can assure M. DE LESSEPS that the likeliest mode of diminishing the gross receipts from that source is to raise the rates.

The passage of the Hooghly and Imperatrice, and the determination of the Messageries Company to run their future fortnightly mails through the Canal, promise great things for the company, and we trust that the deepening and maintaining of the channel will be looked after without too much delay, so that the P. and O. may feel justified in following the example of the French Company; and we are sure that until the last remnant of a doubt upon this head is removed the true policy of the company would be to hold out every inducement to English owners, and not to depart from the ordinary modes of calculating tonnage. If nothing but cargoes of valuable goods were in question the proposal referred to would be fair enough; but English commerce is of an average kind, and only ordinary rules should be applied to it. Again, if a vessel is to be charged for the amount of cargo she carries over and above her registered tonnage, she ought certainly, on the other hand, to be allowed for the deficiency of cargo. Let the tonnage be charged either on the ship's measurement or on the cargo; but for the company to take the benefit both ways would be manifestly unjust and impolitic.

Since the preceding was written the annual report of the company has been published, and we extract from it the most important items. The total receipts of the company to the end of last year are stated to amount to £18,145,785, and the expenditure to the same sum, less £833,470. The necessary expenses for the current year are given as follows:—1. Payment of debentures and coupons outstanding. 2. Payments on account of the loan of one hundred millions. 3. Expenditure necessary for the completion and maintenance of the Canal, the widening of certain curves, and general administrative expenses — estimated altogether at about 30,000,000 francs (£1,200,000), leaving a balance of about 400,000, which, it is hoped, will be obtained from the Canal receipts; but the state of the balance-sheet will not allow of the payment of the coupons falling due in July. Objections were raised to the non-payment of the coupons, but the meeting went with the direction. The letter of the directors lately resigned, referred to above, was read to the meeting, and explanations were given by M. DE LESSEPS. The report and accounts were approved by a unanimous vote. The report had, however, a very bad effect upon the shares in the market, which fell suddenly from 325 to 270 francs; and the délégations from 225 to 190 francs.

THE agents for the South Italian Railway Company announce some decided improvements in the arrangements for passengers by the Brindisi route. The times are now fixed as follows:—The steamer from Alexandria reaches Brindisi on Tuesday afternoon, and the train leaves at 7 the same evening, reaching Bologna at 2.25 P.M., and Turin at 10.50 P.M., on Wednesday. Passengers sleep at Turin, and leave at 5.25 next morning (Thursday), reaching Susa at 6.35 A.M., St. Michel, at 12.15 P.M., and Paris 6.55 on Friday morning. They may thus be in London by 5.40 P.M. on Friday. In case the Alexandria steamer arrives at Brindisi too late for the 7 P.M. train, the railway company run a special express train to catch the regular train at Turin, so that the Alexandria steamer may sustain a considerable delay, and yet the mails and passengers arrive in London as early as if no delay had been experienced.

M. LE COMTE DE MONTBLANC, who formerly represented Prince SATSUMA in France, is now in Paris as representative of Japan, as several Paris papers have asserted, with the standing of Chargé d'Affaires. We are not in the secrets of the French Government, nor in those of the MIKADO, but we are enabled to assert that the announcement of our contemporaries is somewhat premature. For the advantage of Japan itself, and in the interest of commerce, we should be glad to see regularly accredited diplomatic representatives of that country in all the States of Europe. We may add that M. FLEURY-HERARD has resigned his position of Consul-General of Japan in France.

THE Messageries Imperiales steamer Hooghly has completed her refit at Marseilles, and will be despatched, via the Canal, with the next mails. The Peiho, a new steamer, will be despatched in May, and also an extra steamer about the end of the month. The Peiho is a larger steamer than even the Hooghly, and the cabins are fitted with two berths only, capable of being extended to three in the busy months. The directors will shortly announce a reduced rate of freight and passage-money for Hong Kong. Mons. LECAT will proceed by the Hooghly, on a tour of inspection to China and Japan.

MR. WINCHESTER will proceed to Shanghai in July, to resume his post as H.B.M. Consul at that port. Before leaving he will give evidence before the Committee on the Consular and Diplomatic Service.

MANY of our readers will be gratified to hear that the Senate of the University of Aberdeen have conferred on Dr. LEGGE, of China, the degree of LL.D., in recognition of "his eminent services as a scholar and a minister of CHRIST."

A BLUE BOOK just issued (China, No. 5, 1870), contains a mass of correspondence on diplomatic and consular expenditure in China, Japan, and Siam. We must reserve a detailed notice of it for our next issue.

CAPTAIN JAMIESON, of the P. and O. Company's steamer Pera, has been appointed to take charge of the Company's Agency at Suez, and has left for that port by the Brindisi route.

A JOURNEY FROM HANKOW TO TSUNG-YANG.

We have received an interesting account of a journey from Hankow to Tsung-yang, undertaken by Dr. Shearer and Mr. War rick, of the former place, in the month of November last. They were absent nearly three weeks, in the course of which they travelled between three and four hundred miles. The weather was, for the most part, very pleasant, and the country passed over is represented as often grand and picturesque. Much information is given of the products of the different places, so that a sketch of the journey is likely to be interesting to our readers.

They left Hankow on the 3rd November, in a native boat sailed up the Yangtsze, and in two days reached Kin-kow. On the way they passed through six miles of hilly scenery on one bank of the river, while the other was a vast plain just emerging from its three or four months' watery covering. The deposit on this bank was six inches deep. The country beyond abounded in the soap, laurel, and wax or tallow trees, which added much to the beauty of the scenery. The soap fruit is a large black pod of a foot long, which is used by the natives for cleansing purposes. The wax tree bears a small round berry, which when opened contains three separate seeds, and by placing them in boiling water the wax floats, and is then used in making candles. The maple tree was also observed; it is manufactured into combs and tea chests. The sweet potato was common everywhere; it is longer than ours, and the leaf resembles that of the convolvulus; like our turnip, it can be eaten raw.

On the 6th they sailed through a lake extending as far as the eye could reach, but from the overflowing of the water it was difficult to tell the boundary. They landed and crossed over hill and dale, admiring the magnificent trees and the beauties of nature all around. The villages were in a sad condition from the flood, which had risen more than six feet above the road. The Doctor was interested in the case of a leper, who appeared among the crowd following us. The tobacco plant next presented itself in all its beauty. Its leaves are very like those of the cabbage, and the flower is pinkish, with elongated tube and dilated at the top. The seeds are more numerous and smaller than those of the poppy, and the leaf is dried on bamboo latticed frames. Bordering on the lake there were precipices which reminded the writer of what he had seen in Shetland, with deep blue and green waters beneath.

On the 7th a belt of mountains was seen, reflecting the golden rays of Helios, and the dim outline of those in the far horizon, with their varied tints, added much to the loveliness of the landscape. They reached the city of Hien-ning, and walked through it. A little way on they noticed half-a-dozen trees, which were declared to be the screw palm. Further on, the holly was met with, which is sometimes used for tea, also the blackberry, golden rod, our own blue bell, &c.; and what with sparrows, magpies, and butterflies careering around, the travellers were ready to fancy themselves again in dear old Scotland. The ferns, too, were numerous, and some of them rare. The hills were chiefly freestone at the top, and argillaceous slate further down. A stately yew was observed, with a circumference of twelve feet; it must have been several hundred years old.

On the 8th they crossed a bridge two hundred feet long, supported on six buttresses, and covered all over with a wooden roof. They left their boat at this point, and engaged several coolies to carry their baggage about ten miles. The road was a mountain path, and the scenery was truly grand On either side were hills covered with wood. The only new kinds were the oak, box, larch, and spruce fir; also the tea bush, with its camelia-like flower, for it is of the same family, and called in Chinese by the same name. Then came the old bracken fern, exactly the same as that described by Scott in the "Lady of the Lake," whose root, when cut, showed the identical eagle as in our own.

In the afternoon they reached Ma-chiao, and located themselves in one of the Russian hongs there. A native servant accompanied them to a tea plantation. Some of the bushes were in flower. The Doctor gathered a large quantity of branches and leaves of indigenous plants, some coinciding with the English Flora wonderfully, others again quite peculiar to this part of the world. Monkeys appear also to abound in this quarter. The natives here use large wheels for drawing water from the river up into the fields.

Digitized by Google

Their diameter is about 24 feet, and at each spoke there is a wooden box, the breadth of the wheel, for drawing and holding the water. This is slightly inclined, so that as each reaches the top it pours its contents into a tube which leads it to the fields, and as they are all the one higher than another there is no further trouble, but just to conduct it where you will.

On the 9th they went to see some hot sulphur springs. The scenery by the way (four miles) was exquisite. At the foot of a hill, they found the sulphur springs. The water was welling up in half a dozen places, close by the bank of a river, and it was so hot that they could not keep their hands in it. The heat must have been about 90 deg. in the spring. The gas was bubbling up at a great rate, and on tasting the water it was anything but pleasant. On their way back they found beautiful specimens of rock crystal. Some of the holes in the rocks were lined with this magnificent stone. They met also with the Tung-yew tree, from whose seeds an oil is extracted, in which a large trade is done in Hankow. The sweet potatoe was likewise plentiful. They came in contact with the coffee plant, wild rose, hyacinth, chesnut tree, banana, raspberry, and privet, most of which and many other specimens were secured. The travellers were amused to see a scarecrow in the shape of a man, with hands stretched out, and an old hat on, acting his part in the fields as among ourselves at home.

On the 10th they left the village of Ma-chiao, and on returning by a mountain path they passed through varied scenery; sometimes terrible mountain gorges, and again along the banks of a clear running river. They saw the primrose, mint, daisy, dandelion, ivy, wild orange, aspen, hemp, silver pine, and taro. They crossed several bridges of no mean construction, built of limestone, having three or four arches, whose piers, or buttresses taper off to a point, so as to break the force of the current as well as to cut the ice in winter. It is observed that anyone seeing these bridges would not be inclined to call the builders uncivilised. In a few hours they reached Peh-tun, and were entertained in one of the Russian hongs, the two members connected with which were at the time in Hankow, as the brick-tea season was over. Towards evening they ascended one of the hills, and at the very top found specimens of quick lime, and large quantities of tufa, which, like the hot springs, showed a volcanic eruption long ago.

On the 11th the thermometer at daylight was 40°, and they started with their native host to visit two Russians resident at Yen-Rea-shan, six miles off. As they proceeded among the hills they came to a large plantation of bamboo, a tree of the greatest service in China, likewise the cassia tree, used for scenting tea, the wood sorrel, geranium, and honey-suckle. The tea plant and cypress graced the mountain tops. The graves in this quarter were finely adorned, more so than had been seen elsewhere. They crossed the dry beds of many a mountain torrent, the high water mark at the sides showing with what force the water occasionally came down. They reached the village, and had a little difficulty in introducing themselves to the Russians, who knew nothing of English, but Chinese became the ready medium of communication. They were taken to a cave where there were numerous stalagmites and stalactites. Returning to Peh-tun, there were two men waiting for medicine to cure them of opium smoking. Both had indulged in it for years, and wished to give it up. The Doctor promised to send them some, but told them that the main thing lay in the will, which it was to be feared had the control of them instead of the opposite. They sought to blame the foreigner for bringing it to China. It was asked why they took it, but there was no reply.

On the 12th the travellers proceeded on their way. In this part of the country there are a great many inns, especially for the benefit of tea packers in the spring. They are named a resting place for travellers and merchants. A short distance from Peh-tun there was a peculiar view obtained from the top of a hill of scores, even hundreds, of peaks rising up in the valley beneath, which were all covered with the tea bush in its regular parallel lines on a clayey background. Descending to the mountain track, they walked along for miles amid scenery not unlike some of the lowlands of Scotland, in which the bluebell, wild violet, rasp and strawberry, horse daisy and mountain ash were found. They rested for awhile at one of the inns on the way, meeting with large numbers of coolies engaged in carrying various articles of merchandise. One applied to the Doctor for a cure for opium smoking. He had been accustomed to it for three or four years, and expressed a strong desire to give it up, but could not, he said, without a substitute of some medicine. He took 120 grains a day (one grain being sufficient to set an ordinary individual asleep), and was exceedingly wan and thin.

In the course of the following day they passed several manufactories for making the common blue dye. For this purpose large vats, with raised bottom in the centre, are buried flush with the ground, and when filled with water, a quantity of lime is put in and mixed with leaves of the indigo plant. The whole is then stirred daily for a fortnight, when the dye is ready for use. They do not make it hard as we do, only to a kind of paste. Red dye is obtained from sapanwood, a produce of the Straits. The only new things met with in the vegetable world that day were the millet and canary seed, cotton and chillis, peas and beans. They reached Tsung-yang, the termination of their jouney, and stayed n the Russian establishment for several days. They wandered about the city and ccuntry without any difficulty, examining the curiosities of the place, doctors' shops, &c. The wall of the city is four or five miles round, and there is a population of some 10,000. The trade is principally in tea. Two Russian hongs do largely in congou and brick tea. Black congou or red leaf consists of the year's new leaves, which when picked and dried in the sun are taken in and curled by the feet. This done, the leaves are assorted and then fired, that is, about twenty pounds are put in a basket over a slow charcoal fire in a hollow of the ground for a day, and one man has charge of a room with forty or fifty of these to keep them constantly stirred or turned over. When cooled they are ready for packing into chests made of the maple tree round about. Brick tea is of two kinds, one made of dust, the other of the large under leaves of the bush, and undergoes a different preparation. Bags containing 15 to 20 lbs. of either kind are first steamed over a fire, then divided and put into moulds, and pressed to the size and shape of a brick an inch thick. It is all sent to Siberia in bamboo baskets of 64 and 72 bricks, and in Mongolia it also passes for cash, there being a scarcity of metal in that region. For drinking, a piece is cut off, boiled with butter and spices, and the infusion is ready. The two travellers left Tsung-yang on the 17th, engaging a boat with three men, for about 30s., to take them to Hankow, the distance being from 160 to 180 miles. The river was at the time 200 feet broad and very shallow, being unaffected by the flood of the Yang-tsze. In certain places boys were seen with harpoons catching turtles, while in deep water nets were extensively used for fish. Both banks were richly wooded and the foliage was grand. There were nearly twenty different tints, from the purple and sea-weed red of the aspen and wax tree to the "sere and yellow leaf." The fir and arborvitæ contrasted with the darker green of the cypress and such like, and gave an harmonious yet varied effect to the whole. At the water's edge were many birds, including the black and the hooded crow, the blackbird, and pelican, while far above the highest hill was a species of vulture. The rocks around are made of limestone, and kilns were observed for the manufacture of lime. Bamboo groves also abound on either side. The river contains many rapids in the narrow places, down which the water descends with great velocity, and as they are lined with rocks careful navigation is required. The boats in use are about sixty feet long by six feet broad, and six inches draught for the largest. Pheasants, wild duck, and geese are got here, and water-birds are very numerous of all sizes; some were noticed with white tails and others with red. About mid-day they went to see a coal mine four miles inland. The mouth of it was half way up the hill, and the pit was from sixty to eighty feet deep. On this account the quality was very inferior, but increasing demand by foreigners for good coal has made a corresponding supply from Hunan province. The pits are not perpendicular but sloping. The cost is 9s. to 10s. at the mouth for fine material, which lays it at Hankow for 15s. The out-turn is four to five tons a day from each pit. The hills are covered with brushwood of fir and oak, which was being cut by women, and stored for firewood. The ferry-boats were numerous and free, being kept up either at public or private expense. If at the latter, a tablet is erected at the jetty, giving name, &c., of donor, who is proclaimed to have done a meritorious act.

Next day they passed a bridge of about twenty boats, and reached the walled city of Pooche, containing nearly 10,000 people. On landing they were followed by hundreds of men and boys, who indulged in throwing clods and stones at them. Great devastations had been committed here by the rebels, as in numerous places round about. The following day they visited several mines, 150 feet deep, but the workmen were so few and everything so primitive that a small amount only could be got daily, say three or four tons, while the country seemed to abound in coal.

On the 21st they observed several eagles soaring magnificently above them, and at length reaching the Yangtsze, our travellers sailed upon it for ninety miles until they arrived at Hankow having greatly enjoyed their trip.

THE COMMITTEE ON THE DIPLOMATIC SERVICE.

The Committee resumed its sittings on the 28th ult., and Lord Malmesbury was again examined.

Mr. Rylands asked his lordship whether in the three principal wars he had been engaged in of late, Russia, China, and Abyssinia, there had not been great blunders in the diplomatic action. Was it not the fact that, in respect to the Russian war, that Court was misled as to the intentions of this country?—I am not aware of the fact. In reply to further questions, the Earl of Malmesbury was not prepared to say that the China or Abyssinian wars were caused by the want of proper diplomatic action. He did not think it wise to change the principal Ambassadors with every change of Government. It was necessary under some circumstances to send a very distinguished man, like the late Duke of Wellington for instance, whose name and presence would influence the country to which he was sent, but as a general rule those who belonged to the profession were quite competent to do the work By Mr. Cameron: The action of Mr. Bruce did not precipitate the China War; it was the determination of the Chinese Government not to carry out their treaty obligations. I certainly am not all in favour of doing away with the important missions to Denmark and Sweden, especially while the Russian missions exist.

On the 31st ult. the Select Committee appointed to consider this subject resumed their sittings, the Right Hon. E. P. Bouverie in the chair. Mr. Hammond put in some official documents intended to enable the Committee to draw a comparison between the cost of the diplomatic service of this and other countries. He entered into particulars showing the salaries and expenses of the Queen's messengers both at home and abroad, and explained the cause of the excess on the Chinese Mission, which he said arose from the fact that all the returns were not brought into the Foreign-office. The greater portion of the expenses were paid out of the treasury chest of China, and repaid. Now, no money could be expended on a mission without the accounts being brought into the Foreign-office. There was no blame attachable to any quarter. The right hon gentleman incidentally remarked that if the Foreign-office had as much money as it required it would be more liberal; but it was hard upon the Department, seeing how it was tied down, to blame it for a want of liberality.

THE THROUGH ROUTE TO INDIA.

A conference was held in the Lecture Hall of the Society of Arts last week on "The Through Route to India." Mr. W. Maitland, late chairman of the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, occupied the chair.

The subject was introduced by Mr. Hyde Clarke, who said he had much pleasure in reporting progress to the conference since they had last considered the question. He was not going to bring before them any special route, because he was ready to favour any line which would effect the main object; and upon that point there would be, he thought, scarcely a difference of opinion among them. He pointed out how a large portion of the necessary route in India had already been completed without the direct assistance of Government, and the chief portion which remained to be accomplished was the Roumelia Railway. This the Ottoman Government was supporting in such a way as to set an example to the English Government. A further aid in the accomplishment of the through route was the opening of the Suez Canal, which had already exercised considerable influence on the port of Bombay. There were two schemes in particular which would effect the solution of that question; one was a line to pass by Aleppo and through the Euphrates; and the other, to pass further to the eastward, through Eastern Asia Minor and the Valley of the Tigris.

Several gentlemen took part in the discussion which followed the reading of the paper.

Mr. V. Fitzgerald alluded to the effects already produced by the opening of the Suez Canal on the trade of ports in that part of the world, and stated that M. Lesseps was in favour of the Euphrates Valley route to India.

The Hon. Captain Stewart said it was a matter of surprise to him that The Times had so persistently opposed direct communication with India. One of the principal arguments used against the scheme was that the expense of the land traffic would be too great. But that was a false theory, because it must always be observed that, whichever way the mails went, the great body of traffic invariably followed. It was not traffic which created railways, but railways which created traffic. The Russian Government had shown that it was alive to the importance of having communication with India, and was pressing on its lines with great rapidity, while telegraphic communication through Russian wires with India was cheaper than by any other. He was in favour of the route by the Tigris.

Admiral Ommanney was in favour of the route through Asia Minor, embracing the cities of Damascus, Aleppo, and others to the Persian Gulf.

Mr. Fitzwilliam expressed the hope that the English would be roused from their apathy to realise the importance of pushing forward railways in India. Government was much too backward in the matter.

After a few observations from Mr. W. Harding, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Hyde Clarke, and the conference terminated.

NAVAL ARCHITECTURE—THE SUEZ CANAL.

On the 6th inst. Sir John Pakington presided at the meeting of the eleventh session of the Institution of Naval Architects, and spoke with some emphasis of the recent losses of steamships at sea. He hoped the men of science present would express their opinions on the rule of the road at sea, and on the necessity of more stringent regulations to prevent overlading. The right hon. baronet referred pointedly to the recent losses of the Normandy, the Oneida, and, as it is to be feared, the City of Boston. Papers were read by Mr. Samuda, M.P., on the Suez Canal, and by Admiral Belcher and by Mr. Scott Russell on the subject of steam communication with France. Mr. Samuda, in his paper on the Suez Canal, said that the Canal being now an accomplished fact, it was desirable to consider the effect it would have upon the marine and commerce of all nations. In the first place, the Canal would make the following savings in distance in the voyage to England:—From Bombay, 5,570 miles; Ceylon, 3,840; from Hong Kong and Singapore, 3,520; and from Melbourne, 91 miles. This represents a saving of about half the distance between England and Bombay, about one-third the distance between England and China, and practically none between England and Australia. Manifestly, then, the Canal will greatly benefit carriers. Independently of the difficulties and the expense of getting through the Canal, the Red Sea was so dangerous at certain times to sailing ships that the Canal would not do for such vessels. The opening of the Canal, therefore, had caused a great falling off in the construction of sailing-ships, and it tended to the further substitution of steam for sails in carrying on our traffic with the East. A few years ago the opening of the Suez Canal would not have had such a powerful influence, but within the last ten or twelve years so many improvements had been made in engines, and in economising the consumption of coals, that steam can now compete much better than before with sails. In our traffic with the East steamships should, if possible, take enough coal on board before leaving England to enable them to perform the outward and homeward trip. This could be done between England and Bombay, and still leave room for a very large quantity of cargo, so that, without doubt, nearly all the traffic between here and Bombay will be lost to sailing ships. In the trade with China the effect would be less, because the quantity of coal required on startin would prevent the carrying of a large cargo on the outward voyage He thought that superior clipper ships might hold their ground in the China trade for some time, until steamers were improved.

LEGAL.

COURT OF PROBATE AND DIVORCE.

IN RE GOODS OF YUSUF REUBEN, DECEASED.

Mr. C. A. Middleton applied to the Court in this case. The deceased, Yusuf Rahamim Isaac Furas Reuben, was a Jewish merchant at Shanghai, who died in September, 1862, leaving a will in the Hebrew character and Arabic language. In April, 1863, application was made for a grant of administration by his representatives to the High Court of Bombay, and a commission was issued to Shanghai, directed to the Registrar of the Consular Court. Both the commission and original will, however, were lost upon the passage, though fortunately a copy was retained in the archives of the court. Further application was made in September, 1864, and a new commission was issued, with the office copy of the will retained in the registry. The motion made to that commission was that the due execution of the will was proved, and on the 13th of January, 1865, an order was made that the next of kin should consent. The father was next of kin, and the only person who would have been entitled in case of intestacy. On the 4th April, 1865, the warrant was forwarded, but at this point proceedings were stayed by the death of the father. Whilst this was going on at Bombay the Consul at Shanghai had seized the whole estate of the deceased, and converted it into money, which he sent here to London to be deposited in the Treasury, where it now lay. The father thus dead, in whose name this application was made, was left residuary legatee under the will, and therefore his wife would be entitled as his representative to administration of the deceased son's effects. For that purpose she applied to an attorney in this country to obtain administration to the effects of her husband in Bombay. He had now to ask for a second order of administration to the effects of the son.

Lord Penzance said the applicant was entitled to the order, with an official translation annexed of the copy of the will which had been preserved.

TABOR V. TABOR.

The parties in this case were married at Lewisham in 1858. The respondent then kept a chemist's shop at Salisbury, where they continued to reside until the end of 1863. The respondent afterwards went out to Japan, where he had led a very irregular life. The petitioner was examined in support of the allegations of the petition, and stated that she had suffered maltreatment from the respondent almost from the very day of her marriage. The remainder of the evidence had been taken by commission in Japan, and related to the respondent's intercourse with unfortunate females there. Dr. Sidney Jones, senior surgeon at St. Thomas's Hospital, was called, and spoke to the petitioner having sustained serious injury to her left side from her husband's violence, and having had two of her ribs fractured.

The Court pronounced a decree nisi with costs.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

PERRY V. THE ORIENTAL HOTELS COMPANY (LIMITED).

Mr. Dickinson, Q.C., Mr. J. N. Higgins, and Mr. J. C. Whitehorne moved on behalf of the plaintiff in this cause for a receiver of the rents and profits of two hotels, one at Cairo, the other at Point de Galle, belonging to the Oriental Hotels Company, which is now in course of liquidation, and also for an injunction to restrain the liquidator from interfering in the management of the hotels. The plaintiff was the contractor for the erection of the hotel at Cairo, and in that capacity the company owed him £9,073, for which he received a charge on both hotels by a deed under which the company undertook to grant him a legal mortgage of the hotels, and gave a power of attorney to their foreign agents to complete the security according to foreign law, the charge being, however, subject to a first mortgage for £8,000 on the Point de Galle hotel, and to debentures not exceeding £25,000 charged upon both. The motion was resisted on behalf of the official liquidator of the company, on the ground that, as the plaintiff had not registered his security in accordance with the laws of the foreign countries, the charge was not complete, and that to permit him to enforce it by the appointment of a receiver would amount to an alteration of the status quo at the date of the winding-up and interfere with the rights of other creditors.

The Vice-Chancellor, without calling for a reply, said that every equitable mortgagee was entitled, as of course, to the appointment of a receiver, subject to the rights of prior incumbrances, and that to prohibit the plaintiff from enforcing his security in that manner would be to alter the rights of the parties, instead of preserving them unaltered, and he should, therefore, make the ordinary order for a receiver and for an injunction.

TEA BROKERAGE.—PENNINGTON V. RALLI.—This case involved a nice point in brokerage. There was a sale of tea by auction in November last in Liverpool. The tea was the property of defendant, the plaintiff bought it, and Messrs. Whistler and Co., of that town, were the salesmen. The plaintiff paid the brokers for the tea, but before delivery was obtained Whistler and Co. failed, and defendant then refused delivery. The action was, therefore, brought to recover the tea. The case turned mainly on the question of usage, on which much conflicting evidence was given. The learned judge said the question was whether the payment to the broker was a payment to the defendant. The jury found for the plaintiff, damages £82 5s. 6d.

Monetary and Commercial.

The Bank rates for bills at sixty days' sight on Singapore, China, and Japan are as follows:—Singapore, buying, 4s. 3d.; selling, 4s. 5½d.; Hong Kong, buying, 4s. 1d.; selling, 4s. 3d.; Shanghai, buying, 5s. 8d.; selling, 6s. 2d.; Yokohama, buying, 4s. 3d.; selling, 4s. 7d. These rates are merely nominal tranactions, being to a very limited extent.

The Suez Canal Company held a meeting on the 1st inst. at Paris. The directors reported that they had, on December 31st, about twenty millions of francs in hand, or coming in from different sources, but that the expenses of the present year for supplementary works to the Canal, and for the coupon of January, will require thirty millions of francs. It would, therefore, not be possible to pay any dividend in July.

It is stated that one or two Glasgow firms are making arrangements to establish connections with Havre and Trieste, for the special purpose of importing Indian produce direct through the Suez Canal, in order to meet the requirements of Continental producers.

The ordinary general meeting of the members of the Agra Bank (Limited), including those of the late Agra and Masterman's Bank (Limited), was held on the 5th of April. The report was adopted without a dissentient voice, and a dividend of 4 per cent. declared. A full report will be found in another column.

We hear that the Hong Kong branch of the National Bank of India has been opened, under the management of Mr. Sherwood, who has secured the premises formerly occupied by the Agra Bank.

At the meeting of the London and Delhi Bank the shareholders expressed themselves as satisfied with the report of the directors and the progress the bank was making. The report was adopted nem. con., and the retiring directors re-elected.

At the meeting of the China Submarine Telegraph Company the report of the directors was adopted. It states that all the shares have been allotted, and the whole of the allotment money paid. Lieutenant-Colonel Glover, R.E., late Director-General of Telegraphs in India, has been appointed managing director. The report further states that the order for the cable has been given to the Telegraph Construction Company, but that the directors have determined to defer proceedings with reference to the authorisation by resolutions passed at an extraordinary general meeting of the company, held on the 7th of January, 1870, to increase the capital of the company from £525,000 to £825,000 for the construction of the Shanghai section of the cable, until the construction of the line from Singapore to Hong Kong is further advanced.

The British-Indian Submarine Telegraph Company notify that messages for India by their cable may now be despatched from any postal telegraph office. To ensure their going by the right route, the words "via Malta" must be inserted after the address of the receiver. Telegraphic communication with India appears now to be efficiently established. A message has been received through the British-Indian Submarine at 1 P.M., from Bombay, at 1.35, the transit, allowing for difference of time, being thus about four hours.

Biddings for £387,500 in bills on India took place on the 6th. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £383,000, and to Madras, £4,500. Tenders at 1s. 11⅛d. will receive about 25 per cent.; above that price in full. These terms, compared with the last occasion, show a reduction of about ⅛ per cent

Bar silver is quoted 5s. 07-16d. to 5s. 0⅛d. per ounce, with little or no business. Mexican dollars are in request for China at 4s. 11⅛d., but the supply here is extremel limited.

Tenders for 250,000 rupees in bills on Ceylon were accepted on the 7th inst., at 1s. 11 9-16d. per rupee.

THE IMPORT TRADE OF SHANGHAI.

By the last mail from China some interesting figures have been received, showing the enormous increase in the Shanghai import of cotton manufactures during the past four years:—

The quantity of grey shirtings imported during 1869 was 4,397,872 pieces, against 1,330,020 pieces in 1865; while that of T-cloths was 2,645,853 pieces in 1869, against 156,765 pieces in 1865. It is to be noted, however, that while the stock of grey shirtings in foreign godowns on Jan. 31, 1870, was not excessive (794,500 pieces), that of T-cloths was unprecedentedly large (1,046,429 pieces). The import of white shirtings in 1869 was 443,887 pieces, against 212,091 pieces in 1865; while drills of English, American, and Dutch makes were landed in 1869 to the extent of 743,914 pieces, against 44,809 pieces in 1865. The imports of other cotton goods, both fancy and plain, also showed a marked increase, though stocks of many kinds were far from light.

The above figures are taken from statistics published by the Shanghai General Chamber of Commerce.

THE AGRA BANK.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders in this bank was held on the 5th inst. at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, Mr. James Thomson in the chair. The report of the directors was taken as read.

The Chairman said it would have been more satisfactory to the board to have met the shareholders with a full purse than a partially empty one. The result was the more discouraging because the first six months promised much better results. A glance at the statement of liabilities and assets would show the exact position of the bank. The liabilities were due partly to the public or customers and partly to the shareholders. The liability due to the shareholders was £793,463. The liabilities due to customers were £1,940,094, made up of £539,302 on current accounts, and £1,400,792 upon fixed deposits. The amount due to the holders of bills was £744,530, by the exchange with branches. On the other side, there were the assets, or the means of meeting the liabilities, consisting of cash in hand, £671 627; house property, £123,001. Then there were the investments amounting to £903,261, of which £38?,097 and £520 164 were for discounts loans, and credits. Then came in the exchange with branches, whereby it would be seen that the total liability was £1,818,566, which was considerably in excess of the bills payable The inspection of the accounts by the eye of a business man would suggest two questions. The first was the soundness of the bank's position, and the difficulty of employing money safely in order to earn a profit. The great object of the board had been to organise a sound business at all the branches, and they had succeeded in getting an excellent constituency, and the only fault the bank had to find with its customers was that they were more ready to give the bank their money than to borrow the bank's funds. In exchange operations, generally consisting of the purchases and sale of bills, there had been such severe competition that buying and selling had been done at almost the same rates. That fact had had a great deal to do with the small profits made by Indian banks, and also with the heavy losses which some of them had sustained. The returns of the bank on the 30th of June last showed a net profit of 10½ per cent. upon the participating capital, and when the interim dividend was declared a considerable and substantial balance was carried forward. The board thought that, estimating the profits of the last six months at a very moderate amount, they would be enabled to declare a dividend considerably in excess of the interim payment. But the result had been otherwise. With the single exception of that at Madras, there had been a loss at all the Indian branches of the bank on the transactions of the second half-year. Had they only continued to have paid their current expenses in the second half-year, without even adding a penny to the profits, the board would have been able to pay a dividend at the rate of nine per cent. per annum As to the capital account, the board had had great difficulty in persuading the holders of the old scrip in the old Agra and Masterman's Bank to come to a liberal and fair arrangement proposed, and there was still seventy-two holders, possessing £1,326 of scrip, who had made no sign either one way or the other, of approval or dissent, and he trusted that public appeal would be sufficient to induce them to fall into the arrangement, because all the time they were liable to pay £10 per share, so as to complete the capital of the bank of £1,000,000 sterling. By the recent decision of Vice-Chancellor James, Mr. Ball remained nominally the liquidator of the old bank, but without any authority, and without the power of charging. The question of the guarantee of Messrs. Masterman, in reference to which a special resolution was passed at the last meeting, had been dealt with. A copy of the resolution had been forwarded to the partners, and after consultation and consideration those gentlemen sent a reply to the effect that they had fulfilled every obligation which they entered into at the time of the amalgamation. There were two other questions referred to at the previous meeting which were the subject of law proceedings. One was the Irish case, which was still sub judice, and therefore not a fit subject for comment and discussion at that meeting; and the other was the claim for £92,000 of the Anglo Egyptian Bank. That claim was subsequently reduced to £43,000; and he was happy to inform the meeting that it had been compromised by the plaintiffs paying the Agra Bank the sum of £27.500. (Loud laughter.) Gentlemen might well laugh on hearing that a claimant for £92,000 in the first instance should compromise the suit by the payment of £27,500 to the defendants; but he believed if the suit had gone on the Agra would have got more. How it had occurred that debit should have been placed instead of credit was one of those things which nobody could understand. (Renewed laughter, and cheers.) The resuscitation of the bank was completed. They had done with liquidatorial interference, and the future was full of promise. He moved the adoption of the report.

Mr. Stewart having seconded the motion, Mr. Sangster expressed some satisfaction with the report and the accounts, and more especially the chairman's explanation of them. He approved of the formation of a reserve fund, and hoped all the shareholders would cordially support it. The report was then adopted, and the dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum declared.

Colonel the Hon. H. B. Dalzell and Mr. J. C. Palmer, the retiring directors, were, upon the motion of Mr. Moreland, seconded by Dr. Payton, unanimously re-elected. Some formal business was transacted, and the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman and directors.

CHINA SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).

The general meeting of the shareholders was held on Tuesday, att he Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street; Mr. John Pinder in the chair. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, referred to the resolution passed at the last meeting for increasing the capital of the company, and said that these powers had not been used, and it was very probable that the additional capital would not be required. The company were now in negotiation with the North of China Company to use their line when completed, for the traffic between Hong Kong and Shanghai, which would give the China Submarine a share of the profits of the former line, without calling up the additional capital authorised at an extraordinary meeting held on Jan. 7, 1870. The order had been given for the cable. The British-Indian cable had been most successfully laid, and was now at work. The next section of this great work would be the Singapore section, and further on the China section. In answer to a question, the chairman stated that the dividend on the British-Indian from the business done last week would yield 5 per cent. to the shareholders; but the line had been laid so quickly that the public were at present generally ignorant of the opening. The traffic was expected to increase considerably when the completion of the Indian cable became more generally known. It was stated at the meeting on reliable authority, that the call due on April 1 on the British-Indian amounted to £66,000, £51,000 of which was paid on the day it became due.

BULLION AND SPECIE.

The following is from Messrs. Pixley, Abell, Langley, and Blake's Circular:—

Gold.—The Continental Exchanges continue so high that there is no demand for export for France, and, with the exception of small orders for bars for India and sovereigns for the Brazils, all arrivals have been sent into the Bank. The amount purchased since our last Circular is £42,000, and further sums will shortly be sent in. The Tanjore has taken £42,240 to India, and £19,000 (sovereigns), withdrawn from the Bank, have been sent to the Brazils. The Essex has brought £10,000, and the Alexander Duthie £30,500, from Melbourne.

Exchange on India for Banks Drafts is 1s. 11½d. per Rupee. Council Drafts for Rs. 38,75,000 were allotted yesterday; Tenders at 1s. 11½d. received 25 per cent., those above that price in full. These terms, compared with the last occasion, show a reduction of about ½ per cent. India Government Loan Notes remain as last quoted, viz.:—4 per Cents. 92¼ to 92⅜; 5 per Cents. 103½ to 104½; and 5½ per Cents. 109½ to 110½.

Silver.—Bars have been rather firmer in price the last day or two, owing to the demand for Holland; and we quote the price as 60½d. per oz. standard The orders for India have been small. The "Tanjore" has taken £30,600 to Bombay, and the "Seine" £19,370 to the West Indies.

Mexican Dollars.—The "Tanjore" has taken £64,080 to China and the Straits. The late arrivals have been sold at 59½d. per oz. We do dot look for any advance in price, although dollars are at present scarce.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The market since our last has again been very quiet, transactions being more curtailed as the time of the Budget draws near, both buyers and sellers preferring to wait the result. The principal amount of business has been at the public sales, at which, however, there was but little spirit in the biddings, and the prices for common to fair qualities receded in value. The public sales of the 29th ultimo comprised 18.691 packages, of which 12,550 packages were sold, nearly all being printed without reserve. Those of the 5th instant comprised 8,518 packages, of which 6,352 packages were sold, nearly all again being without reserve.

Red-leaf Congous: Siftings have been sold with difficulty at a shade under previous prices. Broken-leaf kinds have sold rather lower. Fair to good common have sold cheaper at public auction, there being less demand for export. Fair to good Kaisows have only been saleable in small parcels at about former prices. Fine to finest show no alteration. There has been a limited inquiry for boxes of Pak Lin at previous rates. Amoy kinds have been partially inquired for from 11d. to 11½d. per lb. for fair quality. Black-leaf kinds: Siftings show no change. The grades below good common have been in over-supply, and prices have given way ½d. to ¼d. per lb.; very good common has been sold at 1s. 0¾d., to 1s. 1d. per lb. Fair to good medium kindss have sold rather lower at public auction; privately some parcels have been sold at about previous prices. Good to fine qualities remain firm, also finest, the supply being moderate. New-make Canton kinds show no material alteration. Oolongs and Souchongs remain much as before, transactions having been limited. Scented Teas: Common Canton Capers continue depressed; fair have been rather more in request; good to fine remain firm. Foochow kinds show no further change. Canton Orange Pekoe show but little alteration. Foochow kinds: Old season's have sold rather lower; good qualities of new season have been neglected; fine have been inquired for at full prices. Uncoloured Japans: The common sorts remain dull of sale, but fair to good and fine have been saleable at previous prices. Green Teas: There has not been much doing in these kinds; a few parcels of recent import have been sold, the finer qualities being fully maintained, but common to medium kinds remain dull at lower prices, those at the public auctions showing a marked decline. Canton-made gunpowders have been without inquiry, and prices are rather nominal.

Home consumption for London from 1st Jan. to 31st March ...	13,953,000	17,900.000
Export do. do.	6,460,000	10.658.000
Sent coastwise do.	10,680,000	8,440,000
Total,	31,093,000	37,398,000

SILK.

The following is from Messrs. Kilburn, Kershaw, and Co.'s Circular:—

The lull which we noticed in our last issue as having taken place in the market has since continued, and there appears a general pause, which is, after all, but a natural consequence of the extensive operations which have been made since last November; the approach of the Easter holidays, as well as the season of the year, are also further reasons for a quiet market such as we now have. Prices must be quoted as rather easier for Chinas and Cantons, but holders do not seem at all disposed to make concession, and thus there is not more than 6d. decline quotable, say:—31s 6d. for chop 3rd Tsatlees; 27s. to 27s. 6d. for "Red Peacocks;" and 25s. to 25s. 6d. for No. 5 Tsatlees, which are the asking prices of to-day. Taysaams, owing to their rather free arrival of late, are more neglected than Tsatlees, and there are but few buyers. Hainins are again uninquired for, after the few days' slight improvement which took place last month, and at 26s. for No. 2 Fatmows, which is the present quotation, there is no business. Japan and Bengal Silks show more decided flatness than any others, and are again neglected; it would be difficult to sell at 1s. to 1s. 6d. reduction from present nominal quotations. The deliveries in March were unusually large and satisfactory, and mark the healthy progress of consumption; indeed, it is eight years since so large a total monthly delivery as that of last month, say 6,654 bales, can be found. The clearances since the 1st instant are still good, say 434 bales China; 108 Canton; 91 Japan; and 82 Bengal. Total 715 bales, from 1st to 5th.

COFFEE.

The auctions of plantation Ceylon have been more extensive, but, the demand being slow, have gone off with little competition at 1s. to 1s. 6d. per cwt. decline, except for desirable bold and coloury qualities, which continue to find purchasers on previous terms. There is little demand for Native, and rates are with difficulty maintained at last mail's range. The following may be given as the current quotations :—Plantation triage and ordinary, 46s. to 58s. ; small grev and dull sorts, at 59s. to 63s. ; low middling and middling ditto, 62s. to 68s. ; bold ditto, 67s. to 74s. 6d. ; small coloury, 64s. to 66s. ; middling coloury, 68s. 6d. to 76s. ; good and fine middling, 77s. to 81s. ; good bold, 82s. 6d. to 84s. 6d. ; peaberry, 74s. to 85s. Native fine ordinary bold, 58s. ; good bold bright, 60s. Of 3,290 bags Manila offered 1,131 bags sea-damaged sold—first and second class of yellow, at 55s. 6d. to 56s. ; third and repacked, at 53s. 6d. to 55s. ; first and second of bold mixed, at 49s. 6d. to 50s. Of the sound portion 200 bags pale Indan sold at 54s. to 54s. 6d., the remainder being bought in—good yellowish, at 58s. to 59s. ; Indan, at 57s. Of Java 637 bales mixed bold pale and brown Sumatra kind sold at 48s. 6d. to 49s., chiefly the former price.

The quantity of Ceylon Coffee afloat for Great Britain is estimated as follows :—Plantation. 304,246 cwt., against 270,769 cwt. at the corresponding date of 1869 ; Native, 30,194 cwt., against 56,685 cwt. The quantity afloat for the Continent is 2,694 cwt. Plantation against — cwt., and 1,517 cwt. Native against 1,605 cwt. The quantity of Coffee landed in the thirteen weeks ended April 2, 1870, was of Ceylon, 4,687 tons, against 5,765 tons during the corresponding period of 1869 ; of all descriptions, 6,935 tons, against 10,021 tons. The quantity entered for home consumption was, of Ceylon, 2,033 tons, against 2,459 tons; of all descriptions, 3,685 tons, against 4.223 tons. The quantity exported was, of Ceylon, 5,023 tons, against 5,511 tons ; of all descriptions, 8 820 tons, against 1,1267 tons. The stock on April 2 was, of Ceylon, 11,495 tons, against 8,190 tons ; of all descriptions, 18,649 tons, against 13,751 tons.

SUGAR.

The demand has become greatly restricted, there being no disposition either to sell or to buy until the alterations to be effected in the duties are made known. Transactions during the fortnight have been extremely limited, comprising only the following parcels :—Penang, at auction, 800 bags at 36s. to 38s. ; 1,251 baskets, 48 bags date sort (duty 8s.) being bought in at 27s. 6d., privately 1,600 bags good brown to good yellow sold at 33s. to 37s. 6d. ; Manila, at auction, 18,637 bags clayed, import 1866 and 1867, were bought in, duty 8s., at 30s. 6d., duty 9s. 7d. at 32s., and 100 tons clayed sold at 29s. 6d. ; privately a sale has been effected of 6,000 bags (duty 8s.) at 30s. per cwt.

The quantity of Sugar landed in the thirteen weeks ended April 2, 1870, was, of Penang, 313 tons, against 1,126 tons in the corresponding period of 1869 ; of Manila, Java, and China, 4,493 tons, against 8,239 tons ; the quantity entered for home consumption was of Penang, 726 tons, against 866 tons ; of Manila, Java, and China, 6 588 tons, against 2,966 tons. The quantity exported was, of Penang. 32 tons, against 42 tons ; of Manila, Java, and China, 1,107 tons, against 236 tons. The stock on March 19 was, of Penang, 1,885 tons, against 547 tons ; of Manila, Java, and China, 32,593 tons, against 36,781 tons.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—There is not much doing in Ceylon the demand being restricted, but the previous quotation is maintained, the price being still £42 per ton. The quantity of Ceylon afloat for Great Britain is estimated at 50,681 cwt., against 35,222 at the corresponding date last year, and 25,442 cwt. in 1868.

COIR GOODS.—Ceylon Yarn and Fibre are in steady demand at £22 to £38 15s. for common to good, £43 to £64 10s. for fine and superior Yarn, and £23 for Fibre.

CAMPHOR.—The market has continued very quiet, but there is a limited business doing at 87s. 6d., on the spot and to arrive, for China ; Japan is scarce ; new parcels afloat are not yet being pressed for sale.

CHINA MATTING.—842 rolls were all bought in. Gowqua extra contract 2/4 white at 36s., 3/4 at 44s., 4/4 at 41s., common 4/4 white at 27s. per roll.

CINNAMON.—Since our last report there has been rather more demand, and 355 bales in auction sold readily, fourth sort, 9d. to 1s. 11d. ; third, 1s. 2d. to 2s. 2d. ; second, 1s. 10d. to 2s. 10d. ; and first, good middling to good, 2s. 8d. to 3s. 1d. ; fine, 3s. 3d. to 3s. 7d. per lb. Of Chips, 1,194 bags have been offered and partly sold on easier terms, ordinary coarse bark, 2½d. ; thin bark, with flavour, 3¼d. ; middling dusty thin shavings, 4d. ; good middling to good, 5¾d. to 6¼d. per lb.

CUTCH.—The market is flat; of 1,497 boxes, fine quality, offered, only about half sold at 24s. to 25s., and there are now sellers at 23s. 6d. per cwt. Afloat from Calcutta and Singapore to London and Liverpool 829 tons, against 218 tons same time last year ; to the Continent 295 tons, against 824 tons ; and to America 620 tons, against 240 tons. From Rangoon, &c., to U.K. 535 tons, against 749 tons.

GAMBIER.—The market is dull ; 3,098 bales block offered at auction retired at 17s. 6d. ; pressed Cubes have sold at 18s. to 18s. 6d. ; 250 tons block sold at 17s. privately, and there are sellers at same price to arrive. Cube is rather steadier, with large sales.

GUMS.—Benjamin : Siam steady ; 7 cases retired above the value. 99 cases Sumatra offered ; 2nds firm ; fine sold at £10 ; fair middling, £8 10s. to £8 12s. 6d. ; TT & Co. Penang 3rds selling at 97s. 6d. Palembang very dull. Copal : Steady ; 164 cases Manila, retired at auction, since sold at full prices. Damar has again sold well ; 185 cases, half sold at 78s. 6d. for Singapore good sorts. Gamboge steady.

GALLS have been in moderate request, and 250 cases China of old import have been sold privately at 48s. per cwt. 180 cases China and 25 ases Japan at auction retired.

HEMP.—The inquiry for Manila has exhibited some slight improvement ; about 700 bales have found buyers, realising £50 for brown, and £52 to £53 for barely fair and fair roping.

HIDES.—The sales during the past month of East India Hides have been moderate, consisting of 203,323 in the hair and tanned, a considerable proportion of which have been taken in the bales by private contract. The demand during the early part of the month was not active, but has since improved, and the supply offering being small, prices have advanced ¼d. to ½d. per lb. Singapore and Penang : Ox and Cow—1,982 Hides, more or less damaged, have been sold, light, 8¾d. ; heavy, 7¾d. ; extra heavy, 7½d. ; thirds, 5½d. ; fourths, 4¾d. per lb. Buffalo are still not much wanted, and out of 10,347 Hides offered to sale only 2.837 found buyers at about former rates, viz., best heavy, fair to good, 5¾d. to 6d. ; seconds, 5½d. ; light, 6½d. to 7d. ; inferior, best heavy, 5d. to 5⅝d. per lb.

HORNS.—Buffalo are generally 1s. to 2s. per cwt. lower, but Deer have sold more freely at an advance of 5s. to 8s. per cwt., at which improved rates a considerable portion of old stock has been cleared. Buffalo : Siam 43s. 6d. to 45s. 6d. ; Deer : Ceylon 58s. 6d.

INDIA RUBBER.—There is no change to report, the demand continuing good for clean qualities, and common being still neglected ; there have been no public sales.

ISINGLASS.—Sells readily, especially sound and clean ; 25 packages Straits sold at auction, fine pipe at 3s. 10d. ; good at 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d. ; leaf at 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d. ; pickings at 2s. to 3s. ; cake at 2s. 5d. to 2s. 7d.

JAPAN WAX is very flat, and the arrivals do not tend to improve the tone of the market ; 1,681 cases have just arrived per Vampyr. Private transactions have been extremely limited, and of 1,112 cases offered at auction only 123 cases sold at 69s. 6d. to 71s. per cwt. for fair saucers.

MUSK.—The demand continues good, but at auction 31 caddies Tonquin Pod were held above the value, and all retired ; 9 caddies Cabardine Pod were bought in at 17s. 6d. ; 4 tins Grain sold at 50s. 6d. to 55s. 6d. for fine, and 43s. for middling.

OILS.—Aniseed : A small business has been done at 8s. 8d. Cassia : Neglected ; at public sale 10 cases realised only 4s. 7d. to 4s. 8d. Nutmeg : White would sell readily.

PLUMBAGO.—The demand has continued active, but stocks are large, and middling lump, being neglected, is difficult to dispose of : finest quality is very scarce. At auction 1,329 barrels, partly old lots, were offered, and one-third sold ; lump, small medium, 19s. to 20s. ; inferior, 12s. to 14s. ; chips, 14s. ; dust fine 10s. to 11s. 6d. ; inferior and middling, 6s. 3d. to 8s. ; very common earthy, 5s. to 6s.

PEPPER.—Black has improved in value in a slight degree, and small sales of Singapore have been made privately at 5¼d. per lb. for good ; but advices of large shipments are to hand, and there are sellers afloat at 4⅝d. to 4¾d. (4,000 bags have, however, been taken at 4¾d.). About 2,000 bags Penang, chiefly sifted Acheen of recent import, have been sold on the spot at 4 13-16d. to 4¾d. per lb. At auction 441 bags Singapore have been offered, and half placed at 5¼d. per lb. for good, and of 3,891 bags Penang, part sold at 4¾d. to 4⅞d. for fair to good Acheen, part dusty. White has been singularly dull and inactive during the fortnight, and of 957 bags Singapore offered at auction only 122 bags sold, at 6¼d. to 6⅝d. for fair, part mixed ; 98 bags Penang were placed at 6⅜d., one lot 6½d. per lb., being cheaper.

RICE.—The market has been without the least animation, speculation being quite dormant, and the sales have been only to supply the actual wants of our cleaners ; holders, however, are firm, and are not disposed to accept less than present rates. Sales comprise, on the spot, 500 bags Bassein at 9s. ; 2,700 bags Rangoon at 9s. 3d. ; 2,500 bags Bengal, Dacca 7s. 9d., middling white 10s. 6d. ; 17,000 mats field Siam at 7s. to 7s. 1½d., quay terms ; afloat a cargo of 500 tons field Siam at 7s., quay terms, and one of old crop Rangoon at 8s. 9d. for the U.K.

RATTANS.—There is a good demand, but great scarcity, and no transactions are reported.

RHUBARB.—The market is steadier ; 77 cases of old import offered since our last met a fair demand, and half was sold, common rough, part middling grey fracture at 9d. to 1s. 3d. ; good and fine is more enquired for, and new parcels would meet a ready sale.

ROOTS.—Colombo continues dull. Galangal : The market for China is dull at 38s.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea has met little demand, and of 103 cases at auction only 45 cases sold at 125s. per cwt. for good but rather coarse 2nd pile. Nothing doing in Buds : fine qualities are scarce. Mace sells well at previous value, and of 29 cases brought to the hammer, more than half were placed at 3s. 1d. to 3s. 2d. per lb. for good heavy, pale and red mixed. Nutmegs are very firm, and in some cases higher prices have been paid ; business to a small extent has been transacted privately, but there are few sellers. Auctions have comprised 108 cases (mostly small sizes) Penang, 68 to the lb., 3s. 7d. to 3s. 9d. ; 77 to 79, 2s. 8d. to 2s. 7d. ; 80 2s. 6d. to 2s. 7d. ; 82 to 85 2s. 5d. to 2s. 4d., and 75 2s. 2d., 1 lot 2s. 3d. per lb. 21 casks Dutch limed mostly sold at 1s. 8d. to 1s. 9d., and 30 cases Bombay in the shell sold at 1s. 2d. per lb., with allowance of ½d. for shell.

SAGO.—Steady ; of 280 boxes and 354 bags small Pearl at auction a small portion sold at 18s. for good in bags. Flour continues dull.

SAPANWOOD.—Low prices continue to rule ; 30 tons Manila have been sold privately at £7 10s. ; 10 tons Siam and 50 tons Ceylon have been offered without finding buyers.

SHELLS.—Mother-o'-Pearl : There is no change in the tone of the market ; sales are announced for next week. Tortoise : No business is reported.

SOY.—There is still an entire absence of demand.

STICKLAC.—The market continues dull.

STAR ANISEEDS.—There have been no sales.

TAPIOCA.—The market is steady, but quiet. Auctions have embraced 665 bags Singapore, 256 bags sold at 2¼d. per lb. for slightly greyish white; 2,083 bags Penang offered: all the damaged sold at 1¾d. to 2d. per lb. for 1st and 2nd class. 98 bags of Pearl, half sold at 22s. 6d. per cwt. for good small medium. 700 bags of Flour, 500 bags sold, mostly ex "Dharwar," and apparently damaged, at 1d. lo 1¼d. per lb.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

WOOLLEN GOODS.

Messrs. Thornton, Homan, and Co. report upon the Bradford market as follows:—Our market for goods suitable for the Eastern markets still remains very dull and inactive. We regret being unable to report any improvement since our last. Raw material necessary for such goods still rules very high, and prices offered to the manufacturer would be a loss to him, and as we before stated, short time of working is preferred, and is being resorted to.

The following is Messrs. Hayter and Hayter's monthly statement of the estimated exports of Woollens shipped to China and Japan from London and Liverpool:—

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.

COFFEE.—The market for East India is still inactive, and in the absence of business previous prices are nominally maintained. The stock o Manila on the 1st March was estimated at 3,600 bags, against 6,769 bags on March 1, 1869; of Java (Government) at 1,475 bags, against 1,541 bags; of Java, 14,558 mats, against 23,808 bags; of Ceylon nil, against 7,000 bags; of Singapore 200 bags, against nil.

CAMPHOR.—China is quoted 18c. gold (in bond).

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed is quoted $2.12½; Cassia, $1.25 gold (in bond).

GAMBIER.—The current quotation is 4⅛c. to 4¼c. gold (duty paid); stock, very small.

HEMP.—The sale is reported of 1,000 bales Manila at 14¼c. gold, 60 days credit, showing no change from the previously quoted rates. The stock of Manila on the 1st March was estimated at 19,813 bales, against 7,000 bales at the corresponding date of 1869, and 19,750 bales in 1868. The imports into the United States from the 1st January to the 28th February, 1870, were 27,546 bales, against 26,675 bales during the corresponding period of last year, and the quantity afloat on Feb. 28 was 29,056 bales, against 20,796 bales at the same date last year.

INDIGO.—Manila exhibits a slight decline, 18 cases having been sold at $1.25 currency.

PRESERVED GINGER.—China is quoted $8 currency (duty paid).

RHUBARB.—The quotation for China is $1.50 to $2.50 currency (duty paid).

RICE.—The sale has been effected of 1,500 bags Rangoon on private terms. In other descriptions of East India no business has been done. The stock of East India on the 1st March was 6,582 bags, against 8,640 bags at the corresponding date last year, and 3,842 bags in 1868.

SPICES.—Transactions to a moderate extent are reported at prices corresponding with those given in our last report.

SUGAR.—There is still an absence of business in East India; prices are nominally without alteration; a recent importation of 2,056 baskets, and 9,324 bags Java, has been taken for refining purposes. The stock on the 1st March was of Java 310 baskets, against 310 baskets at the corresponding date last year; of Manila 263,380 bags, against 21,543 bags; of China 75,518 bags, against 7,825 bags.

TEA.—The market presents a very quiet appearance, the demand for large parcels having almost entirely subsided. There is, however, a fair line trade, and prices for all descriptions rule firm at the range last given; the sales are 1,300 half-chests Green, per Netty Merryman, and 2,400 do., vessels not named.

TIN.—The tone of the market is unchanged; we note the sale of 50 slabs Straits at 32½c. gold; Banca is still quoted 34c.

At MALTA.—April 1, Nile (str.), Wright, from London, and ieft 2nd for China, &c. (via Suez Canal).

CASUALTIES.

The Messenger, Hill, which arrived at Boston on March 21, from Manila, reported that when off the Cape of Good Hope she experienced two very heavy gales, causing her to strain and leak badly; she also had several main rigging chain plates carried away.

Advices from Fayal, dated March 24, state that the Juanita, Bartols, from Sarawak to London, which put in there March 8 leaky, had discharged about 220 tons of cargo, and was about to be caulked from the copper upwards. The master intended waiting for instructions as to whether he was to have the vessel hove down, or proceed in ballast trim.

THE "MALACCA."—The screw corvette Malacca, late the property of Her Majesty's Government, is, we hear, going to Singapore, on her way to Japan. She is one of the finest corvettes ever built, having been constructed by Government entirely of teak, even to her decks, masts, &c. She had new engines and boilers by the celebrated Humphrys, Tennant, and Co., of London, of 200-horse power, indicating 800-horse power, boilers with brass tubes, two brass fresh-water condensers, lifting-screw of brass, magazines for powder and shot, put in her in the beginning of 1866, since which time she has done little or no work. She is pierced for seventeen guns, to be carried on her upper deck, and which will give some idea of the strength of the vessel. She will steam nine knots, and sail and steam ten and a half. Her screw can be lifed out of the water at sea in three minutes, when she is of course a perfect sailing ship. She is the first vessel sold by Government under the new Act of Parliament, consequently, save and except her armament, she is just the same as when in commission—all her fittings of every kind as she was in Her Majesty's service The vessel herself is a splendid model; all her man-of-war fittings, powder-magazines, shot-rooms, &c., are, we understand, exactly as they were, so that she is well adapted for any Government for a first-class man-of-war, and her shallow draft of water, say thirteen feet when light, adapts her to almost any bar harbour. Captain John Kier, well known in the China Seas, is in command of her, and we have no doubt when she arrives she will be well worth an inspection. She left the Mersey on the 5th inst., with a cargo of fine goods, and is expected to reach Singapore in sixty-five days.

LAUNCH OF THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S STEAMER "AUSTRALIA."—On the 5th inst. there was launched from the building-yard of Messrs. Caird and Co., Greenock, a beautifully-modelled spar deck steam-vessel, which was named Australia by Mrs. Methven, wife of her future commander. The Australia belongs to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, and is of the following dimensions, viz.;—Length of keel, or forerake, 370 feet (over all 401 feet); breadth of beam, 44 feet; depth of hold, 36 feet; of tonnage (builders' measurement), 3,538 tons. She will be propelled by engines constructed by Messrs. Caird and Co. on the most improved principles, and of 600-horse power nominal. Besides provision for a large number of first and second-class passengers, the Australia will carry 1,800 tons of cargo and 1,000 tons of coal, while it can be arranged whereby 2,500 tons of cargo can be stowed by reducing the passenger accommodation. We understand that Messrs. Caird Co. have other two vessels of similar dimensions in course of construction for the P. and O. Company. Immediately after the Australia left the "ways," workmen commenced operations for laying another keel in the vacant space. The Australia, we believe, is the largest steamer ever launched at Greenock. After the launch the vessel ran on the bank, but was floated during the night without damage.

THE new clipper barque Zohrab, Captain G. R. Stevens, owned by Messrs. Holme, Ringer, and Co., of Nagasaki, 411 tons register, built in Sunderland, has been fitted with the patent slide propellers, by Messrs. Hall, Russell and Co., of Aberdeen, driven by an engine of 18-horse power, capable of propelling the ship at a speed of three knots per hour in calms. The vessel has sailed for Nagasaki and Chefoo with a full general cargo.

"Mr. Alfred Scott Gatty is getting quite a reputation for his comic songs, and deservedly so. They possess far more real humour than the popular songs of the music halls, and we need hardly say are far above them in every respect. Mr. Gatty's words are funny without being vulgar, and there is not one of his songs but what has a hearty and legitimate laugh in it. 'I Really am so Sleepy' is a very simple melody, set to clever racy words, and will sure to be a favourite amongst those who enjoy an honest comic ballad."—Vide Illustrated Midland News, Jan. 8.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

LUNGS, LIVER, AND KIDNEYS.—A large number of internal maladies arise from obstructions, over the removal of which these celebrated Pills exercise the most perfect control. A course of them is strongly recommended as a remedy for almost all chronic affections, as liver complaint, congestion of the lungs, torpidity of the liver, and other functional disorders, which cause much present suffering, and, if neglected lay the foundation for incurable diseases. Holloway's Pills are especially adapted for the young and delicate; their gentle and purifying action places them above all other medicines. In indigestion, nervous affections, gout, and rheumatism, these pills have raised for themselves a universal fame. They expel all impurities from the blood, and restore cheerfulness and vigour.

REDUCED TO TEN AND A-HALF DAYS.

I have the pleasure to announce that I have succeeded in reducing the Contract time for this year by TWELVE HOURS.

Telegrams from Kiachta to Tienstin, and vice versa, will be delivered in TEN DAYS AND A-HALF.

I have made an engagement to pay a Tael for every hour a courier arrives in advance of the time, and I think that many Despatches will be transmitted in Ten Days.

I take this occasion to thank the Gentlemen who subscribed their names to establish GRANT'S TRANS-MONGOLIAN TELEGRAPH SERVICE. Having now repaid the whole of the Capital advanced to me, I have reduced the charges on Telegrams, to prove that I am not unmindful of the confidence they showed me.

CHINA CIRCULAR.

THE success which has attended the European Commercial Telegram Circular which I have issued for the last two years in China and Japan induces me to think that a China Circular will be approved of in Europe. I have made arrangements to receive Prices, &c., as per annexed form, from Shanghai by the first steamer to Tientsin in February till the freezing of the river Peiho, in the beginning of December; but in order that Subscribers may not be inconvenienced by the stoppage of the Circular, I purpose making arrangements to have it transmitted viâ Galle during the winter months. From four to six Circulars per month will be issued, or from forty-five to fifty Circulars during the Season.

The time occupied in the transmission from Shanghai to London will probably average SEVENTEEN DAYS.

As to the reliability of the information I furnish, I need only mention that the majority of my Subscribers in China are members of the Chamber of Commerce, and the subscriptions are double the undermentioned charges.

CHARGES.

For 10 Circulars, commencing at any time of the Season . . . £3 3 0
For the whole Season (i.e. Feb. to December) £12 12 0

The Circular will be printed in London, and posted a few hours after the delivery of private telegrams.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).

OPENING OF THE NEW SUBMARINE ROUTE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND INDIA.

The Cable between Suez and Bombay having been successfully laid, the new submarine line is now open for traffic, and messages for India will be received at all the Postal Telegraph Offices in Great Britain and Ireland.

Until the opening of the Falmouth and Malta line, telegrams from the United Kingdom will be sent by the Anglo-Mediterranean Company's line from Turin to Egypt, and thence by the British Indian cable to Aden and Bombay. Both Companies' lines are worked throughout by English clerks.

To insure the transmission of messages by this route, it is necessary that the sender should insert the words "Via Malta" in the text of the despatch, immediately after the address of the receiver.

TANJONG PAGAR DOCK COMPANY
(LIMITED).

VICTORIA DOCK, SINGAPORE.

This Company's Granite DRY DOCK, 450 feet in length, 65 feet width of entrance, and 20 feet depth of water on the sill, was OPENED on the 17th October, 1868. In the high tides of the North-East Monsoon there is a foot to eighteen inches more water.

In connection with the Dock is a complete range of workshops, fitted with steam machinery, driving all descriptions of engineers' tools required in the construction and repair of vessels and machinery, and a foundry for iron and brass castings.

The Company's extensive Wharves and Godowns for receiving and storing cargo immediately adjoin the Dock.

Having an efficient European staff in each department, the Company is in a position to guarantee the best workmanship, executed with every possible despatch, as well as low rates of charges.

These advantages, and the great facilities which the proximity of the Dock to the town offers for the transport of materials, &c., enable this Company to adopt a very low scale of charges for ships' work of all classes.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

From this port our advices extend to the 27th February. The outward English mail of Dec. 31 reached Yokohama on Feb. 23. We give some interesting items from the local papers.

With reference to the decision in the case of the Bombay and Oneida collision, the Japan Mail says:—"Now that the excitement connected with the collision has subsided, and the irritation caused by the American Minister's indiscretions is allayed, the calm impartiality of the decision is very generally acknowledged and appreciated. Mr. De Long need fear no implacability on the part of the British section of the community, whose gratitude he has earned by illustrating the effects of institutions they dislike, distrust, and fear. He has shown that these institutions advance to prominent positions men whose knowledge of the world is confined to obscure sections of it, and whose views have been formed and motives of action regulated by the pressure of surroundings ill calculated to fit them for dealing with large yet delicate issues. Whether he will find equally ready pardon from the intelligent, thoughtful, and cultivated—in fine, the unrepresented portion of American society — is another question, which is rather a matter of speculative interest for us than anything else. But judging from such manifestations of opinion as have reached us both here and from Shanghai, we think it will be some time before Mr. De Long recovers from the lamentable imputation at present resting on him of having attempted with a vindictiveness which required only ability to ensure its success, to inflame passions which a wise and good man would have sought to allay. The type of character he represents is not without rudimentary merits; warm-hearted, impulsive, and conscientious, it is deficient in generosity, and such moral intuitions as it possesses are moulded by strong national prejudices intensified by the extreme narrowness of vision which necessarily belongs to circumscribed antecedents. The attempt to import an international complexion into a simple though deplorable case of collision could only recoil upon the mind which conceived it; but it is lamentable that views of this order should be encouraged to complicate simple issues, and only fail from want of sufficient power to do so."

In another column the Japan Mail observes:—"After the collision, the attempts made by the officers to save the crew of the Oneida were frustrated by the want of boats, the absence of good discipline—as was proved by the evidence of one of the survivors —and the want of rockets and blue lights. One gun only was fired, and though discharged four times, it was on the wrong side of the ship, and so failed to attract the attention of the Bombay either by its flash or report. The fatal nature of the collision arose quite as much from deplorable circumstances connected with the state of the Oneida as from any default of Mr. Eyre. She was cruelly ill-provided with boats, the rockets and blue lights kept ready for signals had been carried off by the collision, and those in the magazine-room were not fastened to sticks. She fired but one gun, though, as stated, she fired it several times, but it seems to have been manned only by two men, and this fact alone discloses a want of such readiness as emergencies of such a nature imperatively demand. It would be, therefore, grossly unjust to impute to Mr. Eyre the whole blame of the loss of the crew of the corvette. He was in no way responsible for the collision, which was attributable to the bad management of the Oneida; he saw no signals and heard no guns; he had no conception that the vessel was a man-of-war with a full complement of men, and he inferred that she was in no danger, or that, if in danger, she could ensure her safety by running on to the spit."

The Japan Herald comments in a very similar spirit on the case as affecting Captain Eyre:—"As extenuating circumstances, it is but fair to him to remember that the Oneida stood away under sail after the collision as if nothing of consequence had occurred to her—for he was probably unaware that her steering apparatus had been carried away—that she showed no blue light or rockets, or exhibited any signals of distress; for her guns, for some reason, were not heard, nor their flashes seen by any one on board the Bombay. We know why blue lights and rockets were not seen, but Captain Eyre did not. These signals were looked for, but we learn by the evidence that they were not seen, because they could not be exhibited; but at that time Captain Eyre could not be in possession of the reason why they were not burnt, and was misled into believing that, as these most ordinary signals of distress were not shown, his assistance was not required. Moreover, he was not to be blamed for the collision of the ships; on this, the first time of his entering the port, he was at his post on the bridge, and directly the Oneida's lights were observed, followed 'the rule of the road' by porting his helm. It may with safety be affirmed that had the American ship been steered in obedience to this common observance on ships passing, no accident whatever would have occurred. He stands acquitted, not alone by the Court, but by public opinion; at all events of being the proximate cause of the calamity, though unhappily not of some of the ultimate consequences, which he must evermore deeply deplore."

The Japan Herald has the following:—

The Mikado presented Tosa with 100,000 rios paper for his sincerity in the late war, which he has given to those burnt out lately, so Tosa for the hour is in high feather. The Mikado has been lauded so highly for his magnanimity during the war that the world (through agency of the telegraph) is pretty well assured that he is worthy of universal praise; but it is a fact that Enomoto and half-a-dozen followers are in strict confinement at Yedo, as though the Mikado really feared them. Why not prove his magnanimity and release them? Did not America release Davis, a greater rebel, and not suffer for it? So let the Mikado be advised. At the burning of the Palace of Aidz all the books relating to the amount of kinsatz loaned the several Daimios were burnt, so that it is now impossible to tell what quantity they had, or what number has been issued by the Government.

A school of navigation will shortly be opened at Skigi, whereat the professors will not be Europeans, but Japanese officers who served for or against Enomoto at Hakodadi. Daimios are said to be making quite a rush for "presentation," in order that their children may have the young idea exercised in the law of projectiles, and familiarised with naval tactics.

A marine survey party is about being organised by the Japanese Government, to survey the coast and harbour, under European instruction. The Tomio Maru, steamer, is likely to be devoted to this service, and sub-Lieut. Maxwell, navigating Lieut. of the Sylvia, will probably be appointed to the command. A series of large godowns are about to be erected along the water frontage, from Benten to the native western hatoba, for storage of goods belonging to Japanese merchants.

The efficiency and high state of discipline of the P. and O. Co.'s service was amply proved on the collision which took place between the Sunda and the North German barque Carry and Jane. In three minutes after the accident all hands from the barque were on board the Sunda, the majority of them having been picked up by her boats. It is a cruel reflection that with this high state of discipline every man of the Oneida's crew was not saved. It is ill work opening wounds still bleeding, but such thoughts are inevitable to those who cannot easily forget a calamity so heart-rending as that of last month.

The Japan Times says: "We stated in our weekly issue of the 12th inst. that the Government at Yedo had stopped the publication of the native newspapers, but this is not entirely correct; the papers have ceased to exist, indeed, but they died easy and natural deaths, in no way attributable to the hand of the Government. The publication of the Government Gazette still continues and records the appointments to various offices, the movements of the court, and matters of that nature."

We have had a heavy fall of snow, which still lies on the higher and more exposed parts of the country, and has clothed our beautiful mountain with a winter shroud

A few days ago the telegraph wire between this and Yedo was cut by some mischievous opponent to the practical introduction of foreign science into Dai Nippon. Suspicion has of course fallen on the rowdie samourai, who are ever to be seen swarming in the neighbourhood of Shinagawa.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

The following items are from the Hiogo and Osaka Herald:—

"We understand that the screw steamer Adler has been disposed of by Messrs. Lehmann, Hartman, and Co., to Prince F'ku-yama, the price obtained for her being about $18 500. We hear that this vessel is to be employed on a Mail Packet Service to and from Osaka and ports in the inland sea.

The Japanese Government, as generally reported, appear to be adopting active measures for the total suppression of native Christianity. The news of the raid at Urakami no sooner reaches us than we hear of similar doings from various parts of the kingdom. Some ten days since about 200 of these Christian believers were landed at Osaka a little below the Castle, and thence conveyed to prison From what we could learn respecting them, they were from Bizen, Geyshiu, and the adjacent provinces; they had been dragged from their homes, irrespective of age or sex, and were not even permitted to bring with them other than the garments they had on at the time. On landing at Osaka they presented a very wretched and miserable appearance; men, women, and children separated from kith and kin—in truth a pitiable sight.

A correspondent from Osaka says:—

Rice gets dearer and dearer, and foreign rice is in demand. I suppose we must look to Saigon for fresh supplies. I notice that the total export of Rice from that port, to all parts, has increased fifty per cent., within the past two years, while in British Burmah, thanks to the shortsighted policy of the Indian Government in taxing the export of rice nine per cent. we read that "the trade of Akyab, the great rice port, is going back."

Railway material arrived on the 8th instant at Kobe, in the Psyche, to the consignment of Messrs. Alt and Co. We presume this is for the construction of the contemplated line of tramway in connection with the new dock works at Osaka.

The Hiogo News notices a severe gale which passed over the port on the 15th Feb., doing some damage, both afloat and ashore, the Grand Stand having been "forcibly removed." A fall of snow is likewise recorded at Hiogo and Yokohama.

NAGASAKI.

NAGASAKI, Feb. 17, 1870.

My last was on the 29th ult., via Marseilles, since when there has been very little news, if I except that contained in the enclosed cuttings from the local papers. On the afternoon of the 10th inst. the Messageries Imperiales steamer Thabor arrived in this harbour from Shanghai, bringing the English mails of the 3rd and 17th Dec., and on the next evening the P. and O. steamer Cadiz also arrived from the same port, and in a like manner they proceeded to Hiogo and Yokohama. The services constantly clash, and are of little value to this community, and are not likely to prove advantageous to either company, if the branch service is made a permanent one, which no doubt it will be when the companies find out the importance of Nagasaki as a coaling station, where good coals can be obtained at the very moderate price of $5 to $6 per ton, free on board. It is a matter of surprise to many that while the P. and O. Company are endeavouring to reduce the cost of their coals they still send them out from home to Yokohama, when they can be obtained from this port at a much cheaper price The situation of this place is nearly in the route of the company's steamers while on the voyage between Hong Kong and Yokohama, and the little delay caused by their calling in on their inward voyage would be a mere trifle when compared with the saving effected in the price of the coal. The question is worthy of the consideration of the directors and shareholders, who would do well to authorise competent persons to institute inquiries and report to them.

Business here is almost entirely confined to local articles, such as raw Cotton, Sugar, Rice, Peas, &c., and while scarcely any demand exists for Cotton Manufactures, the raw material imported from China finds a ready sale at advancing rates; this somewhat confirms the rumours current a short time since, respecting the neighbouring Daimios prohibiting Foreign piece goods from entering their territory. Exchange on London 6 months, 4s. 5½1; Niboes 420 to 425; Freight to London nominal, as there is no vessel loading.

The following is from the Nagasaki Shipping List:—With regard to the report current here, that 200 native Christians who were imprisoned had been set at liberty immediately on receipt of orders from Yedo, we regret to say that such is not the case All the Christians that had been arrested were at once shipped off, or sent overland to Oumura; further, that no arrests were made after the 24th ult., simply because there were no more Christians left in the place. This report was only got up for the purpose of making us believe that the Government wishes to act in good faith. We also regret to state that the Government here still continue to sell the property of the exiled Christians. The report regarding the loss of the steamer Feloong proves to be unfounded, she having discharged her cargo of native Christians somewhere on the coast We have not been able to get any information from the people on board as to the place where the people she took away from this were landed, and it is not likely that we shall get any particulars on the subject. H. B. M. gunboat Dove sailed for Hiogo and Yokohama 2nd February.

In a later issue of the same paper we find the following:—We are glad to say that although the Ministers did at first believe in the faith and promises of the Yedo Government, they have since the receipt of further news from this place, come to the conclusion that they could not rest satisfied with such empty promises; and we hope that they will insist in having the unfortunate victims of Urakami brought back to their homes. We regret to say that we have been unable to obtain any more reliable information. The actions of the local authorities have been kept so dark, and such strict watch has been kept on our reporters, that we have not been able to learn anything for some time; we have no doubt the Government having discovered that most of the information we have lately published was derived from native sources, have issued some secret order threatening the Japanese people, who may give such information to foreigners about the Christians, with severe punishment; this may be the reason which has deterred many of them from coming forward; and we feel sure, that although foreigners know little or nothing of what is going on, still the Government is busy working out their dark designs. That the native Christians are henceforth not to be left in peace we are quite convinced; since, in making the usual annual census, every Japanese is now required, when registering himself, to declare what religion he professes; a thing that has not been done since the old Government, after the Treaties of 1858, had abolished the custom of making the people trample on the cross.

The Nagasaki Express has the following, under the heading of "Our Mail:"—The London mail of 3rd Dec. arrived in Shanghai on the 23rd Jan. H.M.S. Salamis left for this port the next morning at daylight—but did not bring it. The Dutch brig Engel left Shanghai on the 27th Jan., and arrived here yesterday—but did not bring it. The British ship Kagosima left Shanghai on the 29th Jan., and arrived here on the 3rd instant—but did not bring it. The P.M. steamer Oregonian left Shanghai on the 2nd, and arrived here yesterday—but did not bring it. Query—When will the London mail of 3rd Dec. reach Nagasaki? Letters when posted are generally stamped, and stamps are sold by the Government—ergo, the Government accepts some responsibility in their delivery. Query—Who is to blame for the non-delivery of the London mail of 3rd Dec?

The following extracts are also from the Express:—

A report was current last week that even then more Christians were being collected, and were to be deposited in the steamer Elgin, then at anchor off the native town of Nagasaki. Inquiries resulted in a band of about seventy men having been seen that afternoon, tied in the same manner as those already made prisoners, and supposed to be Christians, being marched through the town. A certain degree of excitement prevailed amongst those foreigners who sympathised with these unhappy people The Governor of Nagasaki, however, now denies that any Christian natives were sent away; he declares that the steamer Elgin only went to Hirado, on Sunday last, for the purpose of reshipping those very wretched ones who were wrecked in the steamer Governor Higginson; he further announces their destination to be Tsuwano and Matsuye. But if, as we are informed, in what he has hitherto done in deporting 4,000 unfortunates, he has acted contrary to the wishes of the Japanese authorities at Yedo, why did he not send the steamer Elgin to bring the wrecked ones back, and restore them to their homes? In our view of the proceedings we may say that the Northern disapproval seems to us to be a very indefinite one; we do even now hope that the Ministers will not let the matter rest; their urging will compel the Japanese to undo this barbarity if their now remain aught to be undone. If the Japanese authorities wish us to believe that these Christians are not really put to death, or to deadly work, let them be shown how to convince us. We know some of the deported ones; we know the valley where the greater number of the 4,000 lived; we saw their homes and their fields tenanted cheerfully in the last harvest; we have seen these homes and fields since their departure in the hands of the soldiery. Let the deported ones be brought back, that we may see them busied again in the spring. But if others occupy the lands, what can we believe? We cannot forget Papenburg's cliff, whence two hundred were hurled into the sea.

Manifest of the British barque Eastern Chief, Carr, master, which vessel sailed for London 11th February, 1870; 1,374 bales tobacco, 1,197 boxes tea, 102 bales waste silk, 72 boxes galls, 14 tons M. O. P. shells, 50 cases curios, 87 cases, and 9 bales sundries. Passenger by her, Mr. W. Glover.

A meeting of residents took place at the club, last week, for the purpose of expressing the sympathy of the community with the relatives of the officers and men who perished in the U.S. Oneida There were present—W. P. Mangum, Esq, U.S. Consul, Chairman; A. A. Annesley, Esq., H.B.M. Acting Consul; Jose Loureiro, Esq., Portuguese Consul; W. F. Gaymans, Esq., Italian Consular Agent; Dr. van Mansvelt, and a number of the residents. Mr. Annesley proposed that a letter, embodying expressions of condolence and sympathy with the friends and relatives of the deceased. be offered to the community for signature; and that a committee be appointed, irrespective of nationality, to accomplish the object. Seconded and carried unanimously. Mr. Mangum, in a few words, thanked those present for their attendance, and said that he would make known the expression of the sympathy, on the part of the community, through the proper channel at Washington, so that it would be sure to reach the friends and relatives of the deceased. A committee of seven gentlemen, headed by H.B.M. Consul, having been appointed, the meeting separated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

A funeral mass for the souls of the Catholics lost in the Oneida was celebrated at the Roman Catholic Church last week, and was attended by several residents.

CHINA.

PEKING AND TIENTSIN.

The unfortunate Peking College still affords topic for conversation. The latest event is the dismissal of M. Lépissier, the Professor of French, because he refused to continue his courses unless certain changes were made in the existing order of things. His chief grievance was said to be that he does not hold his appointment direct from the Tsungli-yamen, as Dr. Martin does, but from Mr. Hart only.

We have letters from Tientsin to the 14th February, confirming the satisfactory rumour which reached us by the last mail, that Chung-how has really advised the Chinese Government to work the coal mines in East Chihli by foreign appliances. This does not necessarily mean that his suggestion will be adopted, but it affords room for hope, as he is an influential mandarin. The ice in the river was two feet thick, and not expected to break before the middle of March. No open water could be seen from Taku. The prospects of trade for the coming season are considered good, as the country is tranquil and the inland markets are reported to be void of cotton goods. Business was commenced on the 10th ult., by sales of some common make 8⅓-lb. Shirtings, at Tls. 2.33; they had risen on the 14th to Tls. 2.35; and Tls. 2.40 was looked for, when the inland dealers should arrive. The Chinese were said to hold no stock, and that in foreign hands was estimated at only 14,000 pieces. The total imports during 1869 had been 1,211,835 pieces Grey, and 243,600 pieces White Shirtings—three-fourths of the former, and nearly all the latter, direct from England.

HANKOW.

The Confucius, gunboat, in the Chinese service, lies a complete wreck off the Tiger Rock, a few miles below Hankow. It appears that the regular pilot remained behind in Hankow to spend the New Year with his friends and relatives, according to the national custom, and the boat sailed with the French Minister and the French Vice-Consul for Shanghai, under the charge of a comparatively inexperienced native pilot. At this period, when the river has fallen so low, the navigation is attended with innumerable dangers, and one is surprised in the circumstances to find the command, for it virtually amounts to that, being entrusted to a novice. After a few hours' sail the boat went full speed on to the Tiger Rock, and instantly went to pieces. No lives were lost, but I understand the passengers' luggage and goods were not recoverable.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings Shanghai correspondence to March 2. No later advices than those of Dec. 31 had been received from London. Via Kiachta, London telegrams had been received up to Jan. 20. The following summary of the proceedings of the French Minister is from the North China Herald:—

We are able to lay before our readers a complete sketch of M. de Rochechouart's proceedings during his recent expedition up the Yangtze to settle the pending missionary grievances. His first call was at Nanking. where, as we have already mentioned, he induced the Viceroy to issue a suitable notification. Passing next to N'ganking, he satisfied himself that the leading rioters were punished, and brought all questions connected with the French missionaries in this neighbourhood to a satisfactory settlement. Two delegates from the Viceroy have accompanied a member of the Jesuit mission to the city, and are now engaged in selecting and purchasing a plot of land for a mission-house and church. Ko, one of the delegates, is an expectant Chehsien attached to the Shanghai district, and proved to be fairly acquainted with the French language, which, it is presumed, he learned at Sikawei. The other, Hu, is a member of the Subordinate Board of Foreign Affairs, which has been established at Nanking to aid the Viceroy in discharging his duties as Commissioner for Foreign Affairs in Southern China. The idea was, we believe, to make a sort of junior Tsungli yamen, which should negotiate with foreign Consuls in the South, as the real Foreign Board does with foreign Ministers at the capital. But foreign officials generally have not appreciated the change, and have preferred direct negotiation with the Viceroy.

We learn, by-the-bye, a fact curiously illustrative of the turbulent character of the students, that the Futai and the examining Commissioner were themselves mobbed in their yamens by the former, a few days after the missionary disturbance.

The expedition next passed on to Kiukiang, where several questions were pending; and after a fruitless attempt to settle them with the Taoutai, M. de Rochechouart determined to visit Nanchang, the capital of the Kiangsi province. He was obliged to make the trip in a steam launch, owing to the lowness of the water. The apparition of the steamer created great interest among the people who had never seen such a phenomenon before; and they were impressed with the high dignity and importance of a visitor who was received with so much ceremony by their Governor. The French noticed that placards were posted in the streets through which they passed, stating that the French Minister had arrived; but that his stay would be short; and warning the people to be polite, otherwise the consequences might be serious. Nanchang has the credit of being one of the most anti-foreign places in the empire; so this effect is the more gratifying. It was fortunate, too, in escaping capture by the rebels, so its inhabitants are exceptionally impressed with their own strength and importance.

The next visit was to Hankow, where the Sz chuen difficulties have been settled, and the questions relating to Kweichow arranged as far as possible, regard being had to the disturbed state of that province. A proclamation which we publish elsewhere details the circumstances, and the punishment inflicted for the attack on Roman Catholic Missions at Tien-men, a hien city some 360 li up the Han river; and a despatch from Li Futai explains at length the measures taken in Szechuen. The rumour that Li-hung-chang is to go to Shungking is contradicted. He is delegated as Imperial Commissioner to Yunan, Szechuen and Kweichow, to settle existing troubles; and will, as we remarked before, be temporarily replaced by his brother Li-han-chang—now Futai of Chekiang—in the viceroyalty of the two Hoos. Li-hung-chang is said to be annoyed at being so quickly disturbed from his well-earned rest. After quelling the Taiping rebellion in Kiangsu, and the Nienfei in Shantung, he conceives himself entitled to some rest, instead of being at once turned against the Kweichow Miaotze and Yunnan Mahomedans.

M. de Rochechouart left Hankow on the 1st inst, on his way overland to Peking. He is accompanied by two Europeans, Messrs. Laguerre, lieutenant de vaisseau, Debacourt, attaché of the Legation, and a Persian servant. He purposes passing through Singan, the capital of Shense, to settle various matters connected with the Catholic Missionaries in that province, on his way. He is provided with a pass from the Chinese authorities, requesting that every facility may be provided for him on his way; and is accompanied by two officials to aid him in making his travelling arrangements.

Having given this brief sketch of M. de Rochechouart's proceedings, it only remains for us to congratulate him and all foreign residents in China on the successful result of his efforts. He has raised the prestige of France by his energetic action, and has added one more to the many lessons we have already gained of the inutility of diplomatic remonstrance, in dealing with Orientals, unless it be clearly shown that what is asked is meant, and that neither evasion nor refusal will be tolerated. Let our Ministers be sure that their grievances are real, and their demands just, and then insist on their fulfilment. Adherence to this policy will obviate much danger of collision. while indulgence in the opposite excess must lead to eventual war.

A correspondent writes that "the Taoutai of Chinkiang has issued a proclamation urging the agricultural population to devote their attention to the cultivation of the mulberry, on all untilled soil, in the hope of making Chinkiang a silk-producing port. To prevent the poor villagers suffering any pecuniary outlay by following his advice, the Taoutai is issuing plants gratis to all who desire them, and, when he is satisfied that sufficient ground is planted to feed silkworms, eggs will also be given to the growers of mulberry-trees. As it is so seldom that officials take such effective measures to improve their district and enrich the people, I think the matter should be made known to the native public. I hear that application has already been made for as many as 25,000 mulberry cuttings."

Communication has been resumed with the north, that is to say, several steamers have left, in the hope of being able to reach Taku; but, from what we hear of ice in the Peiho, they do not seem likely to get in for a week or fortnight; yet this year they started one day later than last.

The weather off the coast has been boisterous lately, and the mail steamer Ganges, which arrived on the 21st ult., had to put into Amoy.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail are to the 8th March. The French mail of Jan. 20 arrived out on the 5th Feb. The latest London telegrams were to Feb. 16.

The Overland Trade Report announces that after a great deal of discussion the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock and the Union Dock Companies of Hong Kong have become amalgamated. "The result is generally looked upon with favour, as a continuation of the competition which has existed for the last three or four years could not but be detrimental to the interests of all concerned. The details of the discussion which has lead to this result have been given in previous numbers; and it seems beyond a question that the amalgamation will prove productive of the satisfactory results that have been anticipated; as, while the one dock possessed the greater advantages in the matter of capital and influence, the other had the benefit of its docks being in the harbour in place of away from it. It is expected that a great saving in the working expenses will be brought about, and that by its being possible for the amalgamated docks to guarantee to take in the mail steamers, whenever necessary, much additional business will be secured."

The question of the accomodation and the rate of passage by the P. and O. steamers has been the subject of some discussion in the local papers. It is suggested that, in view of the competition which will ensue from the opening of the Suez Canal, the P. and O. will findit to their advantage to improve their second-class accommodation, and to arrange that the first-class passengers be not called upon to pay for wines, &c., which they may not consume, but that these be charged separately from the passage money. In connection with the subject, a correspondent of the Daily Press has thrown out a useful suggestion, to the effect that the journey could be made very conveniently via Calcutta and Brindisi; and points out that by that route there would be only 33 days sea, against 41 to 44 by the P. and O., and that if a regular service were established the time might be greatly shortened.

An important case of detention of young girls has come before the police magistrate. The facts brought to light during the investigation were somewhat startling. Five girls, of ages ranging from fifteen to eighteen, had been purchased in Canton, and regular bills of sale made out. One of them cost the purchaser 3,000 cash, or about 11s. 6d. English. Their place of confinement was discovered by a mere accident in Hong Kong. and but for this there would have been nothing to prevent the projected resale of the girls in Singapore. This wretched business is a lucrative and extensive one, and the presumption is that it exists in many of the secret places of the colony.

The following is from the Daily Press:—Last year a letter was received by the Trustees of the Cathedral, from Mr. R E. Baker, executor of the late Mr. Douglas Lapraik, offering. on behalf of the latter, to present a memorial window. This offer was accepted by the Committee, and news has been now received that Mr. John S. Lapraik has taken the matter in hand, and is sparing no pains to obtain a window worthy of the object. This intelligence will doubtless be received with pleasure by the numerous friends of the late Mr. Douglas Lapraik, who cannot but be gratified at having so appropriate a memorial of a much esteemed fellow resident. This window is to be placed in the new chancel, and it is hoped that so important a part being thus provided, there will be no difficulty experienced in carrying out that undertaking.

The China Mail says:—The address of sympathy at the sad and unfortunate disaster which befel the U.S. Oneida, from the community of this port other than Americans, was presented to Rear Admiral Rowan, commanding U.S. Asiatic squadron, on the 28th. The address was signed by the entire community, with scarcely an exception. Admiral Rowan, in receiving it, thanked the gentlemen presenting it, on his own part and that of his officers, and the Government he represented, for this warm expression of sympathy on the part of the Hong Kong community, and expressed the pleasure he would have in forwarding it to his Government, by whom it would be received in the same cordial spirit in which it had been dictated.

The new fire insurance ventures have taken a start, and China fire shares are quoted 65 per cent. premium, while Victorias are 40 to 45 per cent. premium, no sellers even at that. A fire is reported from Foochow, in which a mission church and 700 to 800 houses were burnt; the chapel cannot be rebuilt under 3,000 dols. The ruins of the fire cover several acres.

The Manila Official Gazette announces that the Spanish Government has granted a concession to Messrs. Hearns and Graham for forty years, to lay a telegraph cable from Hong Kong, via Manila, to Singapore. This is the most definite piece of information relating to the project that has yet reached the Hong Kong public.

Regarding the suggestion we made some time since, as to the advantages which would ensue if British subjects in Hong Kong and elsewhere in China were represented in the British Parliament, we notice that our northern contemporary, the Shanghai Express, warmly endorses the idea. The ridiculous figure cut by most "hon. members" who set up in the House as oracles on the China question is adduced as an excellent reason (and justly so) why the suggestion should be acted upon. The Express thus fairly puts it:—"If such an appointment could be made, and if such a man as Mr. H. N. Lay could be elected to it, and would agree to serve his countrymen in China by representing them at home, a vast stride would have been made in the march of commerce in the East, and we should have some prospect before us of at any rate gaining a patient hearing in the first councils of our land. As it is at present, any county squire, who has, perhaps, never travelled farther from his ancestral home than London, or at most to Paris, can get up in his place and call our leading merchants 'irate traders,' abuse our missionaries as he pleases, censure Consuls for actions of which the nation should be proud, and prate generally of things and places of which he personally knows nothing, and of which he displays his ignorance in the most barefaced but lamentable manner."

The China Mail has the following observations on the proceedings of the French Minister (which we have already recounted under "Shanghai"):—"The account of the manner in which the French Minister in China has 'negotiated' with the Chinese in matters affecting the lives and property of French subjects here may be read with profit by The Times, the Pall Mall Gazette, by Sir C. W. Dilke, and by all others who adopt their peculiar notions as to what British policy should be. M. Rochechouart is entitled to the thanks of every foreigner in China, for the judicious and unwavering determination he has displayed in dealing with the native officials. Had he been an officer in the British service, his conduct in such a succession of emergencies must have been influenced by the thought of 'what will they say at home;' and just as unfortunate Gibson temporised in Formosa, so M. Rochechouart would have halted when he should have run strong, and thus have brought about hostilities which have been prevented by his prompt and uncompromising demeanour. The French flag is decidedly in the ascendant here just now. The Chinese respect it because they know they cannot insult with impunity the men who have a claim to its protection. And it has gained the respect of foreigners of all nationalities here for the vigour with which its representative has shown readiness to enforce an observance on the part of the Chinese of obligations that lie at the foundation of international rights, but which politicians of the Dilkeian school seem to consider as not important enough to be insisted upon when English subjects are in question. The contrast between English and French action in China is mortifying enough, at any rate to us who are here; but we have very little hope of improvement until the next war. If a Frenchman had been robbed and nearly murdered, and a price set upon a French consul's head, as recently happened to Englishmen in Formosa, something would have been heard thereof, otherwise than through editorial growls, to which Mr. Dilke, and The Times, and the Pall Mall, in the plenitude of their omniscient knowledge, pay no attention. Let us hope that the narration of M. Rochechouart's efforts may lead them to entertain a juster idea than they now have of our position in China, and of the difficulties to be contended with, and that what they henceforward write in reference to British policy in China may be to some extent inspired by what actually occurs here, and not be based so entirely as it now is upon the speculations of theoretical and careless critics."

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

From this port we have advices to the 15th March. The outward mail of Jan. 28 was received on March 3. The week since the departure of the French mail has been a very dull one, and there is little news of interest.

The Straits Times say:—"The day for opening the Legislative Session has not yet been fixed, and there is no question of political interest before the public. The Attorney-General went home by the French mail, on leave of absence, and his post will be filled in the meantime by A. M. Aitken, Esq. Whether the intended absence of the Attorney-General had anything to do with the long season of rest the Legislative body has enjoyed we are not aware, but at the closing of the session last year there was a good deal of work to do, which was postponed until the next session. Among these was the adaptation of the Indian Penal Code to the Straits; and there are a number of important measures to be considered, all of which should receive earnest deliberation, and when the session does begin it will doubtless prove a very busy one."

The laying of the submarine cable between Suez and Bombay has an important bearing upon the interests of Singapore, in that it is to be followed by a cable from Galle to Penang, and thence to Singapore. Colonel Glover, R.E., late Director-General of Telegraphs in India, is at present in Singapore, selecting a site for landing the cable, and making the necessary arrangements. He says this cable will be laid about the end of the present year.

On the 2nd March, the steamer Shantung arrived here from Glasgow, having made the run in 42 days including stoppages, and 37 days actual running time. She left Glasgow on the 19th January—two days before the mail steamer left Southampton—traversed the Suez Canal, and reached here one day in advance of the mail. The captain reported that he sounded the Canal very carefully while coming through, and found nowhere less than 26 feet of water. This passage gives a practical demonstration of what can be effected by a fast steamer between China and London by the short route; and we may expect most of the trade with China shortly to pass into the hands of steamers via the Canal.

The ship Ellenborough arrived on the 8th March, having on board 135 men, women, and children for the troops here and at Hong Kong. The vessel has had a long passage, having been becalmed the greater part of the time since passing the Straits of Sunda. The passengers do not appear to have suffered in health, notwithstanding the vessel ran short of provisions. No deaths occurred on the voyage; there were, however, three births.

We learn that the Hon. J. F. A. McNair has been appointed by the Governor to a seat in the Municipal Commission, in place of the Hon. C. J. Irving.

The Straits Calendar and Directory for 1870 has been issued. It is the tenth year of publication, and is printed, as usual, at the Commercial Press. It contains a great deal of useful information in a concise form and well aranged.

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had been exceedingly quiet. A few settlements in Cotton Yarn and Grey Shirtings were reported, but they were quite insignificant. Fancy Goods had been altogether neglected, whilst Woollens had been in a similar position, with the exception of a few small sales of Blankets and Alpacas at quotations. Metals: Business dull. Quotations:—G. E. Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, $2.70 to 2.75; do. do., 8¼ to 8½ lbs., $3.02 to 3.07½; do. do., 9 lbs., $3.50 to 3.60; G. E. White, do., 56 to 60 reed, $2.65 to 2.85; do. do., 64 to 72, $2.90 to 3.05; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., $1.90 to 2.30; Camlets, BBB, $13.50 to 14.50; do. SS, $13 to 13.50; do. SSS, $9.50 to 10.50; Alpacas, $7 to 8; Long Ells, Scarlet and Black, $8 to 8.75; Blankets, per lb., $0.30 to 0.35.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.—There was a fair demand for staple articles, especially Cottons, at somewhat improved quotations. Stocks generally were light, and holders appeared disposed to ask higher rates. Grey Shirtings were rather better, and the annexed quotations were offered for arrival. Cotton Yarn was wanted, but rates were slightly easier, except for the higher counts. Black Velvets and Turkey Red Cloth readily saleable, the stock of the latter being very small. Victoria Lawns attracted attention, in anticipation of the Spring demand. Orange Camlets continued to find buyers, and good assortments were also saleable. Figured Orleans were in somewhat improved demand. Plain Black Lustres and Orleans in fair inquiry. Mousselines de Laine of good patterns, and plain, showed a tendency to advance. Black Cloth in less demand. Blankets lower, in consequence of the Government interfering with their use by the lower classes. G E Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., 38½ yds. 39 in., per piece, $2.75; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., ditto, $3.12 to 3.25; 9 lbs., 38½ yds. 44 in., $3.50 to 3.56. G E White Shirtings: 56 to 60 reed, 40 yds. 36 in., per piece, $2.75 to 3; 64 to 72 reed, ditto, $3 to 3.50. T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., $2 to 2.40. Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16 to 24, per bale, $165; Nos. 28 to 32, $175; Nos. 38 to 42, $200.

TIENTSIN.—The market for Grey Shirtings was reported firm; 8¼ lbs. were quoted Tls. 2.3.3 to 2.3.7; stock, 14,000 pieces. T-Cloths, 6½ lbs., ruled at Tls. 1.6.0, and were in low stock.

SHANGHAI.—Piece Goods: The market for certain staples had been fairly active, and the business done had been of a more legitimate character. Less foreign speculation and more inquiry from the native dealers had been experienced. The demand had been quiet, but steady; prices much the same as last quoted. Grey Shirtings: Speculators, both foreign and native, had been selling largely, and their desire to realise for cash to meet prompts prevented any improvement. Prices ruled rather irregularly, parcels of Dewhursts Eagle Chop seeking purchasers at Tls. 2.2.6 per piece for cash. Inquiry for 7lb. languid, and few sales of the heavier makes reported. White Shirtings: 56 and 60 Reeds commanded most attention, and an advance of 2 to 3 can. per piece on the value of the former had been established. Stock of this class very small. High counts less wanted; few sales of 64 Reeds at a slight decline. T-Cloths: From 45,000 to 50,000 pieces had changed hands at irregular prices; it was feared that these will continue whilst the desire to realise is so strong. Drills: In Americans nothing reported. 7,000 to 8,000 pieces English and as many Dutch placed at rather better rates. Sheetings: Sales, 2,000 pieces American, prices unchanged. Jeans: Auction sales of damages supplied all wants. Fancy Cottons, Dyed Spots: Advanced, and placed at Tls. 3.0.0 per piece. Dyed Brocades: About 1,500 pieces sold at former rates, demand steady. Chintzes, Turkey Red, Velvets, and Velveteens in fair inquiry at quotations. Muslins: Stock small; orders from Japan had caused an advance; holders refused to sell at the rates offered. Woollens: Attention chiefly directed to Camlets and Spanish Stripes; prices rather in favour of buyers. Long Ells: Market quiet, transactions principally in barter against Silk. Lastings and Crape Lastings placed to extent of 9,000 and 1,500 pieces; quotation for the latter slightly easier. Crape Lustres: Sales reported, the low rates having tempted buyers. Best chops—cloth and assortments sold at Tls. 4.15 to Tls. 4.25 per piece; ordinary not wanted. Figured Orleans: Small lots taken at current rates; sales, 7,000 pieces. Metals—Iron: Settlements composed almost entirely of "sales to arrive," at an advance of 5 can. per picul; market stronger, especially for small sizes. Lead: Up to Feb. 24 holders of L. B. continued firm in their demands for Tls. 5.30, but news of a dull market in Hankow; the large stock in Shanghai and the quantity at present afloat caused a sudden reaction, and best brands had been freely offered at Tls. 5.20; a few sales reported at Tls. 5.18; cargo to arrive placed at Tls. 5.05. Coals: This market still depressed, and sales effected with difficulty, at prices ranging lower; Cardiffs afloat sold for Tls. 6.55, a few lots privately from ship Tls. 6.75 to Tls. 7.00; English, no demand, price nominal. American: Sales at Tls. 9; from ship large stocks. Quotations (duty paid):—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.2 to 2.0.5; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2.2.3 to 2.2.8; 9 to 9.12 lbs., Tls. 2.6.5 to 3.1.8. White Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2 to 3.0; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.4.5 to 1.6.8; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.5 to 1.8.5; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls 2.0.5 to 2.1.5; XX Tls. 2.4.0; American Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.7 to 3.8.8; Jeans, 30 yds., Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.8 5; Sheetings, 40 yds., Tls. 3.4.5 to 3.8.5; English Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.5.5 to 3.6.5; Dutch, 40 yards, Tls. 3.4.5 to 3.5.2; White Figured Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.3; Dyed, Tls. 2.8 to 3. Turkey Reds, 24 yards, 2.2.0 to 2.7. Velvets, per yard, Tls. 0.1.7 to 0.1.8. Camlets, English, SS, per piece, Tls. 11.2.5 to 12.1; SSS, Tls. 10.5 to 11; Spanish Stripes, per yard, Tls. 0.5.0 to 0.5.5; Medium Broad and Habit Cloth, Tls. 0.9 to 1.5.0; Long Ells, per piece, Tls. 5.9 6.1. Iron, Nail Rod, per picul, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.40.

HANKOW.—Grey Shirtings: Large business at an advance of 2 candareens per piece for 8¼ lbs. 7 lbs. Cloth sold in quantity at Tls. 2.09 to 2.10 for best. Heavy makes in speculative enquiry at advancing rates. Closing quotations Tls. 2.07 to 2.10 for 7 lbs., Tls. 2.27 to 2.31 for 8¼ lbs., and Tls., 2.90 to 3.15 for 9¾ lbs. goods. White Shirtings in moderate enquiry at rather firmer prices. T-Cloths: 8 to 8¼ lbs. goods wanted, supplies small, prices advanced to Tls. 2.15 to 2.17 for best makes. 7 lbs. Cloth changed hands in fair quantity, but stocks being ample, no improvement quoted. Good makes saleable at Tls. 1.80 to 1.85 per piece. Drills without enquiry, quotations nominal. Fancy Cottons attracted more attention, but, owing to small stock few sales reported. Woollens and Worsteds—Camlets: Sales freely made at rather easier rates, closing prices about one mace below last mail's. Lasting: Dull. Long Ells: Without enquiry. Scarlet: Nominally quoted Tls. 6.10 per piece. Assortments: Tls. 6.00 to 6.15 per piece. Figured Orleans: Good Assortments in small request, but sales limited. China Crapes: A few transactions reported at a decline of 5 condareens per piece. Lead: Declined. Quicksilver: Sold at Tls. 52.00 to 52.80 per picul.

FOOCHOW.—Business during the interval had comprised 200 pieces 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings, at $8.05 per piece; 375 piculs Lead, at $7.50 per picul.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular:—Cotton Yarn: The supply of Nos. 16-24 being extremely light, enhanced rates are demanded, thus causing a suspension in business. In Nos. 28-32 and Nos. 38-42 no change can be noted. Piece Goods: The firmness of the market last advised has been sustained, and a fair business has been transacted during the interval. The demand for 7 lb. Grey Shirtings has continued, and a further advance of 2½ cents. per piece has been established. In consequence of some inquiry for 8.4 lb. goods at Chefoo, more activity has prevailed here for these manufactures, and quotations are 2 cents higher than last advised. 10 lb. goods are also in better request. White Shirtings of all descriptions are firmly held, and price remain unchanged. T-Cloths have met with ready sale, more especially 6 lb. goods, for which in some instances advanced rates have been paid. In Drills no change whatever can be reported, the market for all kinds being very dull. Turkey Red Shirtings, in consequence of the heavy stocks, show no improvement. Jeans and Sheetings, in the absence of any demand, are lower. Woollens: Nothing has been done, and very little change can be noted in the market for these goods. Long Ells are very dull of sale, and there are no buyers of Scarlet at greatly reduced figures. Lastings of all descriptions are 25 cents lower. Blankets are neglected, and stocks large. Metals: A moderate business only has been transacted during the past fortnight,—Nail Rod Iron, however, has been in request at an advance of 10 cents, and at which enhanced rate holders are unwilling to realise. Hoop Iron and Steel are lower. Lead is without improvement. Coal: Arrivals have been 2,920 tons Sydney, and 260 tons Labuan. Sales comprise 1,870 tons Sydney, for which kind a better demand has existed. Quotations for other kinds are nominal. Ginseng: A moderate inquiry has existed during the fortnight, and sales of 98 casks have been made at $135 to 140. The following were the closing quotations:—Cotton Yarn, No. 16.24, per bale, $137 00 to 145.00; 28 to 32, $142.00 to 146.00; 38 to 42, $167.50 to 175.00; Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., $2.50 to 2.55; 8.4 lbs., $2.77½ to 2.85; 9.12 to 10 lbs., $3.80 to 3.90; White Shirtings, $2.45 to 3.10; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.95 to 2.08; 7 llbs., $2.10 to 2.50; 8 to 8.4 oz., $2.65 to 2.80; Spotted Shirtings, $2.50 to 3.50; Turkey Red Shirtings, 8 lbs., $2.75 to 2.80; American Drills, 40 yards, 15 lbs., $4.90 to 5.00; Dutch, 40 yards, 14 to 15 lbs., $4.40 to 4.60. Spanish Stripes, per yard, $0.67 to 0.92; Cloths, $1.40 to 3.35; Long Ells, $7.30 to 7.50; Camlets, SS, $14.50 to 16.25. Metals, &c. Iron Nail Rod, $2.40 to 2.50; Lead, $6.40 to 6.50.

SINGAPORE.—Messrs. Boustead and Co. report:—In Manchester Goods there has been very little change during the fortnight, our market having been very quiet, and the business limited. 39-inch Grey Shirtings: 6 lb. quiet at $2.10 to 2.12½; 7 lb. inquired for at $2.57½; 8½ lb. sold at $8.10 to 3.05; for near arrival at $3. 45-inch: 8 lb. worth $2.85; other weights not in request. 36-inch White Shirtings: Common qualities in demand; 64 reed in moderate request at last rates; a few well known makes of fine qualities in request at firm rates; ordinary descriptions, stocks heavy and values nominal. 45-inch are enquired for at last quotations. 36-inch White Spots quiet. 45-inch White Cambrics: Common and medium quiet at unaltered values; 15/16's placed at $31.75 to 32.50, according to quality. 30-inch White Maddapollams in limited inquiry at $21 to 22. 33-inch Imitation Irish Linens inquired for at $2.10 to 2.12½, and stocks much reduced. 32-inch Grey T-cloths: Light weights in better demand, 4½lb. placed at $1.45 to 1.47½; 5lbs. in fair request at $1.55/57½, 6lbs. saleable at $1.85 to 1.90 for good; 7lbs. at $2.10/12½. 32-inch Grey Maddapollams: 2½lbs. placed at $21 per corge, 8lbs. at $21.75 to 21.87½; 30-inch Grey Drills: 9¼lbs. placed at last rates and in fair inquiry; heavy weights, both Dutch and English, in large stock and dull; a few sea-damaged bales of the former placed at auction at $78 to 80 per bale for 14lbs. 32-inch Turkey Red Cambrics: In less demand; difficult to make sales at the low rates ruling; 2 lbs. 4 oz. worth $2.10, 2 lbs. 8 oz. at $2.25 to 2.30, 2 lbs. 12 oz. at $2.40, 3 lbs. at $2.55 to 2.60. Grey Yarn: 18-24s in small inquiry, nominally worth $120 to 122½; 30s worth $1.40; 40s placed to some extent at $148 to 150. Coloured Yarns: Turkey Red in rather more inquiry, but at low rates; sales of 28s at $137½ and $140 for 10 to 12 lbs., and of 40s at $149 to $157 for the same weights. Orange placed at $77, Green at $80 to 85, Imperial Red unaltered. Metals: Copper Sheathing $26; large sales of Yellow Metal at $22 to 22½ per picul. Iron: Very little doing; holders less inclined to force sales; Square, $2¼; Swedish, $3.45. Pig Lead is held for $6¼, and sold "to arrive" at $6.15. Coals extremely dull, without nominal change.

PENANG.—There had been a slightly improved demand for Piece Goods, but a disinclination on the part of holders to part with their goods, unless at prices which buyers were equally disinclined to pay, excepting for immediate wants, so that operations had been so far restricted. Grey Shirtings: 6lbs. disposed of at $43 to 44, 7 lbs. at $52½ to 53, 8¼ lbs. at $62 to 63 per corge. No transactions in 45-inch. Grey Long Cloths: 7¼ lbs. inquired for, but not in stock; quotations nominal. In Grey Madapollams sales reported of 2½ lbs. at $21 to 21½ per corge. Grey T-Cloths in light stock, sales of 5 lbs. at $33, 6 lbs. at $38½ to 38¾, 7 lbs. at $43½ to 44 per corge, demand moderate. White Shirtings dull, except low qualities; sales effected of low at $63, good medium at $75, fine at $85 to 100, 45 inch at $78 per corge. White Cambrics very quiet, sales of low at $27 per corge. Grey Sheetings.—A few buyers at $92 to 95 per corge. Turkey Red Cambrics, in limited request, sales of 2 lbs. 10 oz. at $49 to 50 per corge, 2lbs. 6oz. at $44, 2lbs. 2oz. at $41 to 41½ per corge. Grey Mule Twist.—Low numbers still in small stock; sales reported of No. 40 at $148, No. 30 at $138 to 140 per bale. Metals.—Very inactive; Iron and Steel, no sales; Lead, in considerable stock, without enquiry.

BATAVIA.—For Grey Goods there had been a quiet inquiry, although not sufficiently active to cause any advance in value. Few sales reported, principally for cash, 6¾ lbs. Shirtings at f.6.75, 7lbs. at f.7.10 to f.7.12½, 2¾ lbs. Madapollams at f.2.90, and 3 lb. at f.3.10 cash to f.3.25 credit. Drills slow of sale. White Shirtings: Rather more inquiry for medium 36-inch, and small sales of 64 reed reported at f.8.50 cash; 40-inch would command ready sale, Dutch 6/4 being scarce; demand for 45-inch languid. In White Madapollams of English make little had been done. 15s and 16s Cambrics in better request; some sales of fair quality reported at f.4.70 cash, and f.4.90 to f.4.95 credit. Grey Twist: Very scarce, both in first and second hands; no demand for local consumption. Woollens: Saleable only in retail quantities, at very low rates.

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—No business had been transacted; prices were nominally unaltered; supplies had been limited, and the stock on hand did not amount to more than 3,000 piculs.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.—A fair business was done before the commencement of the native new year holidays at former rates. The American mail brought more favourable news, and, consequently, on the resumption of business, prices hardened, and the few settlements reported had been at advanced rates. Settlements, about 1,000 piculs; arrivals, about 500 piculs; stocks difficult to ascertain, but estimated at 3,500 piculs. The quotations were:—Fine Rios, $37 to 43 per picul; finest and choice, $44 to 50; common, $16 to 19; good common, $20 to 24; medium, $25 to 30; good medium, $31 to 36.

HANKOW, KIUKIANG, FOOCHOW AND AMOY.—No transactions had been effected at these ports during the interval.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Only one small parcel reported "settled" since last mail, and nothing possessing interest has to be recorded. The stock was very trivial. Settlements for the fortnight, 188 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,050 chests; stocks, 16 chops, or 4,356 packages. Green: There had been a steady demand throughout, resulting in the settlement of 20,250 half-chests, consisting chiefly of common Teas, for which fully previous prices had been paid; a few chops of medium had been taken at rather higher rates. Arrivals small. There were very few desirable Teas remaining; the greater portion of the stock being of inferior to common Fychow and Shanghai-packed chops. Quotations:—Moyune and Teenkai, Tls. 30 to 41; Fychow, Tls. 22 to 35; Pingsuey, Tls. 30 to 31; Shanghai-packed, Tls. 22 to 29. Settlements for the fortnight, 20,250 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,378; stock, 59 chops, or 23,988 half-chests.

CANTON.—The only business of the past fortnight consisted of a few parcels of Canton-made Gunpowder purchased for shipment to Australia. There was some disposition among Teamen to accept lower rates, especially for Capers, but no offers had been made, foreign buyers appearing for the present to be holding off.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had been very active, and prices had experienced an advance of nearly $100 per picul; $890 having been paid for the better parcels of Hanks, and $900 to 920 for extra Oshius, whilst a further advance was anticipated. Holders were firm, and speculators seemed willing to accede to their demands. A few parcels of Echizen had arrived on the market, and had realised high rates. Settlements for the fortnight amounted to about 1,050 bales. Stocks did not exceed 950 bales, but fresh arrivals were daily expected. The following were the ruling rates (all charges paid):—Mybash and other Hanks: Extra, 35s. to 35s. 8d.; Best, 33s. 3d. to 34s. 5d.; Medium, 30s. 3d. to 32s. 2d.; Inferior, 26s. 5d. to 29s. 1d. Oshiu: Extra, 36s. 9d. to 37s. 10d.; Best, 33s. 3d. to 36s.; Medium, 30s. 3d. to 32s. 6d.; Inferior, 26s. 5d. to 28s. 4d. Koshiu: Best, 28s. 4d. to 30s. 3d.; Medium, 26s. 5d. to 28s.; Inferior, 23s. 9d. to 26s. Sodai: Best, 29s. 1d. to 30s. 7d.; Medium, 26s. 5d. to 28s. 4d. Echizen: Best (nominal), 29s. 1d. Mashta: Medium, 26s. 5d. to 28s. 4d.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.—The advices report an entire absence of transactions; quotations were consequently nominal.

SHANGHAI.—The following is from Messrs. Skaggs and Co.'s Circular:—The French mail which left here on the 23rd Feb. took forward 216 bales, and about 800 more will probably go by the present opportunity, making settlements for the fortnight 1,000 bales. Prices for common, medium and good Tsatlees have again advanced from Tls. 10 to 20, Tls. 500 to 505 having been paid for Red Peacocks and such qualities, whilst chops in the same period are only Tls. 5 higher, being quoted as follows:—Choopings and Koo-fong-sings, Tls. 590; Dragons, Tls. 585; Cock and Worm, Tls. 580; and Incense, Tls. 570. Kahing and Chincum Taysaams must also be quoted about Tls. 10 up, and the dealers are still advancing the rates for these descriptions and Hainins. Arrivals from the country have been in a more liberal scale since China New Year, but it is still estimated that the total export will not exceed 40,000 bales.

JAVA AND STRAITS PRODUCE.

SINGAPORE.—Malacca Tin: Less inquiry for shipment to China, and prices somewhat weaker in consequence; about 800 piculs China brand sold at $29, a few small purchases of other brands at 27½ for shipment to America. Gambier: Advanced to $3½, about 500 tons placed. Black Pepper: In great request, but dealers unwilling to make any important engagements; A few small purchases at $7.85, but $8 was asked at the close. White: Also in demand; large purchases at $11½ to 12½, the lower quotation only offered. Sago Flower: 2,300 piculs Sarawak placed at $2.42½ Pearl Sago: Large contracts at $3.10 to 3.20; 300 piculs Sarawak manufacture brought $3.20. Tapioca: In rather less demand; a few small purchases at $4 for Flake. Buffalo Hides: In good demand at $10¾; Cow sold at $14½. Gum Dammar: 100 piculs sold at $16¾. Rattans: Market entirely bare of all descriptions. India Rubber: 20 piculs brought $40½. Gutta Percha: Advanced to $85 for first quality. Coffee: Sales of 800 piculs Bontyne at $12.60 to 12.87½; no other kind on the market. Nutmegs: Nominally worth $50. Mace: Out of supply.

PENANG.—Tin in fair supply, and had advanced to $27.75 per picul, which was the closing price, and at which some considerable business had been done. Considerable transactions in West Coast Black Pepper at $7½ to 7.70 per picul, purchases of East Coast and Acheen at $47.40—Trang at $7.65 per picul. Very little White, of inferior quality, taken at $10½ per picul. Sugar in good demand, prices slightly hardened. Sales of Penang No 1, from $6¼ to 6.70—No. 2, $5 to 5½—No. 3, $4 to 4¾ per picul. Cloves, Penang in small supply offers taken at $20 per picul. Mace, No. 1 picked, $82, Nutmegs, 110 to the lb., $53 per picul. Cutch in boxes $5 per picul. Hides, Buffalo, scarce and taken at $10½ to 10.35. Cow, unpicked, at $14, picked at $14.30 per picul. Only one arrival of Horns, which was taken at $10.10 per picul.

BATAVIA.—Arrack in very poor request; a parcel of 60 leaguers changed hands at f.82½ per leaguer, equal to f.123.97 per leaguer f.o.b. Coffee: On the spot about 500 piculs middling Palembang found buyers at from f.26½ up to f 30 per picul. Last season's crop may virtually be considered as finished, and operators were turning their attention to that of the forthcoming season. Gum Dammar, notwithstanding favourable advices from Europe, had declined, probably owing to advance in freights; aggregate of sales 500 piculs cleaned, 400 piculs at f.42, 100 piculs at f.41 per picul. Hides are in fair supply; moderate business in Buffalo; 850 skins good, 1,350 low quality taken at 27c. to 28c. for the former and 24c. to 25c. for the latter. 200 pieces Cow brought 42c. Horns scarce, and worth f.19 per picul. Gutta-percha: Market still bare. India-rubber: Small supplies; a few trifling parcels of Sumatra bought about 22 piculs in all, at f.96 to f.98 per picul. Pepper: Limited arrivals of Black readily placed. 600 piculs quitted at f.17½ per picul, and 200 piculs at f.17⅝ to f.18 per picul. No White on the market. Rattans in small demand. Padang: Ordinary f.9¼ per picul. Sapanwood in little demand, at f.3 per picul; 120 piculs reported sold.

This return includes also the paper read by the Earl of CLARENDON to the deputation of merchants of London—the substance of which we published at the time; a letter from Mr. MATHESON; a letter from Mr. W. KESURIE, chairman of the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce; memorials of the inhabitants of Hong Kong; of Messrs. SASSOON and Co.; of the Halifax Chamber of Commerce; and of the East India and China Association of Liverpool.

NAVAL AND MILITARY.

The sailing ship Lady Melville, Commander Harrison, arrived at Spithead on the 11th inst., from Colombo, and disembarked the following military and civil passengers:—Lieut. Molesworth, commanding the troops on board, Mrs. Molesworth, and family; Assist. Surg. H. C. Gillespie, 73rd Infantry; Quartermaster Scott, Rev. Mr. Coles, Mrs. Coles, and family; Mr. Walker and family; Mr. Linklater, Messrs. Harvey and Bruce, invalids; Royal Artillery—twelve men, two women, and three children; 73rd Infantry—sixty men, six women, and seventy-one children; five men and one child from various army departments. Three invalided soldiers died during the voyage, as did also an infant child of the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Coles. The Lady Melville sailed from Colombo on Dec. 29, and rounded the Cape of Good Hope on Feb. 6. On Feb. 14 she called in at St. Helena, sailing again on the following day, and crossing the equator on March 1. After having transferred the troops on board to the Government steamer, the Lady Melville resumed her voyage for London to deliver her cargo.

The Rodney, screw line-of-battle ship, Capt. A. C. F. Heneage, anchored at Spithead on the 11th inst., on her return to England, after a term of service on the coasts of China and Japan. She sailed from Yokohama on July 25, 1869, from Hong Kong on Sept. 23, passed Singapore on Nov. 12, and reached the Cape of Good Hope on Jan. 27, 1870. She sailed again from the Cape for England on the 30th, passed St. Helena on Feb. 4, and Ascension on the 25th. Fine weather was experienced throughout the voyage. Capt. Heneage is to be tried by court martial, arising out of a dispute between himself and Commodore Bedingfield. The Rodney has been inspected officially, and taken into Portsmouth harbour, to be prepared for paying out of commission.

The following vessels of war have been ordered home from the stations named, on the expiration of their periods of commission, for the purpose of being paid off—viz, the Reindeer, 7, from the Pacific; the Mullet, 5, from the North American and West India station; the Daphe, 4, and the Star, 4, both from the East Indies. The Racoon, 22, is to be paid off and re-commissioned at Bermuda; and the Cormorant, 4, is ordered to be sold at Hong Kong.

Good service pensions of £300 a-year have been awarded to Vice-Admiral Sir Thomas M. C. Symonds, K.C B., Rear-Admiral the Hon. J. R. Drummond, C.B., Admiral the Hon. Sir H. Keppel, K.C.B., and Rear-Admiral J. W. Tarleton, C.B. In the case of the first two officers these pensions are not payable until the dates when they are respectively placed on half pay.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE DIPLOMATIC SERVICES COMMITTEE.

On the 11th inst. Mr. Kaye, Permanent Under-Secretary to the India office, was examined before the Diplomatic and Consular Services Committee. He described the inconvenience and delay which take place in consequence of the business of the Persian Mission being divided between the Foreign and the India Offices, and stated that a despatch had been received from Lord Mayo, complaining of the present cumbrous mode of proceeding. The double departmental authority arose from the mixed character of the business, some being Oriental and the other European. Many questions were now pending, in which the dual government operated prejudicially, and very often antagonistic views were entertained by the two departments.

Sir Henry Rawlinson was afterwards examined and entered into details with regard to the necessity of making presents to, and otherwise obtaining influence over despotic rulers in the East. In reply to the Chairman, he said:—I was British Minister at the Court of the Shah of Persia in 1858 and 1859, but I resigned my office when the Mission was re-transferred to the Foreign-office, because there was less freedom of action and less liberality under the Foreign-office than under the Indian Department. In Oriental Courts, and especially in the Persian Court, there was a system of making presents to the Sovereign which was absolutely indispensable if a Minister was to retain his influence at that Court. The sum thus spent in presents by the English Minister was £1,500 a-year. The system is acted on at the present day, and under the liberal system of the Indian Government I was in the habit of making presents to the Shah at my own discretion, and thereby gained very considerable influence with the Shah. The practice certainly tended very much to influence the conduct of the public business, and if any political emergency had occurred, it might have been of great national importance. The power of making presents contributed most essentially to the maintenance of my influence. It not only bought the goodwill of the Sovereign, but fell in with the natural habits, prejudices, and customs, and was felt and believed to be only what was due from a person who held the position of a Minister of a Sovereign of a great State. When I found that I was no longer able to give presents, I felt that I should be unable to retain my influence, and therefore that, on public as well as private grounds it was better that I should retire while I still held a confidential position with the Shah.

By Mr. Eastwick: Giving presents at the Court of the Shah is a thing we cannot prevent, but there is a great difference between the administration of the Mission under the Foreign-office and under the Indian Government. There is a greater liberty of action under the Indian Department. We have not to follow a dry letter of instructions like we have under the Foreign-office.

By Mr. Rylands: The means of influencing a despotic Government like that of Persia are wholly different to those which influence a constitutional one. Everything depends upon personal influence with the Sovereign. There is no public opinion whatever. The despotism of the Shah of Persia is quite different to anything we can conceive of the despotism of a European Sovereign. He has no sense of responsibility whatever, and can at five minutes' notice strangle half-a-dozen of his Ministers. The knowledge of the way to deal with such a Government is not to be found in Downing-street, simply because the traditions of Downing-street run entirely in a different groove, and refer to civilised diplomacy and European Missions.

By Mr. Lowther: The Shah used to take me into an inner room, and leave the Foreign Minister outside. I had a great advantage over the Foreign Minister.

By Lord Barrington: The French have no great interests in Persia, and their mission is on a small scale.

The Chairman then thanked Sir Henry for his attendance, and the Committee adjourned.

THE INSTITUTION OF NAVAL ARCHITECTS.

The second meeting this session of the Institution of Naval Architects was held in the hall of the Society of Arts, Sir John Pakington, president, in the chair, on the 7th instant. Some very interesting subjects were discussed; the following condensed report was unavoidably omitted from our last issue.

THE LOAD DRAUGHT OF MERCHANT VESSELS.

Mr. W. W. Rundell, secretary to the Liverpool Underwriters' Association and to the Underwriters' Registry for Iron Vessels, read a paper on this subject. He said:—The proper draught for a merchant vessel was not to be determined, in the first place, by science, but by experience. Nor was it a fixed quantity for the same vessel. It varied with the seasons, with the nature of the voyage, of the cargo, and many other circumstances. The builder based his calculations on a free side of two and a-half inches to each foot depth of hold. The shipowner requires three and a-half inches to the foot. As wooden vessels were fast passing away and iron sailing ships were being superseded to a large extent by steamers, there could be little objection to the 3-10 scale being taken as a proper one for ascertaining when sufficient cargo has been placed on board a vessel. Having described the temptation to which surveyors were liable to depart from stringent rules, Mr. Rundell observed, if the scale of three tenths of the total displacement be accepted as an approximate guide, the following plan may be worthy of consideration:—Let a round spot nine inches in diameter be conspicuously painted on every vessel over 300 tons register on each side amidships, at the point through which a horizontal plane would pass, which would cut off the upper quarter of the vessel's registered tonnage when she is on an even beam. This would be useful in indicating pretty accurately when three-tenths of the whole vessel are out of the water, by observing that in vessels of about 500 tons this mark should be fully its own diameter above the level of the water. That in vessels of about 750 tons it would be one and a-half times its own diameter above water. That in vessels of 1,000 to 1,500 tons it would be two diameters above water, and in larger ships two and a half diameters. No kind of instrument would be required to make the observation, and it could be estimated at a considerable distance. Thus, if the spot were very near the surface of the water the ship would certainly be very fully laden; if it touched the water she would be very deeply laden; and if it were immersed, or out of sight, we should not be far wrong in supposing that the vessel was dangerously laden. This proposed new imposition upon shipowners would not much increase the burden they now have to bear. On the other hand, it would give the shipowner and others concerned information which would frequently be of service; and where a ship was fine under water, and long in proportion to her depth, it would check misrepresentation as to the extent of her loading.

THE LOSS OF LIFE AT SEA.

The lengthy discussion which followed the reading of the foregoing paper turned chiefly upon the causes of the great loss of life at sea. Mr. Lamport, speaking as a shipowner, thought that no arbitrary rule for the loading of ships would work in practice. The strain upon a vessel in a seaway depends more upon the disposition of the cargo in the ship than upon the amount of freeboard, and the plan proposed by Mr. Rundell would be practically useless in the case of steamers, even assuming it to be applicable to sailing-ships. Mr. John Dudgeon, shipbuilder, wished to call attention to the steerage power of vessels, which as a rule was not quick enough to meet emergencies. He recommended the twin screw. Mr. Scott Russell said that he laid it down as an axiom that any shipbuilder could undertake to build an unsinkable ship, if any shipowner would come forward and order an unsinkable ship to be built; but, then, what would become of the insurance people? (Laughter.) He had such faith in iron, and such contempt for water, that he believed iron would beat water any day. Mr. W. M. Fenning said that he was one of the underwriters at Lloyd's, and that he had no practical knowledge of shipbuilding, but that he knew that losses of life and property at sea were increasing; also that ships were overladen much more than they used to be. So much was this the case that it seemed as if storms had never left off blowing in all directions ever since the great cyclone at Calcutta. As an underwriter, he knew that that overloading was a great cause of this evil, and he thought that the evil was constantly increasing.

A CANAL THROUGH THE ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.

Mr. Scott Russell then read a paper on "The Fleet of the Future," in which he began by pointing out the great changes in telegraphy, railways, ships, and canals during the past ten years, and whilst speaking of the Suez Canal he said that he had just heard that it had been proved that there was a current flowing steadily through it from the Red Sea to the Mediterranean. Great revolutions had taken place during the last ten years; what changes were likely to take place in the ten years to come? He did not think that it was difficult to foresee some of these. In the first place, the bottom of every ocean will be covered with telegraphic lines; and in the second place the Isthmus of Panama will be cut through by a canal, for he held in his hands a plan of the canal, which was sanctioned, as he believed, by the American Government. It was planned to go through the narrow part of the isthmus, and it would be of the same length as the Suez Canal, viz., one hundred English miles—with this difference, that one half of it is already made by nature, as the projectors took advantage of one of the local rivers, just as M. Lesseps had done with the lakes in the Isthmus of Suez. The "young English" on the other side of the Atlantic are so go-ahead in all that they do that he should not wonder if they brought over a very big cargo of Chinamen, and finished the canal in five years instead of ten. In ten years he thought that direct railway communication with India would be established, and that a bridge would be erected over the Bosphorus. Railways in China will probably begin somewhat later. Who can predict the moral results when thoughts and things shall have the power of flowing so freely to and fro? Railways tend to kill the slower and smaller kinds of ships, but they supply large cargoes, and they load large ships rapidly and punctually. The work of collection and distribution, in short, is no longer done by ships, but by railways, which take away the traffic from coasters, and take the cream of the business from coasting steamers, which, however, to some extent still hold their ground. The ships of the future, he thought, would be for the most part large iron steamers, able to get through the Suez Canal, and to steam rapidly and economically. The minimum size for trade with the East will probably be 3,000 tons nominal. He then gave minute details of what he thinks likely to be the typical ship of the future, and he suggested the desirability of constructing a new class of war vessels made to attack the enemy "stem on" instead of with guns, although guns would be necessary for occasional broadside firing.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society, held on the 4th instant, Major-General Sir H. C. Rawlinson, K.C.B., in the chair, the paper read was by Mr. F. V. Dickens, "A Brief Account of the Chief Cosmical Ideas now Current among the Better Educated Classes in Japan."

Digitized by Google

The account given by the writer is taken for the most part from the Yedo Oho Setsyo, published at Yedo in 1861. This work is a kind of encyclopædic hand-book in two volumes, the first being a dictionary, the second, the chief source of this paper, a sort of compendium of useful knowledge, illustrated with numerous and excellent woodcuts. The Great Primary Principle (Tai-Kyoku) separating into its parts, the result was the Firmament (Tai-Yoten), by which the earth is supposed to be surrounded, as the yolk of an egg is surrounded by the white. There are two elemental principles, from either, or the combination of which, everything originates—a Male, or developing, and a Female, or receptive one. The Earth is supposed to have been formed by the condensation of the Female Principle in the middle of the Heavens, and generally believed to be square in form, though in reality it was spherical. The Sun, on the contrary, was the product of the Great Male Principle; it was a ball of fiery matter moving round with the revolution of the Heavens, in which it was fixed; the way thus described is called the Yellow Way. The Moon originated in the Female Principle, being a condensation from moisture. Its path is called the White Way. Besides these there are five planets, which derive from the Male Principle, and neither wax nor wane. The views of the Setsyo are then explained regarding the origin and nature of the principal natural phenomena, showing a good deal of their original cosmical and astronomical notions and superstitions, not a little affected, it would seem, by an acquaintance with the result of European science. The writer concludes in briefly criticising the Japanese system as propounded by the Yedo Setsyo. The origin and nature of the Tai-Kyoku, or Primary Principle, of which the two elementary forces were considered to be parts, were not even touched upon, and the mind was satisfied to explain everything, even itself, by a reference thereto,—even the Divine Beings descended from this Prime Cause; and though there were innumerable gods, there was no God in Chinese and Japanese philosophy. It was thus easily comprehended that the better educated, freeing themselves from the more vulgar superstitions, should become utter indifferentists to everything except material comfort and the dictates of a code of honour for the most part traditional and artificial.

THE "ONEIDA" DISASTER.—The following, from the San Francisco News Letter, shows a wonderful contrast to the spirit of the American press generally in commenting on this sad case:—"We have before us the official notes and evidence in the proceedings of the Naval Court of Inquiry as to the collision between the United States corvette Oneida and the P. and O. Steamer Bombay. It is a large pamphlet of forty pages, containing a complete statement of everything that is known about the accident. We do not hesitate to say that a careful perusal of it will convince any disinterested person accustomed to examining evidence that the judgment of the Court suspending Captain Eyre for a period of six months was unnecessarily severe. The evidence shows beyond the shadow of a doubt that the collision resulted from the utter stupidity of Lieutenant Yates, of the Oneida, a young gentleman of twenty-three, who had been a Master in the United States Navy less than a year; that no one on board the Bombay suspected the amount of damage sustained by the injured vessel, nor heard a gun fired; that probably no guns were fired; that signal lights were handy and were not used, and finally, that had there been the faintest scintillation of sense illuminating the souls of the officers of the Oneida (at least those who saved themselves), not a life would probably have been lost. It does not appear either that Mr. Eyre was careless before the collision or heartless afterward, and it does appear that the frothy condemnation of him by the American press is the most ludicrous illustration of going off at half-cock that we have had the pleasure of witnessing for lo! these many years. There is something essentially absurd in this business. It is the pitiful spectacle of an injured female scolding shrilly at the neighbour whose well her thoughtless young one has clambered into. The result of this investigation is doubly gratifying to us. First, it exonerates an innocent man from a crime the very enormity of which was a partial refutation of the charge made against him, and, second, it proves that our own intuitions were correct. As an illustration of this latter fact, we may quote a derisive remark we made in our issue of March 5th in relation to those guns:—'It is precisely these guns that cast a fishy glamour over the story. It seems that they had been loaded for the purpose of returning the salute of a Russian ship which did not salute, and were thus in prime condition for firing when there was no time to load them. There is a savour of ingenuity about this explanation that reflects credit upon the few survivors; but we should like to have the testimony of the Russian gunner who did not fire that salute.' Mr. Yates testifies: 'None of the guns were loaded at the time of the collision.' It is bad enough for our local press to slop over in the way it has done; but it is infinitely worse to afterwards suppress the most important evidence in the case and garble the rest, to conceal its own stupidity from the public. We wish it were possible to convey to the people some faint suspicion of how they are led by the nose by editors who, as a general rule, have less sense than themselves. But it is not, and there's an end."

WIRE TRAMWAYS.—There is exhibiting on the Brighton Downs at the present time a wire tramway five miles in length, in perfect working order. It illustrates the immense advantages of this singularly cheap and effective method whereby, as a feeder to railways or maritime transit, goods, minerals, and agricultural produce may be conveyed. The system was introduced to public notice about fourteen months ago by Mr. Hodgson, the civil engineer, who is the sole inventor and patentee. Since then it has been adopted in this country, and to a greater extent in France, with a success which has far exceeded the expectations of the promoters. While wire tramways can never supersede railways and canals, they will aid both by developing resources which would otherwise remain sealed. A party of gentlemen under the guidance of Mr. Beale, the agent of the patentee, recently inspected the works at Brighton. From a summit of the Downs they saw what appeared to be double telegraph wires laid up hill, through dale, and in a devious, but speaking roughly, a circular course. The posts were of iron instead of wood, and constructed of light bars instead of solid timber. The seeming wires were as thick as a walking-stick, and from them at intervals hung iron boxes, so fixed and so constructed that when the wire, which was in reality an iron rope, began to move the boxes moved with it, one set passing away, the other coming forward. The whole system of iron tramways with all its ingenuity and obvious merits stood revealed. In a hollow puffed the engine which gave life to the whole, and near it the drum round which the rope ran its endless course. Each box was capable of holding a hundredweight and a-half, and the full ones are made to go on to the terminus, bringing back by their movement the empties. By a clever contrivance the posts, some of which are seventy feet high, are cleared without a hitch, and by an elaboration of pulleys, large and small, angles and curves are passed without stoppage. The line, though five miles long, thus employs a rope of double that length. The difficult ground of the Downs was selected to show the facility of the system to some gentlemen who were negotiating for sixty miles of tramway in Ceylon.

THE CHINESE IN CALIFORNIA.—The Californians are still much annoyed by the large influx of Chinese immigrants into their State. Crowds of Chinese are pouring into the country and overstocking the labour market in a manner not at all relished by a large section of the native population. The malcontents are, it seems, powerfully represented in the State Legislature, and we learn from a Californian journal, the Alta California, that one or two very vigorous measures are meditated in order to check the invasion. It was first proposed that an Act should be passed forbidding the exportation of the bodies of any persons who may die within the limits of the State. This measure is, of course, directed against the Chinese, who are superstitious on the subject of burial in their own country. To grapple with the evil at an earlier stage, it is further proposed—the ostensible objection to the Chinese being that they bring the smallpox with them—to pass an Act for their compulsory vaccination immediately on their arrival, charging them ten dollars per head for the operation. Thus discouraged, it is hoped that the unhappy Celestials will desist from their attempts to force themselves upon an unwilling State. Should these measures, however, pass the Legislature, the question whether they are constitutional or not will be at once tested.

JAPANESE SUN-DIALS.—It has been stated in some of the French papers that there is an intention to fix in all the squares of Paris, for general use, "watch regulators," which are simply sun-dials of galvanised iron, with the addition of the equation of time, or the differences between the clock and the sun, imprinted on the face of the dial. The gnomon is a fine steel wire, the well-defined shadow of which tells the time within a minute. This is not one of the new things under the sun. The sun-dial maker is a frequent tenant of the little street-stalls which abound in the Foukagawa quarter of Yedo. The most popular of his productions is a portable sun-dial, of the shape and size of a large walnut, which, opening on a hinge, discloses on one side the dial, marked with twelve Japanese hours, each of which equals two of ours; and on the other a compass for setting it. The little instrument is, of course, only useful in Yedo (or its latitude), the locality for which it is made.

THE full report from the Japan Gazette of the official inquiry by the Naval Court at Yokohama into the circumstances connected with the collision between the Oneida and the Bombay appears in the New York papers. Great dissatisfaction continues to be expressed with the verdict suspending the captain of the Bombay for six months. The Tribune says that no American will be satisfied with it. It thinks that upon the bare facts admitted in the finding of the Court, "the inadequacy of the sentence, and the terms in which it is imposed, seem absolutely monstrous." The Times considers the Yokohama Court the "mildest mannered" that ever found a sailor guilty of running away from a distressed ship. It, moreover, is of opinion that his own evidence fixes on Captain Eyre "a degree of guilt to which the actual reprimand and penalty are totally inadequate."

THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—A paper written by Major Montgomerie, R.E., and read at the Geographical Society, stated that a Pundit who had been trained to explore the table lands of Thibet had discovered their prolific gold mines and vast plains of soda and salt. Sir Roderick Murchison, in expressing his praise of the paper, said enough had been said in it to cause the starting of two or three public companies within the week. Mr. Gladstone, he added, had lately remarked that the labours of the Geographical Society would shortly come to an end, as there were no more worlds to conquer. Major Montgomerie's evidence proved the reverse of that, for it showed that in Central Asia alone there were vast and valuable regions, which for many years yet to come could only be explored by Pundits.

FOREIGN OFFICE, APRIL 9.—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Don Mariano Brusola, as Vice-Consul for Spain in the Island of Ceylon to reside at Point de Galle.

THE Mauritius papers confirm the statement that Sir Henry Barkley, the Governor of the island, will succeed Sir Philip Wodehouse in the government of the Cape Colony.

THE Post is informed that it is proposed to confer a baronetcy upon Mr. Daniel Adolphus Lange, in consideration of the services rendered by him with regard to the Suez Canal.

THE Guardian contradicts by request the report that the Bishop of Colombo has accepted the vicarage of Dudley and is about to resign his see.

THE abolition of the impressed stamp and the adoption of the half-penny rate on newspapers will take effect from the 1st of October next.

THE annual meeting of the Austrian Lloyd's Steam Navigation Company will be held on the 25th of May, at Trieste.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, April 15.

The Conservatives have reaped as they had sown. Their factious opposition to the Java Agrarian Bill led to its being carried in the First Chamber by the overwhelming majority of 25 against 12 votes, and the King ratified the Bill the day after it was voted. It has now, therefore, become law, and the first step is taken to secure for Java a new and liberal rule. The whole Conservative system has been pulled down, and a new era opened for Java—an era of progress and development. We may now expect that the Minister of the Colonial Department will alter his Bill regarding the sugar culture in such a way as to agree with Liberal principles; his experience of the Agrarian Bill must convince him of the necessity which exists for yielding to the opinions of the Liberal members or having his measure outvoted. The Conservative papers are still furious at their want of success, and they now predict that this "plundering law" will cost Holland not only a good deal of money, but also much "national blood," in defending our colony from the usurpations of foreign adventurers. They direct the attention of the public to a speech delivered by Mr. Fransen van de Putte, upon the Colonial question, which speech had such a Radical tendency that one of his auditors put forward a resolution that the meeting should express the desirability of a Bill being passed stipulating that every year a certain quantity of land should be sold publicly in Java. Notwithstanding that Mr. van de Putte opposed this resolution as being at issue with the Agrarian Bill, the Opposition persist in regarding it as the true exposition of Liberal principles. Another fact has likewise offended them very much. The Radical paper, Het Noorden, hit upon the idea that Java ought to be represented in our Parliament by Europeans, established in that colony, and this was regarded as but little short of high-treason. In political circles it is again rumoured that one of the consequences of the measure will be the recall of Governor-General Myer, nd the succession of a Liberal to the post. The Vaderland, however, discredits these rumours. As soon as the First Chamber had carried the Agrarian Bill the members took recess; but the Second Chamber held a few sittings, and some Bills of local interest were carried. The principal vote was that by which it was arranged to arm our infantry with rifles upon the Beaumont system.

Whilst the Hague correspondent of the Paris journal Le Temps is stating, but in words as vague as possible, that we are again threatened with a "Luxemburg question," the Belgian paper l'Etoile Belge affirms that a diplomatic question has arisen between Holland and Belgium with reference to the project of the Belgian Ministry for augmenting the import duties on spirits. This our Government complains is not in conformity with international to commercial treaties.

In a former letter I told you that Mr. de Casembroot had interpellated the Minister of the Naval Department regarding the new screw war steamer Argus, whose destination was Java. I also told you that the answer given by the Minister about the seaworthiness of the vessel was not so satisfactory as it might have been. The Argus has now returned from Portsmouth, and of course a careful inspection will be made. In the meanwhile the papers are involved in a very animated discussion on this subject.

On the 4th of May a general meeting will be held at Arnhem of the members of the association for promoting the welfare of the Javanese. Nothing more has been heard about the quarrel between Mr. Bosch (director of that association) and Mr. Nierstraaz, M.P.

Some Japanese officers are now residing in Holland; their names are Yamakata, Mihori, Marima, and Hakamoura. They have visited several towns and fortresses, and it it said that they will stay here for some months.

I hear that one of my compatriots has been appointed by the Japanese Government to give instruction at one of the medical schools in Japan, namely, C. J. Ermerins, physician at Amsterdam.

Prince Alexander returned on the 10th inst. from his trip to the Mediterranean.

COMMERCIAL.

Since the departure of last mail there has been but little alteration in the colonial produce markets. Business is partly suspended owing to the impending auction sales.

COFFEE.—The market is very dull with only a very trifling business doing. The following parcels have changed hands: 2.000 bags Java, ex Ellen; 500 bags do., ex Eudora; 1,406 bags do., ex Princes Amalia; 1,157 bags do., ex Herman de Ruyter; 866 bags Rio, ex Nanette; 1.433 bags, ex Helena; and 3,000 bags Rio, ex Hilma, at private rates. The Trading Company will offer in public sale on the 20th inst. 92,400 bags Java and Padang; whilst in May and June no larger quantity than 170,000 bags will be offered.

RAW SUGAR.—Sales have been unimportant, both buyers and holders declining to operate. A small lot of 1,500 mats Java was sold at f.1 under the value of the last auction, and 1,490 mats Java, No. 11, ex Ben Lomond, at f.33¼. The stock of raw sugar was, on the 1st inst., 30,045 694 kilo.

RICE has met with a good demand, and a steady business has been effected. The following lots have been sold: 248 mats Java, ex Peri, at f.6½; 10,469 bags Sourabaya, ex Ida Elizabeth, at f.5¼; 25,500 bags Saigoon, ex Montrose.

SPICES.—There are no particulars to report about Nutmegs, Cloves and Mace. Black Pepper is held firmly; 495 bags, ex Maria Regina, and 2,052 bags Batavia, ex Somerset (both parcels damaged), sold at prices that did not transpire, but which are believed to have been very high.

DRUGS.—Camphor meets with a very limited demand, and the article can only be sold at somewhat lower prices. The quotation for Japan is 53c. Japan Wax: Nominal, at f.45 for A, and f.43 for B. Gutta-percha: 3.450 kilo. Sumatra, ex Dordrecht, sold at a very high price, and also 52 ch., ex Norsk Flag. Gum Damar: On the spot, 49c.

TEA.—The market is quiet, in waiting for the auctions to be held on the 22nd inst. The cargo of China, ex Panuco, which will be offered on that date, is valued at 65c. to 112c., and the parcels ex Deerfoot at 87c. to 110c.; besides which will be offered 100/4, 200/12, and 300/16 chests Congou, ex Ceylon, from Foochow, via London, valued at 95c. to 105c., 147/12 chests Souchong, ex Jubilee, from Foochow, via London, valued at 85c., and about 500 chests Java, mark "Tjikoppo Mayak," of which the valuation is as follows:—Boey, 66c. to 68c.; Congou, 78c. to 85c.; Java Souchong, 82c. to 93c.; Pekoe, 200c. to 270c.; Pekoe Souchong, 100c.

TOBACCO (JAVA LEAVES).—There is a steady demand for those qualities suitable for cutting purposes, and all that was offered under 25c. has been sold. Good covers for cigars are very scarce. The whole quantity now in stock amounts to 7,637 b. Java. The whole crop of 1868 is nearly exhausted. Since my last 90,516 b. have been sold at an average price of 38½c.

RATTANS.—Since the auction held by the Trading Company the following lots have been sold:—163 piculs, ex Jorgen Lorentzen; 250 piculs, ex Kruse Bjorn; 566 piculs, ex Indian Empire; 246 piculs, ex Eudora; 146 piculs, ex Princes Amalia; 150 piculs, ex Heimath; 190 piculs, ex Somerset. The prices paid are said to have been very high.

JAVA INDIGO.—With a very limited inquiry, only 40 chests have been sold.

HIDES.—Several parcels E.I. offered by private tender sold at high, but secret prices.

TIN.—The market is very firm, and prices are creeping up. For lots, out of the last auction, f.76 has been paid, but holders decline to operate without a further advance. For delivery out of the autumn auction the prices have gone up from f.69 to f.72, and the last figure is now offered in vain. Billiton is now quoted on the spot, f.74; floating, f.74½, and for delivery out of the February Batavia auction, f.72½.

JAPAN SILK.—25 bales bought in at the last auction have been sold privately.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.—April 8, at Hellevoet, from Portsmouth, H.M.'s steamer Argus; at Texel, from Batavia, Wallace; from Banjoewangie, Mr. Jacob van Lennep; 10, at Brouwershaven, from Batavia, Aeolus; 11, at Brouwershaven, from Banjoewangie, Maria Elizabeth, Maarten van Rossum, County of Nairn, Oceanus, Maria Sarah, President Plate; from Batavia, Janetje, Kenilworth; from Sourabaya, County of Lanark (left Sourabaya on the 11th of October!); from Samarang, Kaap Hoorn; at Zierikzee, from Batavia, Bali; 11, at Texel, from Sourabaya, Tasmania; from Tjilatjap, Pauline Constance Eleonore; from Banjoewangie, Aurora; from Passaroeang, Java; 13, at Brouwershaven, from Macassar, Vratchtzoeker; from Banjoewangie, Erasmus.

PASSENGERS INWARD.—From Java, per Copernicus, Messrs. J. van Noyen, F. van Noyen, E. Bruigom, W. Nash; per Mr Jacob van Lennep, Mrs. Waleson and family; per Æolus, Mr. J. Cannegieter; per Vratchtzoeker, Mr. H. J. C. van der Star and family; per Jannetje, Mrs. d'Artillaet Bril and family; per Maarten van Rossum, Mrs. Borger and family.

PASSENGERS OUTWARD.—For Java, per Hendrika, Messrs. H. Visser, C. C. But and family.

CHARTERS.—The Trading Company has chartered the following ten vessels to convey produce from Java to Dutch harbours:—To Amsterdam: A. M. E., Captain N. N., 491 lasts, f.76.98; H. W. N., Captain A. G. M. Bruijns, 665 lasts, f.76.98; Jupiter, Captain P. H. Kiewit, 387 lasts, f.79.94; Elisabeth, Captain Y. Feenstra, 610 lasts, f.79.94; Bato, Captain H. W. Kramer, 794 lasts, f.80; Sourabaya Packet, Captain S. C. J. Olivier, 262 lasts, f.80.88. To Rotterdam: Vijf Vrienden, Captain J. Verwey, 178 lasts, f.78.98; Zuid Holland, Captain J. J. Swart, 682 lasts, f.79.95; Neuwland, Captain A. G. Ruhaak, 398 lasts, f.80.98; Generaal de Stuers, J. C. Viersma, 396 lasts, f.80.98.

POSTSCRIPT.

ROTTERDAM April 16.

The two leading Liberal papers, het Handelsblad and de Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, are attacking the Cabinet in such a manner as to create a rumour of an impending Ministerial crisis. The Amsterdam paper is of opinion that, notwithstanding the Ministry gained a victory upon the Agrarian Bill, the Cabinet is weak and needs re-organisation. The Courant warns Mr. van Mulken, Minister of War, that he must be more vigorous if he wishes the Liberals to retain him, and the Conservative paper, het Dagblad, is assured that Mr. van Mulken intends to resign.

Mr. G. A. Fokker, M.P. for Middelburg, will resign his seat at the close of the present session.

The King has granted permission to Mr. H. J. C. Hoogeveen, Resident at Batavia, to accept the Spanish Order of Charles III.

THE CONSULAR AND DIPLOMATIC SERVICE.

IN our issue of the 17th of March we noticed a Blue-book, issued in that month, containing the replies of the British Consuls in China and Japan to Lord CLARENDON'S demand for information regarding the cost of their respective establishments, and the possibility of effecting reductions. Another volume of correspondence on the same subject has just appeared, consisting chiefly of despatches exchanged between the Secretary for Foreign Affairs and Her MAJESTY'S Ministers in China and Japan. It is a fitting sequel to the former one. The Government surely took a needless amount of trouble, and made a superfluous demand on the time of its employés, in asking for information as to the possibility of making the proposed reductions, since they were evidently pre-determined to make them, whether just and prudent or the reverse. At any rate, the advice asked for has been most contemptuously disregarded, and that to an extent which cannot fail to prove most prejudicial, not only to the service itself, but to British interests in China and Japan generally.

Firstly, with regard to China. In his despatch to Sir R. ALCOCK, Lord CLARENDON expresses an opinion (we are unaware on what grounds it is based) that the cost of living in China has of late years decreased; and he asks whether "prices have fallen" to an extent which would warrant a reduction in the salaries of Her MAJESTY'S Consuls and Vice-Consuls. At the same time, in addition to a desire to reduce the regular pay of these officials, he announces the intention of the Foreign-office to discontinue entirely the special allowances hitherto granted to the Consuls at Shanghai, Hankow, Kiukiang, and Foochow, which were given at the recommendation of Sir F. BRUCE and Sir R. ALCOCK, as a set-off against the greatly-increased cost of living at those particular ports; unless, indeed, they should be proved, "on full inquiry, to be indispensable." In his reply to this, the British Minister enters at considerable length into the condition of our trade in China, and the duties and requirements of the Legation and Consular establishments. The conclusion he arrives at is, that a saving of some £4,000 per annum may be effected by withdrawing entirely from Formosa, but that such a step would have a bad effect unless we stipulated, in return, for a Treaty port on the Upper Yangtsze, or some other commensurate advantage. The only other immediate reductions Sir RUTHERFORD considers admissible, with due regard to efficiency, are in the extra allowances, with one or two trifling exceptions. The middle class of salaries, he observes, will not bear to be touched, and the lower salaries are barely sufficient for existence. "The number of these junior officers, so far from "admitting of reduction, must be increased if we are to "maintain an establishment capable of doing the work with-"out perpetual recurrence to temporary assistance from with-"out, which is often bad and always expensive." Of the sum that would be saved by cutting off the temporary allowances, he considers that a considerable portion ought to be applied to increasing permanently the salaries of the Consuls who would be affected by the measure. Sir RUTHERFORD justly points out that as regards the Consuls at important ports, it is not a question merely of what sum is necessary for their subsistence; they have to entertain, and otherwise incur great expense to support their social and official position. The cause of the junior officials he pleads eloquently, advocating an increase to their salaries all round, and recommending that if a reduction must be made it should be in numbers, not in salaries. He says:—"I believe it is better and wiser "to overwork a man than to starve him, or reduce him to "such straits that his life is made miserable. I venture to "urge favourable consideration for these junior classes. They "have a hard struggle the first five years, and many break "down under it." In other respects, too, as regards some provision for the personal comfort of the assistants, Sir RUTHERFORD says he has often applied to the Foreign-office, but in vain, and he has little hope of success now. He names three Consuls, who have each performed over twenty-five years' service in China, as deserving of an increase; the first being Mr. WINCHESTER, whose salary at present stands at £1,500, with £500 "extra allowance." Those who are aware of the cost of living in Shanghai will know that these two sums together are not one penny more than a Consul would require (supposing him to have a family to support), to enable him to live with a proper degree of comfort. Sir RUTHERFORD, indeed, recommends an addition of £300 to his salary, but states that if this cannot be granted it ought at any rate to have an addition of £100, to raise it to the same sum as is received by the Consul at Canton. But though the Foreign Secretary eagerly seizes the opportunity of effecting all the reductions that are allowed to be practicable, and a good many more besides, he turns a deaf ear to the arguments in favour of awarding increased pay to deserving officers, except in one or two minor cases. So Mr WINCHESTER loses his special allowance of £500 a-year, and does not seem likely to get even the rise of £100 to which Sir R. ALCOCK considers him justly entitled. The Consul at Shanghai is a hard-worked official, with an insufficient and ill-paid staff, and the blow thus aimed at him is most unwarrantable. But this is only a single instance; the same spirit is manifested throughout the estimates; and we are forced to the conclusion that, for the sake of a paltry measure of retrenchment—not economy, for the experiment will prove in the end a most expensive one—our present Government is bent on ruining the Consular service in China. It is not likely that young men of intellect and culture, who go out on a pittance of £200 a-year, will long remain in the service when they are so scurvily treated and have so little to look forward to. To maintain a high degree of efficiency it is above all things necessary that the junior officers should be made comfortable and contented with their position, to prevent them from leaving it and carrying their acquirements to a better market, just as they become efficient and valuable as public servants; and that the higher posts should be well paid, as inducements to the juniors to stand by the service and steadily work up to them.

Besides the reductions considered as immediately admissible by Sir R. ALCOCK, and so promptly put into practice by the Foreign-office, there are some others of a prospective nature, the chief of these being a proposal to reduce the salary of the Consul at Canton to £1,200, when it shall become necessary to appoint a successor to Mr. ROBERTSON. The estimates for the coming year are remarkable for a reckless cutting down of the number of native employés in nearly every Consulate, such as boatmen, chair-coolies, and messengers, who are described by the Consuls (in despatches already noticed) as barely sufficient. With regard to Japan, the proposed alterations are less numerous; there was even less scope for cutting down than in China, so we find the only very important alteration is the abolition of the Kanagawa Consulate, and the appointment of a Vice-Consul instead, as the judicial functions will be discharged by the Deputy-Judge of the Supreme Court, who will in future be permanently located at Kanagawa. This change will, we believe, give satisfaction to the residents, among whom the Consular Court has not of late been very popular; and it is perhaps the best feature in the whole of the new scheme, which, in most other respects, is an embodiment of meanness and injustice.

THE treaties of commerce between Austria and China, Japan, and Siam, have now been ratified by the Austrian Reichsrath.

THE COLONIAL POLICY OF HOLLAND.

THE Java Agrarian Bill has become law, the Dutch Parliament having given its consent to the measure which abolishes the old Conservative system, based on the despicable principle of squeezing the Javanese for the benefit of the Dutch treasury. A hard fight it was that the Liberal members had to wage against their opponents, who to the last defended by every possible means their money-making but unjust system. Our Rotterdam correspondent communicated some weeks ago the tenor of the measure now carried, and we only need to record the fact that in future tenant-right may be given by the Government for a period of seventy-five years. The immense natural riches of Java will now be thrown open to the efforts of private industry, and foreigner as well as Dutch may settle in the beautiful and wealthy island as cultivators of the soil. The tracts of land thus thrown open, the larger portion of which has been entirely neglected by the Dutch Government, are very extensive. According to a statement made by the Colonial Minister in a recent sitting of the Second Chamber, there are fifteen million bouws of land available for cultivation in Java. The natives only occupy two millions, of which half a million remains uncleared, while the Government's "djatti-woods" cover two and a-half millions. Thus there still remains ten millions; and if we grant that only three-fourths of this are fit for tillage, then there are seven and a-half millions of bouws, equal to five and a-half millions of hectares, still open to private enterprise. We have no doubt but that European capital will find its way to Java, and that agriculture and trade will be enormously extended by its means. The Agrarian Bill, thus, is not only of interest to Java and Holland, but to the whole world, at least to every every enterprising nation. Of course its stipulations do not yet agree with what may be considered entirely equitable and just. Tenant-right is good, but property in the soil vastly better. Still, we have confidence in the liberal spirit of the Dutch nation, and now that the first step is achieved it will doubtless be followed by further progress in the right direction.

It may be interesting, under present circumstances, to recount in a brief manner what the Dutch culture system formerly was, and this may be gathered from a very able speech delivered at a meeting held in Rotterdam, by Mr. T. D Fransen van de Putte, M.P., one of the former ministers of the Dutch Colonial department. He commenced by an allusion to the manner in which the East India Company settled itself in India, and monopolised its entire trade, and observed that the principles prevailing in that barbarous age are considered by the Conservatives still applicable. That company gradually gained such enormous power that it not only ruled the trade, but the Government as well, and the people of the colony suffered under a system of oppression, while the company grew wealthy. Several causes however led eventually to its decay, and at last the Batavian Government was obliged to take over the affairs of the company, which at that time showed a deficit of 140 to 160 millions, and in the year 1803 a commission was appointed to deliberate upon the measures which ought to be taken. It was then that the Government was first warned against a continuation of the system of oppression, and it was conclusively demonstrated to be of the greatest urgency that free labour, industry, and rights of propriety, coupled with the levying of taxes in money and not in labour, should take the place of the existing plan. But all this was in vain; the system of oppression was continued, and the colonies languished. Eight years later, in 1811, Java was brought under British rule, and doubtless a liberal system would have been introduced if their Government had lasted longer. But as soon as the Dutch regained possession, the old plan came once more in operation. Decay followed; there were deficits in the colony, deficits in Holland, and the Belgian revolution was approaching. In this crisis King WILLEM I. took the advice of Earl VAN DEN BOSCH, and to some extent altered the old system, but at the same time maintained its main principles. The Government now became a cultivator and trader, and forced labour, to which the Javanese were compelled to submit, produced enormous wealth; public functionaries grew rich in a very short time; shipowners in Holland obtained immense freights, shipbrokers high premiums, indeed every one made his profit; but one fact was lost sight of; however many persons win at play, there must be some one who loses, and in this instance the Javanese was the victim. From 1830 till 1844 all went well; but the native population became at length so exhausted that complaints began to be heard. The Dutch Treasury, however, was at that time poor, and the Government could not afford to take notice of remonstrances or advice. In 1848 the first protest was made in the Second Chamber by Mr. VAN HOEVELL, who severely criticised the Government system, and defended the rights of the Javanese. The system gradually languished and was abandoned, except as regards coffee and sugar. Many reasons could be given why private industry can be made to flourish where Government enterprise gives but very small profits. The only necessity for the establishment of private industry is that tenure of land should be granted, and this has now been done, while, instead of the Javanese being obliged to pay taxes by means of forced labour, they will pay them in money. In the speech to which we have alluded Mr. VAN DE PUTTE, although an opponent of the Batig Slog (the Golden Calf), defended the principle that Java should pay every year a certain contribution to the Dutch Treasury, while, on the other side, he said Java had the right of being governed according to just principles, and its people the right of being our brethren, and not our slaves.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

A SMALL Blue-book issued this week contains Reports from some of Her MAJESTY'S Consuls in France, Germany, Norway, Spain, and Turkey, on the commerce of the ports at which they are stationed. Under Spain, we find the Report of Mr. Consul RICKETTS on the trade of Manila during the year 1869, and this ought to be interesting as being the first published since the outbreak of the Revolution in the mother-country, which of course cannot have been without some influence on the state of her colonies, however distant. In many points, however, the Report is necessarily incomplete, not owing to any fault on the part of the compiler, but in consequence of the remissness of the Government officials. Thus Mr. RICKETTS can give no authentic statistics regarding the quantity and value of the imports into Manila during the year 1868, because the official returns have not yet been published; and, he adds, "It being quite uncertain when "they will be published, as those for the year 1865 have not "as yet been brought to light, one has no means of furnish-"ing any proper statement as to this branch of the com-"merce of the Philippines." The quantity of cotton goods, plain, printed, and coloured, that left Great Britain for Manila in 1868 is reported at 34,000,000 of yards, and the cotton twist at 314,000 lbs. Large stocks of cotton goods remained on hand last year, and sales generally realised but low prices; indeed, many Chinese traders who had invested heavily in cotton goods were compelled to part with them with but little profit. In short, the supply of this sort of goods would appear, for some time past, to have been in excess of the requirements of the country, and this is by no means an encouraging feature in the Report; but Mr. RICKETTS believes that the abolition of the differential duties, and other fiscal reforms inaugurated by the new Spanish Government, will prove highly beneficial to the trade, especially with Great Britain.

With regard to the export trade of the Philippines, Mr. RICKETTS is able to give more precise information. The total value of produce shipped from the various ports in 1868 was $14,013,108, of which Great Britain and her colonies absorbed the value of $6,441,644. Of the above total $3,900,154 represented shipments on Government account, and of the remainder, shipped by merchants, more than half went to Great Britain and her possessions. Sugar, hemp, tobacco and coffee are the principal articles of export; the sugar and coffee are consumed chiefly by Great Britain, the hemp by America, and the tobacco by Spain. The shipments of sugar and hemp for 1868 exceed the average of the three preceding years, but fall short of those in 1862 and 1863; coffee shows a tolerably steady increase; cigars fluctuate in a curious manner, the export in 1868 being considerably less than in 1863 or 1866, but far above 1862, 1864, 1865, and 1867. Even in its present unsatisfactory state, the commerce of Manila gives employment to a good many English ships. Of the vessels trading to Manila Harbour in 1868, 93 were Spanish, and 112 foreign; of the latter, 54, or nearly one-half, being British. The 112 foreign ships represented close upon three times the tonnage of the 93 Spanish; but the latter nearly all entered and left with cargoes, while the foreigners mostly arrived in ballast, to load produce. Mr. RISKEITS strongly advocates the abolition of the tobacco monopoly, and the opening of the Philippine ports to the trade of the world, without restriction. He may expect to see his hopes fulfilled about the same time as free trade is established in the Dutch East Indies.

IT appears that the indemnity obtained from the Chinese by the United States Government after the war of 1856-7 was more than sufficient to cover all the claims of American citizens arising out of those operations, and the question has now arisen, "What is to be done with the surplus?" The American Minister, Mr. REED, demanded the sum of $700,000 as idemnity for the losses of his countrymen. The amount was paid by the Chinese authorities, and accepted by the United States Government, on the condition that the balance remaining, after satisfying all claims for the losses above mentioned, should be refunded. The sum of $500,000 was found to be sufficient, and the balance is still in the Treasury at Washington. It is now proposed, with the concurrence of the Chinese Government, to apply the remaining $200,000 toward the American College at Peking, for the benefit of both Chinese and Americans. A committee in New York, consisting of ex-Governor MORGAN, Wm. E. DODGE, Chancellor FERRIS, and others, have the matter under consideration. At a late meeting (of which we give an account in another column) they recommended that the sum be increased to $400,000 and at once bestowed upon the college. The plan originated with the late Mr. BURLINGAME.

A PARLIAMENTARY PAPER just issued (Japan, No. 2, 1870) contains a "Further Report from Mr. ADAMS on Silk Culture in Japan," which has already been published by the Yokohama Chamber of Commerce. Mr. ADAMS gives more information about the destructive parasite uji, from which it appears that the natives, if properly informed, could easily "stamp out" this pest. When the uji comes out of the cocoon, it is thrown aside, under the impression that it is dead, or dying, but this is not the case—it undergoes a transformation into a fly, which lays its eggs in the silkworm, and so on ad infinitum. Were this fully understood it would be easy to exterminate the parasite by destroying it while in the larva stage. Mr. ADAMS considers the large exportation of eggs an important cause of the deterioration in Japan silk, and lays great stress on the necessity of introducing European machinery.

PEOPLE who fancy that the award of a good service pension to Admiral KEPPEL is a proof that his doings in China have given satisfaction at the Admiralty, labour under a slight mistake. Sir HENRY KEPPEL is far too energetic and independent to be popular at the Admiralty under the present regime; in fact, the qualities that have won for him universal esteem and admiration in the East, and everywhere where "British pluck" is appreciated, are the ones least calculated to receive favour from Mr. CHILDERS. The good-service pension conferred on Sir HENRY, well-earned as it is, proceeds not from a due recognition of his merits at the Admiralty, but is conferred by special desire of the QUEEN.

IT is proposed (according to the Eastern Budget) to establish a new route to India, which some people think will be a formidable rival to that via Brindisi. A railway is to be built connecting the Austrian lines with the harbour of Santi Quaranta, in Epirus, via Dalmatia, Bosnia, and Albania. It is stated that this harbour could be made to accommodate a large number of ships, and that the country in its vicinity is very fertile, and capable of affording a great opening for its commercial development. It is 760 miles nearer Alexandria than Brindisi, and ships using it for the Indian traffic would avoid the dangerous navigation of the Archipelago.

FROM Washington we hear that the project of converting the monthly Pacific Mail service into a fortnightly one is likely to be carried into effect shortly, the Post-office Committee of the American Senate having agreed to a Bill to subsidise the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for carrying mails between San Francisco and China semi-monthly to the amount of $1,000,000 per annum.

THE preparations for the expedition of the first section of cable to be laid by the Great Northern Telegraph (China and Japan Extension) Company are making progress. The Danish frigate Tordenskjold has arrived in the Thames, where she will take on board a portion of the cable, for the remainder of which the company have chartered the steamers Cella and Great Northern. About 400 miles are now finished in the tanks, and the remainder will be completed by the time the ships are fitted up and ready to receive their cargoes. It is expected that before the end of May the whole will be on its way to China.

THE report of Messrs. MICHIE and FRANCIS (delegates of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce) on the Upper Yangtsze is ordered to be laid on the table of the House of Commons. We are glad to see this valuable document receive the recognition due to its merits.

MR. CYRUS FIELD is in Washington promoting the scheme for a telegraph cable under the Pacific Ocean to connect California, China, and Japan. A memorial has been presented to Congress on the subject.

THE CHINESE INDEMNITY FUND.

Under this heading the New York Times gives the following report of a meeting held at the University of the City of New York, in regard to the American college at Peking, proposed by Mr. Burlingame :—

The committee appointed at a recent meeting of citizens to consider what disposition ought to be made of the surplus of the Chinese Indemnity Fund, and to communicate with Congress upon the subject, convened on Tuesday, in the Chancellor's room of the University of New York City, at the call of Chancellor Ferris, chairman.

Professor W. P. Jones, lately United States Consul at Amoy and Canton, at whose invitation the previous meeting had been called, gave a brief history of the fund, showing that after the Anglo-French and Chinese war of 1856 and 1857, in which the Chinese authorities burned the foreign settlements of Canton, Mr. Reed, United States Minister, demanded and obtained 500,000 taels (or about $700,000) as indemnity for the losses thus inflicted upon certain Americans; that Mr. Reed promised that if this sum proved to be more than we were entitled to, the excess should be restored to them; that two years later, when all just claims of our citizens had been discharged from the fund, there remained a surplus of more than $200,000, which Mr. Buchanan in his annual message to the Thirty-sixth Congress, and Mr. Lincoln in his annual message to the second session of the Thirty-seventh Congress, both declared "belongs in equity to the Chinese Government," and recommended Congress "to appropriate to some benevolent object in which the Chinese may be specially interested," intending thereby (as shown in Mr. Seward's report, Exec. Doc. No. 29, to 3rd sess. 40th Cong.), the Scientific Institution at Peking, first proposed by Dr. Williams, United States Charge d'Affaires, and afterward repeatedly recommended by the late Minister Burlingame. Prof. Jones stated the design of the institution as twofold; first to teach the Chinese language, laws &c., to Americans desirous of fitting themselves to act as United States interpreters in our consular service, or as scientific explorers, builders of railroads, &c., in that country; and secondly, to teach the Chinese the English language, and introduce a knowledge of American arts and sciences among them. He then showed what action Congress had taken up to this time, upon these recommendations of the Presidents, and submitted sundry resolutions, which he hoped would express the sense of the committee on this subject.

After full discussion, participated in by Hon. Mr. Dodge, Mr Benedict, Mr. Taft, and Chancellor Ferris, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted and ordered to be engrossed, and a copy sent to each House of Congress.

Resolved—That this committee is of opinion that the surplus of the indemnity fund received from the Chinese under the Convention of 1858, referred to in the annual message of President Buchanan to the second session of the Thirty-sixth Congress, and of President Lincoln to the second session of the Thirty-seventh Congress, with the accumulation thereon, certainly does belong in equity to the Chinese Government, as the Presidents therein declare, and should be returned to it. But if declined by the Imperial Government we are in favour, with their consent and approval, of having the same expended in the manner advised by the late Minister Burlingame, to found a literary institution in China for the mutual benefit of both Chinese and Americans.

Resolved—That we believe that the sum of $400,000, judiciously expended, is sufficient to effect very important results in the way of introducing a practical knowledge of scientific principles among a people so intelligent and so desirous of obtaining information as the Chinese, and that we believe that the method proposed by Mr. Burlingame, rightly developed, may become the means of rapidly advancing the interests of commerce, science, and modern civilisation, and strengthening American influence with the literati—the real rulers of China.

Resolved—That in view of the fact that our Government has required of China the right to exclusive jurisdiction over all American citizens and American property on Chinese soil, justice and national honour also require that proper provision should be made for the suitable education of interpreters for our consular and diplomatic service in that empire, either according to the plan contemplated by this measure, or by some other equally effective. (Signed)

Isaac Ferris, Chancellor of the University of New York City, chairman; Wm. E. Dodge, President Chamber of Commerce; F. A. Winston, President M.L.I. Co. of New York; E. D. Morgan, E. C. Benedict, A. A. Low, John C. Green, James H. Taft, Stewart Brown, Samuel B. Ruggles. Wm. F. Jones (secretary).

CHINA AND THE GOSPEL*

Under this title the Rev. Mr. MUIRHEAD, well known as one of the most able and experienced among Protestant missionaries in China, has produced an unpretending but withal interesting and valuable little book. In his introductory remarks the author anticipates the question, "Why publish a new book on this subject?" and answers it thus:—"The greatness of the theme, and our long practical acquaintance with it, form the only apology." In truth, no apology is needed at all. A careful perusal of the work leads us to the conclusion that notwithstanding the number of books already written by China missionaries, this one is still important as throwing a new light on many interesting questions, and dealing with others that missionaries, as a rule, either ignore or deal with in a manner doubtless thoroughly conscientious, but at the same time the reverse of practical. Mr. MUIRHEAD'S estimate of the native character is eminently just, as will be seen by the remarks here quoted:—

We desire to give the utmost credit to the Chinese for such illustrations of moral excellence as we find amongst them. At the same time, the whole body politic is in large measure vitiated, corrupt, and depraved. Many of the worst vices obtain among the lower classes; and the higher, the ruling, the mandarin sections, are cruel, unjust, and extortionate in their official life. Little faith can be placed in their word, and they hesitate not to break it whenever their selfish and ambitious interests are supposed to interfere. Our political, mercantile, and missionary intercourse with the Chinese brings out elements in their character and conduct which may irritate and annoy, but need not surprise us. There can be no close hearty association with them, on this very ground. We require to be always on our guard against the deceit, the dishonesty, the untruthfulness, the treachery with which they are chargeable; and their social life is marked by principles and practices which place them in a low position as compared with our Christian civilisation. Infanticide doubtless obtains among them, but we have no means of determining its extent. It is denounced in the Criminal Code and in other official announcements, but it is perpetrated in secret and does not appear in open day. The Chinese are aware of its moral impropriety, but excuse themselves on the ground of poverty or illegitimacy, or the comparative worthlessness of female children, or of the infant soul. A woman once confessed to me that she had destroyed three or four of her own girls, but she did not like it to be referred to, as there was evidently a sense of shame and infamy connected with it. We are inclined to think that the reports among us on the subject are greatly overdrawn; but the fact is, there are times and places when and where the evil is more current than at other seasons and in other circumstances. Gambling is a prevailing habit in China, though it is declared to be illegal. Opium smoking is rampant in all parts, and is eating out the vitals of the nation. It is the fruitful cause of many other social crimes, such as theft, suicide, murder, and piracy, which are greatly on the increase, in consequence of the extensive use of this narcotic.

Mr. MUIRHEAD'S remarks on the political situation are very clear and well expressed, though we cannot help thinking he somewhat exaggerates the "hate and dread" with which foreigners are looked on by the people. At any rate the hatred and fear, even if they do in some parts exist to the extent the author believes, are fostered and stimulated by the mandarins for their own evil purposes, and would soon give way to a better and more friendly feeling were free intercourse promoted instead of the present system of jealous exclusiveness:—

We may further observe that the deep-rooted aversion to change is allied to an intense hostility to foreigners on the part of many. The one is a mere subterfuge in their case for the other. We are hated and dreaded. We have entered China not as friends and tribute-bearers, but as mighty conquerors and independent of control. The authorities have been obliged to receive us, and cede certain rights and privileges which they would gladly take away if they could. Had they the power, the governing classes would soon compel us to leave the country, or confine us to some limited position on the sea coast. And it is the opinion of not a few that this is their aim and expectation. All they are doing now in the way of forming arsenals, building gunboats, training soldiers, and manufacturing shot and shell, is only with this idea, that they may be on an equal footing with ourselves, and be able to fight on our own ground. In evidence of this, it is maintained that the Chinese authorities are more supercilious and overbearing than ever. They are strongly opposed to anything like concession to foreigners, and instead of advancing in the line of progress, showing that they are more favourably inclined towards us, they are actuated by a more exclusive spirit, and are resolved to keep us as much at arm's length as possible. The mission of Mr. Burlingame to Western Courts is represented by many as an illusion, designed only to ward off the day when China shall be thrown open to foreign intercourse in the fullest manner. Its promises of a liberal policy are said to be belied by the occurrences that are taking place in the country, and the stolid opposition of the ruling powers to the demands of our foreign Ministers. What is to be done in the circumstances? We are not writing for political purposes. We have other and higher aims in view. Only we may remark that it is indispensable we should maintain the rights we have already secured, and employ all legitimate means for pressing upon the people and authorities the necessity of progress in their national civilisation and culture. We cannot be true to ourselves, nor to the country with which we are brought into contact, if this is not done. Any drawing back on our part and our just claims and privileges will assuredly be taken advantage of, and issue in our own discomfiture, as well as in loss to the Chinese themselves.

Let the Government maintain their political rights to the utmost, and show that they have both the power and the will to do so. This will intimidate such a treacherous nation as the Chinese are, especially in their representatives, from breaking their treaty stipulations with us, as they are always ready to do. Let our foreign authorities exert their influence for the enlightenment of the high officials as to our superior civilisation and culture, and press these upon them in all legitimate ways. Let our merchants aid in the noble endeavour as best they can, by the diffusion of useful information on the subject among those with whom they come in contact. Let our missionaries, too, act their solemn part in the matter; and by these various means we may expect, in course of time, to see the ignorant and stupid prejudices of the Chinese disappear. They will be taught to know us better than they have done; and, appreciating at once our science and religion, a new era will be followed by a brilliant and glorious day in the character and history of its people.

We should like to make a good many extracts, but have room for only one more, which will give an idea of the author's views on the opium trade—a subject that is attracting a great deal of public attention just now, and will shortly be discussed in Parliament. Mr. MUIRHEAD says:—

We venture to ask, is the opium trade necessary, honest, Christian, in any sense whatever? Can we righteously and conscientiously participate in it? Can we engage in a thing which is in nowise productive of good, and is the direct and acknowledged cause of much evil to the Chinese? They confess that they are befooled and besotted by it. In their own persons, in the various relations of life, in their national character and capacity, they have been overcome, enslaved, degraded by it. They will not defend the use of it in any instance, except that having betaken to it, they cannot give it up. The abandonment of the trade would be confusing for a time to our mercantile interests, to our Indian Exchequer, and to myriads who have become its victims. What then? That is no argument for its continuance, and the call is loud and earnest to those who have anything to do with it. Be the consequences what they may, in any of these respects, the duty of all Christian men is to have no connection with it. We know there are several honourable firms in China who have wholly abstained from the traffic. They are honoured accordingly; but there are many whose names and hands are soiled with the drug. We know one gentleman who was so thoroughly convinced of the evils of the trade that he wrote on his authority to Bombay to cease the consignment of any more opium to his house, and he was prepared to stand by it, however he might be called to suffer. What should hinder all our English and American merchants following his example?

* "China and the Gospel." By the Rev. Wm. Muirhead. James Nisbet and Co.

The April number of The Food Journal contains, among other interesting matter, a continuation of the papers on coffee adulteration, in which the admixture of chicory with coffee is unreservedly condemned, as being not only "cheap and nasty," but absolutely poisonous. To make matters worse, it seems that the chicory used to adulterate coffee is first itself adulterated with all sorts of abominations. "Exhausted tea-leaves" form the subject of another article, which is especially interesting just now, when public attention is so forcibly drawn to the importation of spurious tea.

Messrs. Trubner and Co., in their Literary Record, give a facsimile of the celebrated Phra Bat (Footprint of Buddha) near Nophburi in Siam. They also intended to have given an account of the visit of Mr. Henry Alabaster to this "Holy shrine," and an accurate explanation of the place, but found it would exceed the space available, and have therefore concluded to print it separately, in pamphlet form, and issue it at 2s.

We have received a copy of Peterson's Ceylon Almanack for 1870. It contains an immense mass of information of value to those residing or interested in the island, including copious Mercantile and Estates Directories, Civil Service List, Tariff, Postal and Telegraphic Information, &c.

MESSRS. LONGMANS AND CO. will shortly publish a volume entitled Westward by Rail: the New Route to the East, containing the letters about the Pacific Railway, the Mormons, and California, from the pen of Mr. W. F. Rae, which originally appeared in the Daily News.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks.—"The singular success which Mr. Epps has attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in tin-lined packets labelled—JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.

TEA.

The following is from Messrs. Thompson's Circular:—The Budget published on the 11th inst. has increased the flatness on our market. Dealers are now occupied clearing stocks, and business is not likely to be resumed until after the Easter holidays. Foochow Congous: Dust and Sittings continue unchanged. Common is saleable at 1s., and good common at 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 0¾d. Fair (really good Tea) has been sold at 1s. 0¾d. to 1s. 1d., while medium to good is quoted at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d. In fine to finest the stocks continue limited, and the prices are nominal. Black-leaf Congous: Good common at 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 0¾d., and fair at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d. show no alteration. Medium and fine continue to be held firmly, the finest grades being very scarce. In Souchongs and Oolongs there is nothing fresh to report. Scented Teas remain unaltered. Green Teas: A few invoices have been placed on the market, but transactions have been limited.

SILK.

There has been no change in the market since our last report; there is hardly any business doing, and prices are rather weaker, although holders continue to ask the same rates. It is hardly probable that there will be any activity till after Easter.

The deliveries from 1st to 13th inst. were—1,276 bales China; 347 bales Canton; 272 bales Japan; 171 bales Bengal. Total, 2,066 bales

COFFEE.

Although strong expectations have lately been held that the duty would be abolished, no alteration has been made, which has had a depressing effect upon the market, and prices have a downward tendency. The offers of Plantation Ceylon at the public sales have been very extensive, and having met with but a limited demand have been quitted with difficulty at a decline of 6d. to 1s., in addition to that reported in our last. Of Native the offers have likewise been large, and the entire quantity has in the absence of any inquiry, been bought in. In other East India there have been no transactions; the only parcel placed on the market, consisting of 889 bags pale Indian Manila, was bought in at 56s. The latest prices paid have been Plantation Ceylon, triage and ordinary, 28s. to 57s.; small grey and dull, 58s. to 62s.; low middling to middling ditto, 62s. 6d. to 66s.; bold ditto, 66s. to 72s.; small coloury, 62s. 6d. to 65s. 6d.; middling coloury, 66s. 6d. to 74s. 6d.; good middling bold and coloury, 75s. to 78s.; fine middling, 79s. to 81s.; pea-berry, 78s. to 84s. Native bought in, bold at 60s. to 64s.; good and fine ordinary, at 56s. to 58s.

The quantity of Ceylon Coffee afloat for Great Britain is estimated as follows:—Plantation. 304,246 cwt., against 270,769 cwt. at the corresponding date of 1869; Native, 30,194 cwt., against 56,685 cwt. The quantity afloat for the Continent is 2,694 cwt. Plantation against — cwt., and 1,517 cwt. Native against 1,605 cwt. The quantity of Coffee landed in the fourteen weeks ended April 9, 1870, was, of Ceylon, 5,350 tons, against 6,261 tons during the corresponding period of 1869; of all descriptions, 7,901 tons, against 11,295 tons. The quantity entered for home consumption was, of Ceylon, 2,113 tons, against 2,636 tons; of all descriptions, 3,876 tons, against 4 566 tons. The quantity exported was, of Ceylon, 5,246 tons, against 6,308 tons; of all descriptions, 9,344 tons, against 12 709 tons. The stock on April 9 was, of Ceylon, 11,855 tons, against 8,312 tons; of all descriptions, 18,900 tons, against 13,240 tons.

SUGAR.

In consequence of the alteration in the duties, the market presents an unsettled appearance, and the prices paid are very irregular. In East India descriptions there have been no transactions at the public sales; only one parcel has been offered, comprising 3,800 bags clayed Manila, which was bought in at 28s. By private contract 6,000 bags unclayed Zebu have been sold at 22s. 6d.; 1,000 bags Taal, at 23s.; and 1,000 bags current clayed, at 28s. 9d.

The quantity of Sugar landed in the fourteen weeks ended April 9, 1870, was, of Penang, 792 tons. against 1,126 tons in the corresponding period of 1869; of Manila, Java, and China, 5,110 tons, against 8,672 tons; the quantity entered for home consumption was of Penang, 729 tons. against 944 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 6 700 tons, against 3,472 tons. The quantity exported was, of Penang 32 tons, against 42 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 1,221 tons, against 406 tons. The stock on April 9 was, of Penang, 2,361 tons, against 469 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 39,972 tons, against 36,428 tons.

COIR GOODS.—At the last sales only a limited quantity of Yarn was offered, consisting of common qualities which went off slowly, and only about one-half sold at about last sales' rates. Of 50 tons Ceylon Yarn about 26 tons sold, low coarse to common, £20 10s. to £22 15s.; good common, £25 5s; medium, £27 to £28 15s. 3 tons Ceylon Fibre were offered and withdrawn.

CARDAMOMS.—We note the sale of 11 bags Ceylon at 2s. 11d.

CANTHARIDES.—Of China 6 boxes were offered and bought in at 2s. 6d.

CANES.—At auction 42,825 Tonkin were bought in at ¾d., 7,000 Whanghee at 2¼d., and 1,146 picked Dragon at 8d. Of 34,985 Partridge offered 12,000 sold at 2¼d., 20,000 Borneo at 1⅞d. to 1¾d., 10.500 Malacca at 3¾d. to 4⅛d., and 900 picked at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d.

CAMPHOR.—The market continues quiet, with limited business in China at 87s. 6d. per cwt.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—Small transactions continue to be effected in Ceylon at £42 per ton. The quantity of Ceylon afloat for Great Britain is estimated at 50,681 cwt., against 35,222 at the corresponding date last year, and 25,442 cwt. in 1868.

CINNAMON.—The offers have been 144 bales Ceylon, which were chiefly bought in, first sort at 3s. 2d. to 3s. 3d., second at 2s. 6d. to 2s. 8d., coarse third at 1s. 8d., only 13 bales sea-damaged selling at 1s. 6d. to 2s. 4d.; 13 cases broken were bought in at 1s. Chips: 400 bags Ceylon were offered and all sold at previous rates, common bark at 2¼d. to 2⅝d.; middling woody chips at 4⅛d. to 5¼d. good middling at 5⅝d.

CUTCH.—At auction 242 boxes good Penang were bought in at 25s. and 72 cases 56 bags very low mixed sold without reserve at 7s. 6d. to 9s.

GAMBIER.—The only sale reported is of 50 baskets Cubes at 18s. 6d. per cwt.

GUMS.—Copal: At auction of 555 cases Manila offered about 290 cases, chiefly soft kinds, sold at firm rates; hard description met less demand and was bought in at 50s.; fair to good clean soft yellow sold at 36s. to 38s.; dark, 30s. to 35s. 6d.; good hard, partly scraped, 48s. 6d.; dark. 39s. 6d.; 130 cases bold hard coated Singapore sold at 40s. 6d. to 45s. Damar: 7 cases middling Singapore sold at 74s. Gamboge: 20 cases sold; good clean pipe slightly run at £16 10s.; the first lot £16s. 5s.; blocky and country damaged, £14 2s. 6d.; one lot £14 5s.; and 8 cases middling lump and pipe at £14 5s. to £14 10s.

HEMP.—There is a steady but not an active demand for Manila; the sales amount to about 630 bales; common brown at £51; fair roping at £52. and £54 for Sorsagon.

HIDES.—At the last sales there was a good demand for East India Hides, the Home Trade having operated more freely than for some time past, and the catalogues were all but cleared. 18,006 Dry Singapore and Penang Cow Hides were offered and sold—Dry best light, 10½d.; seconds, 8d. to 9¾d.; best heavy, 9½d. to 9½d.; seconds, 7½d. to 8½d.; extra heavy, 7¾d. to 8¼d.; thirds, 6½d. to 7½d.; best small, 10¾d.; seconds, 9½d. to 9¾d.; third small, 7½d. to 7¾d.; fourths, 5½d. to 6d.; brined, best light, 12d.; seconds, 9¾d.; best heavy, 9¾d.; seconds, 8½d.; extra heavy, 8d. to 8¼d.; small, 12d. per lb. 4,981 Singapore and Penang Buffalo Hides were offered, and 1,341 sold—Prime slaughtered, best and seconds, 6½d.; fair to good, best heavy, 5½d. to 5¾d.; seconds, 5½d.; thirds, 4d. to 4½d.; light, 6½d. per lb.

INDIA-RUBBER.—Without change; no transactions are reported in East India.

ISINGLASS.—An offer of 5 bales Manila cake was bought in at 2s. 9d.; 4 bags Penang leaf sold at 3s. 8d. to 3s. 9d.

INDIGO.—The dulness previously reported still prevails, there being little if any disposition to make purchases; and, as owners do not press sales, business is of very small amount.

JAPAN WAX.—There is no business to report.

MUSK.—The market is steady, and at auction 47 caddies Tonquin sold at about previous prices, fair partly rough and bally 28s. 6d. to 29s., one lot 28s., wet 20s., rough and bally 16s. 6d. to 18s., pickings 10s. to 12s., 2 tins grain bought in at 42s. to 45s., 1 tin skins sold at 1s. 3d.

OILS.—Aniseed: Of 20 cases offered 1 case sold at 8s. 7d., the remainder bought in at 8s. 8d. Nutmeg: 11 cases sold colored to fine pale at 7d. to 7¾d. Cassia: 12 cases sold at 4s. 7d., and 2 cans settlings at 4s. 1d.

PLUMBAGO.—Fair business has been effected in Ceylon at steady rates, viz., good clean lump 24s., small 20s., good small bright 22s., fine bright chippy dust 17s., chips 13s. 6d., fine dust 12s. 6d., good 10s. per cwt.

PEPPER.—The market for both Black and White is dull, and prices are a shade lower; of the former the sales have been 300 bags damaged and repacked; Penang at 4 11-16d.: 120 bags sound at 4¾d.; 200 bags West Coast at 4 13-16d.; and 350 bags Siam at 4¾d.; 631 bags Singapore being bought in at 5¼d.; and 400 bags Penang at 4¼d.; of White 50 bags ordinary Singapore have realised 6¼d.; and 63 bags first class but sea damaged 6¼d.

RHUBARB.—Of 72 chests China offered 64 chests ordinary rough sold at 8d. to 9d., the remainder being bought in; good fair, smooth coated, at 4s. 4d. to 4s. 6d.

RATTANS.—At auction 5,168 Penang sold at 3s. 1d. to 4s.; chiefly damaged and mouldy at 2s. 3d. to 3s. 9d. per 100 canes.

RICE.—The market has continued to present a quiet appearance; the only sale on the spot has been of 10,000 bags old crop Necransie Arracan at 7s. Afloat the following transactions are reported:—The cargo of 689 tons field Siam, per J. H. Love, sold for London at 7s. 6d. landed. The cargo of 1,300 tons field Siam, per Rajah of Cochin, arrived off coast, sold at 7s. 3d. new quay terms for London. The remainder of the cargo of old Rangoon, per Waterloo, consisting of about 850 tons, sold at 8s. 9d. new quay terms. The cargo per Berar, about 600 tons, Rangoon early February, sailing at 9s. 6d. ex ship for London with guarantee of quality. The cargo per Shields, 500 tons Rangoon, February sailing, on same terms.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea: At auction 886 cases of fresh import, per Canning, met few offers, and were chiefly withdrawn, second pile 125s. to 128s., except a few lots which sold at 124s., unsorted 120s. Mace: Of 7 cases Penang offered 3 cases middling red sold at 3s. 1d., the remainder being bought in at 3s. 6d.; 11 cases Java sold, good middling red at 2s. 10d. to 2s. 11d., middling at 2s. 8d., common mixed at 2s. 6d., low at 2s. 1d. Nutmegs: Of 9 cases Penang offered 2 cases 81's and 78's sold at 2s. 5d. to 2s. 7d., 16 barrels 96's being bought in at 2s. 2d.; 25 cases Java chiefly sold, 79's to 76's at 2s. 6d. to 2s. 8d., 91's at 2s. 1d.

SHELLS.—Mother-o'-Pearl: At the periodical auctions the supply, which was not large, met with a good demand, the greater part being disposed of; Manila sold rather dearer, the whole quantity offered, 89 cases, being disposed of; fair bold commencing at £8 17s. 6d., and rising to £9 7s. 6d.; good to fine bold at £9 7s. 6d. to £9 15s. Tortoise: The only offer of East India, one box (67 lbs) Singapore, was bought in at 17s. Turtle: 3 cases (203 lbs) Manila were offered, and bought in at 4s. 6d. per lb. Cowries have met a good demand, and sold at advanced rates; 29 bags good blue Manila sold at 22s. 6d.; 12 bags Penang were withdrawn. Other Shells: 16 tons Japan Ear sold, commencing at £47 5s., and rising to £49 10s. per ton; 9 cases 8 baskets Singapore Fancy sold, Clam at 1½d. to 2½d., Helmet at 6½d. to 8d. each.

SAPANWOOD.—At auction 18 tons Siam sold, first pile at £9, second at £8, sea-damaged at £7; 67 tons Manila were bought in at £8 15s. to £9, except 14 tons stained, which sold at £6 10s. to £7.

STAR ANISEED.—An offer of 10 cases fair China was bought in at £6 2s. 6d.

SAGO.—In public sale 980 boxes good small pearl were bought in at 18s. 6d., 218 bags middling ditto sold at 17s. 6d., and 32 boxes also sold, good large at 23s. 6d., medium at 3s.

TAPIOCA.—Of 721 bags Singapore 250 bags sold, fine at 2¼d. to 2½d., the remainder Rio kind being bought in at 3d.; 200 bags Penang were also bought in at 3d.

TIN.—An active demand has been exhibited, and rates have gradually advanced; the closing rates are—Straits on the spot £131, afloat £130; Banca and Billiton £130, being a rise of £3 upon last mail's quotations.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

The activity noticed in our last report continued for some days after the departure of last mail, and had the effect of slightly advancing prices for goods suitable for China and Japan. The inquiry, however, became subsequently somewhat less extensive, but without weakening prices, and the tone of the market now is quiet but firm, producers declining to make any concession upon current rates either for present or future delivery. China Grey Shirtings show an advance of 1¼d. to 3d. for 8½ lbs. and 9 lbs., other weights being without alteration; T-cloths exhibit a similar rise except 6 lbs.; and Yarns, both 16-24 and 28-32, are ¼d. higher.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.

COFFEE.—A considerable improvement has taken place in the market for Brazil, owing to the stock being small and in few hands; for this description there is an active demand, at an advance of one-half cent. For East India the inquiry still continues limited, but in sympathy with the movement in Brazil, prices are firmly maintained at about the range previously ruling, viz.:—Java Government bags 20c. to 21½c.; mats, 20c. to 21c.; Singapore, 18c. to 19c.; Manila, 16c. to 17c.; Native Ceylon, 17½c. to 19c. gold. The sales have been small in extent, and are not reported in detail; an arrival of 14,000 mats Java, per Regina Maris, had been sold previously afloat. The stock of Manila on the 1st April was estimated at 2,627 bags, against 6,769 bags on April 1, 1869; of Java (Government) at 815 bags, against 1,641, bags; of Java mats, 51,929, against 41,808 bags; of Ceylon, 1,500 bags, against 7,000 bags; of Singapore nil. in both years.

CAMPHOR.—China is quoted 18c. gold (in bond).

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed is quoted $2.12½; Cassia, $1.25 gold.

GAMBIER.—The current quotation is 4⅜c. to 4½c. gold (duty paid); stock, very small.

HEMP.—The requirements of manufacturers who have for some time past been holding off for lower rates have at length brought them into the market, and shortly after the date of our last report a sale was effected, 3,300 bales Manila at 14½c. gold (60 days prompt), and of 1,000 bales to arrive on private terms. The quotation above given was firmly maintained up to the close. Three vessels recently arrived from Manila, the Franklin, Tabor, and Western Chief brought supplies amounting to 13,018 bales, the greater part of which has been added to stock without influencing the tone of the market. The stock of Manila on the 1st April was estimated at 20,591 bales, against 3,205 bales at the corresponding date of 1869, and 27,844 bales in 1868. The imports into the United States from the 1st January to the 31st March, 1870, were 48,136 bales, against 34,795 bales during the corresponding period of last year, and the quantity afloat on the 31st March was 18,317 bales, against 12,676 bales at the same date last year.

INDIGO.—The market for Manila continues to present a quiet appearance, but prices are well maintained; we note the sale of 40 cases at $1 to $1.36 currency.

PRESERVED GINGER.—China is quoted $8 currency (duty paid).

RHUBARB.—The quotation for China is $1.50 to $2.50 currency (duty paid).

RICE.—The market generally is dull, and prices exhibit a downward tendency. In East India there has again been an absence of business for home consumption, the only sales having been 650 bags Rangoon for export at $2.87½ to $3.25, gold (in bond). The stock of East India on the 1st April was 6,350 bags, against 10,940 bags at the corresponding date last year, and 4,200 bags in 1868.

SPICES.—There have been considerable arrivals of Cloves, Nutmegs, Mace, Cassia, &c., but were sold and reported by us previous to arrival, and we have now only to notice the sale of 15,000 mats Cassia, ex Oliver Cromwell, at a private price. There is a fair jobbing demand, and, with stocks well concentrated, prices are steady and firm at previous rate.

SUGAR.—Immediately following our last report sales were effected of 3,925 bags Manila ex W. G. Russell at 9¼c., and subsequently 9,000 bags per same vessel were quitted at 8⅞c. to 8¾c. gold. These sales comprised the whole of the business in East India, the inquiry for which has not kept pace with that for other kinds, which is improving. The closing quotations are—Java (Dutch Standard, Nos. 10-12) 8⅝c. to 9¼c. Manila current to superior clayed 8c. to 8¼c. The stock on the 1st April was of Java 9,024 bags, 2,366 baskets, against 310 baskets, at the corresponding date last year; of Manila 291,428 bags, against 39,190 bags; of China 1,911 bags against nil.

TEA.—The market continues quiet, the demand continuing very limited, and as the supply has increased prices rule less firmly than at the date of our last. The sales have been 1,052 half-chests Green, per Everhard; 1,200 half-chests, per J. L. Stone; 200 half chests, per Dilpussund; and 800 half chests Oolongs, per Yokohama, at the following prices, which are the current quotations:—Hyson: Common to fair, $65 to 75; superior to fine, $80 to 90; extra fine to finest, $105 to 130. Young Hyson: Canton-made, nominal; common to fair, $65 to 75; superior to fine, $85 to 110; extra fine to finest, $125 to 160. Gunpowder and Imperial: Canton-made, nominal; Common to fair, $75 to 90; superior to fine, $105 to 130; extra fine to finest, $140 to 175. TIN.—There was a steady market for a few days after the date of our last report, business being done to the extent of 100 slabs Billiton at 32¼c. gold (thirty days prompt) and 800 slabs Straits on private terms. Subsequently advices were received of an advance in the London market consequent upon the result of the Dutch Trading Company's sale, and three had the effect of advancing prices and strengthening the inquiry; sales are reported of 800 slabs Straits and Billiton at 32¼c. 425 slabs Banca at 34c. to 35c., and 200 slabs Billiton at secret prices. At the close holders are quoting Straits, 32½c. to 33c.; Banca, 34¼c. to 35c. gold.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKET REPORTS.

COFFEE.—Holders manifest a good degree of stability; not inclined to force sales, but willing to meet jobbers' views regarding quantity. Quotations: O. G. Java, 22c; Manila, 17c.

CORDAGE AND HEMP.—The San Francisco Company adhere to the advanced price of 18¼c. for round lots to the trade, and 20c. for jobbing parcels. The last China steamer brought over 960 bales Manila Hemp for the local factory, thus keeping up liberal stocks of the raw material. Manila cordage is in limited request.

CHINA MATTING.—Imports from Jan. 1 to March 16—49 bales 2,207 rolls. The season for an active trade in this line is approaching. At present, however, there are no sales of importance to record.

RICE.—Imports from Jan. 1 to March 15—China, 58 946 mats. According to late market advices, No. 2 China cannot now be placed here for less than 6¼c. per lb. This has been the occasion of an improved business with us. Sales, 15,000 mats China, at $5.35 to 5.62½ per 100 lbs.; now held at $5.75 to 6.

TEA.—Imports from Jan. 1 to March 15—China, 3,193 packages; Japan, 16,793 packages. The entire cargo of Japan, ex Benefactress, has gone over the Pacific road, a considerable portion of the 11,000 chests being ordered, by New York telegram, to be left at Chicago. In addition to the above, we note shipments of other parcels to Jackson, Michigan. The present quotations for Japans is 65c. to 90c. according to quality and size of package. Common Oolongs rule at $1 to 1.25 and $1.50 per lb, according to the chop and size of package.

SHIPPING.

To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 20s. meast; per steamer, via Suez Canal, 60s. meast At New York to China; $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet.

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear or Tyne per keel.—For Hiogo: £35. For Yokohama: £35. For Shanghai: £36. For Hong Kong: £28. For Galle: £27. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton.—For Hiogo: £1 15s. For Shanghai: £1 16s. For Hong Kong: £1 8s. For Singapore: £1 4s. 6d. For Galle: £1 7s.

CASUALTIES.

The Danube (steamer), for Shanghai, &c. (via Suez Canal), which put back to Liverpool April 2, after being ashore, had discharged her cargo and been docked; 130 packages of goods were found to be very slightly damaged; no salvage.

A telegram from Galle, April 5, states that the Corea, off No. 28, 332, French (?), from Singapore to London, had got aground on a mudbank in Banka Straits; steamer despatched.

Advices from Capetown, dated March 5, state that the Seawfell, Hemder, from Bangkok to Falmouth, which put into Table Bay, Feb. 7, leaky, was hove down.

The Jacob Hansen, Love, from Bangkok, had her jibboom carried away during a heavy squall at Queenstown, on the night of the 8th inst.

The Senator Iken, Schumacher, which sailed from Cardiff, April 5, for Hong Kong, has put back, after being ashore at Lundy Island; one man killed.

Advices from Lima, dated March 15, state that the Queen of Nations, Child, from Yokohama, which arrived at Callao, Feb. 12, had been obliged to go into dock at the latter port, having struck on a rock during her passage in the China Seas.

The Herald (ship), of Salem, from Java to Boston, with sugar, put into St. Thomas, March 27, with main and mizen-masts sprung, and leaking badly.

Later advices from Alexandria, dated April 11, state that the Otterburn (str.), Stevenson, had been surveyed, and would proceed on her voyage to Colombo about the 20th inst.

A telegram from Port Said, dated April 12, states that the Nile (str.), from London to Singapore, &c., had been aground in Lake Timsah since April 9, but she was discharging cargo and coal, and hopes were entertained that she would be got off on the 12th; the vessel and cargo were not damaged.

MISCELLANEOUS.

At PORT SAID.—April 11, Woodham (str.), Hill, from Colombo, and sailed for Marseilles.

At SUEZ.—Historian (str.), from Liverpool, and left April 11, for Colombo, &c.

At ST. HELENA.—March 2, Medine, Lefeuvre, from Hong Kong, and sailed for London; 7, Otter, Croscombe, from Sarawak, and sailed for London; 10, Voorlichter, Duinker, from Banjoewangie, and sailed 12 for Rotterdam.

Off ST. HELENA.—March 2, Ocean Beauty, from Colombo, for London; 13, Ben Lomond, from Probolingo, for Amsterdam.

At TABLE BAY.—March 1, Agamemnon (str.), Middleton, from Liverpool, and left for Mauritius, Singapore, &c.; 3, Eastern Isles (str.), Falmouth to Singapore and Japan, short of coal.

At MAURITIUS.—Feb. 11, Delangle, Simon, from Cardiff, sailed for Galle.

At REUNION.—Feb. 18, Maximos, Fabrique, from Sumatra, and sailed 20 for Marseilles.

ECONOMICAL STEAMING.—Last week a trial of some interest to engineers was made in Leith of the engines of the screw steamer St. Petersburg, belonging to D. R. Macgregor, Esq., of Leith. Previous to the alterations being made, the vessel had been propelled by the ordinary low-pressure engines with common condenser; but as she is intended to sail to India by way of the Suez Canal, it was, of course, very desirable that the consumption of fuel should be reduced as low as possible. The steamer has hitherto had two cylinders, 52 in. in diameter; the steam, in passing from them to the condenser, is usually reduced from about 20 lbs. per square inch of pressure to a little above atmospheric pressure, thus leaving some useful work in the steam, which, in the new system, is completely utilised. In the present arrangement one of the 52-inch cylinders was removed, and replaced by one of 30 inches diameter. Steam of 60 lbs. pressure enters it first from the boiler; after having done work there, the steam passes to the larger cylinder, and, working expansively, passes to the condenser considerably below atmospheric pressure, its power for doing useful work being completely exhausted. On the trial the engines started and reversed easily with a pressure of 23 lbs. per square inch, which is considered good work for compound engines. On the voyage round to Liverpool the speed of the vessel shows a slight increase while the consumption of fuel is reduced from 22 cwt. of coals to 7½ cwt. per hour. We believe this is the first time steamboat engines of the ordinary type have been converted into compound, and the experiment has proved a complete success.

A TELEGRAPH SHIP.—The screw steamer Edinburgh, the property of Messrs. Edward Bates and Sons, has just been fitted by Messrs. Laird Brothers, at their works, Birkenhead, for the service of the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company. Her dimensions are—290 feet long, 39 feet wide, 26 feet deep; tonnage, 2 200 tons. She is now arranged with three large cable tanks, two of them being 32 feet diameter by 22 feet deep, and the third 26 feet diameter by 20 feet deep. Under the two largest of them there has been fitted an inner skin, forming a double bottom, for stowage of water ballast when the weight in the cable tanks has run out. There are also various other fittings and appliances specially arranged for the telegraph work. The engines, which are new, have been made by Messrs. Laird on the compound system, and are the third pair made for the same owners. The engines are vertical, the small cylinder having a diameter of 44 inches and the large cylinder 78 inches, with a stroke of 3 feet 6 inches, and are nominally of 275-horse power. The cylinders are jacketed at the tops and bottoms as well as the sides. The valve for admitting the steam to the small cylinder is fitted with an expansion valve, and is placed at the forward end, and the valve for admitting the steam into the large cylinder is placed between the two cylinders. The pumps are worked by levers from a cross head on the piston-rod of the large cylinder. The condensers have horizontal tubes, the water circulating inside the tubes. There are two cylindrical boilers, firing from both ends, having two furnaces, each with return tubes, and fitted with cylindrical superheaters on the top of each boiler.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility, at moderate charges, for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships and steamers.

Their large Granite Dock has 286 feet length on the blocks, and at average spring tides can receive vessels of 16 to 17 feet draught. It has a caisson-gate and a powerful centrifugal steam pump, and an engineer's workshop fitted with lathes and tools, driven by steam; iron and brass foundries, boiler-makers' shop, a large smithy and carpenters and boat-builders' sheds, superintended by resident Europeans.

Their two smaller GRANITE DOCKS can receive, at spring tides, vessels drawing 12 feet.

Spars, timber, and other Dockyard material kept in stock.

Quarters for officers and a DRY GODOWN for stores of vessels under repair.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMON and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon street, London, E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.

Popular celebrity can only be retained by worthy discoveries. In the annals of medicine, no cure can be found to parallel the unbounded fame attained throughout the habitable globe by Holloway's medicaments. In every climate under every description of circumstances, have these wonderful remedies worked cures which are recorded in almost every known language. In using Holloway's preparations, the sufferer runs no risk; their very nature necessitates their acting as purifiers and restorers. The innocent ingredients employed in their composition prevents the possibility of their doing harm, or weakening the most delicate constitutions. The whole chapter of accidents to which humanity is liable can be met safely and certainly by these twin correctives.

REDUCED TO TEN AND A-HALF DAYS.

I have the pleasure to announce that I have succeeded in reducing the Contract time for this year by TWELVE HOURS.

Telegrams from Kiachta to Tientsin, and vice versa, will be delivered in TEN DAYS AND A-HALF.

I have made an engagement to pay a Tael for every hour a courier arrives in advance of the time, and I think that many Despatches will be transmitted in Ten Days.

I take this occasion to thank the Gentlemen who subscribed their names to establish GRANT'S TRANS-MONGOLIAN TELEGRAPH SERVICE. Having now repaid the whole of the Capital advanced to me, I have reduced the charges on Telegrams, to prove that I am not unmindful of the confidence they showed me.

CHINA CIRCULAR.

THE success which has attended the European Commercial Telegram Circular which I have issued for the last two years in China and Japan induces me to think that a China Circular will be approved of in Europe. I have made arrangements to receive Prices, &c., as per annexed form, from Shanghai by the first steamer to Tientsin in February till the freezing of the river Peiho, in the beginning of December; but in order that Subscribers may not be inconvenienced by the stoppage of the Circular, I purpose making arrangements to have it transmitted viâ Galle during the winter months. From four to six Circulars per month will be issued, or from forty-five to fifty Circulars during the Season.

The time occupied in the transmission from Shanghai to London will probably average SEVENTEEN DAYS.

As to the reliability of the information I furnish, I need only mention that the majority of my Subscribers in China are members of the Chamber of Commerce, and the subscriptions are double the undermentioned charges.

CHARGES.

For 10 Circulars, commencing at any time of the Season . . . £3 3 0
For the whole Season (i.e. Feb. to December) £12 12 0

The Circular will be printed in London, and posted a few hours after the delivery of private telegrams.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).

OPENING OF THE NEW SUBMARINE ROUTE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND INDIA.

The Cable between Suez and Bombay having been successfully laid, the new submarine line is now open for traffic, and messages for India will be received at all the Postal Telegraph Offices in Great Britain and Ireland.

Until the opening of the Falmouth and Malta line, telegrams from the United Kingdom will be sent by the Anglo-Mediterranean Company's line from Turin to Egypt, and thence by the British Indian cable to Aden and Bombay. Both Companies' lines are worked throughout by English clerks.

To insure the transmission of messages by this route, it is necessary that the sender should insert the words "Via Malta" in the text of the despatch, immediately after the address of the receiver.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

Dates are down to the 13th March. The outward mail of 14th Jan. arrived out on 8th March. The following items are from the Japan Mail:—

Our last issue was dated the 23rd February, since which the most remarkable feature of the fortnight has been the continued arrivals of grain from Saigon, eighteen vessels have entered the port, and yet no stock remains on the market. This implies a grave deficit in the country of the first necessary of life, and involves a large expenditure of the national resources to supply it. Presuming that we shall receive from first to last a million of piculs of rice, costing, in round numbers, three millions of dollars, it is so much abstracted from the purchasing power of the country, so much less to spend in cottons and woollens, in oil and small luxuries. It is so much dead loss. And yet it might have been far worse for Japan. But for the foreign trade thousands would have starved outright who will now be preserved alive for four or five dollars a piece, and whose labour will still be available for the service of the country. Spring is approaching, and in a few short months the seed each of these men has sown will ripen, and nature will repay tenfold the amount spent meanwhile on his sustenance. Still we must look for a dull import trade, a dragging business and great proverty in the country, riots from inability to pay the taxes, and rumours of riots magnified into sounds of rebellion. Against these it is our duty to caution our readers very earnestly. We have during the past few days made strict inquiries into the truth of reports which have been circulated of late in regard to risings in the country, and they amount to this, and this alone—that on account of the scarcity of money in certain districts of the country, and the pressure put on the farmers to pay the ordinary levy of taxes, they have risen against the local officers, and some slight bloodshed has ensued.

There is more or less talk about disturbance in the Prince of Mito's Territory, and some misapprehensions exist on the subject. The fact is that there are three parties in the principality, the old Conservatives, the students or Radicals, and the Trimmers, and between these parties, as always has been, and always must be the case, there is perpetual feud. A riot has broken out, which is in no sense a rebellion, and which has nothing whatever of a political nature in it, and troops have been sent from Yedo to restore order. The old Prince of Mito who was so well known for his enmity to foreigners and his opposition to the Regent, Tikamon no Kami, who espoused the foreign cause and was subsequently assassinated by Mito ronins, died in 1865, and was succeeded by his son Yoshiatsu, on whose death last year Mimbu no Tayu, another of his sons, succeeded to the principality. This is the prince who went to Europe some years ago and resided in Paris. The ex-Shogun Keika, or Yoshihisa, is another son of Nangaki.

A fire broke out at 97, Hotoba-street, and, as the wind was high at the time, much apprehension was entertained for the safety of the Homura-road and the back of the settlement. In a few minutes after the alarm was given several engines were on the spot, and the tidal drain in the neighbouring street being full, there was an abundant supply of water. Companies both of the English and French troops were sent down from their respective camps and assisted in keeping order. It is not to be expected at moments of the kind that this can be perfectly done in a part of the settlements abounding with a very inferior class of houses, but, making allowance for the nature of the locality, it seemed that, on the whole, no greater disorder occurred than was inevitable, nor have we heard that any of the occurrences which distinguished the late fire were repeated last night. But from the intense nature of the flame during the passage of the fire from the first to the second house attacked, we are inclined to think that more kerosine, or similar inflammable substance, was stored there than should have been the case had we more control over such matters than we have at present. At one time the Phœnix Hotel was in great danger, and but for the good supply of water and the presence of a large number of engines it must have taken fire. By half-past eleven all danger was over, though the firemen were employed during the night in keeping a constant stream of water poured on the burning ruins. The estimated amount of loss is not very large. On the following night another fire broke out in the Japanese town near the Yoshiw-arra, and extended from the foot of the Nungi hill to the iron bridge over the Creek. Above a hundred houses were destroyed and the accident will cause a great deal of distress amongst the poor. The fire brigades turned out with their customary alacrity, and were as efficient as ever.

Another fire is raging at Yedo, and as the wind is blowing strong from the north, doubtless considerable destruction of property will ensue.

H. E. the Spanish Minister was received by his Majesty the Mikado on the 3rd March, and presented his credentials. Copies of the Spanish Treaty will be exchanged at a subsequent interview.

TEN DAYS LATER NEWS BY PACIFIC MAIL.

The Pacific Mail steamer America reached San Francisco on the 13th of April, with Yokohama dates to March 23. She brought a full cargo and 1,200 passengers, of whom 1,104 were Chinese; among the others were the survivors of the Oneida's crew.

The following is a summary of her Japan news, as telegraphed from San Francisco to New York:—

The news from Nagasaki is meagre. There was still considerable excitement about the native Christians.

At Osaka it was rumoured that fresh troubles had broken out in the Shaspus country.

The United States flagship Delaware arrived at Yokohama on the 21st of March. The Naval Court of Inquiry, convened by Fleet-Captain Roe, on the Oneida affair, had been dissolved. The body of Ensign Brown, of the Oneida, was found on the 22nd. Divers who have been down in the Oneida report that the whole of her stern is cut away. Several small articles have been brought up.

Mr. Low, the new United States Minister to China, stopped in Japan ten days before going to China. While in Yokohama he was the guest of Minister Delong, and at Yedo a state dinner was given him by the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs on the 10th, at which Minister Delong, his Secretary of the Legation, and Consul Sheppard were present. Reports are rife with regard to its political significance.

Rice riots were of frequent occurrence in all the ports of Japan. The people were in a destitute condition. Large quantities of rice were arriving from Saigon, and from 300,000 to 400,000 piculs more were reported to be on the way.

There had been more or less fighting in the districts of Sinchu, Koshiu, Kaga, and Mito, and the troubles were on the increase. The officials at Yedo had received intimation that an attack was contemplated by the rebels on that city.

An order had been issued by the Government prohibiting any but soldiers from wearing foreign clothing.

It is said that the Mikado is about returning to Kioto with his wife, who is enciente.

A native mail service was about to be established between the ports of Yedo, Hiogo, and Nagasaki.

Charges of a serious nature had been preferred against Consul Lyne and Marshal Dennison, and an investigation was progressing before Minister Delong.

JAPAN MARKETS.

YOKOHAMA, March 23.—Business is improving. Silk has been purchased to the extent of 1,100 bales at full and increasing rates. Teas, the natives hold at high prices, and consequently but few purchases have been made. About 2,500 piculs were bought during the past month, and all at extreme prices.

NAGASAKI.—Business has been very dull, but is somewhat improved. Rice commands extreme prices.

NAGASAKI.

NAGASAKI, March 15, 1870.

The London and China Express arrived here as follows:—That of 31st Dec., by the Tapanguyo (str.), on 1st inst., via Shanghai—fifty-nine days; that of 23rd Dec., by the P. and O. steamer Cadiz, on 3rd inst., via Yokohama—seventy days; that of 14th Jan., by the P. and O. steamer Cadiz, on 14th inst., via Shanghai, fifty-nine days.

Business here is extremely dull, except in teas, rice, cotton, sugar, and other local articles of trade; for these a good demand exists at very remunerative prices, which gives good employment to vessels. The demand for piece goods is very limited, and merely to supply local wants, and hence the present stagnation. The present state of things confirms to a certain extent the rumours current here a short time since—viz., that foreign manufactured goods are not allowed to be taken into the surrounding districts. From a native source I learn that at a short distance from this a person was put into prison for wearing a dress patched with a piece of camlet. If the Japanese officials were accused of tampering with foreign trade they, as a matter of course, would deny the truth of the statements, and ask for proof, more with the view of getting hold of and punishing any native who had been bold enough to give information respecting squeezes, &c., in the interior. Such punishment would not be light, I am certain, and hence is the reason we do not bring such matters to the notice of the Consul.

The 19th ult. was the anniversary of the King of Holland's birthday, the 22nd that of Washington's, but both events were only noticed by the merchant vessels of those countries exhibiting a little bunting.

The subscription list to assist the Nagasaki Amateur Dramatic Corps closed with over $600 in December last, and to reimburse the subscribing public they gave the third entertainment this season on the 23rd ult., when they sent their audience away completely satisfied with the performance. The whole of the company deserve great praise for the spirit they enter into the acting, but the gentleman whose nom de guerre is Mr. Drinkwater is the star, and improves each time he appears.

On the 6th inst. we felt two shocks of earthquake; one in the morning at two o'clock, which was rather a heavy one, while that at five in the the evening was comparatively light. The day previously, and the day on which they occurred, and, in fact, the following day, the air became very close and oppressive, which passed off after rain had fallen in large quantities.

The corvette Iho Sho Maru, lying in this harbour, has not yet been delivered over to the Prince of Hiogo; she still wears the English ensign.

Respecting the native Christians we hear but little, and even that little is very unreliable. The village of Ourakami has been the scene of the wildest revelry during the past five days; the Nagasaki Shipping List describes it as disgusting in the extreme, and says that they have been informed that they have been got up to commemorate the banishment of former residents from the village; whether this statement is correct I am unable to say, but fear that there is a great deal of truth in the rumour, as the present festivities are with full connivance and sanction of the Governor of Nagasaki. The Vice-Governor and suite left here on the 7th instant, per Oregonian steamer, for Hiogo; and, now that this gentleman has departed, the vexatious jetty question I hope will die a natural death.

Glover and Co. advertised Takasima coal free on board in this harbour. Present price is $4¼, which, at exchange 4s. 6d., is £1 0s 3d. per ton.

Several rumours are current respecting a fresh outbreak of the civil war, all of which are more or less doubtful. The rumour which seems to have the deepest root is that a body of discharged soldiers, formerly employed by Chosiu, have risen in rebellion, in order to force the Prince to restore them to their former position. The Nagasaki Express has the same version, and adds:—"As yet, no reliable information concerning this disturbance has reached us, and we refrain, therefore, from publishing any of the numerous rumours afloat, but hope to lay the true particulars of the affair before our readers in our next issue. We believe we are correct in stating that the difficulty that has arisen is not likely to be soon or easily settled, and that the Prince of Chosiu has applied to other Southern Princes for assistance, who, however, are likely very shortly to be in the same predicament themselves."

A person here, whose information is always from first-rate sources, but whose information is seldom or never correct, gives us to understand that Chosiu has applied to Satsuma for assistance and alliance to resist nearly the whole of the princes whose dominions are on the two southern islands of Japan; the list includes Hiogo, Kononu, Hizen, Chickugo, and a host of smaller fry. Of course all must be received with caution, as all rumours come from the Japanese, who in many cases know very little themselves, especially when important events are likely to occur.

We look upon the Tea season as virtually closed. A few parcels of undesirable quality still remain, and are likely to be purchased by the Chinese for shipment to Shanghai, from whence they are likely to find their way to London, not as Japan, but China Tea. In general produce nothing is doing; these articles are held for rates which foreigners are unable to pay; in fact they are considered absurd. The Chinese have bought Wax for Canton (where a local demand exists) and have paid as high as $18.50 per picul. A small lot of Gallnuts (inferior and stalky) were offered lately at $7 per picul. Camphor musters are in this place representing large stocks in the interior, but no business has taken place owing to the native ideas of value differing very much from that of European shippers.

In your issue of the 14th Jan. I see that correspondence between England and Japan, via the Pacific route, is not affected by the reduction of postage, and in order to make sure that letters posted with 16 cents stamps on them will go safely, I addressed a note to the United States Packet Agent at this port, "who informs me that he has not received any information similar to that given by you, and that he shall continue to receive and send forward all letters which bear 16 cents stamps on them," which he speaks of as the reduced rate.

In freights to London the rate is quite nominal. The Chanticleer seems undecided whether to take the berth or not, but as she must proceed to Hiogo with cargo from London, this may have something to do with it. Exchange on London, 4s. 5d. to 4s. 6d. nominal. Nebous, 427 to 430 per $100. Chanticleer arrived from London 25th Feb.

SHANGHAI.

The dates are down to the 16th inst. The outward mail of 25th Jan. (French) arrived on the 12th March. The following items are from the North China Herald of the 15th March :—

We have very little local news to record. The meeting of the Shanghai Gas Company is at last announced for Thursday next. It is said to be the intention of the directors to advise a dividend of 12 per cent., and that 12 per cent. be written off to depreciation.

The condition of the river opposite the settlement has attracted attention, and the Marine Department has been urged to take some action to prevent the growing deterioration of the channel opposite Pootung Point.

We have received a programme of the Spring Regatta of the Shanghai Yacht Club, to be held on the 2nd April. It comprises first "A Challenge Cup," open to all yachts ; second, "A House-boat Race ;" third, "A Scurry Race, for House-boats."

From Hankow we have the strange news that both the English and the U.S. Consuls, when calling on Viceroy Li, were refused admittance except by the side door, while the acting French Consul was recognised on terms of equality, and obtained entrance by the middle or large door. It is just possible that the determined aspect assumed by the French Government on two or three occasions lately had paved the way for its representative at this time. Neither the U.S. nor English Consul availed himself of Li's condescension to be visited by the side-door. A correspondent, remarking on the incident, says, "It is fair to add that the Consuls have no actual right to the central door, for they only rank as Taotais, who cannot claim this honour, and never have it yielded to them by mandarians of Li's standing. Still, the admission of the French, and rejection of the English and American Consuls, is significant enough. It may seem very trifling to your home readers, but in a country where etiquette is so punctiliously regarded, every such incident has a political value."

Dr. Porter Smith has published a brochure of some one hundred pages, recording his past five years' experience at the Hankow Medical Mission Hospital. It is in some measure a reprint of previous reports ; but in a more compact form ; and it is enriched by an introduction, in which interesting information is given regarding the status and degree of knowledge of Chinese doctors, and regarding the charitable institutions frequent with the Chinese —as bearing on their estimation of foreign hospitals.

We have Tientsin dates to the 7th March. The Shansi got inside the bar first of the northern steamer, and stored her cargo at Taku. A day later the Ying-tze-fei succeeded in forcing her way from Taku up to the settlement, through a foot thickness of ice, and arrived there on the 2nd March, much to the surprise of all, and to the disgust of shirting holders, as she caused a drop in the rate from Tls. 2.36 to Tls. 2.25 without benefiting anybody. The river is still frozen over ; sleighs are plying, and there is no appearance of the ice clearing away, so as to allow of boats being launched, for some days longer. A good number of native merchants had arrived, but they were waiting to buy until they could forward their purchases inland by the river. The weather still very cold, and freezing every night.

A Chefoo correspondent writes that the hotel at the beach now being built for Mr. Bielfeld is progressing, and promises to be a spacious house, and well adapted to secure the summer visitors a pleasant residence. The public rooms fronting the bay will afford plenty of room for large parties at the table d'hote, and even for dances when there are sufficient lady visitors to encourage such an entertainment.

A serious fire broke out in the southern suburbs of Foochow on the 21st ult., destroying 700 or 800 houses. The ruins cover several acres.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Both amusement and satisfaction have been expressed here on the intelligence being received by last mail that Mr. Burlingame had been politely bowed out of Berlin, with nothing whatever to show in return for his six weeks of negotiations there. From the first, however, it was considered probable that Prussia, which takes a very decided though quiet stand as regards the course of relations with China, would not be so ready to throw itself into the arms of the Yankee charmer. I hear on good authority that Mr. Hart has lately taken measures to wind up the "Mission" with all despatch, and the remainder of the Chinese tag-rag-and-bobtail who have been left thus far as the component parts of Mr. Burlingame's raree-show, are to be back in China by the beginning of next autumn. Various symptoms of an exhaustion of the tonnage dues' fund, from which the Mission has been paid, at the expense of the lighthouses and beacons which ought to have been built out of it, as the Treaty provides, have been manifested of late. The Harbour master at Shanghai, a very worthy American, who has held the post for some years, has been suddenly dismissed to make way for M. Viguier, a French gentleman, lately acting as Deputy Marine Superintendent ; and other changes are spoken of. The cost of the "Marine Department," lately created by Mr. Hart, is known to be excessively heavy, and will now be increased by the arrival from England of two gunboats, which are already at Canton ; whilst a third and larger vessel is expected shortly, to be employed as a yacht for the Inspector General's use. These three vessels cost the large sum of between £70,000 and £75,000. as delivered from the builder's yard in England. The two already arrived are armed and equipped as men-of-war, mounting three or four Armstrongs apiece, although they are nominally intended for light-house service! It would appear that, after paying for them and the Burlingame Mission, the lighthouse fund has become exhausted.

HONG KONG.

Dates from this port are to the 22nd March. The London mail of Jan. 28 arrived out on the 11th March. The following items are from the Overland China Mail of March 22 :—

An outrage on Chinese Christians took place at Tungkoon and Shekloong, near Canton, on the 6th inst. The Protestant chapel at Tungkoon was destoryed, and the native preacher and his wife were beaten ; there were no foreigners found. The Roman Catholic chapel was also razed to the ground. At Shekloong, whither the Christians escaped, the mob broke into and robbed the house of the Rev. A. Krolczyk. Several of the robbers were seized and taken before a mandarin, who rebuked the officers because they had acted without orders from the Governor General.

The Government Gazette publishes the text of a Bill of considerable importance, which was read a first time in the Legislative Council with closed doors. It relates to the subject of coolie emigration, and proposes to give the Governor power to make such regulations on the subject as he may think proper, under instructions from the Colonial-office. The latest instructions on the point are that emigration to foreign countries be prohibited, and the opinion prevails that such prohibition would be unfortunate, as the illegitimate portion of the trade might, with proper care, be suppressed, without averting from Hong Kong that part which is legitimate.

The Harbour-master's annual shipping returns have been published, and show an increase over last year of 137,000 tons in the foreign shipping, while there is a decrease of 113,000 tons in the junk trade, giving a balance on the side of excess of 24,000 tons. The large falling off in the number of junks is attributed to the great number of Chinese customs' stations in the vicinity of the colony, and to the activity of the revenue cruisers connected with them.

A demand for a new gas company has sprung up, and is based on the enormous disparity between the price of coals and that of the gas now supplied to the public. The present charge for gas is $4 50 per 1,000 cubic feet, while that at home is scarcely as many shillings. This state of things taken in connection with the bad quality of the light, is considered sufficient to justify the present demand.

The Criminal Sessions of the Supreme Court were held on the 18th and 19th of March. In closing the Sessions, the Chief-Justice remarked upon the lightness of the calendar, and attributed it to the increased efficiency of the executive. The result, however, is quite as likely to have arisen from the successful concealment of crime as from its absence.

Mr. N. B. Dennys, of the editorial staff of the China Mail, has left for England by the Pacific mail route.

SIAM.

—o—

BANGKOK.

The following items of intelligence are from the Bangkok Summary of the 16th March :—

The steamer Bangkok, Captain Haffender, with mails and passengers from Singapore, arrived on the 8th inst. The Bangkok made the passage to Singapore in three and a-half days, and from thence to this in a little more than four days. She made the entire trip in twelve days five and a-half hours from the time she left the bar.

As the Pramane is now looming up in all its gorgeous array, and the time draws near when the cremation ceremonies for the remains of H.M. P'rabat Somdet P'ra Paramendr Para Monkut, the late Supreme King of Siam, are to commence, it may not be without interest to our readers to describe the buildings erected and ceremonies performed on such august occasions.

In the case of the death of a king, his successor to the throne immediately begins to make arrangements for the P'ramene, which is the splendid temporary building under which the body is to sit in state several days on a throne glittering with silver, gold, and diamonds, and then and there to be committed to the flames. The building is intended to be in size and grandeur according to the estimation in which the deceased was held. Royal orders are forthwith sent to the governors of four different provinces far away to the north, in which large timber abounds, requiring each of these to furnish one of the four large logs for the centre pillars of the P'ramene. These must be of the finest timber, usually the oil tree, very straight, two hundred feet long, and proportionately large in circumference, which the writer has observed to be not less than twelve feet. There are always twelve other pillars a little smaller in size, demanded at the same time, from governors of other provinces, as also much other timber needful in the erection of the P'ramene, and the numerous other buildings connected with it.

As sacred custom will not tolerate the use of pillars that have been used on any former occasion, consequently new ones must be obtained for every new occasion of the funeral obsequies of a king. Those four large pillars are very difficult to find, and can be floated down to the capital only at seasons of the year when the rivers, where they are found, are full. They are hauled to the banks of the stream by elephants and buffaloes. The great difficulty of procuring these pillars is one main cause of the usual long delay of the funeral burning for a king.

The King of Cheangmai arrived on the 4th inst., attended by a retinue of several hundred Laos princes, lords, and people, coming in a train of more than thirty boats, making the whole journey by the river in forty-nine days. The King has informed us that he left the Mission families there in usual health, and that he is the bearer of letters from them, which have been laid away safely somewhere, but cannot yet be found. The King does not at all like the place which the Siamese Government had assigned to him, and has so resolutely objected to it that the authorities are preparing for his accommodation at Wat Chaang, where he has long been accustomed to stop when on his triannual visits to the Suzerain.

We understand that the Spanish Ambassador took his leave of his Majesty the Supreme King on the 4th inst., but that he is to postpone his departure until the fourth or fifth day of the Royal cremation.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

Dates are to the 24th March. The Borneo, the Maus, and the Waal returned on the 22nd February from an expedition to the Mentawei Islands. The purposed demonstration resulted in the burning of some small forsaken villages; the inhabitants, and amongst them the pirate leader of the band which had plundered the schooner Priamen, had fled into the interior, and could not be reached. In one of two villages burnt there were found some cordage and a Dutch flag, which had been taken from the vessel plundered and destroyed.

The official authorisation for the pulling down of the fortifications of Sourabaya has been received. It is still uncertain whether some portions of the fortifications will be allowed to continue standing.

The road from Solo to the railway station near that city, a distance of half an hour's walk or so, is so bad that a carriage with four horses needed an hour and a half to struggle through it. The transport of persons between Samarang and Solo produces 200f. per day.

People here (Batavia) rejoice in the prospect that the British Australian Telegraph Company will come into action in 1871, together with the laying of a telegraph cable from Singapore to Batavia, and of another cable from Banjowangie to Port Darwin, the North-Western corner of Australia. If all this be brought about then will people in future from all places in Netherlands India where telegraph offices are established be able to signal as well as direct to Sydney and Melbourne as to Hong Kong, Bombay and London.

The plan for the holding of an Exhibition of Works of Ancient and Modern Art here will be followed out in the building appropriated to the Botanical and Zoological Society. The opening will take place on Monday, the 8th April.

Mr. Netscher, the Resident of Riow, has been appointed Governor of the West Coast of Sumatra.

It is said that the Chinese coolies who were passengers in the Belgian ship Frederic, which was lately burnt in Batavia Roads, are to be sent to Banka.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

Dates are to the 29th March. The London mail of 17th Feb. (French) arrived out on the 22nd March. The following summary is from the Straits Times:—

The only topic of local interest during the fortnight has been the receipt, by last mail, of his Excellency's despatch, or rather the Straits Association's analysis of it. We have, however, endeavoured to reproduce it entire, with the exception of the twentieth paragraph, which, for some reason or other the Association have omitted. We will remark that it is well written, and the drift of the greater portion seems to be an attempt to justify his allusion to the possible imposition of import and export duties. His Excellency's argument, however, bears evidence of its unsoundness upon its face; his admission of the decline of the trade of the older settlements, where these imposts existed, after the establishment of Singapore as a free port, is certainly a most unfortunate illustration in favour of the advantages of a free over a trammelled trade. The Straits Association here held a meeting on Friday afternoon last, to discuss the several points raised in the despatch, but the meeting was adjourned until the 31st inst.

A case of very great importance was decided by the Chief Justice in Malacca on the 17th inst., settling the definition of the word "prescription" in the Indian Act XVI. of 1839, relative to the tenure of land in Malacca. The judgment fully explains the case, and furnishes a very lucid exposition of the custom under which settlers there had become possessed of the land in the first place. The action of the Government in the matter seems to have been taken under a misapprehension as to the facts. It wished to force the people to take out grants for the land; but as the squatters are very poor, and realise no more than a bare subsistence, the course pursued by it is about the most oppressive that could have been adopted.

The system adopted by the Colonial-office in making appointments has given rise to a great deal of dissatisfaction in all the Crown Colonies. The old saying that "no man is a prophet in his own country," would seem to be verified to the full by the Colonial system of promotion; for when an officer of ability, by local experience and attention to his duties, merits this honour, he is suddenly foisted into an office in a distant colony, to the duties of which he is an utter stranger. The necessary consequence is, that though these officers receive the reward of their merit, the public service suffers, and the people of the colonies are frequently put to serious annoyance. The Ceylon papers inform us that the post of Colonial Secretary to the Straits Settlements has been given to a Mr. Birch, of the Ceylon Civil Service. What this gentlemen's qualifications for the post may be, we are of course unaware, but if the report be true, we are sorry for it, because the office is one requiring considerable local experience, and we think an incumbent might have been found among those who, by long service in the Colony under the Indian Government, and possessing extensive acquaintance with the rulers of the surrounding native states, were aptly fitted for its duties.

The long rainy season we have experienced is now at an end, and the weather has reached the opposite extreme. An occasional shower is looked upon as a great boon.

The Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor of Penang left in the Colonial steamer Rainbow, for the Dindings, accompanied by Mr. Peel, Assistant Surveyor.

The British Steamer Chu Kiang, Captain Warden, from London the 20th January, via the Suez Canal, and Galle the 4th instant, arrived here, and sailed for Hong Kong.

The Corea, from Singapore to London, is reported ashore in Banka Straits.

CEYLON.

—o—

COLOMBO.

Dates from this port are to the 5th April, and report the arrival of the Duke of Edinburgh. The Colombo Observer says:—

Prince Alfred landed at Colombo on the evening of the 30th of March, and the constant display of the Royal standard from the flagstaffs on the ramparts and over Queen's-house shows that for the first time in history a British Prince is resident amongst us.

The weather seems as little to consult the convenience of Royalty as do the rules of the service. "The little monsoon" began showering its copious downpours a fortnight in advance of the Prince's arrival. Then there was a glimpse of "Queen's weather," which added to the pleasure and convenience of the landing ceremonial. But, the Duke once landed, Ceylon seems determined to show his Royal Highness that he is no longer in dry and arid India, but in a region where copious moisture combines with tropic heat to produce "everlasting spring."

The Prince held a levée at which there was such an assemblage of all classes and races—Europeans and descendants of the various European nations who successively ruled in Ceylon, in civil and military garbs and unaccustomed court dresses; Singhalese Modliars, in the blue coats and broad gold belts of the olden time; Kandian Headmen, with their singular pincushion coronets and crinoline-like robes; the "Budhist ascetics," in their saffron coloured robes, too great, as the priests of Budhoo, to incline their heads even to royalty; turbaned Tamils, funnel capped Moormen, Malays, &c., all flocked to do honour to the son of the common Sovereign. On the evening of April 1st the ladies of Colombo had the honour of being presented to his Royal Highness; dancing following. During these days there were state dinners at Queen's house, and drives about Colombo. On the 2nd the Prince drove to the scene of the "elephant Kraal," about thirty-two miles from Colombo, and witnessed on the 3rd a splendidly successful drive, resulting in the capture of thirty of the huge animals for which, in all ages, Ceylon has been so famous, and of which she has yielded tribute to so many lands. At Labugam the Prince is in the lower ranges of our grandly beautiful hill system, in the higher mountain forests of which he will by-and-bye, we hope, enjoy elk hunts and elephant shooting not less successful than the first elephant drive has been.

Commercial Report.

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—During the interval which has elapsed since the issue of last Circular business in imports had been dull. The demand, which was quite of a hand-to-mouth character, had run chiefly upon Cotton Yarn and Grey Shirtings; a few sales had also been effected in Turkey Reds, Velvets, and Alpacas; other Fancy Cottons, as well as Woollens, continued neglected. Prices generally showed little change; Yarns, however, must be quoted lower, but were firm at the close.

SHANGHAI.—Grey Shirtings: A very large business had been transacted in 7 lb. to 8¼ lb. goods, and until the arrival of the Shansi from the north on 12th March the demand was steadily maintained, holders succeeding in establishing an advance of 2 to 3 cents per piece on the latter weight. Sales from first hands estimated at over 200,000 pieces; stock at about 650,000 pieces. White Shirtings: The slight decline had been recovered. Enquiry steady, and holders very firm for quotations; sales estimated at 25,000 pieces; stocks, 122,000 pieces. T-Cloths: No change in prices, although nearly 100,000 pieces had changed hands. The market continued irregular, and the desire to realise seemed in no degree abating. Drills: Sales of American fabrics at Tls. 3.80 per piece, for L in a diamond D below, but inquiry limited. Of English some 1,200 pieces found buyers at former rates; resales of Dutch cargo at a decline on last quotations. Sheetings and Jeans: Not inquired for, prices nominal. Fancy Cotton Goods: Fair demand for almost every description, and slightly better rates had in some instances been obtained. Woollens: The market very freely supplied, and woollen goods generally declined in value. Figured Orleans, Crape Lustres and some Long Ells had been passed off against Silk, and resold by the silkmen for cash at reduced prices. Metals: A large business in Nail Rod Iron, Settlements 35,000 bundles, principally of good assortments, at Tls. 2.30 per picul. One small invoice of lesser sizes taken at Tls. 2.40 per picul. Prices for assortments unchanged. Lead: No sales could be effected unless at a considerable decline; a few sales of LB to speculators at Tls. 5.05 to 5.07. Coals: Business was at a standstill; Cardiff quoted Tls. 6.55 with small inquiry; English without arrivals or demand. American: Sales from godown at Tls. 9.25, with intermittent demand. Quotations (duty paid):—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.3 to 2.0.6; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2.2.6 to 2.3.1; 9 to 9.12 lbs., Tls. 2.5.5 to 3.1.5. White Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2 to 3.0. T-Cloths, 6 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.4.5 to 1.7.2; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.5 to 1.8.5; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls 2.0.5 to 2.1.6; XX Tls. 2.4.0; American Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.7 to 3.8.8; Jeans, 30 yards., Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.8.5; Sheetings, 40 yards., Tls. 3.4.5 to 3.8.5; English Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.5.5 to 3.6.5; Dutch, 40 yards, Tls. 3.4.0 to 3.4.7; Gentian Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 3.0 to 3.1.0; Chintz, Tls. 1.5.0 to 1.9.0; Turkey Reds, 24 yards, Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.8.0. Camlets, SS, per piece, Tls. 11.0 to 12.1.0; SSS, Tls. 10.0 to 10.5.0; Spanish Stripes, per yard, Tls. 0.5.0 to 0.5.5; Cloth, Tls. 0.9.0 to 1.5.0; Long Ells, Scarlet, per piece, Tls. 6.0.5 to 6.1.0; Assorted, Tls. 5.8.0 to 6.0.

HANKOW.—Grey Shirtings: Large business at a decline of 2 to 3 candareens per piece, established immediately after the departure of last mail, owing to heavy arrivals and holders pressing sales; for heavy makes no inquiry. Quotations—Tls. 2.05 to 2.07 for 7 lbs., Tls. 2.25 to 2.28 for 8¼ lbs., and Tls., 2.60 to 3.15 for 9 to 10 lbs. White Shirtings: Value of 56 reed advanced 2 candareens per piece; other counts firm. T-Cloths: Large supplies; prices rather weaker; demand, which had run chiefly on best makes of 7 lbs., and 8 lbs. goods freely met at quotations. Drills: Only a few forced sales at low rates. Good Demand for Dyed Damasks, Spots, and Brocades. Chintzes are fairly saleable. Camlets: Good assortments placed at previous quotations. Lastings: Unchanged. Long Ells: Very dull; CPH, Scarlet sold at Tls. 6.15 per piece; assortments rather easier. China Crapes: Retail sales only reported. Metals—Lead: No change. Quicksilver: A very small quantity placed, owing to firmness of holders. Quotations: White Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.6.5; T-Cloths, 6 to 6½ lbs., Tls. 1.5.0 to 1.6.5; 7 lb., Tls. 1.7.0 to 1.8.5; 8 to 8¼ lbs., Tls. 2.0.8 to 2.1.5; Drills, American, Tls. 3.7.0 to 3.8.0; English, Tls. 3.4.0 to 3.6.5; Spanish Stripes, per yard, Tls. 0.5.4 to 0.5.8.; Camlets, English, S, per piece, Tls. 12.7.0 to 13.2.0; S.S., Tls. 11.6.0 to 12.1.0; Lastings, Tls. 10.1.5 to 11.2.5; Long Ells, H.H., Tls. 6.0.5 to 6.1.5.

FOOCHOW.—The following transactions are reported:—1,950 pieces 8½lbs. Grey Shirtings, at $3.05 per piece; 3,800 pieces 7lbs. T-Cloths, at $2.40 to 2.62½ per piece; 800 piculs Lead, at $7.25 to 7.50 per picul.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated 21st March:—Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16-24 are in active request owing to the smallness of stock; holders asking $1 per bale over last quotations. Nos. 28-32 are in little demand at a slight advance. Nos. 38-42 are out of stock. Piece Goods: The firmness of the market last advised continues, and a good business has been transacted during the interval. A better feeling is noticeable in 7 lb. Grey Shirtings, the stock of which is very light, and a few sales have been made "to arrive" at an advance of 5 cents per piece. During the past few days 8.4 lb. goods have been in more request; holders are firm in consequence of favourable advices received from the northern ports, and of the smallness of stock, $2.90 per piece having been refused. 10 lb. goods are also in better request at a slight advance. Some business has been done in White Shirtings, at unchanged values, market closing firm. A good business has been transacted in 6 lb. T-Cloths at advanced rates, the stock being now very much reduced; 7 lb. and 8 lb. remained as previously advised. In Drills no change can be noted, the market for all descriptions being very dull. Turkey Red Shirtings, in consequence of increased heavy stocks, with no demand, have declined 5 cents. Woollens: There has been no business worthy of notice in these goods during the fortnight. Lastings remain as last advised. Metals: A moderate business has been done during the interval, and prices remain unchanged. Coal: Arrivals have been 5,965 tons Cardiff, the greater portion of which comes to consumers. Two cargoes of 734 and 750 tons Cardiff have been sold during the fortnight at $7.60 and 7.75 per ton. Ginseng: The market has been very quiet during the fortnight. A sale of 25 casks and 30 barrels, on terms which have not transpired, being the only transaction reported. Quotations:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16 to 24, per bale, $140.0 to 145.0; 28 to 32, $143.0 to 148.0; 38 to 42, $167.50 to 175.0; Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, $2.55 to 2.60; 8.4 lbs., $2.85 to 2.90; 9.12 to 10 lbs., $3.80 to 4.0; White Shirtings, $2.45 to 3.10; fine, $3.80 to 6.0; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.95 to 2.10; 7 lbs., $2.10 to 2.50; 8 to 8.4 oz., $2.65 to 2.80; Turkey Red Shirtings, 3 lbs., $2.75 to 2.80; American Drills, $4.90 to 5.0; English and Dutch, $4.30 to 4.55.

BATAVIA.—Cambrics, 15/16s neglected at f.4.90 to f.5; medium to ordinary, no inquiry. Quotations, f.4.75 to f.4.70 per piece nominal. No 24s saleable at f.3⅛ to f.3.25 per piece cash for medium. Shirtings: White 40 yards, 36 inch 64 reed taken at f.8.50 per piece cash, 40/41 inch at f.9 to f.9.50 and 45 inch at f.10.50 to f.10.75 credit, for the latter the demand was insignificant. Grey 38½ yards: 39 inch 7 lbs., would find buyers at f.7⅞ to f.7.50 per piece, but importers demanded higher prices. 8¼ lbs., f.8⅛ per piece short, and f.8⅜ to f.8.50 per piece, long credit. Maddapolams, 24 yards: Dutch, White 33/34 inch, f.5.40 to f.5.60; 40/41 inch, f.6.20 to f.6.35. Grey, 34/35 inch, f.5.25 to f.5.35; 43/44 inch, f.6⅛ to f.6.25 per piece. English Grey, 32 inch, 3 lbs., f.3.10 to f.3⅛. White, 30 inch, f.3.75 Prints: 9s. 8d. per 24 yards, only moderate request. Pink Pads asked for at f.7.50 to f.7.75. Green Grounds in ample supply, and weak at f.7.25 to f.7.50 per piece. Steam f.4.75 to f.5 per piece. Drills: Dutch worth f.9 to f.9⅜, and English proportionate prices; Stocks not excessive. Twist: 40s. scarce and inquired for at f.430 to f.435 per bale cash; coarser counts comparatively less sought after, 30s f.380 to f.390, 24s f.345 to f.350, and 20s f.335 to f.340 per bale credit.

SINGAPORE.—We extract the following from Messrs. Boustead and Co.'s report:—39-inch Grey Shirtings: 8¼ lbs. continued in demand, although arrivals caused a temporary weakness in price. Considerable sales at $3 to 3.05. 7 lbs. in less request, and lower; 6 lbs. dull; quotations unaltered. 45-inch continued very quiet. Grey T-Cloths: Light weights quiet, sales of 4¼ lbs. at $1.45 to 1.50; 5 lbs., $1.55 to 1.60. 6 lbs. in limited supply, and worth $1.85 to 1.90, according to quality; 7 lbs. without change. Grey Maddapollams: 3 lbs. in rather better inquiry, sales at $21¾ to 22 per corge. Long Cloths in no demand. Quotations nominal. White Shirtings: Common still saleable at fair rates; Medium and Fine no change. White Spots and Brocades in good demand. White Cambrics: No. 24 saleable at $20 to 20¼ per corge; finer descriptions in very small inquiry. 15's and 16's: Small sales at $31⅞ to 32¼; stocks reduced, holders firmer. White Maddapollams saleable to a small extent at $21 to 22 per corge. Camlets and Scarlet Long Ells dull. Spainsh Stripes in no inquiry. Lastings, Assorted, in rather more inquiry, but at weaker rates. Scarlet Bombazetts difficult to place. Brocade Lustres unsaleable, Grey Yarn: 18's to 24's in rather better inquiry, and worth about $122½ to 125. 30's wanted, at $140; 40's sold at $147½ to 150. Iron quiet, but firm. Large-sized Flat Bar has been placed at $2.45 to 2.55 per picul; Round and Square, at $2.80 to 2.35; Swedish, at $3.35; Hoop, at $3.10. Lead in little or no request; LB, "to arrive," offered at $6.15.

PENANG.—Grey Shirtings: Sales reported of 6lbs. at $44, 7 lbs. at $52 to 53, 8¼ lbs. at $61½ to 62 per corge; 45-inch, no business. Long Cloths, no supplies had come forward. Madapollams quiet; unimportant sales of 2¾ lbs. at $21½ per corge. There had been moderately fair sales of Grey T-Cloths at about former prices; 7 lbs. at $43½ and 44, 6 lbs. at $38¼ to 38¾, 5 lbs. at $32½ and 33 per corge. White Shirtings: finer qualities continued very dull, only small quantities disposed of at $84 and 85 per corge; medium taken at $63 to 65, stocks of low qualities are almost nil, and are in request. Dyed goods of all kinds very dull. Yarn had been a very little brisker. Sales of Grey Mule, No. 40, at $146 to 148; No. 30 at $138 and 137 per bale. Turkey Red, No. 44 (special No.) $144 per bale. Imperial Red, No. 40, $76 to 80; Green $79 to 81 per bale. Iron: The sales of Hoop at $2¼, of Nailrod at $2.47½ to 2.65 per picul. In other Metals no business.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The receipt of favourable advices from San Francisco had caused considerable activity in the market, but the scantiness of supplies and smallness of available stocks had prevented business being done to any extent. Settlements consisted of all grades, and amounted to about 2,500 piculs; these had been at gradually advancing rates, and prices closed at from $2 to $4 higher than those quoted. The Cœur de Lion for New York and Alphonsine for Boston were to sail in a few days. The Brave, 885 tons (chartered), and Charles C. Leary, 651 tons, were loading for New York. Quotations:—Common, $24 to $26 per picul, nominal; good common, $27 to $29; medium, $31 to $35; good medium, $36 to $39; fine, $40 to 42; finest, $43 to $46; choice, $47 to $50.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Only one purchase reported since the departure of last mail. The stock consisted of 2,500 packages country packed, and about 4,500 packages locally packed leaf, the bulk of the latter being of a very foul and noxious description, "doctored" up and sundried in the country round about Shanghai. Settlements for the fortnight, 705 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,742 chests; stock, 8 chops, or 7,000 packages. Green: The demand noticed in our last continued until the 10th March, but since that date there had been nothing doing, in consequence of there being no available tonnage Prices had been fully supported, and in some cases a slight advance had been paid. Purchases for the most part consisted of inferior and common grades, for which Tls. 22 to 30 had been paid. A few chops of medium Moyunes taken at Tls. 35 to 39. Settlements for the fortnight, 12,145 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,921; stock, 33 chops, or 10,880 half-chests.

CANTON.—The moderate business had consisted principally of a few small parcels of Scented Tea of good common to medium quality, which had been previously held for higher rates, but the near approach of the new season, and the new crop appears to have had the effect of inducing the owners to accept prices showing a slight reduction on last quotations. A small settlement of Canton-packed Congou reported for shipment to India. The Clymene, on the berth for London, would take all the Tea waiting shipment, and thus complete the season's export. Canton settlements from 3rd to 17th March, 1870:—Country Congous, nil; Canton District Congous, 300 half-chests, at Tls. 15; Scented Orange Pekoe,

Digitized by Google

2,350 boxes, at Tls. 18 to 22; Scented Caper, 4,700 boxes, at Tls. 13½ to 26; Canton Greens, Gunpowder, 600 boxes, at Tls. 15 to 21; Young Hyson and Country Greens, nil.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had continued active, and prices had further advanced. The chief inquiry had been for Oshus of all sorts, and for good medium hanks; the latter were quoted much dearer. Settlements estimated at 900 bales:—Hank sorts, 450 bales; Oshu, 280; other sorts, 170; settlements to date, 10,445 bales; against 13,550 in 1868-9, and 8,500 in 1867-8. The quotations were:—Mybash and Sinchu Hanks: Extra, 36s. 6d.; Best, 34s. 2d. to 35s. 9d.; Medium, 31s. 11d. to 33s. 10d.; Inferior, 28s. 1d. to 31s. 2d. Oshu: Extra, 36s. 10d. to 38s. 4d.; Best, 33s. 10d. to 35s. 9d.; Medium, 31s. 2d. to 33s.; Inferior, 27s. 4d. to 28s. 10d. Koshu: Best, 28s. 1d. to 30s., nominal; Medium, 26s. 2d. to 27s. 9d., do.; Inferior, 23s. 7d. to 25s. 10d., do. Sodai: Best, 30s. to 31s. 11d., nominal; Medium, 28s. 1d. to 29s. 8d. Echesen: Best, 28s. 1d. to 30s.; Medium, 26s. 2d. to 28s. 1d.; Inferior, 23s. 7d. to 25s. 6d. Mashta: Best, 28s. 1d., nominal, SHANGHAI.—The following is from Messrs. C. J. Skeggs and Co.'s Circular:—The favourable advices received both by letter and telegram have caused a large business considering the period of the year, and settlements are estimated at about 1,250 bales. Prices have again advanced to the extent of from Tls. 5 to 10 all round, except for Chincum sorts, which have been in comparatively large supply. Tsatlees and Kahings are, on the other hand, very scarce, so that holders are enabled to command extreme prices. Foo-fong-sing and Choopings chop Thirds have been taken at Tls. 597½, with a portion of 1, 2 and 3s. only, and Red Peacocks have been placed at Tls. 510. In Hainins, No. 2 Fatmow has fetched Tls. 500, and a considerable quantity of Re-reeled Silks have also found buyers, the latter however being principally for barter transactions. Arrivals from the country have nearly kept pace with the settlements, and although appearances are to the contrary, it is still asserted that the total export will not much exceed 40,000 bales.

JAVA AND STRAITS PRODUCE.

BATAVIA.—Arrack: f.80 to f.82,50 per leaguer; nominal. Cloves: f.25 per picul; dull. Coffee—Java: None in the market. Cubebs: f.14.50 to f.16 per picul; crop finished. Gutta Percha: f.60 to f.150 per picul; small supplies. Gum Dammar: f.41 per picul; nominal. Hides—Cow, f.35 to f.45; Buffalo, f.25 to f.29 per pound, according to quality. India Rubber: f.95 to f.105 per picul; scarce. Indigo: Sales at Samarang, f.5.25 to f.5.30 per lb. for first quality. Mace: f.150 to f.175 per picul; scarce. Nutmegs: f.90 to f.115 per picul—sales according to quality. Pepper—Black: f.18.25 to f.19 per picul sales White; no stocks. Rice: first quality, f.160 to f.170 per coyang, dull; second ditto, f.130 to to f. 150 per coyang, dull; cargo, f.100 to f.110 per coyang, none in the market. Rattans: Borneo, f.11 to f.13 per picul, none; and Padang, f.8 to f.9.25 per picul, sales. Sapan Wood: Manila in bond, f.4 to f.4.50; Java, f.2.50 to f.3 per picul, sales. Government sale on 12th March of 3,260 piculs; Bima, by auction, averaged f 3.60 per picul. Sugar; nominal. Tin: Billiton—An auction of 5,000 piculs, advertised for 6th April.

SINGAPORE.—A fair business has been done in produce during the fortnight. Gambier had been taken up more freely, about 1,250 tons engaged at $3.25 to 3.20; but the market closed weak and dealers would sell under the latter quotation. In Black Pepper supplies came forward very slowly; the price had advanced to $8 to 8.10 per picul, at which several purchases had been made. White Pepper in better supply, prices declined from $11.90 to 11.50; fair business done. Pearl Sago quieter. Sago flour: Considerable purchases, prices steady. Tapioca purchased more freely, and at a slight advance. In Hides more had been doing. No purchases of Coffee reported. Tin firmer, about 4,000 piculs purchased, chiefly for America; $29 to 29¼ paid for best Malacca.

PENANG.—The Produce Market had been barely supplied during the fortnight with the principal articles of Export, but some business had been done by way of contract for future delivery, and prices all round were firmer than last advised. Tin had not been plentiful, and arrivals met a good demand; prices opened at $27½ per picul, advancing to $28, and latterly to 28½ per picul. Black Pepper had also advanced in price, and arrivals from the West Coast had been taken at $8.05, purchases to arrive at $7.80 to 7.95 per picul. 500 piculs from Acheen brought $8.05, and about 400 piculs from Trang at $7.92 per picul. White Pepper in restricted supply; arrivals scarce, and taken at $11 and $11½ per picul. Fish Maws very scarce; one small lot of whole taken at $73½ per picul. India Rubber scarce and advanced to $39 to $40 per picul. Mace: No. 1 picked, in demand at $90 to $95 per picul. Nutmegs: One purchase of 110 nuts per lb., at $52. Sugar: Penang continued in good demand, maintaining its price.

SHIPPING REPORTS.

HONG KONG.

The British ship Belted Will reports discharging the pilot off Plymouth on the 27th Nov., at eleven A.M., and experienced a series of westerly gales before clear of soundings; passed West of Madeira, and carried the N.E. trades so far as lat. 6 N., then light southerly winds, and variable winds from the westward; crossed the line, in long. 27 W., on the 20th Dec.; found the S.E. true and moderate; passed close to Martin Vas on the 26th, in sight of Trinidad, the trades veering to the north and east as the tropic was passed; thence very variable winds until the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope was, on the 14th Jan., in lat. 43 S.; passed the meridian of St. Paul's on the 28th Jan., after having experienced a large proportion of contrary winds from the eastward; enjoyed steady S.E. trades and very pleasant weather until nearing the Straits of Java, when light variable winds prevailed for five days. Made Java Head and Anjer on the 13th of Feb., thence by Gaspar Straits, which was left on the 17th; passed the N. Danger on the 4th March, and the Macclesfield Bank on the 9th, finding from the Natunas a strong monsoon and heavy sea; afterwards moderate to Hong Kong; passage from Plymouth, 102 days; spoke, on the 17th Feb., the British ship Sarah Nicholson, from Shanghai to New York. Off the N. Danger, spoke the French barque Tycoon, from Bangkok, bound northward.

The British ship Taitsing reports, experienced strong westerly winds after leaving the Isle of Wight; crossed the Equator in long. 25 W. on the 15th of December, sighted Trinidad on the 23rd, enjoyed moderate S.E. trades; passed the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope on the 7th Jan., in lat. 42 S.; experienced moderate weather running down the eastward; sighted Dirk Hartag's Island on the 31st, entered Ombay on the 7th Feb, cleared Dampier's Strait on the 22nd, had light baffling winds until in the parallel of the Pellew Group, then picked strong N.E. winds, which carried the ship by the Ballingtang Channel to Hong Kong in nine days; 104 days from the Isle of Wight.

THE BRINDISI MAIL SERVICE.

A petition to the Postmaster-General has been drawn up and signed by several influential bankers and merchants, in the India and China trade, praying that steps may be taken for permanently adopting Brindisi, in lieu of Marseilles, the mails by that route having now for several months, with few exceptions, been received two days in advance, while if the French railway service were improved the saving would be even greater. The signatures include the Oriental, Chartered Mercantile, Chartered and London Joint-Stock Banks, Rothschilds, Hambro, Crawford, Colvin, and Co., Henry Schroder and Co., Fruhling and Goschen, J. S. Morgan and Co., Forbes and Co., Brown, Shipley, and Co., and Fred. Huth and Co.

A NEW LIGHT VESSEL FOR CHINA.—The Tungsha, a fine new Light vessel for the Customs in China, will sail for her destination in a few days, from the Thames, where she has been built at Messrs. Dudgeon's yard. We believe she is the first built for that country according to the Trinity-house rules. Her dimensions are—length, 103 feet; beam, 21 feet; depth of hold, 10 feet 3 inches; built of oak and teak, and copper fastened throughout. This vessel has been built with all the newest improvements applicable to Light ships, and fitted in the most convenient manner. Revolving light of great power. Sea-water distilling apparatus, an important provision in event of communication with the shore being cut off at any time. A very complete fog apparatus, consisting of four large brass horns on a pedestal, blown by the steam from a separate boiler at high pressure. She is rigged as a barque at present, for the purpose of sailing out, and has a smart appearance, but when on her station will have only her mainmast standing as the lantern mast.

THE Calcutta correspondent of The Times tells us that Russia has taken her "first step backward from the Oxus." Samarcand has been restored to the King of Bokhara. The contraction of their advanced line, remarks the correspondent, will prove as damaging to Russian prestige in India and Central Asia as it is favourable to that of England, which has been increasing ever since the Umballah meeting.

MR. HENRY GEORGE KENNEDY, B.A., formerly of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and now second assistant at H.B.M.'s Consulate General, Siam, was called to the Bar by the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn on the 30th April.

The Donegal, 81, screw, Captain W. N. W. Hewett, V.C., is reported to have left Simon's Bay for China on the 11th ult.

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

THE GLENDUROR.

This was a cause of salvage on behalf of Jarvis Arnold and others, boatmen of Kingsdown.

The Glenduror, an iron vessel, laden with a general cargo, from Batavia for Rotterdam, on the 7th of February last arrived in the Downs and anchored, and remained at anchor until the evening of he 12th, at which time the wind was blowing a gale. About 8.30 P.M. the starboard cable parted at the windlass. The port bower anchor was then let go, but the cable soon afterwards parted, and, as the vessel was close in shore, it was found to be impossible to weather the South Foreland, and her master, by the advice of the pilot, ran her on to the beach close to the life-boat station at Kingsdown. After great difficulty, in consequence of the state of the wind and the sea, the Kingsdown lifeboat was launched, and succeeded in rescuing the master's wife and child and the whole of the crew, which consisted of twenty-seven persons. A portion of the vessel's cargo was subsequently discharged, and on the 19th the vessel was got off and taken into a place of safety. The value of the vessel, cargo, and freight was about £50,000. The defendants had paid the sum of £500 into court, and prayed the judges to pronounce for this sum as being sufficient remuneration for the plaintiffs' services.

His Lordship (Sir R. J. Phillimore) awarded the sum of £1,000 and costs.

On the 26th ult. Mr. Albert Hodges, navigating sub-lieutenant of the Rodney, while walking the main deck aft, was observed to stagger and fall on the deck. He was carried below in an insensible condition, and died about a quarter of an hour afterwards. The medical officers of the Rodney had just left the vessel, and assistance was summoned from the Buzzard, lying alongside. Mr. Martin, assistant-surgeon of that ship, attended immediately, and his opinion, and also that of Staff-Surgeon G. B. Hill, of the Rodney, was that death resulted from disease of the heart. This was the verdict recorded by the jury at an inquest held on the body on board the Rodney.

ADMIRAL THE HON. SIR HENRY KEPPEL was entertained at dinner, at the George Hotel Portsmouth, on Thursday evening, by his naval friends and officers who had served under his command. The chief toast of the evening was "Our Guest." The gallant admiral alluded with extreme regret to the absence of his old friend Sir James Elphinstone, and mentioned that he had once contested the borough of Portsmouth with him, but "after spending £5,000 he went home at the bottom of the poll a wiser but a poorer man.

A STRANGE incident has taken place in the Indian Ocean. The steamer Rocket, en route for China, via the Suez Canal, had left Aden, and was proceeding towards Galle. Two small native craft, called "dhows," approached her, and the captain, thinking they were pirates, fired upon and killed several of the crew. The "dhows," however, were peaceful craft laden with merchandise, and being short of water had merely approached the Rocket to ask for some. Upon arriving at Muscat, whither they were bound, an account of the occurrence was laid before the British Consul.

A PRESENT for the Prince of Wales in the shape of a large joss or idol has been sent home from China by Admiral Keppel, and has arrived at Sandringham. The figue weighs about 30 cwt., being made of metal. It is not of great height, but of massive proportions. The ornamentation is elaborate, and the whole details are distinguished by the painstaking minuteness which generally characterises Chinese workmanship.

PRESENT FOR THE PRINCE OF WALES.—A large joss or idol has been sent home from China by Admiral Keppel, as a present for his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and has arrived at Sandringham. The figure weighs about 30 cwt., being made of metal. It is not of great height, but of massive proportions. The ornamentation is elaborate, and the whole details of the figure are distinguished by the painstaking minuteness which generally characterises Chinese workmanship.

THE following is from the Athenæum:—"Mr. N. B. Dennys, late editor of the Hong Kong China Mail, has returned to England. Mr. Dennys, who has compiled various works relating to China, was the proprietor and editor of a monthly publication entitled Notes and Queries on China and Japan, which was ably supported by the Sinologues and literary men of the East."

The Science and Art Department of the South Kensington Museum, according to the Silk Supply Journal, has placed at the disposal of the Silk Supply Association a room for the purpose of rearing silkworms during the months of May and June. The association being possessed of some rare "grain," expect thus to be enabled to demonstrate the practicability of silk production in this country.

Captain Lewis J. Moore, who was appointed in November last to the Barrosa, one of the corvettes forming the flying squadron, and which is to be detached on its arrival in Japan for service on the China station, has arrived at Yokohama, and awaits the arrival of Admiral Hornby's squadron.

The Journal of the Society of Arts (April 15) contains a full report of the recent conference on "The Through Route to India," of which we gave some account at the time. The paper read by Mr. Hyde Clarke, advocating a direct line of railway from Europe to India, is full of interest.

The United Service Gazette states that Captain John E. Commerell, C.B., V.C., (1859), will relieve Commodore William M. Dowell, C.B., in command of the Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa squadron in September next.

Commander L. C. Keppel, recently promoted from the command of Her Majesty's gunboat Grasshopper, on the China station, and who it it will be remembered did considerable service in chasing pirates in the China Seas, has arrived in England.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, April 21.

Public business is brought to a temporary standstill by the intervention of the Easter holidays, which give the members of the Reichstag an opportunity of returning for a short period to their families and their constituents. Count Bismark has been, ill but has so far recovered that he was able to make his usual daily reports on the current affairs of his department to the King. On Maundy Thursday he left Berlin, accompanied by the countess and their daughter, for his country seat at Varzin, where he is now passing the Easter week, after which he will return to Berlin immediately, as his presence will be much needed on account of the opening of the Zollverein Parliament, which is convened to meet immediately after Easter, and for other important reasons. It is stated that the Parliament will be opened by the King in person. A new electoral law is now passing through the Reichstag, the principal feature of which is a better distribution of the electoral districts, there being now 297 such in the North-German Confederation. It is understood that no objection will be offered to the Bill by the Federal Council; but they will most likely make difficulties about the proposed alteration in the tariff, especially increasing the duty on coffee of all growths and descriptions from its present rate of five dollars per centner to six dollars, though they are in favour of the reduction on the duty on iron from five to three groschens per centner. The only other proposed alteration of any importance is the abolition of the last surviving relic of the benighted period of export duties, which have happily melted away before the rays of enlightenment and a more liberal policy—the export duty on rags, which have always been considered such a precious treasure that they would not allow them to go out of the country except on payment of three dollars per cwt., which of course amounted to a prohibition. Negotiations have been going on for some time between the Government and the Liberal party in the Reichstag to try and effect a compromise anent the new Criminal Code, more especially with reference to the vexed question of capital punishment, which it will be remembered was expunged altogether by a large majority of the North-German Parliament on the second reading of the Bill. It is stated that the Government is not disinclined to make a concession on the subject, and limit the punishment of death to cases of murder, but dispense with it for high treason.

The Berlin Vossische Zeitung a few days ago published in large type the following article on the Chinese Embassy, which has the appearance of being a semi-official communication, and is generally considered as such:—"So many conflicting accounts have been put in circulation about the Chinese Embassy that has been for several months travelling through Europe in all directions, that it may be well to give the public some information on the subject derived from sources of undoubted authority. It is well known that commercial treaties have been concluded between China and several foreign States, the interpretation of which has given rise to misunderstandings and disputes, so that it has become an object of great importance for China to place them all, if possible, on a footing of equality in an international point of view. For this purpose the Embassy was fitted out and furnished with credentials for the following treaty Powers: the United States, Great Britain, France, Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands, Prussia and the North German Confederation, Russia, Belgium, Spain, and Italy. In addition to this the Embassy was commissioned to negotiate a treaty with the United States in regard to the rights and nationality of the numerous Chinese who have emigrated to California and other parts of the Union. And, finally, a part of the instructions given to the Embassy was, to come to an amicable understanding with Russia on the subject of some dispute between them about their frontiers. As we are now informed on good authority, the Embassy has been very successful respecting the first part of its duties, at least in those countries that it has visited; also that part relating to the position of the Chinese in North America has been satisfactorily arranged by the skilful diplomacy of Mr. Anson Burlingame, the lately deceased head of the Embassy. On the other hand it appears that the negotiations with Russia concerning the rectification of the frontiers have not led to any favourable result. Mr. Brown, the present chief of the Embassy, has again returned to St. Petersburg, but, as he himself confesses, with very little hopes of success. The difficulties that stood in the way were signally apparent in Mr. Burlingame's time; and though Mr. Brown has given frequent proofs of his ability and talent as a diplomatic negotiator, it will be very difficult for him to succeed in the execution of that part of his instructions."

When the estimates for the German Consular service were under discussion in the Federal Council the plenipotentiary for Hamburg proposed the appointment of a paid Consul at Bangkok. The President replied that it would not be possible to include it in the present Budget, as it required the production of much information on the subject, which could not be obtained in time, but promised that the proposal should not be lost sight of.

A sad scandal has been discovered at a town called Bochum, in Westphalia, where it appears that a whole family of the name of Dieckhoff have for a long time been making a living by obtaining certificates from military surgeons dispensing with the services of conscripts, under the plea of ill health and other hindrances. The army surgeons thus compromised, of whom there are said to be no less than twenty-nine, are still under prosecution, but the trial of the Dieckhoffs has just been finished, they being all found guilty of the charge preferred, and sentenced to imprisonment for three years, fines of $300, and loss of their civil rights for five years.

The Crown Prince of Prussia is suffering from an incipient liver complaint, which, though it has not yet reached such a stage as to be called dangerous, is enough to cause the Royal family some uneasiness, and therefore at the earnest recommendation of the medical men, he is to take a course of the waters at Carlsbad, where a furnished house has been taken for his accommodation, and where he will make a lengthened residence. According to the latest arrangements, he was to leave Berlin to-day. It is said that the germs of the malady became first apparent on his return from his late journey to Jerusalem and the Suez Canal.

The Danish Minister for Foreign Affairs gives notice that the Consulate of Batavia is vacant, and invites those who wish to compete for the appointment to send in their applications (accompanied by testimonials) by the 1st of September next.

COMMERCIAL.

Business has been much interrupted by the Easter holidays, and in most articles there is no alteration in values. The sales of Tea included 98 chests Kaisow Congou and 150/4 Moning do. A cargo consisting of 1527/4 and 3826/8 chests of Congou, expected from Foochow, have been sold at secret prices for Holland. Rice continues to move off in moderate quantities, and 12,000 bags of Arracan cargo Rice have been sold by the importers at full prices. Drugs: 100 baskets of China Root, ex Adler, have changed hands by private contract; and at public sale 464 oags of Galangal Root were offered, but only 200 found purchasers at from 8 to 8⅜ marks banco. Of the Star Anis per Cecelia, 100 chests have been taken. 435 chests Camphor and 60 chests oil of Cassia, just to hand per River Eden, were previously sold for delivery on arrival. Cassia Lignia is again in favour, and full prices are easily obtained; the 5,000 chests just arrived per River Eden, and the 2,000 do. per Alice, are warehoused, and will be kept out of the market for the present. Pepper in good request; 600 bags Singapore, indirectly imported, are already placed, and the demand continues. Of Spelter only one sale is reported, 2,500 centners for spring delivery, at 12⅞ marks banco per centner.

RUSSIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 19.

The Russian Invalid, which had been discontinued for some time, but was resuscitated at the beginning of this year, contains a long report from Taschkend of the military operations of Governor-General Kaufmann, who last autumn advanced to Chodschent and the province of Sariarshant, where he was met by an emissary of the Emir of Bokhara, who brought intelligence of the victories gained by that potentate, and the request that the Russian troops would cover the rear of the Emir, which, however, was not granted. The son of the Emir, who had revolted against his father, was beaten and taken prisoner. Another vassal of the Chan, Sary-Chan, styled Beg of Kuliab, had endeavoured to assert his independence, and applied to the Russian General, Abramow, for assistance and support, which was refused him. He succeeded, however, with the means at his command in taking possession of Ghishar and Shirabat, and even occupying the mountainous country of Koratein; but the Chan of Chokand came to the relief of the Emir, and the Kuliab troops were dispersed and driven out of the country. General Kaufmann is displaying great zeal and activity in the employment of several special missions, composed of scientific officers, to the newly-conquered provinces of Central Asia, which will no doubt add greatly to the very imperfect knowledge we possess of the geography of those distant and almost inaccessible regions.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, April 22.

The Easter week has, of course brought dulness upon our politics, and the only question agitated has been whether a Ministerial crisis is approaching. Both the Liberal papers, which set rumours in circulation of impending Ministerial changes, seem now to be frightened by their hardiesse in attacking some of the members of the Cabinet. However the event may turn out, it is certain that several local Liberal papers express a good deal of discontent at the present constitution, and it is fervently hoped that at any rate the Ministers of Justice and War will resign. Het Noorden maintains that it will be impossible for the Minister of the Colonial Department to retain his portfolio unless he recalls Mr. Myer, and replaces him with a Liberal Governor-General; and at the same time alters his Sugar Bill in accordance with Liberal principles.

The rumours respecting a forthcoming marriage between the Prince of Orange and Princess Louise of England seem to be canards. I hear that there have not been any negotiations with such an object.

The Conservative papers are endeavouring to induce the Cabinet to appoint Mr. Sypesteyn, the very niosy M.P., Governor in the West Indies, but I do not think that their efforts will meet with success.

I regret having to record the death of our eminent painter, Mr. Andreas Schelfhout, who died at the Hague, at the age of eighty-three years.

Mr. G. A. Fokker, M.P. for Middelburg, will resign his seat at the close of the present session.

The King has granted permission to Mr. H. J. C. Hoogeveen, Resident at Batavia, to accept the Spanish Order of Charles III.

COMMERCIAL.

COFFEE.—In waiting for the result of the Trading Company's auctions, held to-day, buyers have shown some reluctance to operate. Only the following parcels have changed hands: 1,373 bags Java, ex Princes Amalia; 686 bags Bali, ex County of Forfar; 4,000 bags Java, ex Princes Amalia and Peri.

RAW SUGAR.—The market became animated when the fact was known that the duties in England were to be diminished 50 per cent., and holders even declined to operate at an advance of f.1; but buyers holding off, transactions can easily be effected at last auction's prices.

RICE.—25,500 bags Saigon, ex Montrose, sold at f.4 to f.4⅛; and 220 bags Carga, ex Eurydice, at prices that did not transpire.

TOBACCO.—Java: 100 bales, A. S. Malang, and 40 bales M, changed hands.

KAPOK.—269 bags cleaned sold at 40c.

TIN.—The market continues very lively, and prices have crept up, so that now f.79 to f.79¼ is paid for Banca, and f.76½ for Billiton.

HIDES.—There is a good business doing, and several important parcels, ex Jorgen Lorentzen, Royal Arthur, Eudora, L. J. Enthoven, Kruse Bjorn, and County of Forfar, have changed hands.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—All the parcels brought into the market sold at f.28¼.

POSTSCRIPT.

ROTTERDAM, April 21.

A meeting has been held here to discuss the Colonial question. Mr. I. D. Fransen van de Putte opened the debate, and in the course of his speech reviewed our whole Colonial history. The following resolution was carried unanimously:—"The meeting expresses its thanks for the explanations given by Mr. V. de Putte, and is of opinion that it is to the interest of the State to adopt a mild Colonial policy, and to apply the Agrarian Law in a vigorous and liberal manner."

COFFEE.—The Dutch Trading Company sold yesterday in public auction 92,400 b. Java and Padang. The result was not so favourable as that of the previous monthly sale. Good ordinary was sold in March at 35½c., and now at 33c. The confidence in the article is not very great.

ARRACK.—136 casks Sourabaya, ex Royal Arthur, have been sold.

ARRIVAL.—April 20, at Brouwershaven, from Batavia, Hoek van Holland.

DEPARTURE.—April 20, from Texel, for Batavia, Maibit.

PASSENGERS OUTWARD.—For Java, per Maibit: Mr. W. Glazer and family, Messrs. H. le Conge, Ph. M. Leydelmeyer, T. H. Buyten, A. J. Middelhoven.

A FRENCH VIEW OF THE CHINESE CHARACTER.

(FROM OUR PARIS CORRESPONDENT.)

M. EUGENE SIMON, Consul for France in China, has given an account of his impressions of that country before a public meeting of the Acclimatisation Society of Paris.

M. SIMON avows his partiality for China, and declares that country to be one of the greatest benefactors of Europe; she has endowed us with silk, the peach, camellia, jasmine, azalea, wistaria; the most precious of our tissues, the best of our fruits, the finest flowers come from China, and yet we know little of her. China is so vast and so varied that it is difficult to take in all at a view; take the highest mountains you can imagine, the most profound valleys, the most arid plateaux, and the most fertile plains; place them all between 90 deg. and 120 deg. longitude and 22 deg. to 50 deg. latitude, and you have China—a country the coldest or the hottest, the driest or the dampest, the poorest or the richest, the most barren or the most fertile, the most monotonous or the most picturesque, according to the point of view selected; in short, without exaggeration (and France of course excepted,) the finest country on the earth, and the best dowered for a civilised people—that is to say, for a people capable of enjoying it. Except in the north, however, near the desert, forests and meadows are wanting; the former have been destroyed by five hundred millions of men during forty centuries. Of the animal kingdom, says M. SIMON, there are no finer tigers or oxen in the world, nor finer sheep than those of the Land of Grass and the forest of Zéhol. The tiger is the black tiger, larger than that of India; its fur is as thick and almost as soft as that of the marten; the bullocks commonly reach a weight of sixteen to eighteen hundredweights, and for game a cartload may be had at Peking for five shillings. As regards the economic ability of the Chinese, he says, they so well understand the management of fuel that they can cook for a whole family with a few pounds of dry grass, worth not more than a centime or two per pound.

M. SIMON speaks in the highest terms of the respect which all Chinese pay their parents and ancestors, "their family religion," as he aptly terms it, and compares it with the family relations and traditions of Europe, much to the disadvantage of the latter. This family religion, he believes, almost entirely annuls the dangers of superstition. As an instance of the effect of respect for age, M. SIMON says that, annoyed at first, like other strangers, by being followed by crowds of people, often amounting to thousands, he hit upon the expedient of fixing upon the oldest man in sight, inviting him to his house with the ordinary usages of politeness, and there placing him in the seat of honour; the murmurs and the jokes, perhaps insults, ceased at once. There was established between the crowd and the foreigner a link the want of which often gives rise to so much unpleasantness and even serious difficulty. "I was no longer a stranger," he says, "but a host." A trait of good honest diplomacy well worthy of record! M. SIMON, like other travellers, complains of the annoying surveillance to which he was subjected by the local officials when he arrived in the country soon after the Treaty, but says that it soon disappeared when they became assured of the peaceful character of his duty, and when he visited the countries bordering on Thibet, he affirms that the mandarins invested him with the royal power of mercy, and that every morning there appeared before his door applicants for a remission or diminution of the punishment to be inflicted upon them.

A slight adventure which befell M. SIMON and his friends is gracefully told; the travellers, oppressed by excessive heat, dropped down at the foot of a tree, around which grew a little grass, real grass, so rare in China, but they had not noticed some women who were working in a little garden behind some shrubs, and who also had not noticed the arrival of the travellers. It is a breach of etiquette for strangers to remain long in the presence of females in China, and the faces of the women in question began to show unequivocal signs of astonishment and growing indignation. The Europeans, amongst whom was a missionary, knew that they ought not to remain where they were, but they could not make up their minds to quit their shady resting place without an effort—"Good bye, ladies", then said the missionary, in his sweetest voice.—"Good bye", was the reply, "and go away. What right have you there?"—"But, madam, we are very tired, and the other trees are far away."—"What kind of people are these?" said one of the women; "and where do they come from, that they know so little of good manners? Go, and do not let us have to complain again?" They rose to depart, but the missionary had an idea; taking out his pipe and tobacco, he said, "At least you will give me a light." "Go on," was the answer; "it shall be sent to you." The travellers marched off slowly, and soon were overtaken by a boy with a lighted josstick, who for his reward obtained a common pocket-knife; presently he was back again with four oranges, and his reward this time was a paper of needles; he returned, but soon reappeared with three men, who invited the Europeans to go into their house and rest. In a short time they were the best friends in the world; the women went on with their occupations, cooking the dinner and laying the table; before long all the people of the village joined the party, and a hundred questions about France were put and answered. M. SIMON being asked about his parents, said that they were dead. The reply produced was characteristic: "Ah, poor man, we can understand, then, how you could quit your home." Nothing could exceed the modest bearing, the simple mode of speech—dignified and respectful without timidity—of their Chinese host and his friends. When dinner was served the old man and his sons waited upon the travellers, who, on quitting, desired to make some presents to the children; the offer was politely but steadily refused, and with a profusion of thanks and farewells they went their way.

THE SUEZ CANAL AND THE RED SEA.

Our fears that the climate of the Red Sea would prove a serious obstacle to the use of the Canal route by vessels not specially adapted for it have been sadly verified. Already we hear of a Sunderland steamer having reached Calcutta with every stoker dead from the effects of the intense heat, and several other vessels have suffered severely, though not quite to the same extent. If these things happen in the cool season, what a fearful mortality must be expected in the summer months! The mail steamers plying in the Red Sea are of course fitted with every known device for mitigating the heat, but even they cannot employ European stokers. It is evident that the trade ought to be carried on by vessels specially constructed for it, and that in the meanwhile steamers of the old type should not be sent through the Canal without such alterations as will ensure efficient ventilation. Native stokers, too, should be taken on board at Port Said. The question of a new survey of the Red Sea came up in the House of Commons last week, and, in reply to a question regarding the alleged inaccuracy of the present charts, Mr. CHILDERS said "it was proposed in the summer to consider what should be done, with a view to an improved survey." Why should the matter not be considered at once?

The importance of vessels being able to pass through the Canal with their cargoes intact can hardly be over-estimated; but this most necessary condition is in danger of being violated by the new method of calculating the dues lately promulgated by the company. Fears are already expressed that the system of charging dues on the measurement of the cargo, whenever it exceeds the registered tonnage of the vessel will be made a pretext for an examination, and this would not be readily submitted to by British shipowners.

At the meeting of the Society of Arts on the 27th ult. Mr. LANGE read a paper on the Suez Canal, and during the discussion that followed he emphatically contradicted a statement lately put forth that, besides the Hooghly and L'Imperatrice, five other steamers had broken their propellers in passing through the Canal.

We have received from the Canal Company a telegram dated Ismailia, April 26, stating that the Messageries steamer Hooghly had returned to Suez. She was towed from Port Said to Ismailia, and proceeded thence with her own engines, but was delayed in Lake Timsah by going on the wrong side of the buoys, and out of the proper channel. The following ships were passing through the Canal:—Far East, Stowell, Waverley, Emma Ash, Asie, Apis, Headquarters. The number of vessels passing through (exclusive of those allowed to go free at the inauguration) was, in November, 1; in December, 9; in January, 16; in February, 29; in March, 53; and in the first week of the present month, 22. The cash receipts were as follows:—November, f.75,118; December, f.241,795; January, f.250,958; February, f.340,726; March, f.620,738.

THE LATE CHINESE MINISTER.

The North German steamer Silesia arrived at New York on the 19th ult., having on board the remains of the late Mr. Burlingame. The revenue cutter Uno, with the Hon. Isaac Livermore, of Boston, father-in-law of Mr. Burlingame, on board, met the steamer coming up the Bay, and took off Mr. Edward Livermore Burlingame, the eldest son of the illustrious statesman, who accompanied his father's remains from Hamburg, leaving there on the 6th ult. The flags on the steamer were lowered to half-mast on Mr. Burlingame's departure from the vessel. The corpse was embalmed at St. Petersburg a short time after Mr. Burlingame's death on the 23rd of February. It is the design of the relatives of Mr. Burlingame to have the funeral demonstration in New York City as quiet as possible, and for the purpose of conforming to their wishes, the gentlemen forming the escort have determined not to have any procession. They will meet at the Custom-house Barge-office, at the Battery, and will then proceed to the steamer Silesia to receive the remains. Subsequently the coffin will be transferred to the steamer Providence. It will be carried to Boston by the latter vessel, and will be under the charge of Gen. Chamberlain and Major Capello, of Gov. Claflin's staff, on the way there. A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce has been held for the purpose of making arrangements for the reception of Mr. Burlingame's remains.

At a meeting of the City Committee on the Burlingame obsequies, at Boston, it was determined that the cities of Cambridge and Chelsea should unite with Boston in the demonstration, and that sub-committees from each city should proceed to New York and accompany the remains to Boston.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks.—"The singular success which Mr. Epps has attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in tin-lined packets labelled—JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.

THE JAPAN LOAN.

WHEN the ports of Japan were first opened to foreign trade the accounts of the early English visitors to that country were received here with lively curiosity and interest; but when the novelty had in some degree worn off, and items of Japan news came to be regularly mentioned in REUTER'S telegrams, the general public soon ceased to attach much importance to the affairs of a country so distant and so difficult to understand. Consequently, excepting the few directly interested in its staple exports, but a small portion of even the commercial community have manifested any interest in Japan, except indeed when startled by some thrilling event arising out of the institutions of this peculiar and little-understood people, or by a narrow escape on the part of Sir HARRY PARKES from some new danger to his valuable and often jeopardised existence. Several very worthless books have been written on Japan, and a very few good ones, but it is to be feared that the former class have found more readers than the latter. The London and China Telegraph, too, has done its best to dispel the indifference of the public to Japan affairs by appealing to their understanding and sympathy, but the Japanese Government itself has just hit on a still more telling expedient—that of appealing to their pockets. They will now become our debtors, and by appearing continuously in our cash books, ledgers, and balance-sheets will ensure a permanent abiding place in our remembrance.

Through the instrumentality of Mr. HORATIO NELSON LAY, C.B., the Government of Japan seeks to borrow—or, by this time we may be justified in writing, has succeeded in borrowing—the modest sum of One Million sterling, on security which to the ordinary observer will doubtless appear amply sufficient. Our own views on this financial operation will very likely be coldly received by many investors who are anxious to be in a "good thing," so far as the immediate present is concerned; but we write in the interests of those who have a permanent stake in the trade of Japan, and our remarks are addressed to these, and not to such as regard the loan as a Stock Exchange operation. Before we analyse the proposed scheme and its proffered securities we must glance briefly at one or two points connected with the recent history of Japan and its present financial position. Firstly, then, it has passed through the severe travail of a revolution, and the birth of a new Government has left the parent country weak, collapsed, prostrate. It is true that we have good reason to think hopefully of the new order of things, for the Japanese have been earnest and thorough in certain measures of reform; but they are left with an empty exchequer and a debased currency, which has not only disorganised the action of the Government with regard to its internal affairs, but seriously affected its commercial relations with foreign countries, and this second result is by far the most important to the world outside Japan.

Now, the security proffered for what Messrs. SCHRODER and Co. have brought out as "The Imperial Government of Japan Customs Loan" consists of the entire Customs' dues of the Empire,—not one bou of which can properly be spared; and of the revenues arising from a railway, every metal of which has yet to be contracted for and sent out from this country. We will first consider the assignment of the Customs' dues, and to convey a true idea of their value something must be said of the method in which the Japanese manage this department of their revenue. The Custom-house at Yokohama (which is better organised than those at the other treaty ports) is built in close contiguity to the Bonded warehouses, which were established under the influence of Sir HARRY PARKES, and originally placed under the charge of two foreign superintendents—who, having fulfilled their mission by teaching the "bonded" system to the native officials, were dispensed with, and the Custom-house authorities now carry it on, after a fashion, themselves. The system however never had any great chance of success, firstly because the existence and use of large bonded warehouses depreciated the value of all warehouse property owned by foreign merchants, —secondly, because all merchandise stored in the former must pay full duties before it can be removed, which (as Custom-house business is transacted in Japan) is by no means a matter of course when merchandise is entered for storage in private warehouses,—and thirdly, because the business is conducted with a vexatious routine that is disliked both by foreign importers and native buyers. Private and personal interests have therefore greatly impeded the efficacy of this aid in the collection of the Customs' revenue. In the next place, the Government employés at the Custom-house are not only poorly paid, but in many cases innately corrupt, and it is not surprising that out of so many payers of duties some should be found only too willing to take advantage of this combination of poverty and want of principle. Now there are no foreign Inspectors of Customs in Japan (as there are in China) to see that Government money is not misappropriated by corrupt native officials; there is no foreigner (at least we hear of none) specially appointed at Yokohama to supervise the payment of the Customs' receipts into the Oriental Bank; and at the other ports there is no organisation whatever. Considering these things, as well as the needy state of the native Government on the one hand, and its official faithlessness on the other, we may leave our readers to judge as to how much of the daily revenue of the Customs will find its way into the treasury of the Oriental Bank. It must not be forgotten that the Manager of the Yokohama branch of that corporation is only empowered to receive such sums as the Japanese Customs may feel inclined to pay him, without having any power to exact all the dues that the native treasurer may actually collect, still less to control or obtain possession of such sums as the superior Government authorities may set aside for themselves, as mulct for charges of collection or otherwise. So much for the Customs' security. Turning now to what is termed in the advertisement of the loan, the "Additional Security"—that is, the revenues of the railways yet to be constructed from Yedo to Yokohama, and Yedo to Osaka respectively, we can hardly refrain from smiling at the assurance of those concerned, in advancing this as a "security" at all. Regarding the railways themselves, having personal knowledge of the route from Yokohama to Yedo (twenty miles), we are able to say that this portion need not be a difficult or expensive work; that is to say, it will probably not cost more than three times the sum a similar length would require in England. But when Messrs. SCHRODER and Co. invite us to look at their map of Japan for an idea of what the other lines are like, we cannot help regarding it as a snare and a delusion. You may take a map of any country and draw with a ruler and a dip of red ink straight lines from point to point, but these are hardly sufficient evidence of the practicability of constructing lines of railway. Excepting some Dutch Superintendents at Desima, Europeans have never traversed the interior, and engineers can know nothing of the obstructions that are to be met with in the recesses of a country so mountainous as Japan certainly is, as far as our own knowledge extends, and appears to be throughout if we may take the native maps as a criterion. The line from Yedo to Osaka would certainly be over 250 miles in length, following the course of a series of valleys, which we have reason to believe are in the highest state of cultivation. If the multitudinous holders of the land are to be fairly dealt with, the money now raised will barely suffice to purchase the right of way through their holdings; and it must be borne in mind that though Japan be under a despotic Government, there is no country in the world where landed property is so highly prized, or where its proprietors and their rights are more rigidly protected by the law. If tunnels of more than ordinary length should in some parts be found necessary—which we think more than likely—then not one million, but five at least, will be indispensable for the entire completion of the work, and in such a case the revenue would most likely be but a small percentage on the outlay.

While thus addressing a few words of caution to investors and others, we would not be understood to imply that we do not warmly approve every effort made to introduce railways, telegraphs, and Western science and civilisation generally into Japan. The desire of the Government to possess railways and telegraphs is an evidence of enlightenment that must be viewed on all hands with satisfaction; would that the Chinese Government could be prevailed on to follow the example. But we cannot unreservedly approve the method in which this loan has been brought forward. When we first heard something of the real object of Mr. LAY'S visit to Japan, we were led to understand that he went as the representative of certain large capitalists who were ready and willing (upon sufficiently advantageous terms) to undertake the construction of railways in that country. This is the version of the story that was published in all the China and Japan papers, and which was allowed by Mr. LAY to pass uncontradicted. Now, however, we find that Mr. LAY is the agent not of the lenders but of the borrowers—he comes back as the Commissioner of the Japanese Government, to raise a loan in the English money market! There is a very striking and significant difference between the two positions. The Japanese appoint Mr. LAY their Commissioner to obtain the money, and the Oriental Bank Corporation their bankers to receive it. Suppose they fail to carry out their arrangement with Mr. LAY? holders of Japan Customs' Bonds can expect no satisfaction from him; the Oriental Bank clearly is in no way responsible, save for the safe custody of such sums as may be entrusted to them, which certainly could not be in better keeping; but there is really no material guarantee either for the principal or the interest, or any compact ratified between the Imperial Government and the British Minister that any portion of the revenue will be set aside to meet the obligation now contracted with British capitalists. We know the Japanese to be wily in diplomacy and unscrupulous in monetary affairs, and we know, too, how much—or how little—aid British subjects may expect from their own Government in prosecuting claims of this nature against foreign nations that fail to meet their engagements. Another circumstance to be remembered is that Japan is a country from which we are in the habit of receiving telegrams of a startling character, and as its affairs are still in a very unsettled state, this is likely to continue for years. The lack of information among the general public regarding Japanese politics will tend to increase the alarming effect of unfavourable news, and such a telegram, for instance, as that received last week, announcing the assassination of the United States Consul at Yedo, would probably have a more depressing effect on Japanese Bonds than the recent tragedy in Greece has had on the securities of that miserable little kingdom. On the whole we cannot help regretting that the advisers of the Japanese Government were unable to devise means to construct the first line of railway without raising a loan.

FRANCE AND CHINA.

ON the 19th ult.—the day after the date of our last issue—there appeared in The Times a long letter from the Shanghai correspondent of that paper giving an account of M. DE ROCHECHOUART'S expedition, and highly praising the line of action taken by him to vindicate the rights of French subjects. The correspondent draws special attention to the fact that in every instance the injuries for which the French Minister sought redress were traceable to the instigation of the literati, and generally grew through the non-interference of the local officials. "If the hostility of the officials be "subdued, foreigners will have little else to fear. The people "are willing enough to admit us among them, except where "influenced adversely by the literati and mandarins." Thus are the favourite arguments of The Times once more refuted in its own columns.

The upholders of the BURLINGAME Mission and of Lord CLARENDON'S China policy are used to lay great stress upon the supposed fact that all the Powers to whom Mr. BURLINGAME had presented his credentials agreed in acknowledging the justice of his demands, and in engaging to adopt a policy of peace and conciliation towards China. This, however, is quite an ex parte statement, and almost entirely without foundation. There were many reasons, too well known to need recapitulation here, why the United States should concede all that was demanded by the Mission; and it was only natural that some minor European States, having nothing to lose by so doing, should follow in the wake of England and America. But as regards France and Russia the case is entirely different. The attempt to negotiate at St. Petersburg has avowedly been a failure, and as regards France, the recent action of M. DE ROCHECHOUART shows very clearly how far a policy of peace and conciliation is believed in either by the Imperial Government or its representative in China. The Shanghai and Hong Kong papers justly recommend the attitude adopted by France as an example to Great Britain. It has been completely and deservedly successful, and we cannot doubt that the weak policy of our own Government will in the end prove as completely the reverse. Already we hear news calculated to strengthen this belief. Among the Chinese themselves, in some districts, a war with England is looked for at no distant date. At some of the southern ports there is evidence of a growing indisposition on the part of native traders to enter into any heavy contracts or transactions of magnitude, and in more than one case they have given as a reason for this excessive caution that the new Convention cannot work well, and if adopted will lead to a breach before six months are over. They do not believe that the Peking Government will adhere to its part of the agreement, and they judge, from former experience, that the breaches of faith (on the side of China) that will surely follow must lead to war. The mercantile class of Chinese, so far from approving the proposed Convention as being beneficial to their own country, dislike it as the probable cause of hostilities they would gladly avert. According to our last advices, M. DE ROCHECHOUART, having by a firm persistence in his demands obtained ample satisfaction for the various wrongs recently sustained by French subjects, was on his way to Peking, and we cannot doubt that he will speedily convince the Government that in trusting to the BURLINGAME Mission to secure the adhesion of all Europe to a peace policy, they have been leaning on a broken reed. The Peking Cabinet has by this time learned that of the great Western Powers there are at least two—France and Russia—who will not consent to abase themselves before Chinese arrogance; and they may rest assured, too, that the people of Great Britain will not long continue to look on passively while the GLADSTONE Cabinet permits the leadership of progress in China to pass into French hands.

TELEGRAPHIC MOVEMENTS.

IT has been finally decided to lay the British-Indian Extension Cable from Madras to Penang and Singapore, and not from Galle. This section will be completed and sent out in about three months, and that to connect the Straits Settlements with Hong Kong will follow early next year. The cable between Singapore and Batavia will also be proceeded with at once, and is expected to be completed by October; but the Java-Australia line will not be ready until 1871. The Edinboro' has taken on board one portion of the Malta and Gibraltar Cable, manufactured by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, and will sail to-day; the remaining portion is on board the Scanderia, now at Malta. The Falmouth, Lisbon, and Gibraltar section will be laid by the Hibernia, and will probably be commenced in about ten days; this, when completed, will give us a duplicate communication with Alexandria.

We noticed in our last number that Mr. CYRUS FIELD, who played so important a part in the establishment of telegraphs across the Atlantic, had taken in hand the scheme for a cable between America and Asia. We now learn that bills have been introduced into both Houses of Congress to incorporate the Pacific Submarine Telegraph Company, backed by a memorial from Mr. FIELD asking for Government aid to carry out the project. The total length of the cables required is stated at 8,500 miles. The matter has been referred to a Committee, which is expected to report favourably.

THE ADMIRALTY REPORT ON THE SUEZ CANAL.

THE officers who were sent by the Admiralty in February last to survey the Suez Canal—viz., Colonel CLARKE, R.E., and Captain RICHARDS, R.N.—have issued their Report, which is lengthy, instructive, and full of interest. Their examination occupied twelve days, and was so minute that no point of detail, however small, seems to have escaped them; it was not confined merely to the Canal itself but extended to the harbours at either end. The general conclusion is highly, though not altogether unreservedly, favourable. Commencing with the Mediterranean entrance, they find that Port Said, though not complete as a harbour, affords safe accommodation for a large number of vessels and is not likely to suffer such rapid deterioration from the accumulation of deposit as might have been expected; while even if "silting up" should eventually occur to any serious extent it may be easily stopped by a further extension of the breakwater. In short, the surveyors consider that the doubts as to the practicability of keeping the Mediterranean entrance open have so far been dispelled by experience, and may be dismissed altogether. In some other respects their Report dispels unfavourable impressions that have been formed. The difference of level of the two seas is inappreciable; no serious effect, they consider, will result from evaporation, even in a hot summer, sufficient to produce a disturbing influence on the general condition of the Canal; the apprehensions of deposits in large quantities of fine sand from the desert have they think been much exaggerated, while from the nature of the soil, which contains much lime, the banks of the Canal below and a little above the water become hard and encrusted, so that the ordinary wave or wash from a passing vessel disturbs the surface but little, if at all. They state, however, that along those portions where wide platforms, or "horizontal benchings" have been left at or near the water-line, the banks manifestly suffered disintegration from the wash of passing steamers, for the waves rolled off the bank heavily charged with detritus. These they regard as the worst-constructed portions of the work, and are of opinion that, throughout most of the Canal, the speed of a vessel should never be permitted to exceed four or five knots per hour. With respect to the question how far the Canal is likely to answer its object, they think that for all steam vessels, or vessels towed, ranging between 250 and 300 feet in length, with 35 feet beam, and a draught of 20 feet, it will be a convenient highway; but for the transit of larger vessels special arrangements such as are made on a single line of railway will be required.

We have ourselves pointed out that the chief drawback to the utility of the Canal in its present state, is the narrowness of the channel available for ships drawing 18 feet and upwards. A vessel keeping exactly in the centre, over the line of greatest depth, finds satisfactory soundings all the way through; but it is a most difficult thing for a very long screw steamer to do this, and in many parts the least deviation from the central channel puts her aground. The Admiralty surveyors fully endorse this, and state further that the want of additional width alone prevents its being pronounced a complete success as a permanent navigable route for the largest ships from sea to sea. Coming to the Red Sea end the officers express an opinion that the prevalent ideas of the difficulty and danger of navigation here are greatly exaggerated, although there is no doubt that a new survey of the Gulf of Suez is greatly needed, and so are some additional lights. They suggest one lighthouse at Ras Gharib, a point on the west side of the Gulf, about one hundred miles from Suez; a second on the Brothers Islands; a third (floating) at Mocha, forty miles northward of the island of Perim; and a fourth on one of the small islets just east of Jibbel Toogur, and fifty miles north of Mocha. With these aids the navigation of the Red Sea may certainly be made less perilous than at present, but it must always be tedious for sailing vessels.

The Report contains some calculations intended to show the value to this country of the Canal route as compared with that via the Cape, and selecting Galle as an example, they find the difference in favour of the Canal is 5,135 miles, equivalent, in point of time, to thirty-six days. Taking a vessel of the Volage class as an illustration (of course their attention is directed to ships of war rather than to merchant vessels), they find that the special cost of sending her by the Canal, including all charges and the extra coal which would probably be consumed, would be £895, to be placed against a saving of thirty-six days, leaving out of consideration the wear and tear of a voyage round the Cape; and they accordingly advise that all small or moderate-sized vessels should be sent through the Canal. A comparison between the relative cost of the Canal route and the overland transit does not seem to show any very great advantage on either side, the decreased expense on the one hand being counterbalanced by the saving of time on the other, and they come to the conclusion that large steam companies would do well to make use of both routes. The Report is accompanied by some very fine charts, which not only add greatly to its value, but serve to show, even more than their written statement, how careful and painstaking an examination Colonel CLARKE and Captain RICHARDS have made.

THE CHINESE MISSION.

THE Chinese Mission has arrived in Brussels. During its brief stay in Berlin a sort of manifesto has appeared in a Berlin paper, seemingly intended to define, for the information of the Western world, the objects and present position of the Chinese Mission. It is therein stated that the principal raison d'être of the Mission is to place all Treaty Powers "on a footing of equality in an international point of view"—which is rather vague. If it means that each Treaty Power was to be placed on an equality with China, the Mission has lamentably failed in its object. Mr. BURLINGAME, it is stated, was accredited to nearly every European State, including Spain and Italy, but it is hardly likely the Mission will now proceed to the South of Europe. Mr. BURLINGAME, we are informed, was very successful in those countries he visited, with the sole exception of Russia, where no progress has been made towards a settlement of the disputed frontier question, and Mr. MCLEARY BROWN, the present chief of the Mission (or "Embassy," as it is styled), has very little hope of success. In fact, Mr. BURLINGAME himself, though received by the Court of St. Petersburg with the most overpowering civility and hospitality, was unable to negotiate satisfactorily.

Taking into consideration the prevalent impressions regarding Russian intrigue and Chinese treachery, it might have been expected that all sorts of rumours would be disseminated regarding the cause and manner of Mr. BURLINGAME'S death. Accordingly, we find that some such reports have obtained currency in the United States, the principal one being that the deceased Minister was poisoned by his Chinese colleagues, the motive being jealousy of his superior status. Some American papers having dwelt at great length on this theory, the Boston Advertiser indignantly denies the possibility of its correctness. "The nature of Mr. BURLINGAME'S disease," it says, "is sufficient to refute the story, which is merely one of "those wild inventions so apt to be started on the death of men "in prominent and responsible positions. There is no reason "for supposing that the relations of all the members of the "Embassy were other than the most agreeable and cordial "throughout." The remains of Mr. BURLINGAME have been sent to the United States, in accordance with a desire expressed in his last moments. We hear from Washington that in officially announcing the death of Mr. ANSON BURLINGAME, Mr. CURTIN, the United States Minister in Russia, wrote to Mr. Secretary FISH that he feared Mr. BURLINGAME'S mission would now fall into British hands, and that the future negotiations would take a direction less favourable to American interests. The probability is that the future proceedings of the Mission will not be of the slightest importance to anybody excepting its members and those who have to pay the expenses.

WHY don't the residents in China, Japan, and the Straits start a Life Assurance Society of their own? They have done well both with Marine and Fire Assurance; the "North China" has been a splendid success, and the "China Fire" has two new competitors, in both of which the shares are already at a high premium. We would not recommend either of these to add a Life business to its original scheme, but a separate company, on a moderate scale and on the Mutual system, would surely be both useful and profitable. Merchants in the Far East have long seen the folly of paying enormous sums of money in premiums to home or foreign offices to insure their ships and cargoes against loss, and their houses and godowns against fire; why should they continue to pay exaggerated "extra" premiums to home Life offices, with the alternative of being compelled to forego altogether that useful method of providing for the future? The extra premium charged for residence in any part of the Far East is altogether disproportioned to the actual risk. For instance, in a well-known English office, at the age of thirty-six an approved life is charged, during residence in England, £2 18s. 3d. for each £100; but should the assured go to China it is immediately raised to £4 16s. 10d., or nearly doubled, and this quite irrespective of the part of China or Japan he may reside in, though some ports in both countries are as healthy as any in the world. There are many men now resident in the Far East who would gladly insure their lives, were not the existing rates almost prohibitory; and it is certain that those who do insure, despite these high rates, would rather pay them to a local office in which they, the assured, were interested.

OUR Paris Correspondent sends some particulars illustrative of the enormous increase in the value of Chinese porcelain. A pair of magnificent Chinese vases of the sixteenth century, forming part of the famous San Donato collection of the DEMIDOFF family, sold the other day at the Paris Auction Mart for the large sum of 39,000 francs (£1,560). These vases, beautiful as they are, had been injured to some extent, and the knobs of the covers had been repaired by European hands. Three pairs of similar vases are known to be in existence, two other pairs having been purchased in 1847 by the Comtesse DUCHATEL, who only gave 4,000 francs for the four—£40 per vase. At this rate of progress Chinese vases will soon become dearer than gold.

ACCORDING to French official correspondence, bearing date the 1st March, the condition of Cochin China is prosperous and improving. The attention given to agriculture has produced good results, and the imports and exports of the first quarter of the year reached a total of thirty millions of francs (£1,200,000). The local Government is now specially occupied in improving the sanitary condition of the country, with a view to European colonisation; a convalescent establishment has been founded in an elevated and salubrious position at Nui Dinh, and means are being taken to supply the population with better water by the construction of large reservoirs at Saigon and other points.

THE petition of the residents in the Straits Settlements to the House of Lords, which is in the hands of Earl GREY, has not yet been presented, owing to the recent decease of the noble Earl's brother, General GREY. It will however come before the House on an early day, and as we believe two high legal authorities—Lords WESTBURY and CHELMSFORD—cordially sympathise with the object of the petition, it will be sure of a fair hearing. The subject being of a purely judicial nature, the colonists acted wisely in addressing their petition to the Peers instead of the Lower House.

A WORK prepared by Professor VAMBERY, the celebrated traveller, has some bearing on Chinese studies. Under the title of "The Linguistic Monuments of the Uigurs," he will print and translate the only literary monument of a remarkable people of Turkish stock, which inhabited the Southern slopes of the Thien Shan mountains, and were formerly Buddhists, but partly converted to Christianity in the fifth century by the Nestorians. This work will, it is expected, throw some light on the past history of Eastern Turkestan and Western China.

THE report that Capt. EYRE, of the Bombay, who is now in London, intends to memorialise the Board of Trade to revise the sentence of suspension of his certificate for six months is quite correct. Sir HARRY VERNEY some days since gave notice that he would call the attention of the House of Commons to the matter, but postponed it. His notice was again on the paper on Friday, but nothing came of it.

IN our issue of the 14th March we noticed a proclamation issued by Sir HARRY PARKES at Yedo, announcing some new regulations as to the shipment of Japan coal on board English steamers. The Board of Trade, apparently, has only just awoke to the fact of such a notification having been issued, and accordingly it appeared last week in the Gazette!

MR. P. CARL, Hamburg; Mr. STEINMEYER, Bremen; and Messrs. MACKAY, BOOMKAMP and Co., Amsterdam, have been appointed agents for the London and China Telegraph and London and China Express.

Monetary and Commercial.

At the meeting of the proprietors of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, the directors' report was adopted, and a dividend declared of three per cent., making, including the interim distribution in October last, a total payment of six per cent. for the year, and leaving a balance of £37,953 to be carried forward to new account. The directors' report and proceedings at the meeting will be found in another column.

The International Bank, lately established in Hamburg under the auspices of several of the leading firms in that city, has opened an agency at 5, Lombard-street, London, under the management of Mr. Herman Gwinner, many years with Messrs. Fruhling and Goschen. We understand the London agency will undertake all business connected with foreign banking, opening and confirming credits, as well as the sale and purchase of securities and of produce, and will no doubt be the medium of an important increase in the business relations between Germany and the East.

An evening contemporary last week announced that "the Peninsular and Oriental have at last consented to give the Suez Canal a trial." There is no foundation for this; the experience of the Messageries' steamers is so far anything but encouraging, and at present the P. and O. directors see no reason to alter the decision they came to some time ago, as stated in our columns.

The P. and O. Company's steamer Nubia has arrived at Liverpool, from Bombay, with a full cargo, having passed through the Suez Canal on a draught of nineteen feet. The report that she met with an accident and put back to Suez is incorrect. After discharging she will refit at the yard of Messrs. Lairds. The Company's steamer Bengal is also expected from Bombay, via the Canal.

The Bank rates for bills at sixty days' sight on Singapore, China, and Japan are as follows:—Singapore, buying 4s. 3d.; selling, 4s. 5½d. Hong Kong, buying, 4s. 3d.; selling, 4s. 5½d. Shanghai, buying, 5s. 8d.; selling, 6s. 2d. Yokohama, buying, 4s. 3d.; selling, 4s. 7d. These rates are merely nominal, transactions being to a very limited extent.

Messrs. J. H. Schroder and Co. have announced the Imperial Government of Japan Customs Loan, for railway purposes, for £1,000,000 sterling. The bonds are to bearer for £100, £500, and £1,000 each, carrying interest at 9 per cent. per annum from August 1, 1870 (the instalments meanwhile bearing 6 per cent.), payable half-yearly in London. The loan to be redeemed at par in thirteen years, by means of ten annual drawings, beginning August 1, 1873. The price of issue 98 per cent. Messrs. Schroder intimate that they are authorised by Mr. Horatio Nelson Lay, C.B., the special commissioner duly empowered by the Imperial Government of Japan to carry out the Loan. The Oriental Bank have been appointed to receive subscriptions, and we understand that the applications are in excess of the amount required. Our own views on this Loan are given in our leading columns.

The report of the British Australian Telegraph Company, issued for the meeting of shareholders to be held this day, states that—

"Satisfactory terms have been agreed upon between the Netherlands Government and the Company for permission to land the cables on the Island of Java, and for the transmission of messages over the Government telegraphic system in that island. By this arrangement the contingency contemplated in the prospectus, of having to construct an entirely submarine communication between Singapore and Australia, will be avoided, and the benefit of the Java traffic secured to the company before the end of the current year. The order for the cable has been given to the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, and the sum of £60,000 has been paid to them in accordance with the contract."

Messrs. Hesse van Raalte and Co. wrote to The Times stating that they had the concession granted to them. This was in turn contradicted by Mr. Earle, chairman of the company. It is, however, of little consequence, the mere concession is of no moment unless it be an exclusive one, then the Dutch Government must allow the stipulated time before cancelling it. As they have not granted an exclusive concession it is simply a question of who can first use their privilege by laying down the cables, and with the position held by the British Australian Company, there is no doubt but that they will without delay accomplish the work. Concession hunting is an old game, and we believe that the Government at the Hague were besieged by no less than a dozen persons representing themselves competent to carry out the scheme, but who in reality simply wished to sell the privilege.

We understand that the deposits received on account of the "Manila and Hong Kong Telegraph Company" have been returned, and the scheme is abandoned.

The "Great Northern Telegraph Company" will have their cable completed and placed on board the Danish frigate Tordenskjold (now in the Thames) early in May.

The Government of the Netherlands has not yet arrived at any decision on the subject of subsidising a steam line from Java to Australia, and the intentions of the Government of New South Wales in reference to this line are still unknown.

We have to notice the arrival of the Albert Jurss, direct from Takao, Formosa, with a cargo of sessam seed, which is now on the market. This arrival is interesting, now that our Consular establishments are threatened with extinction by Sir R. Alcock's advice.

The annual general meeting of the Singapore Gas Company was held at the London Tavern; Mr. H. P. Stephenson in the chair. The report showed the profits for the half-year at £1,635 16s.; after writing off for depreciation of works and plant, and off the expenses of first establishment, at the rate of 1 per cent. per annum, and £11 off office furniture, which, together with £199 14s., the unappropriated profit of the preceding half year, made the available balance £1,835 10s. Out of this the directors recommended the declaration of a dividend at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, less income-tax on the preference capital; and at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum on the amount paid up as the original capital, free from income-tax, the balance of £240 8s. to be carried forward to the current half-year. The chairman stated that the result of the half-year's working had exceeded the anticipations of the directors, arising from the efficient management at Singapore and the low price paid for coal. They had added slightly to the debenture debt, and there had been a little additional cost for works and plant, but this had been nearly all provided for by the amount written off for depreciation. Mr. Wells having spoken of the promising prospects of the company, and the not improbable early realisation of a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, the report was adopted and the dividends declared.

Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on the 20th ult. at the Bank of England, and the whole amount was allotted to Calcutta. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 10¾d., being a reduction of 1 per cent.; and tenders at 1s. 10¾d. will receive about 1½ per cent.; above, in full. These results show a considerable further diminution in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

The Crown Agents for the Colonies accepted tenders on the 21st ult. for bills of exchange on the Government of Ceylon to the amount of £25,000, at 1s. 11⅛d. per rupee.

Bar silver is in fair demand for Holland at 60 7-16d. per oz., and Mexican dollars have advanced ⅛d., viz, to 59⅝d., at which price the few brought by the West India packet have been disposed of.

Mr. Frederick Jerdein has been admitted a partner in the firm of Ewart Maccaughey, and Co.

Telegrams from Shanghai of 8th April announce the suspension of Mr. Wm. Hargreaves, and a meeting of creditors was to be held at once.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Bangalore, from Southampton on the 30th ult., was in gold, to Galle, £180; to Madras, £130; in silver, to Singapore, £4,950; to Hong Kong, £12,421 17s. 6d.; to Shanghai, £1,400; total in gold, £310; in silver, £18,771 17s. 6d.

THE CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA AND CHINA.

The general meeting of the shareholders in this bank was held at the London Tavern on the 20th ult.; Mr. T. A. MITCHELL, M.P., in the chair.

The report of the directors presented to the shareholders said:—"The general balance-sheet of the bank, made up to the 31st December last, shows a net profit for the twelve months of £62,588. The directors regret the diminished amount of profit, as compared with that of last year, attributable chiefly to the adverse state of the exchanges between England and the East, and the general depression of trade. There is, however, no deduction to be made in respect of the old bad debt account, the liquidation of which has progressed so favourably as to reduce the amount to a comparatively small figure. The directors therefore recommend a continuance of the dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, absorbing £24,000, or the same amount as the interim dividend declared at the half-yearly meeting in October. The surplus remaining, inclusive of the balance brought from last account, is £37,953 12s., which the directors have carried forward to profit and loss new account, as a provision against contingent loss by the Batavia failure, announced a year ago."

The Chairman said it was a matter for regret that the accounts did not present a greater amount of profit. The board anticipated that the flood of ruin which inundated India some few years ago and destroyed so many kindred institutions would have left the field more free from competitors, but he regretted to say that the competition for business had been so great and so keen that there had been much difficulty in conducting a business, the more especially as the trade of the East had but reflected that dulness which had so long been characteristic of this country. The directors had, however, done their best to make the results as good as possible, and in those endeavours they had been greatly assisted by the staff of the bank. Credit was taken in the report for a further reduction of the old bad and doubtful debt account, which had been valued and carried forward from time to time. At the close of 1868 the account stood at £57,000, and at the present time it amounted to only £31,000. There had been some profit upon the sum realised, as compared with the valuation, and that had gone into the general profits of the bank. Of the remaining sum of £31,000, fully one-third, or upwards of £10,000, was secured upon shares in their own bank, which it still held, though they were attached at the time of the failures. Under these circumstances the board felt convinced that their valuations of the bad debts would in the main be over rather than under the mark. As to the failure in Batavia, the question, as he had before explained, was involved in intricate questions of Dutch and German law, which were still undecided, and practically the matter rested precisely where it did at the last meeting. The board were sorry to have to carry over so large a floating sum, but deemed it the wiser course to do so. As to the bank's general position, it was unimpeachable. Its credit was untarnished and increasing, and its position in the East improving. With deposits increasing and customers augmenting, there was little doubt that the proprietors might look forward to times when the directors would be able to lay much better results before the shareholders. He moved that the report and accounts be received and adopted.

Mr. Jones briefly seconded the motion.

Mr. J. W. Adamson asked whether the £31,000 carried over was irrespective of the £37,900 profit undivided.

The Chairman replied in the affirmative, and, in answer to a further question, said that the board were waiting the decision upon the legal points raised in the Dutch and German courts, and meanwhile were taking no credits or bills from foreign houses unless backed by English firms of good standing or otherwise secured.

The report was unanimously adopted and the dividend declared.

The Chairman proposed that Mr. John Allan, the retiring director, be re-elected.

Mr. Morrison seconded the motion, which was adopted nem. con.

Mr. Macnaughtan moved the re-election of Mr. T. A. Mitchell, M.P.

Mr. Lancaster seconded the motion, and it was carried by acclamation.

Captain Hight moved, and Colonel Skelly seconded, the re-election of the two auditors, which was unanimously adopted, and the proceedings closed with votes of thanks to the chairman, directors, managers, &c., for their services.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Since the settlement of the duty question dealers have been chiefly engaged with the clearing orders which had accumulated to a larger amount than ever before known, no less than 7,842,061 lbs. having been taken from the warehouses from the 12th to the 18th instant; fresh transactions have also been further greatly interfered with by the Easter holidays; still some business has been done at fair rates, all medium and fine qualities of Congou fully realising previous prices, whilst common to fair common sorts have not been so firmly held. A few sales of Green Teas are reported at full prices for medium and fine qualities, common being neglected. Common to fine Yokohama Uncoloured Japans have been taken for export at from 11d. to 1s, and some small parcels of Nagasaki have found buyers at 1s. to 1s. 3d. for common to fair, 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6d. for medium, and 1s. 8d. to 1s. 10d. for fine. Public sales, comprising 18,123 packages, being 15,132 packages "without reserve," and the balance 2,991 packages with reserve limits, concluded on the 25th ult. Prices, compared to the public sales of 5th April, were ¼d. to ⅜d. lower for common to good red and black leaf Congou, Oonfa kinds selling in some instances at fully 1d. decline.

BLACK.—Congous: Red-leaf Siftings have been dull at rather lower prices. Broken-leaf have also sold easier. Fair to good common have only been taken in small lots at about former prices. Fair to good Kaisows show no change, the amount sold being small; fine to finest have been in limited request at previous prices. Pak Lins remain without change. Amoy kinds have been quiet at rather easier rates. Black-leaf kinds: Siftings have sold rather lower; ordinary to fair common have been in over supply, and sales difficult to make at 10½d. to 1s. per lb. Good to superior common have been fairly maintained at 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 1d. per lb. Fair to good medium kinds show but little change, sales having been only to a moderate extent. Good to fine remain steady; also finest kinds, the supplies being small. New-make Canton kinds have been steady at previous prices. Oolongs: Common to fair have been difficult of sale; fine are still wanted at fully former prices. Souchongs: Business in all qualities has been small, and prices are nominally the same as before. Scented Teas: Common to fair Canton Capers continue depressed; good to fine have been saleable at former prices. Foochow kinds show no change. Canton Orange Pekoes have only been dealt in in small parcels. Foochow kinds have been dull, and prices tending downwards for all but the finer kinds. Uncoloured Japans: A few sales have been made at about former prices.

GREEN.—The supplies offering are more than the trade can take, and the sales made have been with difficulty, the finer qualities alone maintaining former values. All the common and fair kinds are much depressed, and prices rule very irregularly. Canton-made Gunpowders: A few parcels common have been sold at 9½d. per lb.; good remain without demand.

SILK.

Messrs. Kilburn, Kershaw, and Co. report as follows :—

There is no change in the market, and we have only to report a continuance of the quiet which marked the opening of the month. The Easter holidays have also caused a partial suspension of business, and thus there have been but the fewest possible transactions during the last week or ten days, and these at about 1s. decline—as, for instance, 27s. for Red Peacocks, and 31s. 6d. for best chop 3rd Tsatlees. The general idea is that we shall see a return of activity very shortly. Japan Silks are even quieter than Chinas, and meet with little or no inquiry at the moment; for Cantons there is demand at 20s. to 20s. 6d. for decent Tsatlee reel, but no sellers at this price, and in consequence nothing is doing. Deliveries are good for the season of the year, say from 1st to 20th inst.—1,744 bales China, 468 Canton, 401 Japan, and 249 Bengal; total, 2,861 bales.

COFFEE.

The adverse movement in prices previously prevailing has continued, and a further general decline of fully 1s. per cwt. has been established. Pale and foreign kinds sell slowly, and the bulk of the week's transactions consists of Plantation Ceylon, which has gone off without animation at irregular and lower prices; a better demand has appeared at the close, without causing any alteration in value.

The quantity of Ceylon Coffee afloat for Great Britain is estimated as follows:—Plantation, 309,411 cwt., against 304,625 cwt. at the corresponding date of 1869; Native, 32,829 cwt., against 55,771 cwt. The quantity afloat for the Continent is 2,694 cwt. Plantation against 6,546 cwt., and 1,845 cwt. Native against 7,679 cwt. The quantity of Coffee landed in the fifteen weeks ended April 16, 1870, was, of Ceylon, 5,537 tons, against 6,609 tons during the corresponding period of 1869; of all descriptions, 8,423 tons, against 12,083 tons. The quantity entered for home consumption was, of Ceylon, 2,469 tons, against 3,053 tons; of all descriptions, 4,434 tons, against 5,279 tons. The quantity exported was, of Ceylon, 5,539 tons, against 7,171 tons; of all descriptions, 9,720 tons, against 14,214 tons. The stock on April 16 was, of Ceylon, 11,393 tons, against 7,380 tons; of all descriptions, 18,487 tons, against 11,810 tons.

SUGAR.

The market has re-opened with a dull inquiry, and with the exception of superior descriptions, which have realised previous rates, the sales effected have exhibited a decline of 6d. per cwt. Of Penang, 305 bags good soft yellow, duty 4s. 9d., sold at 31s. 6d.; 1,043 bags fine grey and yellow, duties 4s. 9d. and 5s. 3d., being bought in at 33s. 6d. Of Manila 19,145 bags unclayed Taal were offered in public sale and all bought in at 22s. Afloat the cargo per Orient 1,420 baskets Java No. 14 has been sold at 28s. 6d. for the United Kingdom.

The quantity of Sugar landed in the fifteen weeks ended April 16, 1870, was, of Penang, 792 tons, against 1,126 tons in the corresponding period of 1869; of Manila, Java, and China, 5,614 tons, against 11,580 tons; the quantity entered for home consumption was of Penang, 755 tons, against 1,053 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 7,030 tons, against 3,842 tons. The quantity exported was, of Penang, 32 tons, against 42 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 1,294 tons, against 662 tons. The stock on April 16 was, of Penang, 2,335 tons, against 360 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 33,080 tons, against 38,670 tons.

CAMPHOR.—The market for China continues dull at 87s. 6d. per cwt. No transactions are reported in Japan, which is scarce and firmly held.

CUBEBS.—The market is steady, 200 bags in public sale realised 27s. 6d. to 28s. 6d. per cwt.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—Ceylon is slightly lower, being obtainable at £41 10s. per ton.

CINNAMON.—At auction an offer of 100 bales Ceylon met a slow demand and only 55 bales sold, middling first sort at 2s. 7d., medium second at 2s. 6d, low and ordinary at 1s. 7d. to 2s. 2d., good third at 2s. 3d., low to medium at 10d. to 1s. 7d. Chips: 1,107 half-bags Ceylon were offered and chiefly bought in at 6½d., only 40 bags good common bark selling at 3¼d.

CUTCH.—The market is flat. Small sales are reported of Pegu at 24s. 6d.

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Cinnamon scarce, and wanted; inferior very plentiful. Citronelle dull, at 2⅜d. per oz. Lemon Grass very dull, and few buyers, stocks are so large.

GAMBIER.—Lower prices are current, private business being reported 16s. 9d. to 17s.; no public sales, 850 bales block having been offered and withdrawn.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Steady, only limited trade. Copal sells readily; of 858 cases at auction, about half were placed at 50s. per cwt. for good bold clean hard, 41s. to 42s. for rough unsifted sorts; and 31s. 6d. to 38s. for middling small and dusty to good soft. Damar: Large arrivals and dull market. Gamboge: No sales since our last report.

GALLS.—Offers of China are being made at 48s. 6d. per cwt., but there is no inquiry.

INDIA-RUBBER.—Market without change; no business since our last.

JAPAN WAX.—The new arrivals have not yet been placed upon the market, and there has again been an absence of business.

MUSK.—Of the parcel reported in our last as retired, a few caddies have been sold at the high price of 35s. per oz. for every good pile. A parcel of 47 caddies has since been brought to auction; middling thin pods sold at 28s. to 29s., and very rough and bally 16s. 6d. to 18s. 6d.; the quality generally was rather indifferent.

PEPPER.—Black: The market continues dull, and prices exhibit a downward tendency; the only sales have been 200 bags Penang, partly damaged, at 4⅞d., and 100 bags Singapore, at 5¼d., an offer of 154 bags damaged Singapore being bought in at 5d. White: No transactions.

RICE.—Recent light landings and deliveries of fair extent have absorbed the surplus of 13,000 tons which occurred at the beginning of the year, and stocks in both years are now about on a par, which combined with a considerable falling off in the quantity afloat, has given some impetus to the demand, and sales of good extent have been effected on higher terms. On the spot sales of all descriptions have been more readily effected at about 3d. advance. Floating sales, chiefly on speculative account, have taken place at 4½d. to 6d. advance.

SOY.—We note the sale of twenty casks China at 2s. 11d. per gallon.

SAGO contiunes dull of sale, and 100 boxes good small pearl have been sold at 18s. 3d., being rather lower.

SAPANWOOD.—The market is steady but quiet; sales are reported of forty-one tons Manila at £7 10s. to £9, ten tons Siam being offered and bought in at £9.

STAR ANISEEDS.—China are scarce and firm; 10 cases were offered at public sale and withdrawn.

STICKLAC.—There is an absence of demand, except for fine clean sifted gum, which is scarce.

TAPIOCA.—No business in East India since our last report.

TIN.—There is rather less doing than when we last reported, but a further advance has been effected of £2 to £4, the closing rates being —Straits, on the spot £133, afloat £132; Banca, £135; Billiton, £133. The price of English tin has advanced to £135 for common, and £139 for refined.

TOBACCO.—At the last sales, of 2,112 bales Manila leaf offered, about 1,300 bales sold—Cagayan, 1a at 2s. 10½d. to 2s. 11½d.; one lot 2s. 4d.; sea-damaged, 2s. 1½d. to 2s. 6¾d.; 2a, sound, 2s. 2½d. to 2s. 3d.; sea-damaged, 1s. 6¾d. to 1s. 9½d.; 3a, sound, 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 2d.; sea-damaged, 7½d. to 8d.; 1, 2, and 3a, mixed, 1s. 8½d. to 1s. 9¾d. Ysabela, 1a, sound, 2s. 8d.; sea-damaged, 1s. 8d. to 2s. 4d.; 2a, sound, 2s. 1d.; damaged, 1s. to 1s. 1¾d.; 3a, sound, 1s. 0¾d. to 1s. 1d.; damaged, 7d. to 7¾d. 26 bales Yara, CL, at 2s. 3d. to 2s. 7¾d. 25 bales Esmeralda, damaged, 11½d. to 1s. 3d. We note the sales also of 145 bales Java Tobacco, at 7½d. to 8¼d., and 20 cases 2a Manila Cheroots, at 6s. to 6s. 3d.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.

—o—

TEA.

The following is from Messrs. Beebe's Circular:—

Since the 27th ult. our market for tea has ruled without animation, the demand, except for Greens, having been quite limited. Sales reported from first hands during the fortnight include 7,850 half-chests Green, 350 half-chests Japan, 950 boxes Oolong, and 1,100 half-chests Souchong. We make no changes of importance in our quotations, but many of the figures are nominal at the moment. The demand for consumption continues moderate, and promises but little improvement while the question of a reduction in the duty remains unsettled.

The unusual quantity of dust and broken leaf found in many of the chops of this season's import of Green, is leading to not a little trouble in their disposal; and unless a remedy is soon found for this bad feature in their packing, will render such goods decidedly unpopular with the trade.

The following are the current quotations:—Greens (Moyune, Twanki and Fychow): Gunpowder, common to good, 65c. to 105c.; fine to finest, 75c. 120c.; Imperial, common to good, 52c. to 90c.; fine to finest, 55c. to 110c.; Young Hyson, common to good, 45c. to 95c.; fine to finest, 47c. to 110c.; Hyson, common to good, 50c. to 85c.; fine to finest, 53c. to 100c.; Hyson Skin, 43c. to 52c.; Foochow Oolongs, common and good, 53c. to 59c.; superior and fine, 62c. to 75c.; finest, 80c. to 110c.; Amoy Oolongs, common and good, 52c. to 58c.; superior and fine, 60c. to 70c.; finest, 75c. to 80c.; Souchong and Congou, common and good, 44c. to 52c.; superior and fine, 54c. to 63c.; finest, 70c. to 85c.; Japans, common, 57c. to 62c.; medium, 68c. to 70c.; fine and finest, 78c. to 85c.; choice, 88c. to 95c.

The total receipts of Tea from China and Japan at the port of New York from Jan. 1 to April 6, 1870, were as follows:—Greens, 9,316,465 lbs.; Japans, 2,621,807 lbs.; Souchongs, 1,950,077 lbs.; Oolongs, 5,559,558 lbs.; other sorts, 20,000 lbs.; total, 19,467,907 lbs. The stock on Jan. 1 was 9,866,167 lbs.; which, added to the above total, gives a result of 29,334,074 lbs. Subtracting from this total the exports from Jan. 1 to April 6, 1,315,366 lbs., and the withdrawals for home consumption during that period, 9,286,417 lbs., there remains a total of 18,732,291 lbs., representing the stock on the last-named date. The receipts from March 23 to April 6 amounted to 4,212,540 lbs.; the withdrawals for home consumption to 1,601,316 lbs.; and the exports to 333,729 lbs.

COFFEE.—The market for Brazil has assumed a quieter tone, but, owing to the stocks on hand continuing limited, prices are firmly maintained at the advanced noted in our last report. In East India sales are reported of 90 bags Java at 19½c. gold, 500 bags Ceylon at the previously current rates, and 10,400 mats Java, per New Orleans on private terms. The currrent quotations are:—Java Government bags 20c. to 21½c.; mats, 20c. to 22c.; Singapore, 18c. to 19c.; Manila, 16c. to 17c.; Native Ceylon, 17½c. to 19c. gold. The stock of Manila on the 1st April was estimated at 2,627 bags, against 6,769 bags on April 1, 1869; of Java (Government) at 815 bags, against 1,641, bags; of Java mats, 51,929, against 41,808 bags; of Ceylon, 1,500 bags, against 7,000 bags; of Singapore nil. in both years.

CAMPHOR.—China is quoted 18c. gold (in bond).

COIR YARN.—Sales are reported on private terms amounting to 250 bales Ceylon.

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Anisced is quoted $2.12½; Cassia, $1.25 gold.

GAMBIER.—The current quotation is 4½c. to 4¾c. gold (duty paid); stock, very small.

HEMP.—Manila continues to be well inquired for by manufacturers, and a fair amount of business has been done on former terms; the following transactions are reported:—2,000 bales, per Sonora; 1,000 bales, per Tabor; 3,058 bales, per Franklin; 1,150 bales, per Western Chief, at 14c. to 14¼c. gold; and 500 bales damaged, prices not given. The stock of Manila on the 1st April was estimated at 20,591 bales, against 3,205 bales at the corresponding date of 1869, and 27,844 bales in 1868. The imports into the United States from the 1st January to the 31st March, 1870, were 48,136 bales, against 34,795 bales during the corresponding period of last year, and the quantity afloat on the 31st March was 18,317 bales, against 12,676 bales at the same date last year.

INDIGO.—A considerable business has been effected in Manila at previous prices, the sales since our last report being about 50 cases at

Digitized by Google

$1 to $1.35 currency. At the close there is slightly less activity observable, but these rates are firmly maintained.

PRESERVED GINGER.—China is quoted $8 currency (duty paid).

RHUBARB.—The quotation for China is $1.50 to $2.50 currency (duty paid).

RICE.—The tone of the market generally has improved, and the recent decline has been recovered. As regards East India kinds, Rangoon has attracted some attention for export purposes, the sales reaching 4,800 bags at $3.12½ to $3.35, gold (in bond), showing some advance; small lots have likewise been sold for home consumption at $3.25 cash. The stock of East India on the 1st April was 6,350 bags, against 10,940 bags at the corresponding date last year, and 4,200 bags in 1868.

SILK.—The market continues fairly steady in prices, with a moderate delivery and increasing scarcity of fine Silks, the stock of both Canton and China being chiefly of medium quality. The current quotations rule as follow:—Tsatlee, Nos. 1 and 2, per lb., $10.50 to 10.75; No. 3, $10 to 10.25; Nos. 4 and 5, $9 to 9.25; Re-reeled, super. com. to fair, $9.25 to 10.25; Taysaam, Nos. 1 and 2, $8.50 to 9; Nos. 3 Med. 4, and 5, $7.25 to 8; Re-reeled, super., com. to fair, $8.50 to 10; Hainan, Re-reeled, super., com. to good, $9 to 10.25; Canton, Re-reeled, extra fine, $8 to 8.50; Re-reeled, No. 1 Cumchuck, $7.25 to 7.50; Re-reeled, common to fair ½, $6.75 to 7; Japan, Mybash, superior, $10.50; Sodai, super., com. to fair, $9 to 10.25; Oshio, superior, $10 to 10.50; Koshu, sele, superior, $9.25 to 9.50.

TIN.—The continued advance in the London market has had the effect of creating a further advance here, although the inquiry has been somewhat less active. In Straits business has been done to the extent of about 3,400 slabs at 32c. to 33c. gold (cash and thirty days' sight); Banca commands high rates, owing to a small supply; 150 slabs are reported sold at 35c. to 36½c. gold. At the close Straits is held at 33½c. to 33½c., and Bancas for half-a-cent advance upon the rates above given.

SUGAR.—The general market is active at an advance of about ⅛c. per lb., but there has been no business in East India descriptions. Holders have, however, advanced their quotations, which at the close are—Java (Dutch Standard, Nos. 10-12) 8⅝c. to 9⅛c.; Manila, current to superior clayed, 8c. to 8⅛c. The stock on the 1st April was of Java, 9,024 bags 2,366 baskets, against 310 baskets at the corresponding date last year; of Manila, 291,428 bags, against 39,190 bags; of China, 1,911 bags against nil.

SPICES.—The stock is concentrated in the hands of dealers, and the business has been entirely in lots to the trade; in this way there is a steady good demand at full prices. Cassia tends upward, and, at the current rates, small lots are parted with more readily than large parcels. We notice sales in lots of 250 cases Nutmegs at $1 to 1.02½; 40 do. Mace, $1.22½ to 1.25; a few casks, $1.20; 800 to 900 bales Cassia, 46c.; 400 do. Cloves, 25¾c. to 26c., mostly at the latter price; some in bond, 6c.; 200 bags Pimento, 19c.; 200 do. Ginger, 11¼c. to 11¾c.; 1,500 do. Pepper, 26½c. for Sumatra and 27c. for Singapore, all gold.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKET REPORT.

COFFEE.—The market continues dull and languid. Imports show a slight increase over the same time last year. Jobbers buy sparingly, fearing a change in the tariff. O. G. Java is quoted 22c.

CORDAGE.—Imports from Jan. 1 to March 31: 3,889 coils, 2,153 packages, 33 bales. The market exhibits firmness, with sales of 55,000 lbs. New Bedford laid Manila, at agents' rates. The San Francisco Company adhere to the advanced price of 18½c. for round lots to the trade, and 20c. for jobbing parcels.

CHINA MATTING.—Imports from Jan. 1 to March 31: 54 bales 2,920 rolls. As the warm season approaches there is more inquiry for Chinese, both white and checked.

RICE.—Imports from Jan. 1st to Mar. 31st: China, 5,773,952. lbs. The Sumatra, from Hong Kong, brought 41,124 bags. With a good healthy trade with the interior, and but a limited stock of choice quality, prices are hardening. We quote No. 1 China at 6¼c. to 6½c.

SPICES.—Stocks are moderate. We quote Black Pepper 26c.; Pimento, 22½c.; Cloves command 32c. to 33c.; Cassia, 46c. to 47c.; Nutmegs sell, in lots, $1.10; Sago is superabundant, in sacks, selling at 5c., in tin at 8½c., the latter rate in jobbing lots. Tapioca is held at 9c. to 10c.

SUGAR.—There has been no business in East India. Imports from Jan. 1st. to Mar. 31st: China, 193,685 lbs; Manila, 2,149,411 lbs.; Batavia, 4,498,126 lbs.

TEA.—Imports from Jan. 1st. to Mar. 31st: China, 145,163 lbs.; Japan, 360,016 lbs. Considerable attention is being drawn to this port as the probable future source of supply for the United States. The success and rapidity with which the Benefactress' cargo of 12,000 chests Japan was carried by rail across the continent to Chicago and New York fully demonstrated the practibility of the overland route. The market is quiet, prices without material change, sales partaking largely of a jobbing nature. We quote Japans at 65c. to. 90c per lb.; Comet Oolongs at $1 to 1.50, according to chop, size, and description of package.

CASUALTIES.

Advices from St. Vincent, C. V., dated April 7, state that the Correze, (French transport), for China, struck the west point of Gosee, March 25, and remained seriously damaged.

Advices from New York, dated April 7, state that the Noord Brabant (Dutch ship), v. Overclieft, which arrived at San Francisco, Feb. 17, from Batavia, leaky, had been condemned at the former place, and was to be sold, April 8.

The Magdala (str.), Davison, from Liverpool to Singapore, China, &c. (via Suez Canal), put into Falmouth, April 17, having struck on the Longships, and stove her fore compartment; the cargo has not been damaged, but the vessel must be lightened, in order to dock.

Advices from Elsinore, dated April 20, state that the Signe, from Java to Copenhagen, had passed that place for her destination in tow; it was reported that she had had her bowsprit and jibboom broken by collision with an English steamer off the Scaw.

The Herald, Gardner, from Java to Boston, which put into St. Thomas March 27, leaking badly, &c., was discharging on the 30th for repairs.

Advices from Hamburg, dated April 25, state that the Therese Behn, Schmidt, from Cronstadt to the River Amoor, put into Valparaiso March 4 short of water, having lost her water-casks overboard in the North Sea during the November gales; she proceeded March 8.

Advices from Fayal, dated 16th April, state that the China, (Off., No. 66,587), White, from Java to Amsterdam, put in there, April 10, with rudderhead split; she had had a preventive tiller made, and would proceed as soon as it was fixed.

The Senator Iken, Schumacher, for Hong Kong, which put back to Cardiff, after being on shore at Lundy Island, would go into dry dock.

NOTICES TO MARINERS.

The following notices have been issued from the Admiralty-office:—

CEYLON.—With reference to Notices to Mariners No. 85, dated 12th November, 1869, respecting placing a light-vessel near the great Basses Rocks, off the south-east coast of Ceylon, during the time of building a lighthouse on the rocks, the Trinity House, London, has given further notice that they have received information of the arrival of the temporary light-vessel, and they have every reason to believe that she was moored in her position, and exhibiting her light, on or before the 1st April, 1870.

JAVA.—The Netherlands Government has given notice that the following alteration has been made in the harbour lights at Anjer, viz.:—In place of the two lamp lights exhibited from the eastern and western mole head, a red light is now exhibited from the extremity of the western mole; it is elevated twenty-three feet above high water, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of four miles. Also, that an aqueduct has been constructed at Koepang which reaches the shore, and from which water can be obtained without trouble or expense. Also, that a white light is now exhibited on Jelaka Island, Macclesfield Channel, visible from seaward, from S.W. by S. round by south and east to N.N.W.; it is elevated thirty-nine feet above the high water level, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of eight miles.

JAPAN.—The Japanese Government has given notice that the wood fire exhibited from Cape Idsu, Nipon, has been discontinued. With reference to Notice to Mariners No. 28, dated 5th May, 1869, respecting the construction of a lighthouse on Nosima Point, near Mela Head, Yedo Gulf, the Japanese Government has given notice that the light is now exhibited from the lighthouse. The light is a fixed white light, elevated 134 feet above the high water level of the sea, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of twenty miles. The illuminating apparatus is dioptric or by lenses of the first order. The tower is octagonal shaped and painted white. Position, as given, lat. 34 deg. 53 mins. 20 secs. N., long. 139 deg. 51 mins. 28 secs. E. Also, that the temporary light has been discontinued.

THE STEAMER "OTTERBURN."—The following is the report of the steamer which sailed some time since from London for Colombo via the Suez Canal:—Ran on shore in Aboukir Bay. Cargo discharged into lighters and conveyed on board H.M.S. Himalaya, and the greater part of it was taken by the Himalaya to Alexandria. The remainder was kept in the lighter. Attempts were then made to get the ship off. These attempts were unsuccessful, and during the operations it commencing to blow, and the cables parting, the ship was carried higher up on the shore, and left in a situation more disadvanageous for getting off than before. The owners of the lighters rendering assistance claimed to be considered as no longer acting under contract but as salvors, and by means of their tugs, assisted by tug-vessels belonging to the Government of the Viceroy finally, succeeded in getting her off and towing her into harbour. She was there found to be considerably damaged; her rudder, sternpost, and screw being broken. The salvors, who had seized the cargo remaining in the lighters as security for their claim, demanded the sum of £15,000 on the cargo, including a heavy claim made by an Austrian, claiming as one of the salvors, but not in submission to the jurisdiction of the English Consular Court. Proceedings were taken in the British Vice-Consular Court, and afterwards in the Austrian Consular Court, to enforce these claims on the property. The salvors rendered an account to the Court of about £4,000 money out of pocket. The officer for the Committee arrived at Alexandria on the 8th inst., and found that the proceedings above mentioned were then in full course; he finally settled all salvage claims whatever, out of Court, for the sum of £3,100, including law expenses, and left Alexandria again for England on the 17th inst. The ship was repaired, and, on survey, appeared to be in a fit condition for proceeding on her voyage.

THE MID-CHANNEL TELEGRAPH STATION.—In connection with the laying of the Mid-Channel cable, a message has been received from Penzance to the effect that the cable has been completed to the telegraph station-vessel Brisk, and that the signals are perfect. The Brisk has been moored at the entrance of the English Channel, in about fifty fathoms of water, by Rear-Admiral Hall, C.B. She lies forty-nine miles N.E. ½ E. from Land's End, and fifty-six miles E. by N. ½ N. from the Lizard. At the top of her mainmast a large black cone will be hoisted during the daytime, and a powerful globular light at night, elevated thirty feet above the sea. A flaring light will also be shown every fifteen minutes from an hour after sunset till an hour before sunrise. During foggy weather, day and night, a bell will be rung for half a minute every quarter of an hour, and a gun will be fired every quarter of an hour for the first six months, and after that date every hour. The vessel will also have on board a stock of provisions, and a supply of coal, for vessels in immediate need. A steam-tug, having her headquarters at Penzance, is attached, to attend to orders by telegraph from the telegraph ship.

FOREIGN VESSELS TRADING TO JAPAN.—BOARD OF TRADE, WHITEHALL, APRIL 14, 1870.—The Committee of Privy Council for Trade have received a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Yedo, transmitting the subjoined notification which he has issued for the information of British subjects, in consequence of a request to that effect received from the Government of Japan:—"Notification: The undersigned, in common with the representatives of the other Treaty Powers, has been requested by the Japanese Government to make known, for the information of their respective countrymen, the determination of the Japanese Government to enforce the provisions of the treaties in respect to the trading of foreign vessels in non-opened ports in Japan. The Government has accordingly to warn British subjects of the penalties they incur by the commission of any breach of the aforesaid stipulations —Signed, HARRY S. PARKES, H.B.M.'s Legation."

THE "FUH-LE."—The steam-tug Fuh-le, intended for service in the Chinese rivers, and fitted with the Warsop aëro steam-engine, has been heard of from Gibraltar, on her outward voyage; and her engines seem to have fulfilled, or even surpassed, all anticipation. Her captain writes, "the aëro steam system is invaluable to us," and then, going into details, he reports that he has carefully weighed his coal, and that he has had a consumption of only two and a-half tons in twenty-four hours, working the vessel against a heavy lumping sea, that has severely tried her capabilities. The engines of the Fuh-le are of 60-horse power nominal, and the consumption mentioned amounts to somewhat less than 4 lb. of coal per nominal horse power per hour, while 10 lb. per hour is considered a moderate consumption with ordinary engines. The indicated or actual horse power of the Fuh-le amounts to about thrice the nominal, but the exact proportion varies with differences in the boiler pressure. As far as this pair of engines are concerned, it would seem that the saving by the aëro system is probably sixty per cent.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

HATTON-COURT, THREADNEEDLE-STREET, LONDON.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

The Directors beg to submit to the shareholders, as usual at this time of the year, the General Balance Sheet of the Bank, made up to the 31st December last, and showing a net profit for the twelve months of £62,588 3s. 1d.

The Directors regret the diminished amount of profit, as compared with that of last year, attributable chiefly to the adverse state of the Exchanges between England and the East, and the general depression of trade. There is however no deduction to be made in respect of the Old Bad Debt Account, the liquidation of which has progressed so favourably as to reduce the amount to a comparatively small figure.

The Directors have therefore determined to recommend a continuance of the Dividend at the rate of Six per Cent. per annum, free of Income-tax, absorbing £24,000, or the same amount as the Interim Dividend declared at the Half-yearly Meeting in October. The surplus remaining, inclusive of the balance brought from last account, is £37,953 12s. 3d., which the Directors have carried forward to Profit and Loss New Account, as a provision against contingent loss by the Batavia failure, announced a year ago. None of the legal questions involved therein have yet been finally decided by the Dutch and German Law Courts, to which they were necessarily referred, and where the suits are still pending.

Mr. John Allan and Mr. T. A. Mitchell, M.P., are the two Directors who now retire by rotation, and they both present themselves to the shareholders for re-election.

The two Auditors, Mr. Jonathan Thorp and Mr. Owen Lewis, also offer a continuance of their services for the ensuing year.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility, at moderate charges, for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships and steamers.

Their large Granite Dock has 286 feet length on the blocks, and at average spring tides can receive vessels of 16 to 17 feet draught. It has a caisson-gate and a powerful centrifugal steam pump, and an engineer's workshop fitted with lathes and tools, driven by steam; iron and brass foundries, boiler-makers' shop, a large smithy and carpenters and boat-builders' sheds, superintended by resident Europeans.

Their two smaller GRANITE DOCKS can receive, at spring tides, vessels drawing 12 feet.

Spars, timber, and other Dockyard material kept in stock.

Quarters for officers and a DRY GODOWN for stores of vessels under repair.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMON and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon street, London, E.C.

"Mr. Alfred Scott Gatty is getting quite a reputation for his comic songs, and deservedly so. They possess far more real humour than the popular songs of the music halls, and we need hardly say are far above them in every respect. Mr. Gatty's words are funny without being vulgar, and there is not one of his songs but what has a hearty and legitimate laugh in it. 'I Really am so Sleepy' is a very simple melody, set to clever racy words, and will sure to be a favourite amongst those who enjoy an honest comic ballad."—Vide Illustrated Midland News, Jan. 8.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

SELF HELP.—In sickness it was a momentous matter to find an easy, ready, and reliable remedy for outward disfigurations and inward disorders before the inestimable discovery of these preparations. No invalid need now be at a loss for successfully managing ulcers, sores, tumours, boils, bruises, sprains, &c. Enveloping Holloway's medicine are very intelligibly printed directions for using them, which should be attentively studied and immediately followed by the application of his treatment. Sooner or later the sufferer will assuredly triumph over the worst diseases. This searching Ointment disperses all those malignant humours which aggravate many diseases of the skin, often prevent the cicatrisation of ulcers, and ever kindle inflammatory tendencies in the system.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).

OPENING OF THE NEW SUBMARINE ROUTE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND INDIA.

The Cable between Suez and Bombay having been successfully laid, the new submarine line is now open for traffic, and messages for India will be received at all the Postal Telegraph Offices in Great Britain and Ireland.

Until the opening of the Falmouth and Malta line, telegrams from the United Kingdom will be sent by the Anglo-Mediterranean Company's line from Turin to Egypt, and thence by the British Indian cable to Aden and Bombay. Both Companies' lines are worked throughout by English clerks.

To insure the transmission of messages by this route, it is necessary that the sender should insert the words "Via Malta" in the text of the despatch, immediately after the address of the receiver.

Per P. and O. steamer from Suez, June 12.—To Hong Kong: Mr. and Mrs. Overbeck.

Summary of News from the Far East.

YOKOHAMA.

The French mail delivered this morning brings Yokohama advices to March 20; by the Pacific mail however we have three days' later news, a telegraphic summary of which appeared in our last issue. The English mail of Jan. 28 was received in Yokohama March 19.

The advices now to hand bring no confirmation of the report that the U.S. Consul at Yedo had been assassinated. The event, if it really happened, must have taken place between the 23rd March and the 1st April, as the telegram announcing it was dated Shanghai, April 8. It will be observed that the telegram dated Yokohama, April 10, contains no mention of such an event, and the last telegram from Shanghai states that the report had been contradicted. The rumour appears therefore to have been entirely groundless. The following items are abridged from the summary of the Japan Herald:—

A Court of Inquiry has been held by Admiral Rowan into the loss of the Oneida. The proceedings consisted of little more than the repetition of the evidence given at the late inquiry by the survivors. At the close of the Court it was determined to forward the evidence to Washington for consideration by the Navy Department.

The divers who went down to explore the wreck only succeeded in reaching the quarter-deck, whence they brought a cutlass and a Japanese glove-box. They were unable to penetrate to the lower deck, the hatches being blocked up with broken spars, bulkheads, chairs, &c. It is probable that efforts will yet be made by the U.S. Admiralty to recover the guns, engines, &c., and perhaps the whole of the wreck as it now lies; but we believe that further operations will be suspended until Admiral Rowan personally decides on what is to be done after the tenders for raising her are opened.

A difficult and complex case is now being heard in the United States Ministerial Court, before the Hon. C. E. De Long. The story may be stated thus:—Some persons carried on business here under the style of Schumann and Co, who in November last arranged to pay a sum of $10,000, owing by them to Messrs. Allmand and Co., part in coin and part in goods, within a certain time. Passing by the door a few days after, Allmand saw a large crowd of coolies carrying away goods, and unusual bustle going on. He then examined into what was taking place, and satisfied himself that Schumann's goods were being fraudulently disposed of at a ruinous sacrifice—in fact, people were helping themselves to goods and taking them off "without money and without price." He at once went to the U.S. Consulate, where the Consul issued an attachment, levied directly after on the goods, which had diminished from a respectable stock to a few hundred dollars, worth, some of the missing goods being found by the Marshal in other parts of the settlement and at Yedo, where, however, the U.S. Consul thwarted Mr. Schumann's intention of selling them. It was also discovered that some property of the creditors was at Hakodate, and that debts were owing to Schumann by firms at Hiogo and Shanghai. Schumann confessed judgment in favour of Mr. Allmand's claim, and subsequently made an assignment of property for the benefit of his creditors. On the 15th November all the goods seized were sold by auction, and realised $6,500, whilst other receipts swelled the gross returns from the estate to $14,000. Finding that no other creditors were on the spot, the U.S. Consul did not deem it necessary to institute a prosecution of Schumann here, knowing that Schumann had creditors in San Francisco, whither he was to sail by the outgoing steamer, and believing that they would take the matter up in person. Allmand's claim was settled, and the balance of the estate retained in the hands of the assignee pending further claims. Shortly after Schumann's departure, Messrs. Schultze, Reis and Co received authority from various creditors at San Francisco to act on their behalf, and they have since instituted an action in the Ministerial Court to set aside the judgment in favour of Allmand, alleging fraud in respect thereof and charging that the goods were disposed of with undue and ruinous haste, waste, and loss, together with unfair preference of Allmand's claim. Schumann has also sent over an affidavit stating that he never confessed judgment of Allmand's claim, that the certificate of his doing so was merely issued to cover the Consul's action, and that the latter charged him $300 in gold for his advice.

The case has now lasted fifteen days, during a part of which the Consul has been laid up. By the testimony of one of Schumann's partners it was stated that he carried away a considerable sum of money with him; and it was also said that he received, but did not account for, $4,000 from a Japanese the day before his departure. Nothing whatever has been adduced to sustain the charge against the Consul, who, it was shown, had to threaten Schumann with a criminal prosecution before he could obtain possession of the books.

At the outset of the case, Mr. W. H. Doyle, an attaché of the U.S. Consulate who acts as counsel for the defence, demurred to ministerial jurisdiction on this ground, but was overruled. Finally the minister has decided to adjourn the case until reliable evidence of the bankruptcy proceedings in California can be obtained, but in order to dispose of the personal charges against the integrity of the Consular officials has agreed to hear all the evidence on that head, in order that the public may be in a position to judge for themselves of the truth of the statement. The minister has however intimated that if it be found legal proceedings have been instituted in California the local proceedings will be quashed, unless the assignee in California come in as a party plaintiff.

Yedo is still crowded with two-sworded men of unamiable looks and behaviour. About a week since the secretary of the French Legation, M. Du Bosquet, while out for a walk, attended by a guard, was threatened by three of these roughs, who partially drew their swords. His guard immediately decamped, whereupon he drew his revolver and prepared for action. Seeing this, the boiling-over patriotism of his menacers cooled down, and they slunk off rapidly.

Japan has hit upon a method of providing for paupers frequently suggested in England but never carried out. It was that waste lands and commons should be allotted to the able-bodied poor, to turn their barren areas into fertile land. The cost was to be advanced by Government, and repaid gradually by the peasant proprietors In fact, the application of the scheme to Ireland was once strenuously urged in private upon the Government. The Japanese have now, in consequence of the hordes of unemployed in Yedo, disforested a royal chase about twenty miles off, which is now being brought under tillage, and will provide eventually subsistence for 5,000 people.

Forty of the labourers who left here about eighteen months ago in the Scioto for Hawaii returned the other day in the R. W. Wood, looking greatly improved for their sojourn in a foreign land. They were met on board by the Government officials. The visit of the Japanese Ambassadors has been very satisfactory, and they say they have everywhere found their countrymen well cared for and kindly treated by their employers: and that every vestige of doubt has been cleared away. Nevertheless they have seen fit to direct that those who desired to go home might do so at the expense of the Japanese Government, which plan was cheerfully agreed to by the employers.

A scheme for the better supply of the settlement with water has been laid before the community by Mr. Brunton, the Government engineer. The subject was vigorously mooted by officials in 1862. About A.D. 1900 the works will probably be commenced.

On Friday morning the counter of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation was crowded with holders of its notes demanding specie in payment. The run had evidently been brought about by the action of a few unprincipled speculators, who foresaw a chance of reaping gain from the confusion that was likely to ensue. Fortunately confidence was quickly restored, and we understand that none of the respectable traders either native or foreign believed the report. The action taken by the other banks in the matter in endeavouring to allay the rumour was highly commendable. The amount withdrawn was very inconsiderable.

On the 22nd March a formal inspection of the 1-10th Regiment took place on the Swamp, and differed in no respect from the ordinary routine of military inspections.

Dr. Hosier, of Osaka, has received an appointment at Tosa, as Medical Instructor and Superintendent of the hospital to be built under his supervision and direction. The appointment is for five years, at a salary (information from a native source) of Rios 500 per mensem. The s.s. Nautilus, which was lately purchased by the Prince of Tosa, recently conveyed Dr. Hosier and Japanese suite to Kochi, the capital city of Tosa.

Captain Graham, the sole survivor of those on board the Eliza Corry, arrived at this port in the steamer Thales on Wednesday last. The circumstances attending the wreck were heartrending in the extreme, the crew being washed away one after the other. To add to the agony of the scene, the wife of the captain was on board, and with the rest met her fate in a watery grave.

The extensive lot of land, No. 20, with the building recently erected thereon, belonging to the estate of the late Mr. Hoey, was sold on the morning of the 16th inst., by public auction, for $12,600. We have been told that two years ago the late proprietor was offered $30,000 for the land alone.

The telegraph to Yedo appears to be in high favour with the Japanese, the messages transmitted averaging about sixty or seventy per diem.

There is some talk of the plot of ground in the rear of the Consulate being converted into an ornamental garden, the required funds ($10,000) being found by a joint-stock company, and the revenue to be derived from yearly subscriptions paid for the right of entrance.

The Japan Gazette states that a false charge has been made against the British Consular chaplain by a gentleman on behalf of his son, a minor, who had represented to him that the chaplain had used language of a very offensive character to him, and followed it by a violent assault. The charge was proved by the accuser's own witness to be utterly false, and that the youth had himself been so saucy that nothing but the greatest forbearance on the part of the accused saved him from severe and well merited punishment.

HIOGO.

Our advices from this port are to the 16th March. The following items of news are from the Hiogo News:—

It is rumoured here that there is trouble in Prince Chosiu's country, caused, it is stated, by a certain high official of his not getting the share to which he was entitled of the amount awarded by the Mikado last year to each of his principal supporters during the late civil war.

The North-German S.S. Adler made her trial sea-trip on Sunday week last to Kobe, making the distance in somewhat less than two and a-half hours, since which she has made the passage in a little over two hours. As the river was so very low, some thought she would hardly get down. It seems, however, that she only draws four feet six inches aft, and we are told much less forward, so that she need not stop for a few inches of mud. A contract has been made with the Prince of Bingo to purchase her for 18,000 rios in silver boos. The Adler is said to be a most comfortable little boat for passenger traffic.

The kitchen-garden seeds so serviceably sent out by the United States Agricultural Department having been forwarded by the United States Consul, Colonel Stewart, to Bishop Williams, the latter gentleman is daily occupied in distributing them amongst the cottagers and farmers in this vicinity, and explaining to the natives their uses and modes of culture. It would be difficult to devise a scheme by which, at so trivial a cost, so much good could be done as is being done in this instance. Certainly, if he who has made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before has proved a benefactor to his race, he who introduces new sources of food into a country is deserving of that country's gratitude.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

A Peking correspondent writes that M. Popoff, Chinese Secretary of the Russian Legation, died on the 27th February, of typhus fever and was buried in the Russian cemetery outside the Anting mên.

A Tientsin correspondent writes that there are seven steamers and two sailing vessels on the river, and that the Bund is literally covered with all classes of merchandise—the river, however, being still blocked by ice in many places, and the dealers not operating except at very low rates, as they are not yet able to forward their goods into the interior. 7 and 8½lbs. shirtings are quoted at Tls. 2.07 and Tls. 2.25 respectively. A heavy fall of snow during the night of the 10th March.

SHANGHAI.

Dates are to the 23rd March. The London mail of Jan. 28 arrived out on the 18th March, and telegrams, via Kiachta, reached to the 1st March.

The North China Herald of the 22nd gives the following items:—

We hear that Dr. Macartney, the manager of the Nanking Arsenal, has lately visited Wuchang, at the request of the Viceroy, Li-hung-chang, and that the experiments made by him in gunnery and with rockets in the latter's presence have proved so satisfactory, and so pleased Li, that he has given directions for a very considerable extension of the arsenal. It is evident from this that Li's power is not confined to his own Government. We find him here controlling an arsenal in the capital of another Viceroy. We understand that the new buildings will be commenced forthwith.

A meeting of shareholders in the Shanghai Gas Company was held on the 17th March, at which the accounts, showing a net profit on the year's working of Tls. 25,520 were passed, and a dividend of Tls. 12 per cent. was resolved on. This will absorb Tls. 18,000, and Tls. 7,520 are carried to the reserve fund, which is thus raised to Tls. 20,913. It was announced that the price of gas will be reduced from $4.50 to $3.50 per 1,000 feet for the current year, and further gradual reductions, as consumers increased were promised. Sir Edmund Hornby, Messrs. Cameron, J. T. Brand, J. I. Miller, E. Hogg, and J. G. Purdon were elected directors for the current year; and a remuneration to each director of Tls. 10 per meeting was agreed to.

A meeting of members of the Shanghai Club was held on the 18th March, at which, briefly, the following resolutions were come to. The Recreation Fund Trustees, as proprietors, will take members' entrance fees and subscriptions, as rent, to enable them to pay ground-rent, repairs, interest on mortgage, &c. The members will have the entire building in their hands, and will make the charges pay the working expenses. Fourteen gentlemen were nominated a working committee. We congratulate the community on the clear position which has at length been gained. Twelve months ago the Club belonged to shareholders who were burdened by a double mortgage, the complication being increased by the fact that they were themselves, in great part, their own mortgagees, and yet the public were claiming that they should repay their loan. At present the Recreation Fund, which seemed hopelessly sunk as a second mortgage, has come to life as proprietor of the Club Building—under mortgage, certainly, but with a fair prospect of redeeming it; the Club shareholders have been released from their responsibility—though at the expense of their capital; and the much desired result has been attained of the members working their own Club It may be true that the rent paid is heavy; but the cost to individual subscribers is not so, considering the advantages offered by the Club building; and the satisfactory knowledge remains, that any surplus which this rent may yield to the Recreation Fund goes towards redeeming the mortgage, and towards a prospective reduction of the rent. We think the community are much indebted to Mr. Groom, who has conceived and worked out the whole plan for evolving order out of such apparent chaos, and for helping to place both the Club and the Recreation Fund on a sound basis.

Our home readers may still retain sufficient interest in Shanghai to care for a summary of the Council's Report, showing how municipal matters are progressing. The reassessment of land has been completed, and the result shows a depreciation of Tls. 306,000 from the assessment of 1865. Chinese houses, on the other hand, are rising in value, and the Council naively complain that owners do not invite a higher rate of taxation. Appeals, they complain, are made very readily when the assessment is in excess of rental; but the same readiness is not shown to ask that the assessment be raised, now that it is inferior. Does it not occur to the Council that people who collect and people who pay taxes represent opposite interests, and that each one has quite enough to do to look after his own? If a man is overcharged, he protests; but it lies with the collector to claim the full amount due. Of course, it may be said that the Council and Land owner are one; that the former is merely administering the interests of the latter; but, practically, they stand in the same position to each other as governors and governed, at home; and we do not think instances will often be found there, in which a tax payer will offer more than the Government demands. There have been, and probably always will be, men who send £5 notes as conscience money to the Chancellor of the Exchequer; but they represent the exception rather than the rule; and we fear the Council will have to look after the interests of the Revenue themselves, without much aid from individual contributors. Indeed, it is likely that many owners of Chinese house property do not even know at what rate their houses are assessed.

The Council make no comment on the condition of the river, but mention that the Municipal engineer has completed a survey of the foreshore, and that a plan will be shown to those interested who will call at his office. We trust that this permission will be availed of, as we believe inspection of the plan will convince people of the justice of our late remarks, and of the necessity for prompt remedial measures. We note that the Gas Company have offered to light the street lamps in future at $3.75 a piece, instead of $5 as charged heretofore. It remains to be seen how this rate will compare with that which may be offered by the French Company. The Fohkien road drain is being laid on a proper level, and the usual repairs are going on to the roads, bridges, and side walks. It is suggestive how greatly the foreign population has increased of late years, that a further portion of the cemetery already needs preparation; for recent seasons have not been unhealthy nor the per centage of deaths excessive. The projected road to Woosung remains in statu quo; we fear it will be found too expensive for the present, although as a new outlet it would be most desirable. In the meantime it is satisfactory to learn that the municipality is escaping from debt, the second instalment of the loan having been duly paid.

We had thought that every phase of the registration struggle had been exhausted; but the case of Mr. Ashton describes quite a new case. Mr. Ashton omitted to register himself within the prescribed time and was summoned. He went to the Consulate to forestall the trial, and was told he could register on payment of a commuted mulct of $3½, in addition to the fee and the cost of the summons. He appears to have acquiesced, so far as to give a C. O. for the total amount, $10. Subsequently however he demurred to the $3.50, but eventually tendered it under protest H.M. Consul refused to accept it on those terms, and pursued Mr. Ashton for the whole fine of $10, for not having registered within the prescribed period. Mr. Ashton pleaded, 1st, that he could not be summoned twice for the same offence; second, that the grant of the Registration Certificate condoned the offence. He was, however, fined on the broad ground that he did not register during January, as he ought to have done. Mr. Church, Mr. Cameron, and Mr. Kingsmill also appeared to summonses issued against them for non-registration. They were all fined, but Mr. Kingsmill refused to pay.

The Steamship Navigation Company's steamer Shantung has arrived out, making the passage in fifty-eight days from Glasgow, via the Suez Canal. She is to be put on the Tientsin line.

REPORT ON THE SANITARY CONDITION OF SHANGHAI.

All Shanghai has been startled by the report of Dr Jamieson on the sanitary condition of the settlement. In forming an estimate of the effects of residence in Shanghai on the health of Europeans, the climate comes first under consideration, and though it is beyond human power to modify the scorching heat of the summer sun, or to evade the sudden changes of temperature, still there are certain means of adapting the conditions of life to these unfavourable circumstances. By avoiding overcrowding, dirt, and bad drainage, the baneful effects of the climate may be in a great degree lessened; but Dr. Jamieson finds not only that these precautions have been neglected, but that the danger is vastly increased by the ills inseparable from uncontrolled prostitution and a host of low grog-shops, where liquor of the vilest and most poisonous quality is dispensed to the floating population. Besides these and other internal evils, the settlements, it is to be remembered, are surrounded by reeking fields covered from time to time with human excreta. In their immediate neighbourhood stands a filthy native city, contaminating both air and water, and forming a nest wherein contagious diseases are generated, and from whence they are disseminated. The stately foreign hongs are built on an alluvial plain, or in other words on a mud flat, which renders efficient drainage all but impossible. There are no wells whence to derive pure water, and in some neighbourhoods the crowding of native dwellings imports into the very centre of the foreign community the horrible conditions that prevail in native cities and villages. Passing to the native city, which from its proximity has a direct effect on the foreign settlements, Dr. Jamieson describes the condition of things within the walls as truly awful:—

"Every street is broken up at short intervals to admit of the construction of open privies, the contents of which are allowed to accumulate until they acquire what is considered the proper degree of maturation. Should they be filled to overflowing before that period arrives they are allowed to spread their overflow over the street in the vicinity, the filth frequently extending to the very thresholds of the opposite houses. And all this is permitted without any attempt to remedy so pestilent, so glaring a nuisance, without any regard to the intolerable stench produced, or to the effect of the sun streaming its rays upon these enormous cesspools. Even the butchers hang their meat for sale in the midst of the poisonous vapours arising from neighbouring privies. The slime-covered ditches and stagnant pools to be found in every direction are made receptacles for filth at one moment and are used for the purpose of washing rice at another. The open spaces are converted into huge ash pits, where decaying ordure, dead animals, rotten vegetables and so forth are allowed to accumulate and fester. The canals that intersect the city are used by those living on the banks as ash-pits, cesspools, and what not, and as these are flooded at spring tides only, the river is periodically polluted by the refuse that has accumulated since the previous high tide. And then the moat is a common sewer, wherein the drainage, such as it is, from three sides of the city is received, and whence it is discharged into the river. Thus, by the condition of the city and its immediate surroundings, the air and water are alike polluted, and the residents in the settlements are constantly subjected to the influence of a vast collection of pestilential foci. Hence, whatever measures may be taken by foreigners, for their own protection, there will always be, so long as the present state of things is not interfered with, more than sufficient material in the city to produce a fatal epidemic."

To mitigate this state of things, Dr. Jamieson proposes that the native authorities should be required to put some sanitary regulations in force, including the liberal use of disinfectants. The condition of the river next comes under consideration. and as all the water used by foreigners in the settlements for domestic purposes is derived from the river, its effect on the health of the settlements can hardly be overestimated. Yet it is tainted not only with the refuse of gasworks. &c., but with every imaginable description of filth, and Dr. Jamieson shows clearly enough how the excreta of cholera and dysentery patients find their way into the water used for drinking and cooking by the residents. With this question are intimately mixed up the water-supply of the settlement, which clearly ought not to be drawn direct from the river as at present, and the condition of the fore-shore—another fruitful source of disease. There is a great extent of surface exposed to the sun's rays, on which every tide leaves a considerable share of the organic debris, both animal and vegetable, that it had in suspension. It deposits fecal matter and other abominations, the emanations from which, especially in hot weather, sensibly pollute the atmosphere. The same remarks apply with equal force to the Soochow, Yang-King-pang, and other creeks. All these evils are intensified by the condition of the drains, which rapidly accumulate poisonous filth, and are never efficiently cleansed. The thorough drainage of such a place as Shanghai is confessedly a difficult problem, seeing that a large area at the back part of the settlement is considerably below high water mark. Of course the only complete remedy would be a proper flushing of the sewers, but in the absence of this several palliative measures are suggested.

Digitized by Google

Dr. Jamieson also puts forth some good practical suggestions relative to baths and wash-houses, regulation of brothels, quarantine, &c., but our space will not allow us to follow him through all of these. On the whole, shocking as it is, we believe his gloomy view of the sanitary condition of Shanghai to be entirely justified by the facts. From the time when a large Chinese population was permitted to herd in crowded and badly-constructed houses, in the midst of the foreign hongs, Shanghai ceased to be a "model settlement." The North China Herald is reluctant to avow this, and clings to the traditional title, despite Dr. Jamieson's report; indeed, it broadly charges him with grossly exaggerating the evil and ignoring the good points of the settlement. But, warmly as we have defended the moral character of Shanghai when assailed by the Duke of Somerset, we cannot with equal confidence defend its sanitary character from the attack of Dr. Jamieson. He has certainly made out a strong case for prompt and vigorous action on the part of the municipal authorities.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

We have advices from this port to April 1, but no news of importance. From the Weekly Advertiser we learn that H.B.M.'s Consul General, T. G. Knox, Esq., has been appointed by H.E. the Spanish Ambassador Acting Spanish Consul.

The King's steam yacht Imperatrice Eugenie passed down the river on March 22, having on board H.E. the Spanish Ambassador and suite, who expect soon to sail hence, the Ambassador having concluded the objects of his mission. Mr. Knox, H.B.M.'s Consul General, and Acting Spanish Consul, accompanied the Spanish Ambassador.

On the 21st and 22nd March two extensive fires occurred at Bangkok, one of them very destructive. The buildings near the palace of H.R.H. the late Kroma Mun Mahesuen, with one exception, were devoured Several lives have been lost. About three hundred houses were destroyed, and many of the poor are left homeless.

BORNEO.

—o—

LABUAN.

We extract the following from Labuan Correspondence dated 9th March:—

The Italian War Steamer Princess Clotilde arrived at Labuan from Manila on the 10th, and left on the 21st February for Pontianak, and other Dutch possessions; she will return to Labuan in about two months.

The Italian Government are desirous of establishing a colony on the coast of Borneo, and the Commander of the Princess Clotilde has had an interview with his Highness the Sultan of Bruni on the subject. There has been an unusual number of deaths among the soldiers of the Ceylon Rifles stationed here, arising from a malady termed Beeree Beeree. The rest of the inhabitants, both European and natives, enjoy good health.

H. M. S. Elk has returned from Sarawak.

JAVA.

—o—

BATAVIA.

The news of the projected telegraph between Singapore and Java has given rise to a good deal of discussion. In the Java Bode we find the following article on the debate which took place last November in the Second Chamber of the States General on the subject of telegraphic communication:—

"The Minister of the Colonies said that amongst the applications for concessions without subsidy, he had met with two for connecting directly Ceylon with a point on the west coast of Java (about Anjer) and a line direct to the west coast of Australia. Now, Mr. Speaker. I have disposed of all these applications provisionally within the last few days, and have intimated to the two applicants last referred to that the Government would give permission to them on certain conditions, but without any exclusive concessions, to land a cable on Java from Ceylon in connection with the ordinary Telegraphic System. A term is stipulated, on expiry of which the permission is to be withdrawn if not acted upon in the meantime. We must now wait the result."

Subsidy or no subsidy—Java to be taken up in the British Australian Telegraph hire with or without money—that was the question. In appropriate terms the Minister would have expressed himself thus:—"My financial conscience revolts against subsidy unless when it is unavoidable." Call the subsidy "Bertram," Mr. Van Bosse (Finance Minister) "Alice," and Mr. de Waal (Minister of Colonies) "Robert," and it is as if it stood thus:—Alice wont have that I, Robert, meddle with Bertram.

We who heartily wish to see the British Australian line carried out, require to keep that starting point in view. But the opposition of the Minister reached its crowning point, when, in following the flight of Mr. Fransen van de Putte in his speech, he entered with him into a learned discussion as to the commercial importance of Singapore, Mr. Van de Putte had put on the wings of the eagle, and had favoured the Chamber with one of his most profound prophetic glances into the world of commerce—in short, he became sublime. "The importance of connecting Java with Singapore," he had said, "was nearly as great as that of connecting British India with Europe, for," he added, "Singapore is the centre of the entire Freight and Exchange trade of the East." The temptation to answer lyric with lyric was now too strong for the Minister. "The honourable member"—he began quite drily, but with the intention of soaring gradually higher and higher, "The honourable member has reminded me that I am still in his debt for a reply as to the great value of a connection with Singapore. According to him Singapore is the general regulator of commercial matters in the Indian Archipelago. I can by no means admit this. There is at the present moment to be discerned an evident striving to break Java loose from Singapore, and I have more sympathy with that desire than that we should be continually dependant upon that English free port, and it is just on that account that I am the more favourably disposed to the applications for concessions that I have referred to, and which propose to connect Ceylon direct with Java, and Java direct with Australia without including Singapore; we shall at all events make a trial with them. I consider it most damaging, both in a political and commercial point of view, to subscribe to the idea that Singapore is to be the permanent emporium of commerce in the Indian Archipelago. No: this is what Batavia must be and can be, if we only regulate our mercantile laws accordingly." Thus, in that memorable sitting of the Chamber did these two colonial reforming eagles stride away heavenwards on their politico-commercial stilts, with the pale sun of a November day in their faces.

Take these words of the minister for good coin, and nothing can come of the telegraphic connection with Singapore, of which the Java Courant of 25th March opens to us the prospect. The "quarter altogether worthy of credit" from which that Government paper received this joyful communication will turn out not to be worthy of credit. "All the necessary preparatory measures having been completed" will end in a disgraceful retractation, for not only does the Minister feel more sympathy for a telegraphic connection between British India and Australia which leaves out Singapore, but, if it depended only upon him, he would work against any connection via Singapore. Where, in the latter times, has there ever been discerned an evident striving to break Java loose from Singapore? Well, then, if any such desire does exist, the Minister, who is essentially a man of the present day, and quite up to his day, will assuredly do all he can to promote this most laudable desire for emancipation. Away with Singapore! Ceylon for ever!

But had it not been for "Alice"—we repeat it—Robert would have sung a different song. That is what gives us confidence in the tidings communicated by the Java Courant. Now that the shares of the British Australian Company are all subscribed for, and that that Company can do without the Dutch subsidy; now that in case of need, and in event of opposition on our part, that Company is empowered to lay a submarine cable direct from Singapore to Port Darwin, giving Java the go-by, all these unfriendly words of his Excellency must just be regarded as never having been spoken. Had the British Company been inclined to recompense evil for evil, it might have answered Mr. de Waal's "without including Singapore" with an equally hostile and narrow-minded "without including Java." But it is still a fortunate circumstance that on opening Pandora's Box there is found, besides a little hope, also some generosity remaining on the earth, or, if you will rather have it so, it is indeed fortunate that there exist certain social interests in common which make it easy for Ministers and Companies, patrons and private individuals, to be generous.

We have already confessed our unbelief in the Dutch Steamboat Company (which proposes to establish a steam communication direct with Holland through the Suez Canal) We desire now to renew our expression of confidence in the British Australian Telegraph Company, and the reason for that difference is, not that we accept the Java Courant as gospel, but that we put more faith in an enterprise with eight millions of guilders than in an undertaking which has nothing else to show than a pamphlet. And now, if there is anyone whose feelings of patriotism revolt at the idea that Netherlands India should get a telegraph cable to Singapore, and again another such cable to Port Darwin, without paying a farthing for it, our advice to him is to write to London and take as many shares in the English Company as his love of country may dictate.

Respecting the proposed Exhibition to be held at Batavia the Java Bode gives the following further particulars:—

We are enabled to state that the efforts of the Commission ad hoc for an exhibition of the works of ancient and modern artists, to be held in the buildings of the Botanical and Zoological Garden here, has thus far been crowned with a wished-for result, as from many sources important contributions have been promised, so that now fully two hundred paintings in oil colours and some particularly fine engraving, besides a collection of photographs of the paintings of living masters, will be forthcoming. The successful bringing about of the Exhibition thus assured, the commission has fixed the period of sending contributions to be from the 25th of March to the 25th of April; while the opening of the Exhibition for the members and for contributors will take place on Monday, April 18, at nine in the morning, at the close of a matinee musicale, to commence at seven A.M. For the general public the Exhibition will be opened on the following day, a charge of one guilder each being made for admission for grown persons, and half a guilder each for children.

SUMATRA.

The Sumatra Courant of the 15th March says:—"We learn that in a short time an armed demonstration will have to be taken against the island of Nias, where some chiefs are waging a fierce warfare. A certain chief in the Batta lands had assumed a warlike attitude in consequence of some slaves escaping from his rule and taking refuge among the Battas under the Dutch rule. He sent to demand the refugees, but the demand was refused, and he forthwith commenced to make reprisals and hostile incursions, even carrying off people into slavery. An armed expedition will have to be sent out to bring him to reason and proper terms."

—o—

SINGAPORE.

From this port our advices are to the 7th April. The outward English mail of Feb. 25 was received there on the 31st March.

An adjourned meeting was to be held after the departure of the mail, to take into consideration the despatch of Governor Ord. Some difference of feeling existed upon the subject, it being thought, apparently by a minority, that a sufficient expression of opinion had already been given by the Straits Association of London. Other and more occult influence seemed to be at work.

We take the following from the Singapore Daily Times:—

The question of the Waterworks, which will come before the Legislative Council during the ensuing session, will be about the first one of any real public utility that it has had to deal with, and will, it is to be hoped, receive a fair and impartial consideration. We have the advantage of knowing beforehand what his Excellency's views are on the subject; he thinks that it should be undertaken at the expense of the Municipality, and not of the Government. The Municipal Commissioners, on the contrary, deem the Government bound to carry out the undertaking of the Indian authorities, and bring a good supply of water to the foot of Fort Canning Hill, whence the Municipality are willing to distribute it over the town. A great deal of correspondence has passed between the Commissioners and the Government on the subject, and a number of schemes submitted, only one of which has received the approval of the Commissioners,—that of the Colonial Engineer for bringing the water through iron pipes, laid in the present conduit, to the foot of the hill in front of the ice house, whence it is proposed to be distributed over the town by means of standpipes. This is not only the simplest and most economical of all the schemes submitted, but is one exactly suited to the requirements of the place. We are not so sanguine, however, that it will be so considered by the Council.

The China Mail gives publicity to a rumour that Mr. Deane, the Superintendent of the Hong Kong Police, has been appointed Commissioner of Police for the Straits Settlements. We are not yet aware that the post is vacant, and therefore deem the report rather doubtful.

With reference to the feeling manifested in Java with regard to the question of telegraphic communication, the Daily Times says:—It seems that among a section of Dutch politicians—including the Minister of Colonies—a considerable jealousy of Singapore has been evidenced on the question of the extension of the telegraph to Java, and a strong effort has been made, and, so far as we may judge from the language of the Minister, is still making to connect the west end of Java by a direct submarine line to Ceylon, thus avoiding connection with Singapore. The chief obstacle to the realisation of this direct line to Ceylon probably lies in the fact that the Australian Telegraph Company is no longer a conjectural project, but a capitalised undertaking, bound to be carried through, whatever discouragement be offered to it in Holland; and moreover, it does not seem that, with all his desire for an independent cable, the Minister for the Colonies is in a position to subsidise the scheme with a grant from the Imperial treasury, and we don't think private enterprise would be inclined to take it in hand on its own merits. It is impossible to deny the patriotic enthusiasm of the Minister who refuses to accept the supremacy, even in a commercial sense, of a neighbouring Power, and in his assurance that Batavia and not Singapore must be the permanent emporium of commerce in the Eastern Archipelago, the Netherlands traders in Java may find some hope for bright days in the future. But we fear beyond the circle of his own countrymen, and even among them only the most sanguine, the brilliant picture he draws will be viewed rather as one of what might have been than what may be. With a start of two centuries, with a position not much less central, and with the advantage of a large inland industry at its back, Batavia has seen ebb away from her shores to those of this island that trade which it is now sought to regain for her. Singapore may owe much to its geographical position, but who will say what the relative positions of the two places would have been had Dutch conservatism earlier yielded to the irresistible force of free-trade? Half a century ago had Batavia been thrown open to the ships and trade of all nations, and had the internal Government of Java been reconstituted, and become the preserver of order and the guardian of trade, instead of the taskmaster and tax-gatherer of Holland—even had the reforms now realised been realised then—the aspirations of the Colonial Minister at the Hague might not have been far from realisation. But it is now too late. Nor will an obstinate ignoring of the claims of Singapore, and a refusal to co-operate in progress that will benefit both, because it will not benefit Java only, tend to repair the evils of the past.

We are given to understand that the Prussians have turned their attentions from Pulo Tioman to Pulo Tingih as a desirable locality for a coaling station for their navy steamers, &c. There can be little if any doubt that both they and the Austrians are alive to the propriety of having a few possessions and places of call in this part of the world which they may call their own. Well selected and well handled, such stations might prove to be the germs of prosperous colonies.

GOVERNOR ORD'S DESPATCH.

Some adverse criticism having been passed on the reply of the Straits Association to the above despatch, in respect of the omission from the latter of Clause 20, we are asked to state that no such clause existed in the copy as received from the Colonial-office, the numbers running from 19 to 21. Probably the error was a mere clerical one on the part of the copyist at the Colonial-office, but it was one which the Association was not at liberty to rectify. They were bound to present an exact copy of the document sent them. It was impossible for them to say but that a clause No. 20 really existed in the original, in which such indisputable evidence was given of Governor Ord having lost both his senses and his temper, that Lord Granville in mercy withheld it.

IMPORTS.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.—The high price of grain, and the limited supply of native produce, have had a somewhat depressing influence upon the import trade, which, with the exception of the single article of Rice, was less active than usual at the time of the year. Stocks of staple Cottons were, however, moderate, and prices of these were fairly maintained. Grey Shirtings improved during the early part of the month, but had since lost a portion of the advance, and closed weak at quotations. Cotton Yarn had been in fair demand throughout, and at the close more inquiry existed, with nominal stocks. Black Velvets and Turkey Reds slightly lower, owing to arrivals, but the latter were still in request. Victoria Lawns continued to attract attention at improving rates. With the exception of Taffachelass, good patterns of which were saleable, other Cottons were comparatively neglected. Orange Camlets were still asked for, and there was a demand for Green; other colours dull and lower. Figured Orleans maintained their value. Black Lustres continued to find buyers at fair rates. A few small sales of Black Cloth reported, but these goods, as well as Blankets, were almost entirely neglected. Quotations:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16 to 24, per bale, $168; 28 to 32, $175 to 176; 38 to 42, $185 to 190; G E Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., 38½ yds. 39 in., per piece, $2.75; 8¼ to 8½ lbs. do., $3.25 to 3.31; 9 lbs., 38½ yds. 44 in., $3.50 to 3.62; G E White Shirtings, 56 to 60, 40 yds. 36 in., $2.50; 64 to 72 reed, do., $3.50; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., $2 to 2.40; Handkerchiefs, Assorted, per doz., $0.65 to 0.75; Brocades and Spots, White, per piece, $2.62; do., Dyed, $3.25 to 3.62; Chintz, Assorted, 24 yds. 30 in., $2.50 to 2.87; Chintz, Turkey Red, do., $2 to 3.25; Turkey Red Cambrics, 3 lbs., do., $3.31 to 3.37; Velvets Black, $2.37; Victoria Lawns, $1.12 to 1.25; Taffachelass, Double Warp, 12 yds. 43. in., $2.80; do., Single do., do., $2.50; Camlets, SS, Orange, $16 to 17.

YOKOHAMA.—The dulness which characterised the market at the date of our last report had continued, and had induced some holders to make slight concessions in rates. 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings had met with a moderate inquiry at a reduction of 2½ cents per piece; 7 lbs. maintained previous value. The demand for Yarn had been but small, and the few lots quitted established a decline on last rates. Fancy Cottons had been generally dull, excepting Dyed Brocades, which were occasionally inquired for. Woollens continued neglected. The current quotations were:—G. E. Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, $2.77½ to 2.80; ditto, 8¼ to 8½ lbs., $3.00 to 3.05; do, 9 to 9¾ lbs., $3.50 to 3.60; G. E. White Shirtings, 56 to 60 reed, $2.65 to 2.85; do., 64 to 72 reed, $2.90 to 3.05; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., $1.90 to 2.30; Brocades and Spots, White, $2.80 to 2.90; do., dyed, $.40 to 3.60; Chintz, Assorted, $2 to 2.50; Handkerchiefs, per dozen, $0.65 to 1.10; Turkey Red Shirtings, per piece, $3.00 to 3.10; Taffachelass, Double Weft, $2.95 to 3.25; ditto, Single, $2.30 to 2.60; Velvets, Black, $8.25 to 9.50; Cotton Yarn, No. 16 to 24, $52.50 to 53.25; ditto, No. 28 to 32, $52.00 to 52.50; ditto, No. 38 to 42, $57.00 to 59.00. Woollens and Mixtures: Camlets, S and BBB, per piece, $13.50 to 14.50; ditto, SS, $13 to 13.50; do., SSS, $9.50 to 10.50; Cloth, Medium and Broad, $0.80 to 1.60 per yard; Lastings, per piece, $12 to 13.50; Long Ells, Assorted, $8 to 8.75; Orleans and Lustres, Plain, $375 to 4.25; do., Figured, $3.50 to 4.50; Lead, per picul, $6.25 to 6.75; Iron, Nail Rod, $2.70 to 3.50; Bars, $2.60 to 3.25.

SHANGHAI.—Grey Shirtings: During the week a steady business had been done in 8¼ lb. goods, and last quotations have been fully maintained. The dealers had been eager buyers, but few importers would sell at ruling prices. Stocks were getting low, and a feeling existed that ere long holders would obtain their own rates, viz., Tls. 2.30 per piece, ordinary delivery. There were few 7lb. goods on offer, and an advance of 1c. per piece had been established. The demand for the heavy makes was languid, and the market exhibited a drooping aspect. White Shirtings unchanged in value; purchases to a fair extent reported. T-Cloths lower, and if holders continued to thrust their stocks on the market, a still lower range of prices would be the result. About 40,000 pieces had changed hands during the week at reduced rates. Fine Mexican 18 by 18 7 lb. goods placed at Tls. 1.76 to 1.80 per piece. Chop Dollar sold at Tls. 1.85 per piece. Drills: No change to notice in these goods; sales trifling and rates slightly easier. Fancy Cottons: Spotted Shirtings, Brocades, Turkey Reds, Chintzes, and Handkerchiefs, had all been inquired for at former quotations; little business had resulted. A sale of Dyed Damasks reported at Tls. 4 65. Other kinds of Fancies without change. Woollens were in no better position than last reported. Long Ells, indeed, were worse, and quoted fully 5c. per piece lower. C.P.H. Scarlets were being offered by the silkmen, who accepted them in barter, at Tls. 5.90 per piece; a parcel of well-known chop assorted had been forced off at Tls. 5.70 per piece, Camlets, Lastings, Crapes, and Spanish Stripes remained as last quoted, with a dull market. Figured Orleans had declined in value, and quotations for them must be considered nominal. Metals—Nail Rod Iron: Settlements only 10,000 bundles of small and assorted sizes, at Tls. 2.37 to Tls. 2.40 per picul. The market for the lesser kinds was very strong, but the large sizes, being in plentiful supply, were decidedly at a discount. Lead: No improvement could be noted, and prices were nominally the same; one small parcel of L.B. had changed hands at Tls. 5.10, which may be considered a good price. Quotations:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.4 to 2.0.7; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2 2.7 to 2.3.1; 9 to 9.12 lbs., Tls. 2.5.5 to 3.1.5. White Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2 to 3.0. T-Cloths, 6 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.4.5 to 1.7.2; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.5 to 1.8.5; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls 2.0.5 to 2.1.6; XX Tls. 2.4.0; American Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.7 to 3.8.8; American Jeans, 30 yards, Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.8.5; American Sheetings, 40 yards., Tls. 3.4.5 to 3.8.5; English Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.5 to 3.6; Dutch Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.4 to 3.4.7. Handkerchiefs, Blue, per dozen, 0.5.5 to 0.6.5; Brown, 0.4.8 to 0.4.8. White Figured Shirtings, per piece. Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.4; Dyed, Tls. 3 to 3.1. Camlets, SS, Tls. 11 to 12.1; SSS, Tls. 10 to 10.5; Spanish Stripes, per yard, Tls. 0.5.0 to 0.5.5; Medium Broad and Habit Cloth, Tls. 0.9.0 to 1.5.0; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yards, HH, per piece, Tls. 6.0.5; CPH, Tls. 6; Assorted, HH. Tls. 5.7 to 5.8; CPH, 5.8 to 5.9.5. Lastings, 30 yards, Tls. 10 to 11; Crape Lastings, 30 yards, Tls. 5 to 8; Crape Lustres, Tls. 3.7.5 to 4.2.5. Orleans, Figured, 30 yards, Tls. 3.4 to 3.8; Plain, 30 yards, Tls. 3.8 to 3.7.5.

SAIGON.—The business transacted had been very limited in comparison with the important sums produced by the exportation of rice. 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings met with good inquiry. White Irishes were dull of sale, and stocks very heavy. Quotations:—Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., $3.15; do., 7 lbs., $2.70; Grey T-Cloth, 6 lbs., $1.90; do., 5½ lbs., $1.80; do., 5 lbs., $1.70; do., 4½ lbs., $1.60; White Irishes, $2 20 to $2.27½.

BANGKOK.—Business in manufactured goods had been interfered with to a considerable extent by the ceremonies attendant on the cremation of the late King. The Siamese New Year holidays would commence in a few days; and until they are over there would not be much business doing. G. E. Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., Tls. 5¼ per piece (equal to $2.84 per piece net); ditto, 7 lbs., Tls. 4⅝ (equal to $2.22 per piece net); ditto, 6 lbs., Tls. 3½ (equal to $1.89 per piece net). Grey T-Cloths, 7lb., Tls. 3¼ per piece (equal to $1.76 per piece net); ditto, 6 lbs., 2⅞ (equal to $1 49 per piece net); Grey Madapollams, Tls. 37 per corge (equal to $19.98 per corge net); White ditto, Tls. 39 (equal to $21.06 per corge net); White Figured Shirtings, Tls. 5 per piece ($2,70 per piece net); Grey Yarns, No. 40s., Tls. 257 per bale ($138.78 per bale net); ditto, No. 30s., Tls. 255 (equal to $137.70 per bale net); ditto, No. 18 24s., Tls. 215 (equal to $116.10 per bale net); Turkey Red Twist, No. 40s., in 10 lb. bundles, Tls. 240 (equal to $129.60 per bale net); Green, No. 40s., in 10 lb. bundles, Tls. 150 (equal to $81 per bale net); Orange, No. 40s., in 10 lb. bundles, Tls. 143 (equal to $77.22 per bale net).

SINGAPORE.—The latest quotations were:—40s Mule Twist, $150 to to 147½; 8¼ lbs. Shirtings, $3.05 to 3.07½; 7 lbs. Shirtings, $2.55; 5 lbs. T-Cloths, $1.60; 6 lbs. ditto, $1-87½; 7lb. ditto, $2.10.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.—During the month settlements to the extent of 1,200 piculs had been made, at higher rates than those ruling at the departure of last mail. Medium to fine had been readily purchased, but the lower grades neglected, owing to the high prices asked by the holders. The Esperanza had sailed for New York with 438,098 lbs. Settlements:—About 1.200 piculs. Arrivals:—About 500 piculs, and coming forward very slowly. Stocks:—2,800 piculs. Quotations:—Common, Rios 16 to 20 per picul; good common, Rios 21 to 25 per picul; medium, Rios 26 to 33 per picul; good medium, Rios 34 to 38 per picul; fine, Rios 38 to 45 per picul; finest and choice, Rios 46 and upwards per picul.

YOKOHAMA.—The business done had been very slight, settlements chiefly for San Francisco amounting to about 500 piculs only, making the settlements since the departure of previous American mail not more than 3,000 piculs. Stocks continued very small, and of a very undesirable quality; arrivals also had been almost nil; otherwise a fair business would have been done, as the demand reported in our last continued unabated. Prices very firm at last quotations. The Cœur de Lion and Alphonsine had sailed, the former with 988,765 lbs. for New York, and the latter with 295,535 lbs. for Boston. The Brave and Charles C. Leary were loading for New York. Quotations:—Common, $24 to 26 per picul, nominal; good common, $27 to 29; medium, $31 to 35; good medium, $36 to 39; fine, $40 to 42; finest, $43 to 46; choice, $47 to 50.

SHANGHAI.—Black: There had been very little doing, there having been no settlements and only 530 chests shipped on native account, leaving about 2,200 chests in stock. Green: Had been settled to the extent of 5,000 ½-chests at Tls. 21 to 38.50, showing very full rates for medium to good Teas. Stocks estimated at 5,400 ½-chests Fychow and Moyune, and about 2,500 ½-chests Shanghai packed, but many of the chops shown as country Teas were mixed with Japan leaf. There were no Pingsueys remaining.

SILK.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.—With the improved position of Silk in Europe, and the high rates ruling in Yokohama, silkmen had materially advanced their ideas. Settlements had been made to the extent of about 112 piculs, mostly in Hank sorts, with a small proportion of Sodai, Itchisen, &c. Large parcels of Silk had been shipped to Yokohama on native account. Quotations:—Hanks: Fine, $685.71 to 742.85; Medium, $619.05 to 666.66; Common, $571.43 to 619.05. Sodai: Fine, $642.85 to 666.66; Medium to Common, $571.43 to 619.05. Itchisen: Fine, $638.09 to 666.66; Medium, $571.43 to 628.57; Common, $523.81 to 571.43 per bale.

YOKOHAMA.—There had been a good demand, and there was a continued current of business from day to day. Prices were fully maintained for best sorts with even an upward tendency on some, but there was less disposition to pay extreme rates for lower grades. Settlements about 750 bales; arrivals barely equal to sales. Quotations:—Mybash and Sinchu Hanks: Extra, 36s. 7d.; Best, 34s. 4d. to 35s. 10d.; Medium, 30s. 6d. to 32s. 10d.; Inferior, 27s. 6d. to 29s. 9d. Oshu: Extra, 37s. 9d. to 38s. 11d.; Best, 33s. 11d. to 35s. 10d.; Medium, 31s. 3d. to 33s. 2d.; Inferior, 27s. 6d. to 29s. Coshu: Best, 29s. to 30s. 6d.; Medium, 26s. 4d. to 27s. 10d.; Inferior, 23s. 8d. to 25s. 11d. Sodai: Best, 30s. 2d. to 32s. 1d.; Medium, 28s. 3d. to 29s. 9d. Etchesen: Best, 28s. 3d. to 30s. 2d.; Medium, 26s. 4d. to 28s. 3d.; Inferior, 23s. 8d. to 25s. 7d.

SHANGHAI.—The inquiry for Silk had continued on a fair scale, and some 300 to 400 bales had been settled; the demand chiefly run on Haining silks No. 2 and under, Tls. 500 to 505 being quoted for No. 2 Fatmow; other silks, such as Re-reels, Szechuens, &c., had also found buyers, but transactions in Tsatlees had been restricted owing to the short stock, there being no "chops" left on offer. Some 100 to 150 bales had again been bartered for Woollens. Unsold stock reported 3/400 bales, and it was not expected that more than 7/800 bales would reach before the new season.

COCHIN CHINA AND SIAM PRODUCE.

SAIGON.—Rice: Soon after departure of last mail prices had not only regained their former position but reached even the figure of $2.15. Subsequently prices were for a moment weaker and $2.10 was willingly accepted, but in spite of the daily decreasing amount of shipping and the want of money which was generally felt, the bulk of the business had been done at $2.12½, and contracts passed at $2.08. Long Vinhlong Grain: Several transactions at $1.83 to 1.90, but the market having been fairly supplied with this grain, prices receded to $1.70. The exports since show the extraordinary amount of 677,800 piculs, divided as follows:—Europe, 11,000 piculs; Singapore, 13,640; China, 63,110; Japan, 583,050; total, 677,800. Hides offering more freely, prices receded to $8¼ per picul for Buffalo, and 11½ for Cow. Horns in good demand, and are readily bought up at $8.50 per picul. Black Pepper: Some trifling lots brought to the market, and fetched $9 to 9¼ per picul. Cocoa-nut Oil very scarce, at $11 per picul. Gamboge: No stocks on hand; nominally, $62 per picul.

BANGKOK.—The following is from the Bornee Company's report, dated March 26:—Business has been somewhat interfered with during the greater part of this month, owing to the ceremonies attendant upon the cremation of the late Supreme King; and although these are now over, we are not likely to have a very steady market till the first week in April, by which time the Siamese New-Year holidays will be completed. Rice: Owing to the very favourable accounts from China and Japan, the Chinese are eager buyers of Namuan Mill cleaned Rice at $1.22½ to 1.25 per picul, and of Nasuan Mill cleaned Rice at $1.40 to 1.45 per picul, put on board in the river in mat bags. Our rates for paddy have not as yet advanced, and we believe that prices of rice will again give way after the holidays unless the arrivals from China are excessive. White Rice is worth Tls. 56 per coyan ($1.85 per picul f.o.b. in mat bags). Paddy: The new Namuan grain now begins to come to market, though somewhat scantily, at Tls. 25 to 26 per coyan. Supplies of Nasuan are abundant at Tls. 33½ to 33½ per coyan. Sugar is taken for Bombay at Tls. 9½ per picul ($6.21 per picul f.o.b.). Bown comes to market slowly, and is worth Tls. 5½ per picul (3.68 per picul f.o.b.). Sapanwood is neglected at our former quotations. Sticklac: Stocks are sufficient for local use only, and we are not likely to have supplies till June or July when the waters up country admit of produce coming down. Teaseed: First supplies may be expected in June. Gum Benjamin is scarce, and worth Tls. 125 per picul for first quality. Gamboge: A parcel of 10 piculs, No. 1, has been placed at Tls. 91 per picul. Buffalo Horns are in fair request at Tls. 15 per picul. Buffalo Hides are in little demand at Tls. 11 per picul ($7.78 per picul f. o. b.). Black Pepper: The first boats ought to arrive at our market in a very few weeks.

TEA SALES.

(PRODUCE MARKETS REVIEW.)

The large quantities of Tea brought forward for public sale last week has almost wholly occupied the attention of the dealers, and as usual, when heavy sales are progressing, the market has been dull. Altogether, nearly 50,000 packages have been brought forward in the sales, but of this large quantity a very considerable proportion is extremely low Tea, some of which has realised from 3d. to 7d. per lb.—a fall of about 1d. or 1½d.—but very few dealers would have been interested in this so-called Tea, however low it might have sold. The parcels of leafy Tea which realised from 5d. to 7d. were, many of them, very objectionable, and closely resembled in appearance and water the article known as "Maloo mixture." Good common Congou has realised prices fully equal to those paid by private contract prior to the sale. Some parcels, containing a large proportion of Dust, brought 11½d. to 11½d., but similar Tea, less dusty, sold at 11⅞d. and 1s. Nearly the whole of the parcels of good to fine Tea have reserved prices affixed to them, but, as these are generally placed too high, in nine cases out of ten the parcels are withdrawn. The greater portion of the Green Tea offered at sale being of low quality, the sales have gone flatly, and generally at a slight reduction. The character of most of the Scented Capers brought forward was also very common, and prices ruled from 3½d. to 10d. The effect of the heavy public sales has been to a great extent counterbalanced by the small quantity of Tea placed on the market for sale by private contract. The few transactions reported have been chiefly in common Congou, at 11½d. to 1s. At these prices there is a general feeling that purchases may be made without risk, especially as shippers and outside dealers are known to be desirous of operating at a slight decline. The limited business transacted in the better grades of Congou has been at steady prices. There is an almost entire absence of fine Congou, as may be inferred from the fact that two parcels of Moning were offered at public sale this week, at the reserved prices of 2s. 8d. and 2s. 5d., and although these prices were not obtained in sale, we believe that transactions have taken place in the better parcel at 2s. 7d.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

COUCHMAN V. SILLAR AND ANOTHER.

The plaintiff in this case, in June, 1868, apprenticed his son to Messrs. Sillar and Bateman, who were general and colonial brokers, and paid a premium of £99 19s. The term was for two years, and in the course of that time Mr. Sillar retired from the business, which was thenceforth carried on by Mr. Bateman. The plaintiff thereupon sued to recover damages upon the ground that the defendants, by dissolving partnership, had broken their covenant that they would jointly teach the plaintiff's son their business. The question raised for the Court upon demurrer was, whether, under these circumstances, the plaintiff was entitled to maintain his action.

The Court held that the dissolution of partnership disabled the defendants from being able to perform their covenant, and, therefore, that the plaintiff could recover.

Judgment for the plaintiff.

THE CHINA CONVENTION AND THE INDIAN REVENUE.—The Globe says:—"Fortunately for the Indian Government, Sir Rutherford Alcock's convention with the Chinese Government is not to be ratified. Already last year the opium revenue in Bengal declined to the amount of £332,740, and in the Budget for the present year, in consequence of the increasing cultivation of the poppy in China, the loss of a whole million sterling, or one-eighth of the entire income from this source, is allowed for. Had the Peking Government been permitted to collect the increased import duty of the drug, as consented to by Sir R. Alcock, even this allowance would have been absurdly inadequate, and thus would a further difficulty have been thrust upon the Indian exchequer at a time when the deficits of the two last years together amount to nearly three millions and a-half and the income-tax stands at eightpence in the pound."

THE Nassau, surveying ship, Commander W. Chimmo, fitting at Devonport, is to be ready for sea on the 15th inst. She will proceed to Singapore, via the Suez Canal.

THE Cologne Gazette says that a Californian savant named Hanlay has created a great agitation in San Francisco, by pointing out, in a recent work, that there were Chinese in the country a thousand years before the Spaniards. Several German papers have thereupon remarked that as long as five-and-twenty years ago Professor Neumann, of Munich, produced proofs from Chinese sources, of the discovery of America by that people. Earlier still, Desguignes affirmed that Chinese books spoke of a land in the East which can have been no other than America. Neumann even brings to light an account of the travels of a Chinese monk and missionary to the realm of Fusang. That Fusang must mean Mexico is evident from the details given by the monk respecting the geographical position and products of the country. Among these he mentions a tree of which the shoots were eaten, the bark made into cloth and paper, and the sap made into an intoxicating drink. This is the Maguey, or great Chinese aloe, which is still used for these purposes. This monk went to Mexico in A.D. 499 according to our reckoning, but not as the first missionary, for five monks were sent there to spread the doctrine of Buddha in 458. What Mr. Hanlay further says respecting the similarity of certain customs among the Aztecs and Chinese, and the working of Buddhism upon the religion of the former, was also previously known. The list, however, is new which he gives of cognate Aztec and Chinese words.

LORD DERBY ON THE CONSULAR SERVICE.—Lord Derby has been examined before the Diplomatic and Consular Services' Committee. With respect more especially to the Consular Service, the noble earl remarked that it had always been held to be perfectly open, while as to the general principle upon which diplomatic appointments should be made, it was a good rule that a man should begin at the bottom, and rise to a certain position. There were, however, occasions on which it might be advisable to employ outsiders, but these should be the exception and not the rule. In a previous examination, his lordship gave information regarding the cost and value of the smaller European missions. He has not yet alluded to the China service, but will probably do so on a future occasion.

MR. CHISHOLM ANSTEY IN TROUBLE.—On the 12th ultimo Mr. Chisholm Anstey, while defending a prisoner at the Criminal Sessions of the Bombay High Court, was committed for contempt by the judge, Sir Charles Sargent. At the close of the case the judge said, Mr. Anstey, I committed you in order to maintain peace and quietness in the Court. That object has been attained, and there is no occasion for detaining you further, and you may therefore consider yourself discharged and the matter at an end. To this Mr. Anstey replied, "It shall not end with me," and left the Court.

DEATH OF A JAPANESE STUDENT.—Under the heading "Eastern Ashes to Western Dust," the New York Times gives a circumstantial account of the death and funeral obsequies of Kusakabe Taro, one of a number of Japanese students at New Brunswick College, New Jersey. He died of consumption at the early age of twenty-two, the fatal termination being hastened by excessive mental application. He is said to have been much liked and respected, and the funeral was attended by an extraordinary number of persons.

IN our issue of the 11th ult. we noticed a report that Captain Chandos S. Stanhope, now serving in China, would be offered the post of Private Secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty, vacant by the advancement to flag-rank of Rear-Admiral Seymour. This report turns out to have been correct, the offer having been made by telegram to Captain Stanhope within the past few days. Should he refuse it—which is improbable, as he has been absent from England for nearly four years—it will probably be offered to Captain Tryon, C.B.

MESSRS. SMITH, ELDER, AND CO. announce as preparing for publication, in two volumes, Journeys in North China, Manchuria, and Eastern Mongolia, with some Account of Corea, by the Rev. Alexander Williamson. The work will also contain a complete and accurate description of Peking by the Rev. Joseph Edkins. It cannot fail to be a highly interesting book. It will be out in about a month.

A LETTER from Beyrout reports the death at that place, from heart disease, of Bishop Kingsley, of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States. He had started from California, via Japan, China, and India, where he had inspected the missions of his Church.

SIR EDMUND ANTROBUS, well known as the senior partner in Messrs. Coutts and Co.'s bank, died on the 5th instant. He was born in 1792, and had therefore attained the age of 78 years. He is succeeded in the baronetcy and estates by his son, Mr. Edmund Coutts, M.P. for Wilton.

WE understand the new Art Magazine which is to appear in June will be called The Museum. It will be about the size of the Art Journal, and the same price. The Museum will be very handsomely got-up in Imperial quarto, and each number will contain six full-page photographic illustrations.

THE annual meeting of the Art Union of London was held on April 26, when the following gentlemen gained prizes:—Mr. S. M. Moses, Shanghai, £40; Mr. J. A. Frazer and Mr. E. M. Van Reed, of Yokohama, £30 and £15 respectively.

Among the presentations to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, at the Court held last week, we notice the name of Ernest Satow Esq., Secretary of Her Majesty's Legation in Japan.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps has attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in tin-lined packets labelled—JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, May 3.

The Zollverein Parliament was opened last week by the Minister Delbruck, President of the North German Chancellor's Department, in the absence of Count Bismark, who was suffering from an attack of the yellow jaundice, and unable to attend. Dr. Simson was elected President, and Prince Hohenlohe, the late Prime Minister of Bavaria, Vice-President. Some preliminary business having been disposed of—among which was the Treaty of Commerce between the German Zollverein and the United States of Mexico, which received the ratification of the Parliament—the great business of the session was brought forward in the shape of a Bill authorised by the Zollverein Council for effecting certain changes and modifications in the tariff of Custom-house duties. The principal features of the Bill are a decided step in the right direction of free trade, as they include the abolition of the last remaining export duty (on rags), the repeal of the import duty on rice and various similar articles of consumption, and the reduction of the import duty on raw iron to a nominal sum of 2d. per 100 lbs., to be retained for statistical control. As an equivalent for these concessions the Bill claims a trifling increase of twenty-five groschens, or about 2s. 6d. per cwt. in the duty of coffee, which, being only one-quarter of a groschen per lb., can have no appreciable effect on the retail price or on the general consumption. Notwithstanding this, however, the proposal has stirred up considerable opposition both in and out of Parliament, especially at Berlin, where petitions against the increase of the coffee duty are being extensively circulated and signed by the old women of both sexes in the "Metropolis of Intelligence," as the inhabitants of Berlin love to call that city.

Baron von Philipsborn, the Postmaster-general of the North-German Confederation, has resigned that influential and lucrative appointment to accept a still more beneficial post in a private establishment—a sort of Credit Foncier—that has just been formed. His last official act was to sign with Mr. Page (on behalf of the British Post-office) on the 25th ult. the new postal treaty with England, by which the postage of a single letter between the two countries will be reduced from sixpence to threepence, and other postal facilities afforded. But that part of the treaty that will have the greatest interest for your German readers in the Far East is the arrangement made for forwarding the overland mail through Germany for shipment at Brindisi, by which it is in the power of the British Post-office to avail itself of this facility at any future period. There is also another item of the treaty that your readers will hail with joy, as under the present system there is a break in the connection at Alexandria; and whatever amount of postage may be paid on a letter in India, China, or Australia, destined for this city or any other part of Germany, and directed "via Trieste," or "via Marseilles," it is impossible to frank a letter all the way to its destination, and the postage from Alexandria has to be paid by the receiver. By the new treaty this inconvenience will cease, and the letters for Germany be delivered up at Alexandria to the North-German Post-office about to be opened in that city. The treaty is to come into operation on the 1st of July next.

A pamphlet on the organisation of the armies of Europe, from the pen of a distinguished Prussian general officer, has lately been published at Berlin, and not only created a great sensation in military circles, but also formed a subject for criticism in the press, especially in foreign journals, who can understand it very imperfectly, as for most of them the German language is a sealed book. Thus the Independance Belge demands that Prussia should take the lead in a general disarmament, as the North German Army, by the statements contained in the above pamphlet, is larger on its peace establishment than that of any other country on its war footing. Other papers quote the pamphlet to prove their assertion that the army of North Germany is as numerous as the whole forces of France and Austria combined, with other egregious and ridiculous misstatements. The real truth, however, is, as the writer demonstrates by official figures, that the German Army on the peace footing is only 300,000 strong, but that in time of war it can be brought up to 944,326 men, and be made ready to move in any direction at a fortnight's notice. On the other hand, it is as clearly shown that the French standing army, including the troops in Algeria and at Rome, is at present 448,711 men under arms, which can be raised in war-time to 1,028,930, including the Garde Mobile. And, finally, it is proved from official statistics that the peace establishment of Austria is 254,984 men, but which can be increased to a war footing of 800,000.

With regard to the illness of Count Bismark, I may add that the real malady has disappeared, but left him in a state of great feebleness, which may prevent him from attending to business for a week or ten days longer. He is at his country seat at Varzin, whither he went with his family to pass the Easter holidays.

The Crown Prince of Prussia is deriving much benefit from drinking the waters at Carlsbad, and will probably remain there a fortnight longer.

COMMERCIAL.

There is no alteration in the Tea market here; prices remain steady, and a moderate amount of business has been done, among which may be mentioned the sale of 2,000 chests of Congou, and 178 ditto of Souchong. The proposed repeal of the duty on rice in the Zollverein has caused that article to be held for higher prices. A cargo of 25,000 bags of Siam has arrived from Bangkok, and is now in the market. Cassia Lignea is firm, though the importations direct continue large. There is a considerable demand for Pepper, but no alteration in the quotations. Spelter still thoroughly neglected, the nominal price being 12⅞ marks Banco per centner, though a lower offer would probably not be refused.

RUSSIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 29.

The projected reform in the administration of the Police Department appears to be abandoned for the present; but the Minister of the Interior is empowered to appoint a special commission to investigate the subject further, and draw up a report, when, it is understood, it will be again brought forward in the Council of Ministers under the immediate presidency of the Emperor in person.

The Imperial Geographical Society of this city is about to send a scientific mission to the Baltic provinces. The expediency of such a measure is claimed as an act of necessity to make a searching inquiry into the social relations and ethnographical peculiarities of the different classes and nationalities from the standpoint of political economy in the present day, the more so as it is considered absolutely indispensable to calm public opinion in the home and foreign press, which is now in such a state of excitement from the fanatical attempts of the old National party to Russify the German provinces and extinguish the German language there and the Swedish in Finland, as they are attempting to do with the Latin in the Roman Catholic Church, but which meets with such spirited opposition and indignation. No one can accuse me of entertaining any special proclivities in favour either of the Roman or Greek Catholic Church, but I must confess I sympathise with the former at being compelled, by a despotic scratch of the pen, to abandon the traditions of so many centuries, and consent to see such beautiful compositions as the Te Deum laudamus, De profundis, Ave Maria, and similar pieces, which in their original Latin seem interwoven with the Church service, lose all their beauty by translation into any foreign language—more particularly such a barbarous and unmusical jargon as the Russian undoubtedly is. These remarks were engendered in my mind by the contemplation of an event that has just occurred at Wilna, which of course has made a great sensation, and puts one in mind of the former persecution of the "noble army of martyrs," or, in later times, the dogged firmness and constancy of Luther in burning the Papal bull. The case in point is as follows:—Piotrowitsch, the Dean of Wilna, having received several copies for distribution of the Imperial ukase, ordering the performance of the Roman Catholic Divine service and the translation of the Catholic Ritual into the Russian language, thus addressed his flock from the pulpit:—"I rejoice to see you so numerously collected here to-day, my friends, as it is my duty, both as your pastor and in my capacity as an ordained priest of the Holy Church, to warn you in the most impressive manner of a great danger that is rapidly approaching. I am officially ordered to read out to you the Imperial ukase concerning the future use of the Russian language in the Catholic Church, and at the same time I received from the administrator of the diocese, the Suffragan Bishop Zylinsky, 142 copies of the ukase, and of the Russian translation of the Ritual. Of these 142 copies I have destroyed 140 at my private apartments, and only retained a single copy of each to destroy them in the same way before your eyes." Here he lighted a match, set fire to the papers, and held them in his hand till they were consumed by the flame. After the performance of this act he continued to address his flock as follows:—"The danger, with regard to the means of violence by which you are to be forced into a state of schism, is all the more imminent as the heads of the diocese—viz, the Suffragan Bishop Zylinsky and the Prebendaries Nemkscha, Tupalsky, Herburtow—and all those who follow the instructions received from St. Petersburg, are traitors to the Church, and are now members of the Russian, so-called Orthodox faith, having betrayed the religion whose priests they hitherto were. Repose no faith or confidence in them, for they are mercenary renegades who have sold themselves for lucre to Russia, and against whom I cannot sufficiently warn you." He then exhorted his hearers to hold fast steadily to the Catholic religion, and concluded his address with these words: "Fall down, then, on your knees, and swear before God that you will suffer death for the cause of our Holy Faith, as I, who now address you for the last time, am ready to do. The conduct of the Russian Government must and will provoke the curse of excommunication from the lips of the Holy Father; but in the meantime I, his servant, take upon myself in this sacred place to pronounce the curse in the name of his Holiness. I go with calmness to meet the fate that may be in store for me." After remaining a short time in the church to take an affectionate leave of his flock, Piotrowitsch hastened home, wrote a short report to the Governor-General, Count Popatoff, of what he had done and said, and then sat down in expectation of his apprehension, for which he had not to wait long, as he was immediately committed to prison, and will in all probability have in the course of time to make a forced march to Siberia. The capture, however, was not effected without some difficulty, as the whole of the parishioners had turned out to prevent it; and it was not until a battalion of infantry and a sotnie of Cossacks had made their appearance, and sixty civilians had been more or less seriously wounded, that Piotrowitsch was conducted to prison. On his way thither some of his flock asked him for a souvenir, and, having nothing else to offer, he gave them his priestly garment, which was immediately torn into shreds in the scramble, and those considered themselves fortunate who could get one of them. When then the Governor-General Popatoff telegraphed to St. Petersburg, reporting the case and asking for instructions what to do with the dean and on what plea to bring a charge against him, the telegraphic reply was that in this case a trial would be dispensed with, and the prisoner was to be sent under escort to Tobolsk for banishment for life. In the meantime the Suffragan Bishop Zylinsky cannot show himself in the streets without being publicly insulted.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, May 4.

During the last few days nothing has been heard respecting the Ministerial crisis, which, according to the Opposition papers, was so near at hand a fortnight since. The Amsterdam Courant stated that Colonel Weitzel, Commander of the 2nd Regiment of Infantry, would accept the portfolio of the War Department, while other papers published the names of the successors to the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and of Justice. But none of these predictions have been justified; on the contrary, the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant declared some days ago that the rumours about a Ministerial crisis were entirely without foundation. And I indeed believe that there is no question at present of altering the Cabinet. Parliamentary business having come to a standstill. The members of the Second Chamber will not meet for the despatch of business before the 10th, and it is stated that they will deal as soon as possible with the Sugar Bill for Java; but it is generally thought that the Minister of the Colonial Department will give a new form to the old Bill, with which the Liberals are, not without reason, very discontented. The Minister proposes to maintain all the old stipulations till the year 1878, and in the course of the intervening years to make an end of the compulsory planting, by decreasing gradually the land belonging to the sugar manufacturers. This system is on the one side too Conservative, and on the other too Radical. It is too Conservative because there would be no alteration for the next eight years, while at the same time it would be in the power of a Conservative Minister, should his party take the reins of Government, to prolong that term. On the other hand, it is too Radical, because it provides for no period of transition, which must influence badly upon the industry. The Bill laid before the members in 1866 was much more preferable. It proposed to alter the existing law at once, commencing with the abolition of the forced labour system, and, when this should have been accomplished, to apply the other necessary measure—viz., the decrease of the sugar manufacturer's lands. This Bill, however, as you are aware, did not become law; but the Liberal papers are still of opinion that it formed the only basis whereupon a regulation of the sugar culture can be effected. If the Minister does not alter his Bill in that way, it is quite certain, the Handelsblad assures us, that the Liberals will reject it, the consequence of which will be that Mr. de Waal will have to resign. I, however, think that next mail I shall be able to give you the tenor of the altered Bill.

One of our most eminent authors on Economie Politique has just published a memorandum which is of the highest interest. Mr. Wynne demonstrates that it is of the greatest urgency to reform our tariff in a free-trade sense; that is, he wishes protection to be entirely removed, and that import duties shall in future only be levied on those articles which have to pay excise, or those which cannot be produced in this country. The Dutch Treasury would lose by this alteration about 2½ millions of guilders, and to cover this amount Mr. Wynne proposes to levy an import duty on coffee of 10c. per kilogramme, which would produce f.2,200,000. In addition, he wishes to double the import duty on pepper and tea (from 25c. to 50c. per kilogramme), and to charge tobacco (notwithstanding that this article is also cultivated here) with f.1.50 per 100 kilogrammes. Mr. Wynne is of opinion that the small duty to be levied on coffee would not injure the trade here, or the cultivation of this article in our colonies. I fear, however, that the whole plan is a mere chateau en Espagne.

The Times of the 23rd of April contained a notice of the British Australian Telegraph Company, stating that satisfactory terms have been agreed upon between the Netherlands Government and the company for permission to land cables on the Island of Java, and for the transmission of messages over the Government telegraphic system in that island, so that the benefit of the Java traffic will be secured to the company before the end of the current year. I have reason to believe that this report will eventually prove correct, but it was, and still is, premature. So much is certain, that the concession to construct a telegraphic communication between Singapore and Australia through a part of the territory of Netherlands India, with permission to land a cable or cables in the neighbourhood of Batavia and on the East Coast of Java, has not as yet been granted. On the 26th of March the Minister of the Colonial Department, being interpellated on this subject, declared in the sitting of the Second Chamber that when the definitive concession is granted it will be published in the Staats Courant, our official journal, and up to this moment nothing has appeared on the subject.

Some weeks ago the most scandalous facts respecting the prisons in Java were published by the Nieuws van den Dag. This paper stated that in the prison at Poewodadie 215 persons were confined, notwithstanding that there was only room for seventy five. This matter has been discussed by our papers, and of course the Liberal journals urge the necessity of taking measures to build new prisons where necessary, and they blame in the most severe terms the Government which abolished corporal punishment without providing extra prison accommodation. It is very curious that the Conservatives, who always claim to mean so well by the Javanese, assert that these facts prove them to have been in the right when they opposed the Liberal measure abolishing corporal punishment. They say that a Javanese prefers to receive a certain quantum of blows than to endure a term of imprisonment, and it was in the interest of the Dutch Treasury to maintain the first-named punishment, because some millions must now be expended in providing prisons. This, again, proves that the whole opposition against the Liberal colonial system is based upon a question of money.

The Royal family is at this moment on its annual visit to the capital, and, as usual, they will reside there for some days. Last Friday H.M.

the King laid the first stone of one of the principal sluices of the canal by which Amsterdam will be brought into direct communication with the North Sea. Amongst the high personages present were Messrs. Geertsema, Heemskerk Az, Schimmelpenninck, Fock, Van Bosse—all Ministers or ex-Ministers. Mr. Thorbecke was absent, owing to the recent loss of his wife. That eminent statesman has gone to Germany, and it is stated in some circles that he will return to this country only as a private person. Prince Henry has started for Luxemburg, where he will stay about three weeks. The assertion of the Hague correspondent of the Temps, that a new Luxemburg question was on the tapis, is now proved to have been a hoax.

According to the advice of Messrs. J. A. Kool, engineer, and of N. H. Henket, the Minister of the Colonial Department has fixed that the width of the gauge for the line Batavia-Buitenzorg shall be 1.10 meter instead of 1.45 meter, and that the weight of the rails is to be 25 kilo. per meter instead of 35 kilo. The aim of these measures is to render the construction of railways cheaper, and to decrease the difficulties of laying the rails over mountains. It seems that an experiment is to be made in order to determine whether this economical plan will answer.

The High Court is now dealing with a law suit, which has created the greatest interest in our commercial circles. An Arab, Sech Abdullah ben Awul ben Mohamed Boepsaid, shipowner at Sourabaya, was condemned by the High Court of Java to pay the Government a sum of f.61,120.94, because one of his vessels, laden with Government salt, was lost by the fault of the master. The Arab, however, made an appeal to our Court, and the case is now on the point of being decided.

A general promotion has taken place amongst the officers of artillery, and several head officers have been pensioned. On a great number of officers and soldiers who took part in the military expedition on the West Coast of Africa (November and December, 1869) was conferred the knighthood of the Military William Order. In remembrance of this expedition a man-of-war, just launched at Amsterdam, has been named the Guinea. The expedition is now on its return home.

The Amsterdam Union Burgerplicht is now dealing with a proposal to establish a league for reforming taxation in Java. To enable its members to give an opinion upon this proposal, it is in consideration to appoint some one experienced in Java affairs to review the taxes levied there before and since the island was brought under our rule.

H.M. has granted permission to the Assistant-Resident of Gorontalo (Menado), Mr. J. G. F. Riedel, to accept the decoration of "Officier de l'Instruction Publique" conferred on him by the Emperor Napoleon; and to Dr. J. Huyvenaer, physician at Hong Kong, to accept the Order of Isabella la Cattolica of Spain.

I have to record the death of Mr. David Bosski, ex member of both the Chambers of the States General. He died, aged seventy-six, at Amsterdam.

You will remember that a good deal was said about the sea worthiness of H.M. steamer Argus, bound for the East India. Het Vaderland now states that this vessel will make the voyage via the Suez Canal.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

TEA.—On the 22nd ult. the cargo of China tea ex Panuco, consisting of 1,417/4 and 3,978/12 Congou and 179/4 and 1,172/12 ch. Souchon, was offered in public sale. This auction has given the following result:—The Congou was partly sold at 55c. to 110c, the Souchon at 74c. to 119c., a great part being bought in. At the same auction were offered 518/4 and 664/12 ch. extra superfine Kyshou Congou, partly sold at 82c. to 106c.; 174/12 ch. extra superfine Lapseng Congou, at 104c; 100/4, 200/12, and 300/16 ch. Congou, per Ceylon, from Foochow, partly sold at 97c. to 112c.; 147/12 ch. Souchon, ex Jubilee, from Foochow, sold at 95c.; 296/16 ch. finest new season's Scented Orange Pecco, at 80c.; and 81/4 ch. fine Moning Congou, at 70c. On the same day were offered the following parcels Java:—Trade mark Tjikoppo Mayak, 8/4 ch. Java Boei, at 58c.; 201/4 ch. Java Congou, 72c. to 80c.; 368 ch. Java Souchon, 80c. to 90c.; 124 ch. Pecco, 230c. to 250c.; and 14/12 ch. Pecco Souchon, 92c. On the 28th were offered 7,754/4, 403/8, 530/12, and 50/16 Java, of which the greater part sold as follows:—Black Dust, 87c. to 97c.; Boei, 46c. to 81c.; Congou Boei, 48c. to 60c.; Congou, 65c. to 91c.; Souchon Boei, 65c. to 67c.; Souchon, 70c. to 115c.; Pouchon, 52c. to 54c.; Pecco Souchon, 82c. to 111c.; Pecco, 120c. to 515c.; Green Dust, 50c. to 68c.; Schin, 48c. to 97c.; Thunkay, 94c. to 120c.; Hysant, 120c. to 137c.; Uxim, 120c. to 139c.; Joosjees (g. b.), 130c. to 163c.; do. (f. b.), 130c. to 144c. On the 9th of June will be offered in public sale 3,280/4 and 97/12 ch. Java.

COFFEE.—The market since the last auction has been very dull. The lower prices influence very badly abroad, and instead of increased business the transactions were very limited. Many lots, resulting from last auction, are offered now, but buyers cannot be found. The transactions include 2,043 bags Java, ex Ellen, at 33½c.; 1,515 bags do., ex Herman de Ruiter; 1,661 bags do., ex Princes Amalia; 1,267 bags Macassar, ex Elisabeth and Jacoba, at 30c. The total stock was, on the 1st inst., 615,867 bags, whilst 149,200 bags were floating. 269,606 bags were delivered by the Trading Company since January.

RAW SUGAR.—The market looks somewhat healthier. About 5,000 baskets have changed hands at f.1 under March value. Holders, however, decline to operate without an advance. Stock in bond, 35,832,418 kilo.

RICE.—A good business is doing, and the following important lots have been sold:—4,280 bags Indramayo table, ex Graafstroom, at f.10; 5,056 bags Sourabaya, ex Europa, at f.5⅞.

JAVA TOBACCO.—The market is animated. The following parcels have been sold by private tender:—980 bags Java Djajah Malang; 128 bags Djajah K; 200 bags Kotha FJ; 510 bags HL; 180 bags HL/A; 460 bags Krossok Kedirie; 86 bags BL; 410 bags ETB/K; 644 bags Kedirie VF; 552 bags Tripa Kawi; 376 bags BD Kawi, and 184 bags D Kawi; 34 bags Kidol, ex Somerset.

SPICES.—Prices are well maintained, but there are no transactions to report. The Trading Company's stock is as follows:—

	Nutmegs.	Mace.	Cloves.	Cinnamon.
Stock on Warrants	... 3,046 c.	... 152 c.	... 2,703 c.	... 41 b.
Unsold stock	... 1,127 „	... 347 „	... —	... — „

PRESERVED GINGER.—In auction were offered 490 chests China, partly sold at 77c. to 79c.; 25 chests Mandarin sold at 107c. to 109c.

BANCA TIN.—The market closed somewhat less active. Some lots of importance have changed hands at f.78¼, f.78½, and f.77¾. For delivery out of the spring auction f.75 have been paid. Stock of the Trading Company on warrants, 24,858 slabs; unsold, 58,374 slabs; floating, 19,300 slabs. Billiton stock on warrants, 1,291 slabs.

JAVA INDIGO.—The auction held by the Trading Company on the 26th of April, at which 316 chests were offered, went off very slowly. Ordinary quality realised from 20c. to 30c., under valuation; middling brought valuation prices, and fine quality 25c. above. Since the auction 698 chests offered for private account sold at 240c. to 700c.

HIDES.—A good business doing, and about 10,000 pieces Java Rinder and Buffalo, ex Royal Arthur, L. J. Enthoven, Europe and Libertas, were sold by private tender.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Arrack: 136 casks Sourabs, ex Royal Arthur, sold at prices that did not transpire. Rattans: The following parcels have changed hands:—174 piculs, ex Ida Elisabeth; 155 piculs, ex County of Forfar; 100 piculs, ex Kinderdyk; 3,170 b., ex Libertas. Japan Camphor: The nominal quotation is 53c. China Cinnamon: 200 chests offered in public sale; only 80 chests were sold at 70c. Mother-o'-pearl Shells: 14,420 ps. Macassar, circa 211 piculs, imported per Elisabeth and Jacoba, were sold.

UNITED STATES.

THE LATE CHINESE MINISTER.

On the 20th ult., a large number of citizens, representing the New York Chamber of Commerce and the Union League Club, were received on board of the Silesia, at Hoboken, for the purpose of receiving the remains. There were present on the occasion General N. P. Banks, General McDowell, and General McClellan, beside numerous private friends of the deceased Minister. The Boston City Council was represented by Alderman F. W. Jacob and Councilmen Hollis, R. Gray, and F. Williams, and the Governor of Massachusetts by Adjutant-General Cunningham and Major Capello of his staff. At the time of the arrival of the escort on the Silesia, the gangway of the vessel was draped in mourning, the flags were at half-mast, and the officers and crew were assembled on the main deck, with heads uncovered, surrounding the coffin, which lay enclosed in a large black case, studded with silver stars. An American flag also covered the coffin. An address was made by Mr. Wm. E. Dodge, President of the Chamber of Commerce, who said that, although it was only right that the illustrious dead should receive marks of respect at the hands of all citizens of New York, it was felt that anything like a procession or formal display at this time would be unnecessary, and therefore they had met in this quiet way. The ceremony of transferring the coffin to the revenue cutter was then performed by means of ropes and pulleys attached to the yard-arm. The remains were subsequently conveyed on board the steamer Providence, and were taken charge of by the Massachusetts escort, together with General Banks, Mr. Isaac Livermore, and Mr. E. L. Burlingame. The steamer afterwards sailed for Boston, and, on her departure, the flags on several vessels in the river and bay were placed at half-mast. Previous to the transfer of the body General Banks presented the regrets of the Vice-President, Speaker Blaine, and of the Congressional delegation from Massachusetts, for being compelled to absent themselves from the ceremony on account of official business.

The funeral of Mr. Burlingame took place on the 23rd ult. at Boston. At nine o'clock in the morning the remains were taken from Faneuil Hall, and, escorted by the Independent Corps of Cadets, were carried to the Arlington-street (Unitarian) church, were a very large crowd had assembled, completely blocking the aisles and passage ways, rendering locomotion a matter of great difficulty. At eleven o'clock the body was slowly borne into the church, while a dirge was chanted by the choir. Appropriate selections of Scripture were then read by the Rev. Dr. E. S. Gannett, and a hymn, written for the occasion by the poet Whittier, was sung. The Rev. Dr. George W. Briggs, of Cambridge, then delivered an address on the life, services and character of the deceased. A procession was then formed which, leaving the church, proceeded through Arlington-street, Beacon-street, Charles-street and Cambridge-street to West-Boston Bridge, and from thence in a direct line through Cambridge-port and Cambridge to Mount Auburn where the remains were finally interred.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

So much has been written regarding the position and doings of Missionaries in China that the subject has become stale, and even the title of this article may invoke an impatient exclamation from many readers. We do not however return to the subject without a reason. A Parliamentary paper just issued (China, No. 9, 1870) contains a mass of interesting correspondence respecting the question of the right of English Missionaries to acquire land and houses, or to reside in the interior of China. The correspondence originated in a letter addressed by the Baptist Missionary Society to Lord CLARENDON asking for information as to these rights, and his Lordship forwarded this letter to Sir R. ALCOCK, requesting him to send materials for a reply. Sir RUTHERFORD in his answer (dated Peking, March 12, 1869) lays down the law thus:—(1) No British subject has a right to buy, hire, or receive as a gift any land or building away from an open port — whether for missionary purposes or otherwise—unless it can be shown that such a right has been secured to French Missionaries, in which case Englishmen might claim to share it under the "favoured nation" clause. (2) It is true that in the Chinese text of Article III. of the French Treaty these words appear: "It is permitted to French Missionaries to "rent and purchase land in all the provinces, and to erect "buildings thereon at pleasure." But then the French version does not contain these words, or any to a similar effect, and it is distinctly stipulated that the French text shall in all cases govern; so the words interpolated in the Chinese text are not binding. (3) A kind of prescriptive or permissive right has been allowed to grow up, by which land and houses might be acquired for missionary purposes, in a certain way, and under certain conditions; but these conditions are such as leave a prohibitive power in the hands of the local authorities. In fact, French Missionaries are allowed on sufferance to exercise in a limited degree the rights of internal residence, and the English can expect nothing more. Indeed, Sir R. ALCOCK adds, it is a question whether Her MAJESTY'S Government should demand for English Missionaries even the same privileges that are claimed by the French, seeing that grave complications may ensue; and if the French are willing to take the consequences of these, that is no reason why the English Government should be obliged to do so.

Such, briefly summed up, were the arguments of Sir R. ALCOCK; and in a short reply, the SECRETARY for FOREIGN AFFAIRS expressed his entire concurrence in them. So the matter rested until July last, when Sir R. ALCOCK forwarded to the Foreign-office the letter addressed to him in that month by the Rev. J. EDKINS and other Protestant Missionaries at Peking which has already been published, together with his own comments on the statements it contained. The Missionaries urge that the hostility entertained by the Chinese to Protestant Missionaries is not directed against them as a class, but as foreigners. To which Sir RUTHERFORD replies, the expulsion of Mr. TAYLOR and his party was on purely Missionary grounds. They were known as Missionaries; they were plotted against, placarded, reviled, and assailed in that character, not as foreigners. The charge of killing children, taking out their eyes, &c., is one only brought against Missionaries, and it was by that cry the populace was raised against them when their expulsion was effected. This is certainly true enough. The Missionaries, again, complain that "Com- "merce is put into the foreground as the one only object of "Great Britain in China," and assert that this ought not to be, as one of its leading staples, opium, has so demoralising an effect. In reply to this, Sir RUTHERFORD does not deny the demoralising effects of opium, but shows that this is no argument why the Chinese should be forced against their will to grant land and houses to Missionaries. The Missionaries say (and we cannot help being a little amused at the cool way in which they lecture the Minister) that complications must arise from time to time in the opening up of this country to foreigners, and it rather becomes Her MAJESTY'S representatives in China to meet those difficulties, and to try every moral means to overcome them, than to advise retrogression in order to get rid of them. The Minister replies that if Missionaries persist in demanding protection while they knowingly risk such complications they necessitate armed intervention and the use of gunboats, measures which, in this very letter, they say are "most abhorrent to their feelings." In another part of their letter the Missionaries lay great stress on Mr. BURLINGAME'S announcement that China desires entire reciprocity in foreign intercourse, and argue therefrom that foreigners are entitled to as much liberty in China as Chinese are allowed in Western countries. Besides, Mr. BURLINGAME expressly invited Missionaries to plant the shining cross on every hill and in every valley, and why should they not accept the invitation? The question is very drily disposed of by Sir RUTHERFORD:—"As to Mr. BURLINGAME'S high-flown "speeches, and the expediency of calling upon the Chinese "Government either to repudiate these promises or fulfil "them, this has already been done, and the disavowal quickly "followed." In reply to other passages in the letter, the Minister argues that Missionaries may be perfectly right in coming to China, and yet not at liberty to do what they please; not altogether right in seeking to prosecute their work in a way eminently calculated to produce disturbances and grave political complications, and rendering resort to force or to war in the end all but inevitable. But while pointing out that even the high nature of their calling cannot entitle them to be considered infallible, or always in the right, still he avers that he has never regarded them otherwise than as a class entitled to the highest praise.

Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK concludes the despatch covering these documents as follows:—"An article on 'Romanism in "Szechuen,' in the London and China Express, put side by "side with a statement on Protestant Missions, contained in "Mr. ALABASTER'S Trade Report, speaking of the district "round Swatow, present a fair summary of disadvantages "and advantages proved by experience to attend the labours "of Romanist and Protestant Missionaries in China under "existing conditions, and for facility of reference I inclose "them both, only observing that, as regards Mr. ALABASTER'S "statement it is incomplete, as no account is taken per "contra of all the complications daily resulting from popular "tumults, destruction of chapels, and attacks or outrages on "both Missionaries and converts all over the provinces with "increasing frequency where Missions, Protestant or Roman "Catholic, seek to establish themselves. This is in part sup- "plied however by a subsequent despatch and inclosure from "Swatow, reporting a new instance of popular violence "and official supineness while a Protestant Mission was "being attacked; copy of which I inclose." This concludes the most important part of the correspondence, though it comprises also some letters exchanged between Lord CLARENDON and the Bishop of VICTORIA on the same and kindred topics. The impression left by an examination of it is that the Foreign-office may for the future be expected to follow strictly the dictum of Sir R. ALCOCK, approved by Lord CLARENDON, that English Missionaries taking up their residence in the interior of China must regard themselves as entirely on the sufferance of the local authorities.

WE have appointed Messrs. McEWEN and Co, of Hong Kong, our agents for that place and the southern ports of China; also Mr. P. CARL, Hamburg; Mr. STEINMEYER, Bremen; and Messrs. MACKAY, BOOMKAMP and Co., Amsterdam.

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH IN CEYLON.

THE news brought by the last mail from Ceylon exhibits the population of that colony in a very pleasant light. The Galatea was lying at anchor off Colombo, and the inhabitants, of whatsoever race—European, Singhalese, Tamil, and Malay—were unanimous in their demonstrations of joy and in their eager and hospitable welcome. The great Galle Harbour question, and every other subject of ordinary local importance, faded into insignificance before the one all-absorbing fact—the QUEEN'S second son was in Ceylon! The intense enthusiasm that prevailed might almost lead one to believe that by this Royal visit the colonists felt themselves at length in some degree compensated and rewarded for the exemplary patience with which they have so long borne an exorbitant military contribution, and put up with a sham Legislative Council. It is, indeed, satisfactory to find that the keen sense of wrong that is undoubtedly felt among nearly all classes in reference to the policy adopted towards Ceylon by the Home Government, has in no degree dulled the edge of their loyalty. Political differences sink out of sight before such loyalty as most British subjects feel towards their Sovereign and her family. It is pleasing to learn, and must be a source of much congratulation to the colonists, that no such petty jealousies and bickerings as arose out of the Duke's visit to Singapore happened to mar the success of his tour in Ceylon. The manner of his reception at the two places exhibits a very marked contrast. At Singapore, the extraordinary conduct of the Governor had the effect of keeping the residents quite in the background, so that the distinguished visitor, on his landing, found nothing to receive him but a beggarly array of empty benches. At Colombo it was very different; Sir HERCULES ROBINSON had wisely determined that the elite of the island should be present to do honour to the Royal guest, and so effectual were his arrangements to this end, that quite a brilliant assemblage of the principal persons in Colombo greeted the Duke when he landed, while the scene was gazed on by a crowd of many thousands of the native population. Again at the levée, and at the evening reception, everything possible was done by Sir HERCULES and Lady ROBINSON to bring into contact with the Duke all who had any claim to that honour, and the same spirit seems to have been infused into all the proceedings connected with his visit, and with the happiest results.

The correspondents of the home papers have done full justice to the occasion, and The Times, Daily News, Standard, Pall Mall Gazette, &c., all had letters containing glowing accounts of the festivities. In almost all these the Royal visit is represented as having passed off without a single drawback; indeed, what with receptions, balls, illuminations, loyal addresses, and sporting excursions (the elephant kraals especially being a description of sport such as could be witnessed in no other part of the world), the Duke's reception in Ceylon ought to leave as favourable an impression on his mind as any of his previous experiences. But, if the correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette is to be believed, some little doubt is felt as to the nature of the impression he has left behind. The natives are mostly disappointed that the appearance and manner of his Royal Highness did not bear out their Oriental idea of what a great Prince should be; but this is not all. It seems that the Duke, doubtless somewhat blasé and weary of homage, treated with some degree of indifference the endeavours made to amuse him, and that, doubtless by some mistake, he neglected to make a proper recognition of the almost superhuman efforts of the European official and native gentlemen—conducted, too, at a heavy cost to themselves in many instances—to do him honour, when a pleasant word or a smile would have been invaluable. No doubt (as the Pall Mall correspondent observes) the omission was unintentional, and when he hears of it he will be as sorry as anyone else; still, it is none the less to be regretted.

AMERICAN STEAMERS AND ENGLISH MAILS.

WE have already informed our readers that in March last a despatch was sent from the Foreign-office to Her MAJESTY'S Minister at Washington, instructing him to ascertain why the Pacific Mail steamers had been prohibited by the United States Government from conveying the English mails between China and Japan. The answer to this inquiry (sent in consequence of the representations made in the London and China Telegraph) is now before us in the shape of a communication from the U.S. Secretary of State to Mr. THORNTON, wherein the following explanation is conveyed.. It seems that in March, 1869, a reciprocal arrangement was entered into, by which the U.S. mail packets were to carry English mails free from Hong Kong to Yokohama, and the P. and O. vessels were to carry American mails free from Yokohama to Shanghai, whenever it might appear that any time could thus be saved The one was intended to counterbalance the other, and in neither case did the agreement apply to the return voyage. In July last it terminated altogether by the discontinuance of the P. and O. line between Shanghai and Yokohama, since which time the United States postal authorities have claimed full postage on any English mails put on board their steamers.

This is by no means satisfactory, for it holds out no expectation of a renewal of the facilities thus withdrawn; but Mr. MAGNIAC, M.P., who has communicated with Lord CLARENDON as to the great inconvenience arising from their absence, has intimated that in the event of the persons interested being able to suggest a remedy, he will again address his Lordship on the subject. It is to be hoped some expedient will soon be devised to improve the very defective means of mail communication between the ports in the north of China and Japan.

WE understand that arrangements are in progress between the "China Submarine" and the "Great Northern Extension" Telegraph Companies which will obviate any rivalry. It is proposed that the Great Northern Company shall lay the cable (now ready to be laid between Possiet Bay and Shanghai) between Hong Kong and Shanghai, and subsequently another cable from Possiet Bay to Shanghai via Nagasaki. The "China Submarine" undertakes not to lay any competing lines. The Danish frigate and the two chartered ships, Cella and Great Northern, will take the cable on board, and proceed with all despatch.

TRAVELS OF A FRENCH MISSIONARY IN CHINA.

(FROM OUR PARIS CORRESPONDENT.)

At the recent annual meeting of the learned societies of the French provinces at the Sorbonne a gold medal was awarded to Abbé Armand David, who for several years has contributed largely to the Jardin des Plantes plants and animals from China, Mongolia, Thibet, and other parts of the Far East. For ten years the Abbé has performed long and difficult journeys in almost unknown countries, and often amidst hostile people, facing and overcoming difficulties of all kinds with indomitable energy. The plain in the midst of which rises the capital of China, and the chains of mountains which rise to the north and west of Peking were the first objects of the Abbé's travels; he found the country without trees, and almost without a bush, of a monotonous and desolate aspect, a few mulberry and elm trees in the neighbourhood of habitations, and a few cypresses around the tombs, and pagodas alone broke the line, but the collections which he made are of great interest, as showing the curious relations which exist between the natural productions of a part of Asia and those of Europe. In the neighbourhood of Peking, whose latitude corresponds with the southern shores of the Mediterranean, are found animals which exist also in central Europe as well as those which inhabit India; the tiger and leopard are not rare in the mountains of Si-Wan, to the north of the Great Wall. It is a mixture, in fact, of European and Asiatic forms.

Everything, says the Abbé, is mysterious in China; a few steps to the south of the city of Peking there is an imperial park, surrounded by walls, at least twelve leagues in circumference. In it live in profound peace, multiplying from time immemorial, troops of antelopes and deer of a peculiar species. The Abbé had been told about these animals, which were to be found nowhere else, and his curiosity became highly excited; but access to the park was interdicted to all Europeans, and it was hopeless to obtain permission to visit it. An ardent naturalist is a perfect schoolboy in his nature. The Abbé thought of the wall, and, seizing a favourable opportunity, he mounted it, and there by good luck saw a herd of more than a hundred long-tailed deer. At first he took them for elan, or gigantic reindeer, but he was certain that the species or variety was unknown, and that he had made the discovery, rare now-a-days, of a new mammiferous animal of great stature. Determined to obtain at least the spoils of some of these creatures, the Abbé tried all means; he enlisted the French Legation in his favour, but the Legation seemed perfectly helpless as regarded any influence over the Chinese Government. Happily, he thought of the Tartar soldiers who guarded the park, and he felt sure that "for a consideration" he should obtain some skins of the deer in question before the winter; and he succeeded in his object. At a later period M. Bellonet actually succeeded in obtaining two of the animals from the Chinese authorities, who gave them the name of Mi-lou.*

In 1866 the Abbé made an exploration in Mongolia. He was obliged to take a load of luggage, but, said he, "I take no provisions; I depend on the natives, for I think that with a little determination where one man lives another may"—a phrase that well paints the man. For eight months he journeyed in these countries, where he believes no European before had ever penetrated, sending a large collection of natural productions to France, and keeping journals of the aspect of the regions through which he passed, their geologic character, the manners and customs of the inhabitants, and all particulars that met his eye. On his way to the Eastern Ourat with two companions, as he says, a man and an ass, he was warned that the brigands had assassinated two unfortunate Mongols; but he proceeded on his way, and continued his scientific researches.

Still later the indefatigable missionary explored the central provinces of China, the Kiang-si, the Se-Tchuen, and always with success. Last year he was in Chinese Tartary, at Mou-pin, where he passed a terrible winter in the mountains; but he made many remarkable discoveries; amongst others, a bear of an unknown species, a white bear with black ears and legs. At the present time the Abbé is still at his work, and is preparing a new kind o triumph; the Minister of Foreign Affairs has placed a collection of instruments at his disposal, and intends to try and initiate the Chinese in the physical and natural sciences. "Should he be successful," says the report of the society, "China will be won over to our civilisation." We wish the worthy Abbé Godspeed with all our hearts.

* A young naturalist, M. Alphonse Milne Edwards, has since described this animal, which he calls Elaphurus Davidianus, in the "Archives of the Museum of Natural History."

OPINIONS ON THE JAPAN LOAN.

The Times says that, although to external nations Japan is as yet a comparatively strange country, its capacities have been illustrated by the enormous development of its trade both with England and the United States during the past few years, and the conclusions of the various merchants engaged in this new and attractive branch of commerce seem favourable alike to the commercial sagacity and good faith of the Government and people. It may reasonably be anticipated that this sagacity and good faith will not break down in the commencement of their public monetary relations with the West, especially when those relations are established to supply means for augmenting their wealth, but will be so maintained as not only to justify any boldness our merchants may now be disposed to display by becoming investors, but to lead to a long financial intercourse, in which we may constantly increase our operations, and at the same time with safety gradually reduce the terms upon which they are undertaken.

The Standard also has no doubt the operation will be a success. The amount is small, and Japan has no other debt. The trade is vastly increasing, and the customs dues are understood to be considerably above half a million a year. The Oriental Bank have large establishments in Japan, and it is satisfactory that the arrangements for collection and transmission of the moneys for the loan are entrusted to them. Their connection with the operation is also a guarantee that every form necessary to make the loan perfectly legal has been observed. It is very desirable that the projected railways should be speedily constructed. They will develop the resources of Japan, and greatly add to our trade with that empire. The population of Yedo is 2,000,000, and that of Osaka 1,000,000. The railway between these two places will probably give returns in themselves sufficient for the interest and redemption of this loan.

The Pall Mall Gazette is not so sanguine. It observes that it appears, that not only has the trade of Japan with this country not increased, but statistics show that between 1864 and 1868 it was on the decline. It should further be remarked, in connection with this loan, that the security offered is considered to be so good as to arouse suspicion. Moreover, if the Imperial Government of Japan set aside the whole of their customs receipts as security for a loan to begin constructing railways, what security will they have to offer for further loans? Foreign commerce is opposed to the prejudices of the nation, and there is still unrepealed an edict, dated 1637, which makes it a capital offence for natives to travel abroad. Intending subscribers should also weigh the probabilities of disputes and difficulties which may so easily arise between the contractors for the work and a Government so little accustomed to the engagements which characterise the dealings between more civilised nations.

The Economist says:—The loan to Japan is certainly a very singular one, and is a remarkable example of rapid changes. If about ten years ago, at the time of Lord Elgin's mission to Japan, he or any of his suite had been told that in 1870 such a loan would be asked and made, they would have hardly thought it possible. Japan was then a country about which no foreigner knew anything; which refused information; where travellers were murdered and were unsafe; the very Government of which was peculiar and unknown. No doubt we have since learnt much that is favourable. Japan is an ancient arrested civilisation; like so many others in the East it began we do not know how, and stopped we can hardly explain why. The people are of remarkable imitative intelligence, ready to copy European inventions, and profit by European knowledge. But when we come to lend them money, there are several questions which must be asked and answered. First. Have we sufficient experience of Japan to say what the real working of its peculiar polity is? Secondly. Do we know what all the various bodies and persons having power in that polity may think of paying money to foreigners—that being an incessant difficulty to all but the best nations? Thirdly. Even if we know what the Japanese polity is now, can we be certain what it will be some years hence? It is now subject for the first time to the most powerful of all social solvents—the perpetual contact with a higher material civilisation. In general this is not a process of pure improvement. The first stage often is that a secluded nation (like a boy brought up at home) loses its narrow morality without, for a time at least, gaining a broader morality. Are we sure that this new nation can be trusted with the greatest of pecuniary temptations—that of borrowing from persons they never have seen, and of only defrauding (if they do defraud) persons whom they never will see? To many a foreign loan must seem a new monstrosity, and will not repaying it seem a worse? We ask these questions, not that we wish ill to this singular loan; on the contrary, we should be glad to think well of it, for the Japanese are a very interesting nation. But it is our duty, as far as we can, to make lenders see and know what they are doing; and especially now, when for many years there is more "money to lose" in Lombard-street than there has been for many years past, we are most anxious that due care should be taken, and that if possible it should not be lost.

THE JAPAN LOAN.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—In your number dated the 2nd instant there is a very able article on the "Japan Loan," and your remarks with reference to the "additional security" mentioned in Mr. Lay's glowing prospectus induces me to ask what portion of the million is to be appropriated to the railroad and its promoters, and what portion the Oriental Bank Corporation will retain to reimburse itself for moneys already advanced to the Japanese Government on the same security—viz., "anticipated Customs' dues." The argument that some use, that fresh loans will enable the Japanese Government to pay the interest on the present one, and that they are too shrewd to "kill the goose that lays the golden eggs," may hold good if the million finds its way to the Japanese coffers, and if the proffered security be still at their command. The present disturbed state of Japan, and the necessity of our keeping troops there, admitted even by our present economical Government, suggests that in the event of indemnity being required by foreign Governments they would, as in the case of China after the war, possess themselves of the Custom dues. The public has a right to look to Mr. Lay for information, as he has endeavoured to reassure it by announcing the source of security and so-called "additional security" to investors.—I am, Sir, &c.,

City, May 5, 1870. AN OLD RESIDENT IN JAPAN.

Monetary and Commercial.

The report of the Telegraph to India Company (Limited), to be presented this day, congratulates the shareholders upon the result of the operations of the British-Indian Submarine Telegraph Company, by which the communication has been successfully completed between Suez and Bombay, and states that the arrangement of the 2nd of January, 1869, will at once be carried out, under which the shareholders will receive £37,500, in fully paid shares of the British-Indian Submarine Telegraph Company, with the four months' interest upon the lease of the line to April 30. The necessary resolutions for winding-up the company will be submitted to the meeting.

The report of the Anglo-American Telegraph Company (Limited) states the total receipts accruing to the company for the nine months ended the 31st of January last, including a balance of £3,725 carried over from the last account, to amount to £118,915, while the working expenses were £12,657, leaving £106,258 available for dividend. Out of this three interim dividends of 10s. per share, amounting in the whole to £90,000, have already been distributed, and there remains a balance of £16,258 to deal with. The directors, therefore, now recommend a further dividend at the rate of 5s. per share, free of income-tax, leaving £1,258 to be carried forward. Since the commencement of the joint purse arrangement with the French Atlantic Company the receipts have been fairly satisfactory, and the expenses naturally consequent upon competition greatly diminished. The Robert Lowe, which has been expressly built as a maintenance ship at the cost of the two companies, is expected to be ready for sea by the middle of May, when she will at once proceed to Newfoundland to repair the 1866 cable.

At the meeting of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company the report showed a much improved state of the traffic for the last half of 1869, and recommends the payment of £2 a share—viz., a bonus of £1 10s. out of the "insurance account," and 10s. a share out of the balance to the credit of the "repair and renewal account."

At the meeting of the shareholders in the Great Eastern Steamship Company, Sir Daniel Gooch, M.P. (the chairman), congratulated the shareholders upon the successful working of the company and upon the board being in a position to propose a distribution of shares in the British Indian Telegraph Company, which, with the division in the autumn of last year, would be equal to a dividend of between 50 and 60 per cent. upon 1,250 shares to be dealt with upon some future occasion. The report and accounts were adopted, and it was announced that the ship had been chartered for five years by the Telegraph Construction Company. The sum to be paid annually for the hiring was £22,000, or equal to a dividend of 20 per cent. per annum, as the Construction Company undertook to insure the vessel for £140 000, and to pay all those charges which are usually borne by the owner.

At a meeting, at which about 800 policy-holders in the Albert Life Office attended, the following resolutions were adopted:—1st That the policy-holders approve of and accept the scheme of reconstruction prepared by the committee of policy-holders, annuitants, and shareholders in the Albert Life Assurance Company, and now submitted to the meeting, subject to such modifications as may be found expedient and be sanctioned by the Court of Chancery. 2 That this meeting earnestly impress upon the policy holders the importance of sending in their individual assents to the scheme as speedily as possible, so as to strengthen the hands of the committee in carrying the same into effect. 3. That the policy-holders consider it desirable, and agree to pay the premiums due on their respective policies to an account to be opened at the Bank of England and the Agra Bank (Limited), in the names of Messrs. Thomson, Bell, and Major-General Cunningham, three of the members of the committee of policy-holders, annuitants, and shareholders, in the Albert Life Assurance Company, the premiums to be returned in case the scheme of reconstruction should not be carried out, without deduction of any kind.

At the annual meeting of the Standard Life Assurance Company at Edinburgh the new assurances for 1869 were stated to have been 1,619, for £1,110,347, yielding in new premiums £38,532; that the assurances in force are £15,413,600, and the accumulated fund £4,284,648, while the annual income is £710,428.

The Committee of the Bank of London announce a payment to the shareholders of £1 5s. per share, being the first return of the capital of the undertaking. The debt of the Atlantic and Great Western Railway Company has occupied very much of the time and attention of the committee, and still continues to do so. They are proceeding with the careful realisation of the other outstanding assets of the bank, and have reason to believe their value was not overstated in their last report. The committee also express a hope that they will make a second distribution of capital at no distant period, when they will issue an extended report.

At a meeting of the members of Lloyd's held on the 5th to consider the propriety of shortening the term for payment of losses which have been duly settled, it was resolved, after a somewhat animated discussion, that on and after the 1st of July next the date of payment should be one week after settlement instead of a month, as at present.

Special telegrams to Lloyd's announce the loss of the Helen Nicholson, London to Shanghai, with cargo valued at £80,000; and the St. Dunstan, Clyde to Yokohama, with a rough cargo, of not much value. The registered owner of the Helen Nicholson is Mr. B. C. Nicholson, Liverpool, and of the St. Dunstan Mr. John Low, Greenock.

The Netherlands India Steam Company have announced, by a circular from Amsterdam, that the Royal approval has been granted to the articles of association, and the first call must be paid by London subscribers to Messrs. Montague and Co. before the 14th inst.

The twelfth annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China will be held at the Bank at one o'clock on Tuesday, the 17th inst.

The offices of the Compagnie des Services Maritimes des Messageries Imperiales have been removed from 4, Moorgate-street, to 97, Cannon-street, opposite the railway station.

Creditors of the Oriental Hotels Company are to send in their claims to Mr. Cooper, liquidator, before the 1st July.

The tenders for £400,000 on bills on India were received on the 4th at the Bank of England, when the amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £397,000; and to Madras, £3,000. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 10½d., being a further reduction of 1 per cent., and tenders at 1s. 10⅝d. will receive about 23 per cent.; above, in full, showing a continued diminution in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

The Bank rates for bills at sixty days' sight on Singapore, China, and Japan are as follows:—Singapore, buying 4s. 3d.; selling, 4s. 5½d. Hong Kong, buying, 4s. 3d.; selling, 4s. 5½d. Shanghai, buying, 5s. 8d.; selling, 6s. 2d. Yokohama, buying, 4s. 3d.; selling, 4s. 7d.

The payment of 15 per cent. on the Japan loan was made on the 5th by subscribers. Transactions took place at 4 and 5 discount. The Times, which has written favourably of the loan had the following:—"The payment of 15 per cent. on the Japanese railway loan, which fell due yesterday, is stated to have been met with entire promptitude, and it is believed that by far the largest number of the original subscriptions were from persons who deliberately entered into the investment from knowledge of the country and people through trading or other connections. These parties doubtless considered the inducement of 9 per cent. interest a fair cover for the risk, and are therefore not likely to be swayed by any market fluctuations; but it is evident that a portion is in the hands of weak holders, who had no right to have anything to do with such a speculation, and who are now closing their thoughtless commitments, even at 3½ discount."

Subjoined is an account of the quantities of certain articles of produce remaining in the bonded warehouses of the United Kingdom on the 31st March, 1870, compared with the stocks on the 31st March, 1868 and 1869:—

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade returns for the month of March tend, so far as they can be relied upon, to confirm the prevalent impression as to the improvement now observable in nearly all branches of the commerce of the country. Compared with the corrresponding month of last year they show an increase of £1,602,745, or more than 10 per cent., in the declared value of our exportations, while on the same month of 1868 the increase is more than 17 per cent. This favourable movement has been diffused over nearly every branch of production. There has been an increase of 17 per cent. in the shipments of coal, 17 per cent. in cotton yarn, 11 per cent. in cotton manufactures, 9 per cent in haberdashery, 19 per cent. in hardwares, 9 per cent. in linen manufactures, 26 per cent. in machinery, 8 per cent in iron, 10 per cent. in oil seeds, 25 per cent. in woollen yarn, and 8 per cent. in woollen manufactures. At the same time, there is also an increase of 15 per cent. in the large class of articles "unenumerated.' Earthenware constitutes the only material item on the unfavourable side, a decrease of 16 per cent. being shown under that head. In the shipments of silk manufactures there has been no alteration. The total value of our exportations for the first quarter of the present year has been £45,678,774, or about 6½ per cent. above those of the same quarter of last year, and more than 10 per cent. above those of the same quarter of 1868.

Among the articles subject to duty, entered for home consumption, there are some considerable changes, due mainly to temporary causes. In consequence of the uncertainty as to the changes in Customs duties contemplated by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, reduced quantities of the following were taken out of bond: Cocoa, coffee, fruit, sugar (a reduction of 30 per cent.), molasses, tea (a reduction of nearly 50 per cent.), and wine Spirits and tobacco are the only commodities which were cleared in larger amounts. The bonded warehouse account shows variations almost exactly corresponding. The stock of coffee, fruit, sugar, molasses, and tea was considerably heavier on the 31st March last than at the corresponding date in 1869, while that of spirits and tobacco was smaller.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East:—

BULLION AND SPECIE.

The following is from Messrs. Pixley, Abell, Langley, and Blake's Circular:—

GOLD still continues to flow into the Bank, the amount purchased since the 28th ulto. being £36,000. The arrivals during the week have been comparatively small, and although there is over £330,000 now on the way to this country, we do not look for any portion of this sum until about the 23rd inst. The Biafra brought £1,000 from Africa, and the J. N. Fleming £28,500 from Otago; on the other hand, the Shannon has taken £28,000 to the West Indies.

SILVER has been in good demand for Holland, and the amounts lately to hand have been sold at from 60⅝d. to 60½d. per oz. standard. There is no likelihood of any immediate demand for India. The Pera has brought £5,760 from Alexandria.

MEXICAN DOLLARS.—Those brought by the West India steamer were sold at 59⅜d. per ox., and the Bangalore took about £18,000 to China. The amounts received comprise £10,000 per Hermann and £7,500 per Union from New York.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. A. Capel and Co. report as follows:—

We have no improvement to notice in the tone of the market during the past fortnight. There has been but little general demand, and since the resumption of business after the Easter holidays the trade have been chiefly occupied with public sales both of India and China Tea, which have been on a larger scale than usual, especially the series now in progress, which amounts to nearly 50,000 packages, 32,000 of which are printed for absolute sale. So far these sales have progressed very heavily, and have established a fall of 1d. per lb. on low black leaf kinds of Congou. The deliveries for the past month have amounted to 17,240,000 lbs., but the total for the four months is still about 3,000,000 lbs. below last year, there being a large falling off in exports. The stock in the United Kingdom on the 30th ultimo was estimated at 107,780,000 lbs. against 99,500,000 lbs., the quantity afloat at 10,179,000 lbs. against 9,115,000 lbs. last year.

Red-leaf Congou: Siftings have sold ½d. per lb. lower, broken-leaf kinds have also given way in price ¼d. to 1d. per lb. Fair to good common have been sold from 11½d. to 1s. per lb., being easier rates. Fair to good Kaisows have met with but little inquiry. Fine Kaisows show no alteration, as also finest, transactions being limited. In Pak Lins there has been but little done. Amoy kinds have been difficult of sale at the reduced quotations. Black-leaf kinds: The ordinary to good ordinary kinds have been much depressed, and have sold fully 1d. per lb. lower, from 7¾d. to 9½d. per lb. Fair common have been sold from 10½d. to 11d. per lb., being ½d. per lb. decline. Good common at 11½d. to 1s. per lb. show a similar reduction. Fair medium Teas from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d. have been heavy, and prices are with difficulty maintained. Good qualities show but little change; fine to finest remain steady. New-make Canton kinds: Common to fair qualities remain as before. Some large sales have been made in good to finest, ex Jas. Shepherd, from 1s. 4d. to 2s. 3d. per lb., the quality being superior to any that have arrived for some time past. Oolongs: Some parcels of common to fair have been sold from 10½d. to 1s. per lb.; good to fine continue in request. Souchongs: A few of fair quality have been sold at former prices; the finer kinds remain very difficult of sale. Scented Teas: Common to fair Canton Capers show no improvement; good to fine remain in good demand. Foochow kinds have sold rather lower. Orange Pekoes: Common to fair Canton kinds have been sold at lower prices; good to fine at about previous rates. Foochow kinds: Old season's have sold rather lower; fair to good of new season have been without inquiry; fine are still in request. In uncoloured Japans there is nothing of interest to report. Green: There has been but little done since our last. There has been some inquiry for Nos. 1 and 2 fine Ping Suey Gunpowder for export. Common to fair descriptions remain in over supply, and with but little demand prices are somewhat nominal. A few Moyune kinds realised full prices at public auction. Canton Gunpowders have been difficult to move at rather lower prices.

The following is from Messrs. Shepard, Harrison, and Rehden's Circular:—There has been an enormous quantity of Tea offered during the past fortnight (the accumulation of imports of the past three months); a fair business has been transacted, but at a further decline of ½d. to ¾d. per lb. on the grades to medium Congou, and at the public sale, which commenced on May 3, of 48,900 packages (32,000 packages without reserve), spurious and low Congous, of which the bulk of the Teas offered consist, show a further decline of 1d. to 1½d. per lb.. good common Congou rules fully up to private sale rates, and we believe the lowest point has been reached, as there are several orders to buy on speculation, should it touch 11d. per lb. Good medium to fine Teas maintain late values, and for the Tayshan leaf, per James Shepherd, from Macao, most satisfactory prices have been paid for the parcels already sold. The export trade to all parts has been quiet. The clearances have continued on the same active scale, but the total deliveries do not compare favourably with last year, and stand thus:—

Home consumption for London from 1st Jan. to 30th April ...	25,527,000	25,420,000
Export do. do.	10,184,000	14,600,000
Sent coastwise do.	12,634,000	11,200,000
Total,	48,345,000	51,220,000

The sales have proceeded steadily; 13,881 packages passed on the 5th, and 7,833 packages were sold, all being without reserve. Foochow Siftings and Broken-leaf brought 6¾d. to 8¾d. per lb., common Red-leaf 11½d., fair common 11¾d. per lb., showing slightly better prices than at the commencement of the sales. Several parcels of fair to good Black leaf Congou, "with all faults," sold from 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 2d. per lb., fair rates, condition being considered.

SILK.

The following is from Messrs. Kilburn, Kershaw, and Co.'s Circular:—

The market has improved during the past fortnight, and a fairly active business has been doing; the principal demand is for Tsatlees, and these Silks have recovered much of the fall in price experienced during April; the lower grades may now be quoted as high as at any period since November, with "Red Peacocks" at 27s. 6d., and best chop 3rds at 32s. Taysaams, owing to the comparatively large arrivals, have not been in such demand, and prices are lower, except for best No. 1 "Kahings," which are very scarce, and worth 26s. 6d. to 27s. There is now a rather large supply of common and medium "Chincums" and "Kahings," which buyers do not seem anxious to take even at 1s. to 1s. 6d. reduction from highest point; Hainins are still quite neglected. Canton Silk: There is a demand for medium Tsatlee reel at 20s. 6d., and for common at 20s.; this shows a fall of 1s. on these sorts. Of finer descriptions there are none offering; Loongcongs, both fine and medium sorts, are dull of sale. Japan Silk has experienced a slight activity for the lower and best descriptions of Maibash, but medium silks are neglected. Bengals are almost a dead letter; the only real inquiry is for good clean native Silks of full size, which are very scarce. The deliveries in April did not bear out the promise of the large clearances in March, being 2,920 bales China, 687 bales Canton, 649 bales Japan, and 336 bales Bengal; total, 4,622 bales, against 4,665 in April, 1869; and from 1st to 4th instant are 389 bales China, 66 bales Canton, 96 bales Japan, and 54 bales Bengal; total, 605 bales.

The cold weather has given rise to fears for the crop in Europe, and has had some effect on the market. Closing quotations:—China Silk, No. 3, 31s. 6d. to 32s.; Red Peacock, 27s. 6d.; and No. 5, 25s. 6d. to 26s. Japan Silk is somewhat neglected, owing to the large stock that we are likely to have at the end of the season; good Mibash and Sinchu have been sold at 33s. 6d., and some common parcels are offered at 25s. 6d. to 27s.

CHINA SILK PIECE GOODS.—In the public sales of 4th inst. there was a very mixed assortment of goods, and little or no business; indeed, the sales from the hammer were so few that they are not sufficient to form quotations.

COFFEE.

The depression prevailing in the market for Ceylon at the date of our last report continued until the close of the following week, when prices exhibited a further decline of about 1s. per cwt. Within the past few days, however, an improved inquiry for Plantation has resulted in an advance for that description of 6d. per cwt., with a tendency towards a further rise, considerable quantities offered at the public sales being readily taken off. For Native the demand throughout has been extremely limited. The latest rates paid have been for Plantation triage and ordinary, 50s. to 54s.; small grey and dull, 59s. to 60s.; low middling and middling ditto, 62s. to 65s.; bold, 66s. to 70s. 6d.; small colony, 61s. to 62s. 6d.; middling ditto, 65s. 6d. to 71s.; good middling, 71s. 6d. to 73s.; fine middling to fine, 76s. to 33s. 6d; peaberry, 75s. to 88s. Of Native, the fortnight's sales do not amount to more than 250 bags at 38s.; for chips ordinary, 51s.; good ordinary, 52s. 6d.; a large proportion damaged selling at 44s 6d. to 49s. Of 1,448 bags Singapore offered at auction 175 bags mixed were sold at 40s. to 47s. 6d., the remainder Bonthyne being bought in, good bold pale 55s. to 58s., yellow, 59s. to 61s. There have been no offers of Manila or Java. The landings consist mostly of Ceylon, and are 500 tons above those in 1869; deliveries, although relatively moderate, are rather over 200 tons in excess, and the surplus in the stock is slightly increased, being nearly 7,000 tons.

The quantity of Ceylon Coffee afloat for Great Britain is estimated as follows:—Plantation. 293,954 cwt., against 304,863 cwt. at the corresponding date of 1869; Native, 31,321 cwt., against 51,290 cwt. The quantity afloat for the Continent is 2,694 cwt. Plantation against 10,179 cwt., and 1,845 cwt. Native against 19,454 cwt. The quantity of Coffee landed in the seventeen weeks ended April 30, 1870, was, of Ceylon, 7,947 tons, against 8,938 tons during the corresponding period of 1869; of all descriptions, 11,505 tons, against 15,061 tons. The quantity entered for home consumption was, of Ceylon, 3,204 tons, against 3,617 tons; of all descriptions, 5,618 tons, against 6,180 tons. The quantity exported was, of Ceylon, 6,317 tons, against 8,238 tons; of all descriptions, 10,934 tons, against 15,870 tons. The stock on April 30 was, of Ceylon, 12,290 tons, against 8,078 tons; of all descriptions, 19,172 tons, against 12,231 tons.

SUGAR.

The market has presented a dull appearance throughout the interval, buyers operating only for immediate requirements; prices have consequently again declined, and must be quoted 6d. to 1s. lower than those of last mail. Penang: Early in the fortnight 1,313 bags sold at auction, good brown (duty 4s. 9d.) at 28s. to 28s. 6d., low to fine yellow at 30s. to 32s. 6d., soft white at 33s. 6d. to 34s. At a more recent sale, of 2,060 bags offered only 400 bags sold, low to middling yellow at 29s. to 30s. 6d., the remainder being bought in, brown at 28s. to 29s., yellow at 30s. to 32s., also 743 baskets low date sort at 20s. By private contract 600 bags have realised 32s. 3d. per cwt. Manila: The only offer at the public sales, 14,780 bags low clayed, duty 4s., was withdrawn at 25s. 6d. Privately sales have been effected of 150 tons unclayed Taal at 20s. 3d. to 20s. 6d. per cwt. Java, Siam, and China: No transactions.

The quantity of Sugar landed in the seventeen weeks ended April 30, 1870, was, of Penang, 792 tons, against 1,126 tons in the corresponding period of 1869; of Manila, Java, and China, 6,477 tons, against 15,170 tons; the quantity entered for home consumption was of Penang, 835 tons, against 1,202 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 8,521 tons, against 4,696 tons. The quantity exported was, of Penang 32 tons, against 42 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 1,409 tons, against 700 tons. The stock on April 30 was, of Penang, 2,255 tons, against 211 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 32,337 tons, against 41,518 tons.

CAMPHOR.—A slight improvement in the demand has taken place, and about 300 cases China have been sold at 85s. to 87s. 6d.; Japan continues scarce, and no transactions are reported; holders are asking 92s. 6d.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—Shortly after the date of our last 119 casks Ceylon sold at £40 to £41 10s., but the demand has since fallen off, and the present quotation is £39 10s. to £40; for arrival 35 tons have been sold at £40 10s. The quantity of Ceylon afloat for the United Kingdom is estimated at 36,086 tons, against 22,057 tons last year, and 18,475 in 1868; to the Continent, 2,566 tons, against 750 tons last year.

CUTCH.—Large offers have been made upon a dull market, and prices are lower in consequence; of 2,649 boxes at the auctions about one-third has been sold at 23s. to 23s. 9d. for good Pegu; business is reported for arrival at 23s.

CHINA GRASS.—The offers have comprised 228 bales, of which 72 bales sold at £60 for damaged and £70 for sound, the remainder being bought in at £80.

CUBEBS.—The market is steady; of 233 bags at auction about half was sold at 30s. 6d. to 31s. per cwt.

CINNAMON.—The small quantities brought forward at public sale have realised steady prices; of 210 bales Ceylon offered 120 bales sold good medium first sort at 2s. 10d., ditto second sort at 2s. 6d. to 2s. 9d., third at 1s. 4d. to 1s. 8d., low coarse at 6d. to 8d.; 320 boxes and 4 baskets China, of Cassia Bud flavour, were offered and bought in at 1s. 9d. per pound. Chips: Of 1,076 bags Ceylon offered 292 bags sold at easy rates, low middling at 4½d., middling barky chips at 4¾d.; a few lots sold at 5d., the remainder being bought in above the value at 9d.

COIR YARN.—At the last sales a large supply was brought forward, nearly the whole of which sold at irregular and lower prices, all descriptions showing a decline of £1 to £2 per ton, except good bright, which sold at about previous term. Of Ceylon 197 bales sold, fine at £38 10s. to £38 15s.; very fine, £45 10s. to £52 15s.; superior, £55 to £65; and 110 tons in dholls, common at £20 to £23 10s.; good common to middling, £24 15s. to £28; good, £31 to £33 10s.; fine, £35 15s. to £37; one lot very fine, £54.

DRAGON'S-BLOOD.—The sale is reported of 11 cases fair lump at £6 to £6 5s.

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed: Very flat. Cassia sells in purely retail quantities at 4s. 7d. to 4s. 8d. per lb., but large holders are not selling. Nutmegs: 10 cases brought to public sale sold readily at 6¾d. to 7d. per oz. for fine White.

FIBRE.—We note the sale of 50 bales ordinary Manila Aloe at £17, and 8 bales fair quality at £19.

GAMBIER.—A moderate business has deen done at previously ruling rates, viz., free Cubes, 19s. 6d. to 20s; pressed, 18s.; Block, 16s. 6d.; private transactions are reported at 16s. 9d. ex ship.

GALLS.—China have met a fair demand at reduced rates, and of 225 cases at public sale more than half buyers at 46s. 6d. to 47s. per cwt. for rather broken. Private sales of good at 48s. are reported. No Japan have been offered.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Siam quiet; 20 cases mostly retired; 3 cases fair bold almond and tear in block sold at £21 10s. to £22 5s. Sumatra dull; 280 cases principally retired; 2nd fine bright, part sold at £10; dull brownish £8 2s. 6d. 3rd TT and Co. Penang, part sold at 95s.; Palembang dull, a parcel of brown sold lower at 46s. to 66s. Copal: Singapore sells readily; 217 cases rough dusty sold at 33s. to 33s. 6d.; 212 cases dark block sold at 21s. Damar: 7s. 6d. lower; 274 cases half sold; good pale sorts at 69s. to 70s.; mixed and drossy 60s. to 65s. 6d. Gamboge sells freely; 70 boxes sold at £16 10s. to £16 15s. for fine pipe, and £14 pickings.

HEMP.—Manila has been in fair demand at £50 for common, £52 for fair, and £53 to £54 10s. for good roping; the sales have amounted to about 600 bales; 9 bales Singapore have been sold at £7 10s. per ton.

HIDES.—The sales of East India Hides during the past month reach 359,895 Kips in the hair and tanned. The quantity brought to public sale has been large, but with an improved demand from the home trade, and a fair one for export, the bulk of those offered have been sold. Prices of the best descriptions generally improved ¼d. per lb. in the early part of the month, but at the last sales receded to the same extent, leaving present rates as nearly as possible the same as those current at the close of March. Dirty cured and all middling and low qualities must be quoted ¼d. to ½d. per lb. lower. Singapore and Penang Ox and Cow Hides: The sales have been large, and comprise 23,855 Hides, which chiefly brought good prices for the quality. Dry, Best Light, 9½d. to 10½d.; Seconds, 8d. to 9¾d.; Best Heavy, 8½d. to 9½d.; Seconds, 7½d. to 8½d.; Extra Heavy, 7½d. to 8½d.; Best Small, 10¾d.; Second do., 9½d. to 9½d.; Third do., 7½d. to 7¾d.; Thirds, 6½d. to 7½d.; Fourths, 5d. to 6d. per lb.; Brined, Best Light, 12d.; Seconds, 9¾d.; Best Heavy, 9¾d.; Seconds, 8½d.; Extra Heavy, 8½d.; Small, 12d. per lb. Singapore and Penang Buffalo Hides have sold rather more freely, but without any quotable improvement in value. The sales comprise 10,322 Hides—Prime Slaughtered, Best and Seconds, 6½d. per lb.; Ordinary to good, Best Heavy, 5¾d. to 6d.; Seconds, 4¾d. to 5¾d.; Light, 6½d. to 7d.; Thirds, 4d. to 4½d. per lb.

INDIA-RUBBER.—The market is still without change, good qualities are in fair demand and common neglected; at auction 145 baskets damp Borneo were offered and withdrawn at 1s. 5½d. per lb., an offer of 1s. 4½d. being refused.

ISINGLASS.—The market is steady; 70 cases Penang sold at previous prices, and 8 cases Manila were offered and withdrawn.

JAPAN WAX.—There is no change to report; of 364 boxes offered at public sale about one-fourth sold at 70s. to 71s. 6d. per cwt. for fine quality cake and saucer.

MUSK.—With a steady market 7 tins grain offered met a fair demand, and thin fine sold at 54s.; medium at 39s. per oz.

PEPPER.—Black: The market is far from active, and only limited business has been done privately at 4 13-16d. per lb. for Penang, but closing at 4¾d., with buyers to arrive at 4½d. About 1,000 bags have been sold for delivery at the end of June at 4½d. Only 595 bags Singapore at auction, and those retired; but there were rather buyers than sellers at 4¾d. per lb. afloat. White shortly subsequent to our last was sold in small quantities at 6¾d. per lb., but has since fallen, and business was done at 6d. Latterly, however, a slight improvement has been established, and 81 bags Singapore, previously retired in sale, have been sold at 6⅛d. per lb.

PLUMBAGO.—The demand remains limited, and stocks are still large; middling lump, being neglected, is difficult to dispose of; finest quality is very scarce. At auction 1,953 barrels, partly old lots, were offered, and half sold; lump, good bright, at 22s.; inferior, at 12s. to 13s.; dust, at 8s. to 12s. 9d. for middling to fine; and at 5s. to 6s. 3d. for ordinary dull.

RATTANS.—There is a fair demand at the public sales, of 9,266 bundles Penang offered, about half sold at 1s 11d. to 2s. 8d. per hundred for ordinary and medium quality; 4,575 bundles Batavia realised 3s. 2d. to 3s. 4d. for fair and good.

ROOTS.—Colombo: There is very little doing and lower prices are current. Galangal: Inactive; 110 bags at public sale were offered and withdrawn.

RHUBARB.—The market for China is quiet; of 168 cases brought to auction, about one-fourth sold at 4s. to 4s. 3d. per lb. for good bold, well trimmed; 3s. 6d. rather rougher, small and mixed, and 6½d. to 7d. very low wormy, rough pieces. 2 cases fine bold selected, with good fracture, sold privately at the extravagant price of 12s. 6d. per lb.

RICE.—Recent light landings and deliveries of fair extent have absorbed the surplus of 13,000 tons which occurred at the beginning of the year, and stocks in both years are now about on a par, which, combined with a falling off in the quantity afloat, has given some impetus to the demand, and sales to a moderate extent have been effected on the spot at about 3d. advance. In the business afloat the improvement has been still more marked, extensive transactions being reported at prices showing an advance of from 4½d. to 6d. per cwt. The sales on the spot have been as follows:—At auction, of 25 barrels 190 bags Dutch cleaned Java offered, 90 bags sold at 15s. 6d., the remainder being bought in at 25s. to 30s.; 500 bags Rangoon, fine quality, sold at 10s. cash; and 8,343 bags Rangoon, per Barham, were all sold, good at 9s. to 9s. 3d., low heated at 7s. 6d., sea damaged, chiefly first-class or medium quality at 8s. 6d., second at 7s. 6d. By private contract about 6,500 bags Rangoon have been sold, low at 7s. 9d. to 8s. 3d, good to fine at 9s. to 9s. 7½d., and 2,000 bags field Siam at 7s. 6d. to 8s. The following floating cargoes have been reported sold:—The Caroline, 680 tons Necransie, March sailing, at 9s. 7½d. Continental terms, or 10s. 1½d. landed; the Oostendia, 500 tons Rangoon, at 10s., Continental terms, for a port between Copenhagen and Bordeaux; the arrived cargo of old Necransie Arracan, per Feronia, 1,540 tons at 7s. 9d., quay terms; the cargo of 1,500 tons Necransie Arracan, per Garibaldi, at 9s. 6d. for the Continent; the Magdalena Prima, about 700 tons Rangoon, March sailing, at 9s. 7½d., Continental terms; the Rocklight, 765 tons Rangoon, March sailing, at 10s. 1½d., landed terms; the Glenlora, 800 tons Rangoon, late March sailing, at 10s. 3d., landed terms; the Shields, 483 tons Rangoon, February sailing, at 9s. 9d. ex ship, or 10s. 3d. landed for London; the Lodore, 1,110 tons Rangoon, February sailing, at 9s. 9d. ex ship, or 10s. 3d. landed for London; the Daphne, 786 tons Bassein, at 9s. 9d. ex ship, or 10s. 3d. landed for London; the Manila II., 675 tons Necransie Arracan, March sailing, at 9s. 7½d. ex ship or Continent, or 10s. 1½d. landed; the J. Vinicombe, 1,000 tons field Siam arrived in dock, at 7s. 3d. ex quay; the Benmore, 800 tons field Siam in bags at 7s. 6d. ex ship, or 8s. landed for London.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea: Is very dull and difficult to place even at considerably reduced prices, and evinces little tendency towards a maintenance of present rates; only 62 boxes have been offered at auction, and those were retired. Buds are very quiet. Cloves: Continue in demand, and scarce; 4 cases Penang at public sale brought 11¾d. per lb. for good quality. Mace is in good demand; 12 cases fine at auction were retired above the value; 100 cases Dutch sold privately at 2s. 10d. per lb. for fair, rather small. Nutmegs have improved in value, though hardly quotable; 419 cases have been brought to the hammer, and nearly all sold under it with a brisk demand, and commanded prices as follows: 60 to the lb., 4s. 4d. per lb.; 66 to 68, 3s 9d. to 3s. 6d.; 72 to 76, 2s. 11d. to 2s. 8d.; 82 to 80, 2s. 6d. to 2s. 7d.; 94 to 92, 2s. 2d. to 2s.; 105 to 103, 2s. to 1s. 10d.; 154, 1s. 5d.; and small shrivelled and wormy, 1s. 1d. to 9d. per lb.

SAGO.—The market is quiet, and there is little doing privately. Of 1,275 bags and 727 boxes at auction only a few of the former were placed at 17s. 6d. per cwt. for middling. Flour has been in more request, and about from 1,500 to 2,000 bags have been sold privately at 14s. per cwt. for Singapore, and Borneo in proportion; 500 bags Borneo in auction were retired above the value.

SAPANWOOD.—Steady; of 102 tons Manila offered a portion only sold at £8; 11 tons Siam were offered, and withdrawn.

SHELLS.—Since the periodical sales which we reported on the 18th ult., there has been no business done.

STICKLAC.—The market is very flat; of 1,588 packages Siam offered at auction, a few only found buyers at 47s. to 49s. per cwt. for bold, but rather woody and foul, and at 38s. 6d. to 39s. middling mixed.

STAR ANISEEDS.—China continue scarce and firm; no transactions reported.

SOY.—Inactive; of 236 casks China offered at the auctions a few only were sold at 2s. 6d. per gallon, showing a decline of 5d.

TAPIOCA.—The supplies are very full, and this import fluctuates in value to a small extent with the requirements of purchasers; only a moderate trade is doing privately. The auctions since our last issue have embraced 1,869 bags Singapore, one-third of which sold at 2¼d. to 2½d. per lb. for good bold; 211 bags Penang, part sold at 2¼d. for fair dull white; and 990 bags Pearl, about one-third sold at 24s. to 25s. for rather dull bullets, and 22s. 6d. to 23s. for medium, being cheaper.

TURMERIC.—There are no supplies of China on the market; for Java the inquiry is dull, and an offer of 300 bags was retired at 18s.

TOBACCO.—The following is from Messrs. Grant, Hodgson, and Co.'s Monthly Circular.—Manila Leaf: The damaged portion only of the parcel ex Angela has been sold; some buyers who have already worked this Tobacco report very favourably upon it, and in the present dearth of other growths we anticipate a better demand shortly. Manila Cheroots and Cigars: When well made sell freely, but those of mixed and ordinary character only find buyers at low rates. Java: The trade have purchased a few parcels of middling to good qualities which were held at moderate prices. Other classes are difficult to move. Japan: Arrivals during the month were 1,450 bales, viz.:—125 per the Vampyr, and 1,325 per the Medina. The 125 bales were sold at public auction, on the 28th and 29th inst., and realised full rates. We purpose offering at auction, on the 19th proximo, about 950 of the bales ex Medina.

TIN.—The prices for Straits have continued to advance, owing to very extensive deliveries both here and in Holland; there is a good business doing at the current quotations, which are—Straits, on the spot, £135; afloat, £133; Banca, £136; Billiton, £134 per ton, showing an advance of 20s. to 30s.

VERMILION.—The market is firm, and there are buyers of China at 3s.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Since our report of the 22nd ult. the Manchester market has been quiet, and prices have shown a downward tendency. There is at the present time less doing than for some time past, still little or no pressure is shown to effect sales, and rates are steadily maintained at the reduction submitted to last week. China Grey Shirtings and T-cloths show a decline of 1½d. to 3d. upon last mail's prices, but in Yarns no change is observable.

BRADFORD MARKET.

The market is extremely dull; there is scarcely any business doing, and quotations for all goods are wholly nominal.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.

TEA.

The following is from Messrs. Beebe's Circular, dated 20th ult:—

Since our last no improvement either in the current rates for Tea or the general tone of the market can be noted. Sales reported from first hands during the past twelve days include 11,750 half-chests Green, 3,700 half-chests Japan, and 1,200 half-chests Oolong. The market closes with a fair inquiry from the trade for fine to finest chops of Green, and little or no demand for medium and low grades. Japans are quiet, most of the supplies thus far to hand having been sold previous to arrival. Blacks are generally neglected, and if pressed to sale to any considerable extent lower prices would have to be accepted. We make no change in our quotations, but, as at the date of our last, the figures are largely nominal. The increase shown by our table in the deliveries for consumption is accounted for in part by the payment of duties on Teas imported more than a year ago, upon which the warehousing bonds have matured.

The following are the current quotations:—Greens (Moyune, Twanki and Fychow): Gunpowder, common to good, 65c. to 105c.; fine to finest, 75c. 120c.; Imperial, common to good, 52c. to 90c.; fine to finest, 55c. to 110c.; Young Hyson, common to good, 45c. to 95c.; fine to finest, 47c. to 110c.; Hyson, common to good, 50c. to 85c.; fine to finest, 53c. to 100c.; Hyson Skin, 43c. to 52c.; Foochow Oolongs, common and good, 53c. to 59c.; superior and fine, 61c. to 75c.; finest, 80c. to 110c.; Amoy Oolongs, common and good, 52c. to 58c.; superior and fine, 60c. to 70c.; finest, 75c. to 80c.; Souchong and Congou, common and good, 44c. to 52c.; superior and fine, 54c. to 63c.; finest, 65c. to 85c.; Japans, common, 57c. to 62c.; medium, 68c. to 76c.; fine and finest, 78c. to 85c.; choice, 88c. to 95c.

The total receipts of Tea from China and Japan at the port of New York from Jan. 1 to April 19, 1870, were as follows:—Greens, 11,291,915 lbs.; Japans, 3,307,971 lbs.; Souchongs, 2,170,745 lbs.; Oolongs, 5,874,115 lbs.; other sorts, 98,256 lbs.; total, 22,743,002 lbs. The stock on Jan. 1 was 9,866,167 lbs.; which, added to the above total, gives a result of 32,609,169 lbs. Subtracting from this total the exports from Jan. 1 to April 19, 1,619,089 lbs., and the withdrawals for home consumption during that period, 12,094,628 lbs., there remains a total of 18,895,452 lbs., representing the stock on the last-named date. The receipts from April 6 to April 19 amounted to 3,275,095 lbs.; the withdrawals for home consumption to 4,392,096 lbs.; and the exports to 303,723 lbs.

COFFEE.—The supply of Brazil has been slightly increased, but the arrivals have not placed a sufficient quantity on the market to meet the demand, and prices are ½c. to ¼c. higher. For East India there is a steady enquiry; we note sales of 100 bags Java at 20c., and 5,500 mats on private terms, the latter being a speculative lot per Jean Van Galen; in other kinds a moderate business has been done at former prices, viz., Java Government bags 20c. to 21½c.; mats, 20c. to 22c.; Singapore, 18c. to 19c.; Manila, 16c. to 17c.; Native Ceylon, 17½c. to 19c. gold. The stock of Manila on the 1st April was estimated at 2,627 bags, against 6,769 bags on April 1, 1869; of Java (Government) at 815 bags, against 1,641 bags; of Java mats, 51,929, against 41,808 bags; of Ceylon, 1,500 bags, against 7,000 bags; of Singapore nil in both years.

CAMPHOR.—China is quoted 18c. gold (in bond).

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed is quoted $2.12½; Cassia, $1.25 gold.

GAMBIER.—The current quotation is 4c. to 4¼c. gold (duty paid); stock, very small, not exceeding 2,000 bales.

HEMP.—Manila continues in good request at the former quotations—14c. to 14¼c. gold; 1,000 bales sold on private terms. The stock of Manila on the 1st April was estimated at 20,591 bales, against 3,205 bales at the corresponding date of 1869, and 27,844 bales in 1868. The imports into the United States from the 1st January to the 31st March, 1870, were 48,136 bales, against 34,795 bales during the corresponding period of last year, and the quantity afloat on the 31st March was 18,317 bales, against 12,676 bales at the same date last year.

INDIGO.—There is no change in the tone of the market; we note sales of 14 cases Manila at $1.10 to $1.35 currency.

PRESERVED GINGER.—China is quoted $8 currency (duty paid).

RHUBARB.—The quotation for China is $1 to $2 currency (duty paid), showing a decline of 50c.

RICE.—The market generally is slightly less active than when we last reported, but prices are firmly maintained. The business in Bangoon has again been extensive, but the advance reported in our last has been lost; the sales amount to about 1,500 bags at $3 to $3.25 gold (in bond). In other kinds of East India there have been no transactions. The stock of East India on the 1st April was 6,350 bags, against 10,940 bags at the corresponding date last year, and 4,200 bags in 1868.

SPICES.—There is a good jobbing demand for most descriptions, and the market is strong. Nutmegs have sold largely, about 800 to 900 cases having been taken at $1 to 1.02½, and are held for higher rates. Cassia is in good request at hardening prices; the sales are 600 bales at 46c., in small lots at 46½c., and 83 bales, ex Regina Maris, on private terms. Pepper: Both Singapore and Sumatra has advanced; sales—1,500 bags at 27c. for large lots, and 27½c. to 28c. for small parcels. We notice sales, in lots, of 50 cases Mace at $1.22½, 200 bags Pimento at 19c., and 150 bales cloves at 26c.

SUGAR.—The inquiry is less active, and the recent advance has been lost; there have been no transactions in East India.

TIN.—The advance in Straits and Banca continues in sympathy with the London market, and is deriving material support from the almost complete exhaustion of the stock; the quotations at the close are for Straits, 34c. to 34½c. gold, at which figures about 600 slabs had been taken; and for Banca, 37c. to 38c. gold, without transactions; the prices exhibit an advance of ¾ to 1c. upon those last given.

The following is a statement of the cargo recovered up to the 27th of April, ex Benvenue, Penang to London, wrecked on the Owers Rocks, near Worthing:—44 cases fishmaws, 1,143 slabs tin, 727 no. and 3 bales hides, 1,603 bundles rattans, 86 packages india-rubber, 126 bales and 34 bags cloves, 196 bags cocoa-nuts, 61 bags pepper, 2 tins and 9 bags tapioca, 222 no. and 46 cases horns, 61 cases gum benjamin, 45 bales tobacco, 10 bags coffee, 9 cases nutmegs, 1 case dragon's blood, 42 cases mace, and some of the ship's stores, viz.—ropes, sails, blocks, &c. Marks and numbers of the above may be seen on application at the offices of the association.

NOTICES TO MARINERS.

The following notices have been issued from the Admiralty-office:—

CEYLON.—With reference to Notices to Mariners No. 85, dated 12th November, 1869, respecting placing a light-vessel near the great Basses Rocks, off the south-east coast of Ceylon, during the time of building a lighthouse on the rocks, the Trinity House, London, has given further notice that they have received information of the arrival of the temporary light-vessel, and they have every reason to believe that she was moored in her position, and exhibiting her light, on or before the 1st April, 1870.

JAVA.—The Netherlands Government has given notice that the following alteration has been made in the harbour lights at Anjer, viz.:—In place of the two lamp lights exhibited from the eastern and western mole head, a red light is now exhibited from the extremity of the western mole; it is elevated twenty-three feet above high water, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of four miles. Also, that an aqueduct has been constructed at Koepang which reaches the shore, and from which water can be obtained without trouble or expense. Also, that a white light is now exhibited on Jelaka Island, Macclesfield Channel, visible from seaward, from S.W. by S. round by south and east to N.N.W.; it is elevated thirty-nine feet above the high water level, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of eight miles.

JAPAN.—The Japanese Government has given notice that the wood fire exhibited from Cape Idsu, Nipon, has been discontinued. With reference to Notice to Mariners No. 28, dated 5th May, 1869, respecting the construction of a lighthouse on Nosima Point, near Mela Head, Yedo Gulf, the Japanese Government has given notice that the light is now exhibited from the lighthouse. The light is a fixed white light, elevated 134 feet above the high water level of the sea, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of twenty miles. The illuminating apparatus is dioptric or by lenses of the first order. The tower is octagonal shaped and painted white. Position, as given, lat. 34 deg. 53 mins. 20 secs. N., long. 139 deg. 51 mins. 23 secs. E. Also, that the temporary light has been discontinued.

A NEW LIGHT VESSEL FOR CHINA.—The Tungsha, a fine new Light vessel for the Customs in China, will sail for her destination in a few days, from the Thames, where she has been built at Messrs. Dudgeon's yard. We believe she is the first built for that country according to the Trinity-house rules. Her dimensions are—length, 103 feet; beam, 21 feet; depth of hold, 10 feet 3 inches; built of oak and teak, and copper fastened throughout. This vessel has been built with all the newest improvements applicable to Light ships, and fitted in the most convenient manner. Revolving light of great power. Sea-water distilling apparatus, an important provision in event of communication with the shore being cut off at any time. A very complete fog apparatus, consisting of four large brass horns on a pedestal, blown by the steam from a separate boiler at high pressure. She is rigged as a barque at present, for the purpose of sailing out, and has a smart appearance, but when on her station will have only her mainmast standing as the lantern mast. Another Light ship, of similar construction, is also being built at Messrs. Dudgeon's Yard, and when complete will be despatched for China.

THE "SEA MESSENGER."—This is a useful and promising invention. When properly constructed and fully equipped it is three feet long, one foot six inches deep, and one foot wide. It bears a strong resemblance in form to the hull of a ship, and will be composed of sheet copper and divided into compartments, having a leaden keel. It will carry sixty pounds weight, and yet will not draw more than four inches of water. Containing the ship's papers, with the names of all on board, deposited in it in the face of death or danger, it will toss about upon the ocean, until at last it is picked up by a passing ship or wafted to friends on shore, thence to be transmitted to the proper quarter. Of course it will have the ship's name to which it belongs painted upon it, and its small size will prevent it occupying too large a space on board any vessel. A watertight lid, screwed down, will secure the top and keep the papers dry.

NEW STEAMERS FOR THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The two new vessels now in course of construction for the P. and O Company by Messrs. Caird and Co., of Greenock, as reported in our issue of the 8th ult., are to be named the Khedivè and the Mirzapore, and will be of the following dimensions:—Length, 380 feet; beam, 42 feet; depth, 36 feet; and 3,329 tons burden. They are to be fitted with compound engines of 600-horse power. We cannot at present say with certainty when they will be launched. Captain R. Methven, who, it is understood, is to command the new screw steamer Australia, is at present superintending the construction of these vessels on behalf of the company.

MESSRS. SHAW, MAXTON, AND CO. have building at Messrs. Napier's yard, on the Clyde, a screw steamer of 2,400 tons, intended for the China trade.

THIRTY guineas premium are being paid to effect insurance on the ship Catherine Rankin, which left Java for Amsterdam on the 16th of November last, and by the last advices had not arrived out.

THE Vixen, belonging to Capt. Durham, is now loading for Madras and Calcutta, and will probably leave about the 14th inst. (via the Suez Canal).

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility, at moderate charges, for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships and steamers.

Their large Granite Dock has 286 feet length on the blocks and at average spring tides can receive vesse's of 16 to 17 feet draught. It has a caisson-gate and a powerful centrifugal steam pump, and an engineer's workshop fitted with lathes and tools, driven by steam; iron and brass foundries, boiler-makers' shop, a large smithy and carpenters and boat-builders' sheds, superintended by resident Europeans.

Their two smaller GRANITE DOCKS can receive, at spring tides, vessels drawing 12 feet.

Spars, timber, and other Dockyard material kept in stock.

Quarters for officers and a DRY GODOWN for stores of vessels under repair.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

TANJONG PAGAR DOCK COMPANY

VICTORIA DOCK, SINGAPORE.

This Company's Granite DRY DOCK, 450 feet in length, 65 feet width of entrance, and 20 feet depth of water on the sill, was OPENED on the 17th October, 1868. In the high tides of the North-East Monsoon there is a foot to eighteen inches more water.

In connection with the Dock is a complete range of workshops, fitted with steam machinery, driving all descriptions of engineers' tools required in the construction and repair of vessels and machinery, and a foundry for iron and brass castings.

The Company's extensive Wharves and Godowns for receiving and storing cargo immediately adjoin the Dock.

Having an efficient European staff in each department, the Company is in a position to guarantee the best workmanship, executed with every possible despatch, as well as low rates of charges.

These advantages, and the great facilities which the proximity of the Dock to the town offers for the transport of materials, &c., enable this Company to adopt a very low scale of charges for ships' work of all classes.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

The usual mails from Yokohama, with dates to the 27th March, had not arrived when the P. and O. steamer left Hong Kong on 5th April, and we are consequently without advices. From Nagasaki our letter was conveyed by H.M.S. Adventure, and the following telegram, via San Francisco, arrived yesterday.

YOKOHAMA, MARCH 22.

Admiral Hornby, of the Flying Squadron, visited the Mikado, and sailed on the 9th for Vancouver's Island.

The revolt in Prince Chosiu's territory had terminated.

The Japanese Budget just presented shows a deficit of two millions sterling.

A rumour prevails here that Sir Harry Parkes has been transferred to Peking.

NAGASAKI.

NAGASAKI, March 22, 1870.

I last wrote you 15th inst., via San Francisco, and as H.B.M.'s Adventure, having on board Vice Admiral Sir H. Kellet, leaves this to-morrow morning for Hong Kong, it enables me to give you a few lines. By the Rona, steamer, which arrived in this harbour this morning from Shanghai, it has been our good fortune to receive the London and China Express of Jan. 28, fifty-three days, the same time we should receive it, supposing our port to have a mail service; that of Jan. 20, by French mail, has not yet arrived.

The chief item of news I have to communicate is an outrage which has taken place at the French Catholic Cathedral here. It seems that a bonze (native priest) went there and asked to see the interior of the building, which was refused him—no doubt owing to the late persecution of the native Christians—and on his being requested to leave the premises he commenced pelting the French missionaries. This was taken up by several natives who were outside the grounds, and among other things thrown was a glass bottle. The French priests managed to capture the chief offender, who was bound, and afterwards sent to the Police Office by M. Dury, French Consul at this port. Proceedings generally terminate at this stage, for foreigners are seldom able to obtain any redress for their grievances from the Japanese officials, who generally receive a prisoner and listen to the complainant, but we rarely hear that the delinquent receives punishment. Whether this affair is likely quietly to drop is a question, as it is well-known that the native priests entertain great animosity towards the French missionaries, and such offences are likely to increase if not stopped at once.

A memorial respecting tea duties at this port is in course of signature by the British merchants, which on completion will be handed to H.B.M. Consul here for transmission to H.B.M. Minister at Yedo. The document, after setting forth the disadvantages arising, not only to foreign merchants, but also to the Customs, by having two different rates of duty, asks H.B.M. Minister to endeavour to get the Baucha duty abolished, and that all tea shipped shall be subjected to closer examination as regards weights of packages, &c., than that now in force, as the Chinese by misrepresentations are able to pass at the Custom-house all tea shipped by them as Bancha, and not pay one-sixth the amount of duty, and by doing so are able to outbid foreigners for all parcels of finest teas, and the result is that all the tea-firing establishments here are lying idle. The remaining features of the document I gave you in my letter of Jan. 29.

Business remains as last advised, excepting that a little tea has come from the interior, but is held for rates no foreigner cares to pay.

This evening the Nagasaki Amateur Dramatic Corps give another entertainment at their theatre; the pieces selected are Trying It On and Little Toddlekins, and of course the pieces will be successes.

The following is taken from the Nagasaki Express, 19th March:—"The troubles in Chosiu—which we adverted to in our last—have been settled by the civil authorities yielding to the demands of the military Samourai, who are now supposed to be reinstated in their former position. It is believed, however, that this settlement is only temporary, and there is yet imminent danger of a serious disturbance taking place. An increased enquiry for arms still continues, and the Japanese have an idea that great trouble, in the country generally, is impending." I give you the foregoing more to let you see how the late important news has been disposed of than anything else.

A fire broke out in the Oura Settlement in a house situated at the foot of the wooden bridge crossing the Sagramatz creek, and known to the old residents as Arnold and Co.'s, but of late it has been divided into two, and was at the time of the fire occupied by Mrs. Lyon, milliner, and Mr. Gye, druggist. The fire it seems broke out in the store of Mrs. Lyon, and, like nearly all the fires occurring at this place, was limited to the house where it commenced, as most houses here are detached, and stand in their own grounds. A detachment of men from the U.S. steamer Monocacy landed and set to work to pull down the building, as from the first it was evident it could not be saved; the Japanese fire brigade also attended and rendered good service. Messrs. Glover and Co., who own the building, and Mrs. Lyon are insured, but I regret to say Mr. Gye is not, and has lost nearly everything.

The only vessel of war in this port is the U.S. paddle-wheel steamer Monocacy. H.I.M. steamer Lucifer left this for Shanghai on the 19th inst.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

We have Tientsin advices to the 19th March. The river is now navigable for steamers, though the ice continues to float down, and on the morning of the 14th the thermometer still stood at 7 deg. only in the open. Business is dull, native dealers selling, at Tls. 2.03 and Tls. 2.25 respectively, 7 lbs. and 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings which they bought during the winter in Shanghai at Tls. 1.97 and Tls. 2.18. The weather was still very severe, and the ground on the morning of the 18th was again covered with snow.

SHANGHAI.

Dates by the present mail are to the 29th March. The outward mail of 28th Jan. (reported in our last) was the latest received. Telegrams to the 1st March had been received via Kiachta.

The N. C. Herald of the 29th March has the following summary of news:—

The chief local excitement has arisen from the registration tax, which has been resisted by the usual number of martyrs who have, of course, been fined for their trouble. While, however, regarding isolated cases of resistance as useless and foolish, we are surprised that the British authorities do not bring before the Home Government the extreme disfavour with which the tax is unquestionably viewed. A despatch from the Foreign-office, either explaining, confirming or abrogating the tax, might put an end to the yearly irritation which its exaction now causes. Our law reports last week contained several cases which have been lately tried. The most important one however came off on Wednesday, the defendant being Mr. Michie, the Chairman of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce. His counsel, Mr. Robinson, raised nearly the same points which he urged last year, in defending himself under similar circumstances—that the omission from the summons of the seal of the magistrate issuing it renders it illegal; that the Order in Council did not intend to make non-registration a criminal offence, and that, therefore, the Court could not convict criminally; that, assuming an offence were contemplated, the charge—of non-registration—did not constitute the offence; this should be, non-registering and not excusing oneself to the Consul. The Judge decided adversely on the three points; but the questions are, we believe, likely to be appealed home for decision.

Another case of considerable interest has lately occupied the attention of the Supreme Court. This was the argument of a demurrer to the defendant's answer, in the case "Von Gumpach v. Hart" Baron von Gumpach was engaged by Mr. Hart as Professor of Astronomy in the Peking College. A difference has arisen as to the terms of his agreement, and the Baron now seeks to recover damages from Mr. Hart. The latter objects that he acted as a servant of the Chinese Government, and on Tuesday, after a good deal of discussion on various paragraphs of the petition and answer, the argument turned on the point as to whether or no the Court had jurisdiction. Admitting that a British subject has done certain wrongful acts towards another British subject, can he oust the jurisdiction of the Court by alleging and proving that what he did, he did in the execution of his duty as a servant of the Chinese Government The petition had (among other things) charged the defendant with certain wilful misrepresentations to the Tsung-li Yamen at Peking, whereby the plaintiff lost his situation, and damages were claimed in consequence. To this it was replied that Mr. Hart did what he did as a servant of the Chinese Government and in the execution of his duty, and whether right or wrong, the Court had no power to inquire. Mr. Hannen argued that if a man enter the Chinese service he must be taken to accept its rules and means of redress. If he loses his situation he has an appeal to the Chinese authorities; if that is insufficient, the fault is his own in accepting service under these conditions. He quoted the recent case of Dawkins v. Paulet, where the plaintiff, a captain in the army, was held to have no redress in the Civil Court for loss of situation through the misrepresentations of his superior officer. His remedy was in a court-martial. So here the high Chinese authorities are the only judges of the acts of their subordinates. This Court cannot review the manner in which the authority is exercised. To this it was answered that though the plaintiff in Dawkins v. Paulet had no remedy in a civil Court, yet he had a remedy in a British Court, for a court-martial was a recognised British Court. And it was not to be supposed that a British subject would give up his ordinary remedy for a wrongful action like this, merely because he had entered the Chinese service. Suppose one man were to assault another, could he justify his conduct by showing it was done in the execution of his duty as a servant of the Imperial Government? It was finally agreed that certain amendments should be made in the petition and answer to bring out the issues more fully, and that a case should be made up for the decision of the chief judge, in the question of jurisdiction. When this is decided, we hope to lay a connected report of the case before our readers. The other issues between the parties will come on for trial in due course.

Our readers will remember that in the Newcastle case, reported in our issue of February 15, the Chief Judge recommended that the sentence of death passed on the prisoners be commuted, in the case of Blanch to one year's imprisonment, and that McAllister be liberated. This recommendation has been confirmed by H. B. M. Chargé d'Affaires.

It will be remembered that Ting Futai lately addressed a memorial to the Throne, advising the transport of tribute rice to Peking in foreign bottoms. It appears that his suggestion has been adopted, for we hear that two rice commissioners, with the rank of Taoutai, have been appointed to superintend the shipment, as suggested. One is appointed to the province of Chekiang, and one to Kiangsu. Shanghai will be the depot.

A Chinkeang correspondent writes:—H.B.M. gun-boat Leven left for Shanghai on the 21st, and is to be replaced by the Grasshopper. The French gun-boat Flamme is here, on its way to Hankow. It is said that the French missionaries are dissatisfied with the way in which the concessions gained by M. de Rochechouart are being carried out. The Hon. F. F. Low, U.S. Minister to Peking, has returned from his trip up the Yangtze, and will shortly proceed to Peking. The river at Hankow has risen fourteen feet.

In a recent number of the Peking Gazette, Ying-han, acting Governor of Anhwei, memorialises the Throne, praying the Emperor to award a testimonial to an old lady, the wife of a literary graduate residing in the district of Nganking, who has lately celebrated her 100th birthday. He reports her as belonging to a good old family, and has having four children, nine grandchildren, sixteen great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild living.

We (Express) have received intelligence that the army of Tsoh, Viceroy of Kansuh, has met with a serious defeat at the hands of the Mahomedan Rebels, and is in fact completely demoralised. This was the finest army the Imperialists had in the field, and its loss will be very disastrous for their cause; indeed, the Mahomedans are already emboldened to such an extent, that it is said their leader has addressed a proposition to the Emperor suggesting that if left in quiet possession of Shanse, Kansuh, and Yunnan, they will be content, and not attempt the conquest of the rest of China. The occupant of the Dragon Throne will hardly like these terms, though to all practical purposes two out of the three provinces have long passed from under his rule, and the third is in a state of rapid transition, by conquest, from the Celestial to the Mahomedan sway.

FOOCHOW.

A company has been formed at Foochow to take over the dock at the Pagoda anchorage, belonging to Mr. John Forster, and the steam-tug Woosung, now plying on the Min River. It is proposed to raise a capital of $200,000, in shares of $100 each. $140,000 will be devoted to the purchase of the dock and steamer, $30,000 of the remainder to the improvement of the property and the purchase of a second tug, and the remainder reserved as a working capital. A report of a survey which has been lately made by the Divisional Marine Inspector, and by the local agent of the Yangtsze and Union Insurance Companies, is included, together with a report by a committee appointed to consider the scheme. The former report that the dock is in perfectly good order and condition, and the latter that a return of fifteen to eighteen per cent. on capital may be expected.

HONG KONG.

Dates are down to the 5th April. The outward mail of 17th Feb. arrived out on the 31st March, with telegrams to the 8th March.

The Overland China Mail of the 5th April has the following items:—

Sir Richard MacDonnell leaves per Pacific Mail steamer of the 12th, on sick leave. The encomiums on Sir Richard MacDonnell which were uttered at the late Council meeting by the Chief Justice and the Hon. Mr. Gibb, fairly express we believe, the general opinion of the colony. His Excellency's administration has not been faultless, but on the eve of his departure it is only fair to consider the results of his government as a whole; and as during the last three years the China Mail has freely used the "liberty of the press" in criticising his Excellency's policy, sometimes in support and sometimes in opposition, and never from any motive that did not spring from honest and independent journalism, so now, in estimating the influence which his Excellency has exercised upon the condition of the colony we are simply actuated by a desire to do him justice, always remembering his Excellency's personal responsibility to a vicious system of colonial administration at home, and the local difficulties against which he has had to struggle here.

His Excellency arrived in Hong Kong at a very unfavourable time. The public treasury was empty when he took charge of the Government; there was a heavy load of debt; trade and commerce were labouring under heavy depression. The commercial world, not merely of Hong Kong, but the commercial world in the fullest sense of the word, was passing through the very worst stage of a severe and long-continued crisis; great houses were falling on all sides, bringing down in their fall hundreds of firms that had grown and flourished beneath their protection; property of all kinds was terribly depreciated in value; credit was gone; men were everywhere suspicious, unsettled in mind, fault-finding, irritable, economically inclined. There were in this colony many great public works, the foundations of which had been laid in a period of unexampled prosperity, to be carried on and completed or maintained; the Praya, the new Gaol, the Mint, the waterworks, the seawall at Kowloong, and the roads, streets, and bridges that were to make the dependency a wholesome and profitable place. The colony had grown so fast in wealth and population during the six or seven previous years that all the departments of the public service stood in need or reorganisation to suit them to the altered circumstances of the settlement. A system of administration adapted to the small population and inconsiderable trade of Hong Hong before the war was utterly inadequate for the effective regulation of a population of over 110,000 Chinese and a trade, native and foreign, of enormous value.

HONG KONG AND WHAMPOA DOCK COMPANY.

A meeting of shareholders of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company, for increasing the capital of the company to $1,000,000, was held on the 23rd March; Mr. Helland in the chair.

The Chairman stated that the establishments of the Union Dock were being worked together with those of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company; and notice of dismissal had been given to all the employés of the other company, only a few of whom would have to be re-employed. He believed that all the docks would find employment at remunerative rates. Arrrangements had been made for a loan at 9 per cent., which could be continued if desirable for a lengthened period; and by the 1st of next month all the preliminaries necessary to amalgamation would be completed. He would remark that the saving previously spoken of had not been over-estimated; while all the docks on the other side were fully occupied. A special resolution which had been prepared would now have to be placed before the meeting.

The Hon. P. Ryrie then begged to propose the following special resolution, under the 7th and 8th clauses of the new articles of association of the company:—

"That the capital of the company be increased to the sum of $1,000,000, legally current from time to time in the colony of Hong Kong, by the issue of five hundred new shares of $500 each, and that the directors be authorised to issue these shares as fully paid-up shares, similar in all respects to the existing shares of the company's capital, and in part payment of the sum of $486,000, agreed to be paid by the company to the Union Dock Company of Hong Kong and Whampoa (Limited), upon and for the amalgamation of the two companies, and the acquisition by this company of the property and effects of the said Union Dock Company, and to such persons shareholders in the latter company as the directors may determine upon in concert with the directors of the said Union Dock Company."

Mr. Pollard had much pleasure in seconding the resolution. The resolution was carried unanimously. The Chairman then remarked that, as new scrip would have to be issued and the old scrip destroyed, shareholders were requested to send in the old scrip.

The Douglas has brought down from Amoy the captain and crew of the French barque Antoinette, wrecked on the Passadores on 2nd inst. in the passage from Amoy to Tai-wan-foo. The natives of course robbed the wreck, but the cargo was small. After detaining the captain and crew for several days, the wreckers took the captain and crew (all of whom were saved) to Tai-wan-foo, whence they were sent to Amoy in the schooner Eliza Mary.

The Legislative Council met on 30th March, when an ordinance incorporating the new Chinese Hospital was passed. Power by ordinance was given to his Excellency to stop any coolie ship from leaving port until the master or charterer stated on oath that he was not proceeding to any country, other than Surinam, not under British dominion. Some remarkable criminal statistics, showing a great decrease during the last three years, were brought forward.

Another impudent piracy is reported on the North German brig Gazelle, a quantity of cargo having been coolly taken away, while no harm was done to the crew.

The Adventure brings 114 invalids, prisoners, &c., of H.M. 1-10 Regt. R.E. and R.A. from Yokohama. Vice-Admiral Sir H. Kellet, K.C.B., who was on board, was saluted on his arrival here. The Adventure called at Hiogo and Nagasaki.

His Excellency Sir R. G. MacDonnell, C.B., has been pleased to appoint Richard Young, Esq., L.R.C.P., and S. Edin, to act provisionally as Superintendent of the Government Civil Hospital from the 8th inst., vice Dr. Cochran, deceased.

The Daily Press, commenting upon the present state of the opium question, observes that it cannot be doubted that upon its real merits the matter is one on which the intensely philanthropic doctrines which have been given out cannot possibly hold good. After all the declarations on the part of the Chinese against the use of opium, we find them demanding more revenue from the drug, and the question at issue between them and the British Government is one of simple finance. They are moralists at Tls. 30 a chest, and financiers at Tls. 100. It is wrong that the foreigners should deal in the drug. It is perfectly right that the Chinese should derive a revenue from it. It is monstrous that the drug should be taxed in India. It is a positive virtue on the part of the Chinese to levy heavy duties upon it in this country. When the question has become reduced to such a compass as this, it may well be considered as beyond further discussion, though the Chinese still ingeniously contrive to lay the blame of their opium smoking upon the foreigner, by declaring that, if the drug had not been brought to China, the natives would never have thought of smoking it—just as though it would occur to any European to bring an expensive commodity to an unknown country without having good grounds for believing that it would pay him to do so, which grounds, in the first instance, could only have been that the Chinese were already habitual opium smokers. Let it be observed also that it is only within the last few years that anything has been practically known of the provinces in which native opium is cultivated; and that, so soon as anything definitely was discovered, it was found that opium was being cultivated in large quantities. Taking these two circumstances together, a man must be of a credulous disposition to conclude that opium cultivation did not exist to a great extent before the advent of the foreign drug.

A correspondent at Canton writes:—"I suppose you know that the Government have withdrawn support to our church, and as our community is so small I fear we must shut it up. Mr. Gray, the chaplain, is still here, and quite well. The Shameen site is really now quite pretty, and the Honam side almost deserted.

"The Customs have just got out from England two revenue cruisers—the Conchita, Captain Buckham, and the Pepita, Captain Cocker; they are very nice vessels, and well armed and manned. Another one is to follow shortly, a despatch vessel, to be commanded by Captain Beville Nicholas, who was dismissed the navy for flogging a boy."

MANILA.

The following is from a letter dated March 29:—A terrific fire commenced in the most central part of the city last night at 11.30, and still continues as I write this. It was hoped that we would escape this now annual catastrophe, as the dry season was well advanced, and squalls were inclined to commence, but unfortunately we were not destined to have that felicity. The fire commenced in an opium-smoking saloon, and in an hour the whole of the Pasage de Norzagaray was in flames, and soon they extended on both sides in the Rosario, up and down, where all the Chinese have their cotton goods shops. A little breeze sprung up, and the fire extended to both sides of the Calle Nueva, and after demolishing some ten or twelve large stone houses, was got under at about six in the morning; but as I write it has broken, out again in Calle Nueva, and as we have only the most wretched means for extinguishing fires, it is feared that much more will be lost. The losses up to the present are estimated at about $1,500,000 in houses and cotton goods. The principal losers are Chinese, but many foreign merchants who have trusted them will also lose. I hear that nothing was insured. The soldiers have worked well and the Governor-General and all the other authorities were up all night, and were most active in trying all they could do to extinguish the fire.

The fire-engines belonging to the foreign houses were on the spot, and did great execution; the one that signally showed its good management was Messrs. Jenny and Co.'s, who are agents for nine or ten insurance companies; the head of the firm deserves great praise for his exertions, and is universally acknowledged as having been the means, with the assistance of his engine, of saving more than one house.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

The Java Bode of the 30th March states:—We are informed that some occupiers of the Chimoening estate, Bekassie district, intended at the close of last week to attempt a renewal of former disorders. The acting Schout of Bekassie, Mr. Van Sprew, however, got wind of it, and succeeded in capturing four of the leaders, just at a time when they had assembled making their final arrangements. They intended on the following Saturday to assemble at the bazaar of Bekassie, and from thence to march up to Tamboon, the estate of the notorious Bapa Bairah.

This Tamboon was the scene of the rising of the disturbances which took place some time ago. In the Moluccas from the 10th to the 13th March two shocks of earthquake took place, which were very severely felt at Amboyna, but lasted only a couple of seconds. The Java Bode of the 31st March states, that of the Chinese coolies landed from the burnt ship Frederick, fifty have gone to Samarang in the service of the factory of the N. H. Matschappy, and 180 have been engaged by Mr. W. A. Baron Baud, in the Preanger Regencies. The remainder have hired themselves to various Chinese at Batavia. There has lately been found in the front verandah of a house at Moknoleit a snake about three palms in length, brownish yellow in colour, the tail short and pointed, and what is most remarkable is that it moves by means of four paws or feet.

The British Consul at Batavia has appointed Mr. H. Lash to be Vice-Consul at Samarang Respecting the British ship Corea, grounded in the Straits of Banca, the Java Bode says: "The English ship Corea, which had stranded in Banca Straits, arrived in Batavia Roads in tow of the steamer Koningin Sophia, Captain de Wilde. The damage sustained by the Corea seems to be very trifling, and she will in all probability take in cargo, and be able to continue the voyage to London."

The Batavia papers publish a notice of a reef, hitherto unknown, having been discovered in Lampong Bay, by the commander of the Government steamer Hertog Bernard. It is stated to be four English miles to the westward of the south corner of East Choondong Island. The extent of the reef is about 200 square yards, and the soundings were only six feet.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The dates are down to the 12th April. The outward mail of 11th March was expected on the 13th.

The following summary is from the Straits Times of the 12th April:—

The principal event of the fortnight has been the public meeting held at the Town-hall, on Thursday, the 7th inst., "for the purpose of obtaining an expression of public opinion upon a despatch addressed by his Excellency the Governor to Earl Granville, dated 16th December, last." The meeting was a very large one, the number assembled being greater than is usual on the discussion of any public question. The question of the Governor's unpopularity is one that will admit of no misrepresentation in future despatches, for though there was considerable dissent to the resolution condemning Government-house and the new steamer, yet no one attempted to gainsay the fact that his administration had been productive of dissatisfaction. The Straits Settlements Association in London, also, have by this meeting the assurance that their labours in behalf of the colony are appreciated here; and a most emphatic reply has been given to the assertion of his Excellency that the merchants here care only for their own interests, and ignore those of the Chinese and natives. A little reflection would, we think, have convinced the Governor that the interests of the two classes are identical, and if any fault is attributable to the merchants in their dealings with the natives it is rather that of too much leniency, too great a tendency to overlook their faults, and to deprecate anything in the way of legislation over them, than to serve their own immediate interests at the expense of their customers.

The following are the three resolutions passed, the 1st and 3rd unanimously, and the 2nd after a long discussion by a large majority:—

1st. That this meeting desires to record its hearty thanks to the members of the Straits Settlements Association in London for their valuable labours on behalf of the Colony, and earnestly to sympathise with their efforts to restrain the unnecessary expenditure of the public revenue, to secure the independence of the Judges, and to obtain for its Legislature a more representative character.

2nd That this meeting views with regret, that under the present Government a large portion of the revenue has been expended upon works and acquisitions of minor importance, such as a new Government-house, steamers, &c., to the exclusion of more urgent wants, such as waterworks in Singapore, land drainage in Penang and Malacca, &c.

3rd That the opinion of his Excellency the Governor, expressed in his despatch of the 16th of November, 1869, to Lord Granville to the effect that the administration had been popular in the Straits, indicates an erroneous estimate of public opinion in the colony. That many of his Excellency's public acts, and especially his disbelief in those principles of free trade upon which the Settlement was founded, have produced among all sections of the community a feeling of deep dissatisfaction.

The Second Criminal Session of the year opened on the 3rd inst., before his Honour the Chief Justice. The calendar is rather a long one, but most of the cases are unimportant, and will be easily disposed of, so that there is no probability of the session being longer than usual. On the morning of the 8th inst., also, judgment was given in the Supreme Court in the case of Buchanan v. Kirby. This is the powder hulk case alluded to by us some time since. Certain powder was stored in the powder hulk Statesman, and that vessel requiring repairs, the powder was by the owners of that vessel transhipped to the hulk Princess Royal, and lost when that vessel sank. The action was brought by the owners of the powder against the owners of the Statesman, and has been decided in favour of defendants. The case involves some most difficult points of law, which are elucidated at length in the judgment published to-day; the ground upon which the action appears to have failed is that the plaintiffs had no right to sue, not being the contracting parties, and that Messrs. Macdonald and Co., the agents or factors for the sale of the powder, did not contract with the defendants as agents for the owners, but for themselves.

With the exception of the meeting referred to above, nothing of public interest has occurred; the day for opening the Legislative Session is not yet notified, so that it is impossible to say when the important public questions that have been announced to be brought forward during the ensuing session will be disposed of. Friday, the 1st inst., being the anniversary of the inauguration of the Colonial rule, was observed as a Government holiday, and all the public offices were closed. The general public, however, took no notice of it, and business was transacted as usual.

PENANG.

The Penang Gazette has the following:—

The Right Rev. Dr. Chambers, the new Bishop of Labuan, to whom is also confided the ecclesiastical supervision of this colony, arrived by the P. and O. steamer from England. His Lordship, during his short stay here, is the guest of the Rev. the Colonial Chaplain.

The little steamer Intan a few days since unfortunately ran foul of the Dutch barque Onrust, in the harbour. The damage done to the Intan was not very much—her poop awning being knocked about, stanchions, &c., injured; but she is all right again, and at work. We are glad to say that by the rectification of her machinery she is now enabled to make her four trips per diem to and from Bukit Tamboon, and keeps up to her time, proving herself by so doing a useful acquisition to the province.

Besides the voyage to the Dindings the Rainbow has taken the Lieutenant-Governor up the rivers Krean and Pry, and to other parts of the province. The steamer could not have been more profitably employed. There is no knowledge like local knowledge, and it is to be regretted that our Colonial officers, in their endeavours to obtain it, contrast unfavourably with their Indian predecessors. Red tape and red ink will not make nor mend roads, nor will they make drains and keep them clear.

The following is an account of the number and description of vessels, with their tonnage, which have arrived at and departed from the port of Penang during the past year, as compared with that of 1868. There cleared outward in 1869:—schooners 110, tonnage 9,991; brigs 72, tonnage 11,870; barques, 138, tonnage 46,756; ships 34, tonnage 27,569; steamers 305, tonnage 192,389. Compared with the entries in 1868, this shows a decrease of 60 schooners of 2,687 tons, of 14 brigs of 2,906 tons, and an increase of 3 barques of 2,175 tonnage, 6 ships of 8,031 tonnage, and 24 steamers of an aggregate of 79,844 tons.

Inwards there was a decrease of 7 schooners, amounting to 258 tons; 15 brigs of 3,326 tons; and an increase of 14 barques of 6,037 tons; 4 ships of 3,578 tons; and 26 steamers of 59,674 tons.

The cultivation of sugar-cane in the province of Wellesley shows no relaxation in the vigour with which it is being carried on. New lands are being broken up and new mills for the manufacture of the sugar are being, and are to be erected. We hear that Mr. Bacon is about to build one of the latter on his estate, and that others are to follow his example.

Commercial Report.

(For dates see First Page.)

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA. AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

SHANGHAI.—Communication with the north had been fairly opened, but the advices from Tientsin had contained nothing of a very encouraging nature, and rates there for the most part were lower. Grey Shirtings: Heavy sales, both to "arrive" and in godown. The effects of diminishing stocks and moderate supplies afloat, combined with the prevailing idea that the scarcity and dearness of native cotton must soon force consumers on to European manufactures at enhanced values, were beginning to be manifested, and both natives and foreigners had been willing buyers at ruling rates, the latter preferring delivery at distant date, and paying as high as Tls. 2.32 per piece for good ordinary chop 8¼ lbs. The chief business, however, had been for prompt clearance at Tls. 2.27 to 2.29 per piece. For 7 lb. goods inquiry less active, but the lowness of stocks made holders very firm, and in some instances an advance of 1 cent per piece had been obtained. Heavy Shirtings not much sought after; few sales reported at a slight decline. White Shirtings: Demand still chiefly for lower reeds, and recent arrivals readily taken at advanced quotations. Medium and higher counts not in so much request; but former rates had been maintained. T-Cloths: Although considerable quantities of these had been taken off daily, the position of the market does not improve. Anxiety to sell and irregularity in price were still its chief characteristics, and in many instances lower rates would be accepted in order to lead to business. Drills: A material decline had led to a considerable business in English and Dutch fabrics; sales estimated at 9,000 pieces and 8,300 pieces respectively. Jeans: Small sales of English and American reported, but the demand was very limited, and only tempting offers induced dealers to purchase. Sheetings: Small but fairly steady inquiry. Fancy Cottons: The market had shown little or no change. Woollens of almost every description continued in a most unsatisfactory state. Camlets of standard quality and assortment had alone maintained previous value. Forced sales of Long Ells, Spanish Stripes, Figured Lustres and Crapes had caused a marked decline in their values; and buyers were holding off, expecting still lower rates ere the silkmen were cleared of what they had from time to time taken in exchange for silk. Quotations purely nominal. Metals: Lead continued to decline, with but small inquiry; inland markets well stocked. One parcel of fifty tons placed for cash at the low rate of 4.9.0 per picul. Iron: Large business settlements: 20,000 bundles, at Tls. 2.38 to 2.42 for good assortments, to small sizes, showing quotations unaltered. About 100 tons of bar taken at Tls. 2.10 per picul. Coals: Market had remained inactive; prices nominal for almost all kinds; Cardiff, sales at Tls. 6.75 per ton; English, without transactions; American, no improvement. Quotations (duty paid):—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.3 to 2.0.7; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2 2.7 to 2.3.2; 9 to 9.12 lbs., Tls. 2.5.0 to 3.1.3. White Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2.3 to 2.8 5. T-Cloths, 6 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.4.5 to 1.7.2; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.5 to 1.8.6; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls 2.0.5 to 2.1.6; XX Tls. 2.4.0; American Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.7.0 to 3.8.8; American Jeans, 30 yards, Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.8 5; American Sheetings, 40 yards, Tls. 3.4.5 to 3.8.5; English Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.4.0 to 3.5.5; Dutch Drills, 40 yards, Tls. 3.4.0 to 3.4.5. Gentian Shirtings, Tls. 2.9.0 to 3.0.0. Chintz, Tls. 1.5.0 to 1.9.0. Turkey Red Shirtings, Tls. 2.2.0. to 3.0.0. Camlets, English, SS, Tls. 11.0 to 12.1; SSS, Tls. 10 to 10.5; Spanish Stripes, per yard, Tls. 0.4.8 to 0.5.2; Medium Broad and Habit Cloth, Tls. 0.9.0 to 1.5.0.

HANKOW.—Good trade in Grey Shirtings at a reduction of about 3 candareens per piece. Liberal imports of Grey T-Cloths disposed of at a slight advance, which had since been lost. Small sales of Grey Drills and Jeans at previous rates. White Shirtings in good request at an improvement of about 5 candareens. White Spots and Brocades sold at better prices. Dyed Cottons wanted, supply very limited. Lustres of suitable patterns and colours sold well, inferior goods difficult of sale. Woollens principally disposed of in barter. Camlets continued in active request at about previous rates. Lustings more inquired for. Long Ells only saleable in small lots, a considerable reduction necessary to quit large parcels. Quicksilver no alteration. Lead difficult of sale at a reduction of 1 mace per picul. The following were the current quotations:—Grey Shirtings, 7 to 7.2 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.5 to 2.8; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2.27 to 2.31; 9 to 10 lbs., Tls. 2.9.0 to 3.15; Grey T-Cloths, 6 to 6½ lbs., Tls. 1.55 to 1.78; 7 to 7½ lbs., Tls. 1.65 to 1.90; 8 to 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.08 to 2.40; White Spotted Shirtings, Tls. 2.30 to 2.40; Gentian Shirtings, Tls. 2.90 to 3; Spanish Stripes, per yard, Tls. 53 to 57; Medium Cloth, Tls. 90 to 1.15; Broad Cloth, Tls. 1.10 to 1.50; Camlets, SS., Tls. 11.90 to 12.30; Long Ells, Scarlet, Tls. 5.90 to 6.10; Assorted, Tls. 5.80 to 6.15.

FOOCHOW.—Only 500 pieces 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings had changed hands. Quotations: 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings, $3.05; 7 lbs. do., $2.80; T-Cloth, 7 lbs., $2.40 to 2.60; 6 lbs. do., $2 to 2.10; Lead, $7.25 per picul.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular:—Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16/24 have been fairly dealt in, but sales have not been so easily effected as previously, and holders have latterly accepted prices, showing a decline of $1 per bale. Inquiry for Nos. 28/32 has strengthened, and importers are now enabled to demand rates $1.50 to 2.50 in advance of those last ruling. No parcels of Nos. 38/42 being now on the market, and these numbers meeting with anxious inquiry from dealers, values have risen $2.50 per bale, and $1.85 is obtainable "to arrive." Piece Goods: Transactions in the staple manufactures have been maintained upon a moderate scale. The position of the market for 7 lb. Grey Shirtings continues strong, no supplies having been received, and a further rise of 2½ cents in value has taken place. Stocks of 8 4 lb. goods are light, and sales have been effected at prices 2½ to 5 cents dearer, but at the close a quieter feeling is apparent, and the increase in prices is not obtainable; 9 to 10 lb. goods are unchanged. White Shirtings of the lower counts maintain last currencies, and common descriptions are easily moved, but 68/72 reed are out of favour for the moment at a drop of 10c. per piece. Drills of all makes are little wanted, whilst the small sales of Dutch and English made have been at lower prices. Quotations generally show a decline of 5c., which reduction, however, holders of American Cottons are unwilling to accept. T-Cloths of all weights are weaker, and a decline all round of 2 to 5c. is reported, except for 6 lb. Mexicans, prices of which are supported. Assorted Brocades and Spotted Shirtings display an improvement of 10 to 25c. per piece. Large supplies of Turkey Reds are still offering, and a decrease in values of 5c. is quoted. Chintzes find buyers at a reduction from former currencies. Woollens: Although some little business has been passing, no improvement or special changes have come about in the market, and the previous low prices and unsatisfactory state of affairs continue to rule. Metals: Soft Bar and Hoop Iron are wanted at improved rates. Iron Wire is in full supply, and has declined. Lead, in the absence of demand, is weaker. Common grades of Tin command last figures, but best chops have given way in value $1 to 1.50 per picul. Stocks of Tin Plates are large, and prices weak. The market for Quicksilver is firm, and the article is easily saleable at quotations. Coal: Arrivals have been 2,184 tons of Cardiff and 970 tons Sydney, all to consumers. Sales have been 600 tons Sydney, at $6.20; 798 tons Cardiff, at $7.75; and 450 tons English (ex godown), at $7.50 per ton. Ginseng: Under the influence of diminishing supplies, and an increasing inquiry, the market is firmer, and the holders of present stocks are demanding advanced figures. A sale of 30 casks Crude at $142 per picul is reported. The following were the current quotations:—English, Nos. 16 to 24, per bale, $140 to 145; 28 to 32, $145; 38 to 42, $170 to 180; Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, $2.57½ to 2.62½; 8¼ lbs., $2.85 to 2.90; 9 to 10 lbs., $3.25 to 4.05. White Shirtings, $3.60; Fine, $4.25 to 4.65; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., 32 in., $1.95 to 2.10; 7 lbs., $2.10 to 2.40; 8 to 8.4 lbs., 36 in., $2.65 to 2.75; Grey Twills: English, 14 to 15 lbs., $4.45 to 4.45 per piece; American, 15 lbs., $4.90 to 5; Dutch, 14.8 to 15 lbs., $4.50 to 4.60. Long Ells: Scarlet, $7 25 to 7 50 per piece; Assorted, $7 20 to 7.40. Blankets, Assorted, $0.42½ to 0.47½; Camlets, SSS, $13 to 13.50; SS, $14.50 to 15; S, $16 to 17; Dutch, $25 to 27; Iron Nail Rod, $2.35 to 2.50; Lead, L.B., $6.45 to 6.50; W.B.,$6.60 to 6.65.

BATAVIA.—Maddapollams: Dutch White, 5/4 scarce; small sales of 6/4 at quotations; 7/4 without inquiry. Grey: Sales of 5/4 and 6/4 have taken place at quotations, demand somewhat weaker, notwithstanding holders are firm. Blue nominal. English: No improvement in demand. White Shirtings: Small transactions, prices unchanged. Grey Shirtings in some request.

SINGAPORE.—The following is derived from Messrs. Boustead and Co.'s report:—There has been a fair inquiry for Cotton goods in our market during the fortnight, and a moderate business has been done at about last rates. 39-inch Grey Shirtings: 8¼ lbs., although in but small demand immediately after the departure of last mail, have been again in request during the past few days, and supplies are now limited, sales at $3 to 3.05.; 7 lbs., rather more inquired for, and worth $2.52½ to 2.55.; 6 lbs., quiet at $2.10 to 2.12½. 45-inch, quiet at unaltered rates. 36-inch White Shirtings: Common and Medium continue in good request, fair sales reported but at rather lower rates. 64-reed worth $3.05 to 3.10, finer descriptions very dull, and values nominal. 45-inch saleable at $3.80 to 3.85. 45-inch White Cambrics: 24s saleable to a moderate extent at $20, other descriptions dull. 15s and 16s placed at $32 to 32½, according to quality. 36-inch White Spots and White Brocades, out of stock and wanted. 30-inch White Maddapollams, in full supply and but limited demand, worth $21 to 21½. 33-inch Imitation Irish Linens much wanted, supplies placed freely at $2.15 to 2.17½. 32-inch Grey T-Cloths: 4¼ and 5 lbs. in rather better request; sales at $1.45 to 1.47½ for the former and $1.55 for the latter. 6 lbs. worth $1.85 to to 1.90, 7 lbs. $2.05 to 2.15; demand for the latter weights limited. 32-inch Grey Maddapollams quiet at last rates. 30-inch Grey Drills: Both Dutch and English descriptions unsaleable, values nominal. 32-inch Turkey Red Cambrics in but very limited request, no change in values. 2 lbs. 12 oz. worth about $2.40 to 2.45, 3 lbs. $2.50 to 2.55. Grey Yarn: 18/24s quiet, prices irregular, low quality placed at $120 to 121. Mock Water at $127. 30s met purchasers at $138, 40s in demand at $148 to 149. Coloured Yarns: Turkey Red in some inquiry, 12 lbs. Glasgow Dye 40s placed at $154 to 155; other descriptions quiet. Imperial Red sold $74 to 75, in only small inquiry; Green, much wanted at about last rates; Yellow and Orange very dull. Metals: Copper Sheathing placed at $25½, Yellow metal at $21½; lower prices would be accepted for any quantity; Iron is rather more inquired for, but without improvement in values; sales of small-sized Nail Rods at $2.35 to 2.40, and of large-sized Govan Flat Bar at $2.45 to 2.47½ per picul; Pig Lead continues to decline, LB and WB on the spot obtainable at $6.15 to 6.20; Tin Plates unaltered.

PENANG.—Grey Shirtings, 6 lbs.: No sales reported; 7 lbs., small sales at $51 to 52; 8¼ lbs., at $61½ to 62 per corge; in 45-inch no transactions. Grey Long Cloths in moderate inquiry, but there being no stocks of the weights required, there had been no business done. Light weights most wanted. Grey Madapollams quite inactive; no sales reported; quotations nominal. Grey T-Cloths in restricted inquiry; moderate sales of 5 lbs. at $31½ and 32, of 6 lbs. at $38½, and of 7 lbs. at $43 per corge. White Shirtings of the finer qualities continued very dull; small lots disposed of at about former prices, according to quality. Low qualities mostly in request. White Cambrics: Very little business done; sales effected of low quality at $22 to 27, and of Nos. 15 to 16 at $31¾ and 32½ per corge. Grey Sheetings very quiet, sales at $88 and $98 per corge. Dyed Goods: The only sales had been of Turkey Red Cambrics, 3 lbs. at $51½, 2 lbs. 8 oz. at $46, and of Sarongs and Handkerchiefs at prices according to quality. In other coloured goods no business. In Yarns a very limited business. Sales of Grey Mule, No. 40, at $146 to 148. Turkey Red, No. 40, at $143 to 144, and of Imperial Red, No. 40, at $78 per bale. Metals: The only sales effected had been of Nailrod Iron at $2½ per picul, and of Yellow Metal, to a small extent, at $21¼ per picul.

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—Black: The business had again been very trifling; only two chops settled at former rates. Settlements for the fortnight, 429 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 528 chests; stock, 10 chops, or 4,000 packages. Green: There had been a fair demand, and settlements have been made to the extent of 10,479 half-chests, principally common Teas, at prices which in some instances showed a slight advance on last mail's quotations. The market was cleared of all fair to good Teas, and the stock consisted of 6,467 half-chests common Moyune and Shanghai-packed leaf. Quotations: Moyune and Teenkai, Tls. 30 to 39; Fychow, Tls. 22 to 34; Shanghai-packed, Tls. 19 to 29. Settlements for the fortnight, 10,749 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 311 half-chests; stock, 17 chops, or 6,467 half-chests.

CANTON.—There had been some settlements at prices showing little, if any, alteration. Teamen had not made sufficient concessions to induce foreigners to purchase more than a few small parcels of the better descriptions on offer, and the bulk of the settlements were shipments made on native account. The following is the business reported during the interval:—Scented Orange Pekoe, 700 boxes, at Tls. 22.50; Scented Caper, 500 boxes, at Tls. 18.0; Canton Gunpowder, 3,000 boxes, at Tls. 12.0 to 20.0; Canton Imperial, 450 boxes, at Tls. 15.0 to 16.0.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—The following is from Messrs. C. J. Skeggs and Co.'s Circular, dated March 29:—For the French mail, which left here on the 23rd inst., the business amounted to 617 bales, at rather higher prices for all descriptions, and with 500 more for the present steamer, settlements for the fortnight amount to about 1,100 bales, leaving an unsold stock of about 300 bales. Prices all round show an advance of fully Tls. 5, in addition to which exchange is 1d. higher. Tsatlees are remarkably scarce, and as there is little, if any, more of this description to be received from the country, holders are very strong. Koo-fong-sing's, chop third, has been placed at Tls. 600, and Blue Flags at Tls. 570; purchases of market sorts are so irregular that no leading quotation can be given. Hangchow Tsatlees have been taken up to Tls. 475, equal 25s. 3d. In Taysaams, Chincums rule about Tls. 5 higher, but for Kahings and Long Reels about Tls. 10 advance has been paid. In Hainins the better classes are scarce, and command full prices, Tls. 510 being wanted for No. 2 Fatmow, whilst the lower qualities are not so firmly held. Re-reeled Hainins have again attracted considerable attention, and a moderate quantity of Thrown Silks also go forward.

CANTON.—There had been a change in the weather, favourable to the prospects of the coming crop. This cause had operated somewhat upon silkmen, and prices had become rather easier under the slight inquiry existing for such parcels as were on the market. A decline of $10 per picul had been established, and holders were rather more desirous to sell, but did not press their stocks, the quality of which was, as a rule, not as good as the demand required, and prices were still higher than buyers were willing to pay. Settlements had been small, excepting for India. Quotations:—Tsatlee, best selected, $565 to 570 per picul; do., No. 1 and 2, $520 to 535 per picul; Loong Kong, best selected, $565 to 575 per picul; do., No. 1 and 2, $520 to 540 per picul; Kow Kong, No. 3, $500 to 505 per picul; Re-reeled Cumchook, best selected, $570 per picul; do., No. 1 and 2, $555 to 565 per picul.

JAVA AND STRAITS PRODUCE.

BATAVIA.—Arrack: Nominal, in less request. Cubebs: crop finished. India Rubber: Scarce. Gutta Percha: Scanty supplies, and wanted. Rattans: Wanted. Tin: An auction of 5,000 piculs is advertised for April 6. Mace: Sales very scarce, and wanted. Nutmegs: In good demand, and scarce. Cloves: Dull of sale. Coffee: Average price of auction sale at Padang of f.16,400 piculs No. 1, 800 piculs No. 2, averaged f.14.81½ per picul. Sapanwood: Government sale of 3,260 piculs Bima, averaged f.3.60 per picul. Sugar: Nominal, no stocks.

SINGAPORE.—Malacca Tin: There had been little demand for China, only 450 piculs taken for that market at $29; 1,600 piculs placed at $29 for shipment to America. Gambier: About 18,000 piculs engaged for, chiefly at $3.15 to 3.10; at the close, tonnage being scarce, and freights having advanced, it was offered at $3.05. Black Pepper Purchases made at $8¼, dealers asking $8½. White Pepper: Large sales at $12 to 11½, according to quality. Sago Flour: An arrival of 2,100 piculs Sarawak brought $2.42½; small sales of Siak at $2.40 to 2.35. Pearl Sago: Large contracts at $3.80 to 3.10. Tapioca: Sales of Flake and Pearl at $4¼. Buffalo Hides in request at $10¾ to 11. Gum Damar in less inquiry; a sale of 60 piculs at $15½ to 14¼. Rattans exceedingly scarce, and much wanted. India-rubber: An arrival of 80 piculs taken at $43½. Gutta-Percha: Arrivals of first quality taken at $100 to 106. Camphor: Stocks on the market offered at $18¾ without buyers. Cassia Lignea out of supply. Cubebs: Stocks very small, worth about $7. Coffee: No transactions; stock very small, and nominally $12¾. Nutmegs: An arrival of 200 piculs on the market not yet placed; price nominally $50. Mace: None on the market.

PENANG.—Pepper had advanced gradually from former prices to $8.50 and 8.60 per picul—the latter price being paid both for; immediate delivery and to arrive, for Black Pepper of West coast origin. White Pepper offering at $10 to 11 per picul, but no purchases registered. Purchases of Tin were not of much importance, nor did the price vary much from last quotations until after the arrival of the mail from England, when prices rose as high as $29.65, which may be considered as the closing price. Sugar continued in brisk demand, large contracts for India at $6½ for ordinary White No. 1, $5 for No. 2, and $4½ for No. 3. Some extra No. 1 disposed of at $6.60 per picul. Gutta Percha in small supply, an arrival of No. 1 at $98 per picul. India Rubber also increased in value and secured at $40 to 41 per picul. Hides and Horns not in much supply, and prices remain at nearly the same rates as last advised. Mace not much offering; only one purchase reported of No. 1 at $88 per picul. Nutmegs in weak enquiry, only a moderate quantity bought of 65 per lb. at $96; 80 per lb. at $60; 110 per lb. at $58. Holders at the close were offering to sell at a slight reduction on those rates. Fish Maws scarce, small quantities taken at $73½ to 74 for whole. Cloves not in much supply; Penang growth taken at $22 per picul.

REPORTS AND CASUALTIES.

AT HONG KONG.

William Miller, British steamer, reports:—Left London Dec. 30th; passed Downs Dec. 31st; arrived at Port Said Jan. 16th; left Suez Jan. 29th; arrived in Yembah Jan. 23rd; sailed same day, and arrived at Aden Jan. 29th; arrived in Colombo Feb. 10th; went to Galle and left Feb. 16th; arrived in Penang Feb. 27th; in Singapore Feb. 29th; left on March 5th, and arrived at Labuan 10th; left on 19th and arrived in port of Hong Kong on 26th; all well.

SINGAPORE.

Captain Crompton, of the Diomed, reports:—Left Liverpool on the 22nd Feb., and arrived at Port Said on the 9th March, after a run of fifteen days. Left Port Said on the 10th, and entered the Canal. Anchored for the night at Ismaila, and on the 11th went on to Suez. The passage of the Canal occupied only fifteen hours running time; the Diomed drawing twenty feet of water, there was no difficulty in passing, though she grazed the bottom two or three times, having got slightly out of the centre of the channel. The Diomed, the pilots assured Captain Crompton, was the deepest laden vessel that had yet passed through without having to discharge cargo. Left Suez on the 13th March, and had strong head winds till arrived at Penang, on the 5th April. Left Penang on the 8th April, and arrived at Singapore on the 10th.

"THE JAPAN LOAN."

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—With the exception of an article on the above subject which appeared in the columns of the London and China Telegraph of the 2nd instant, the comments in the public journals, however prudent or cautious, have been confined to vague generalities, or to expressions of opinion founded upon unexplained bases which must be anything but satisfactory to that portion of the money-lending public who have been tempted to part with their cash by an interest of 9 per cent., and a security which appears satisfactory, though they can scarcely satisfy themselves it is so.

Up to the present time the papers published in Yokohama have a most limited circulation in London; the names of the public journals are possibly unknown, except to a few persons who have relatives in that country, and who save their postage stamps by sending a newspaper instead of a letter, or a few merchants who restrict their reading of such journals as they may receive to the quotations of staple imports, or the prices and exports of silk. Under these circumstances, therefore, it is by no means surprising that want of reliable information has restricted the channels of public comment, since there are so few positively acquainted with many of the collateral circumstances connected with this Loan, or with a knowledge of the political position of Japan—its financial difficulties, its monetary needs, or its mode of dealing with foreigners under peculiar and exceptionable circumstances.

To a few, however, who have somewhat closer relations with Japan, and the advantage of having for some years resided in that country, the case is very different; such can see the weak points in connection with this Loan, and the insecurity of its guarantee. For such, from personal experience, as well as from the written record—know that the Japanese have scarcely yet constructed the edifice of their new Government—are still suffering from the revolution which brought it about—have so debased their coinage, that the relations between the people and the new Government are materially jeopardised, and that the very limited revenue collected at Yokohama is not sufficient for the urgent needs of the impoverished officials at Yedo, and therefore most unlikely to find its way into the coffers of the Oriental Bank.*

Do the faithful, who have already paid their 20 per cent. of this Loan, know that such is the political, social, and financial position of the borrowers? Have they not been led into parting with their money by the respectability and standing of the parties who brought the Loan before the money-lending public of London; the unquestionable standing of the great money corporation which acts as their receivers; their presumed liability consequent on such connection, and the bold statement made by the promoters of the Loan that Mr. Horatio Nelson, C.B., has been appointed commissioner for its negotiation in this country?

The public are led to believe that much of this Loan is taken up, not by mere speculators on the Stock Exchange, but by parties unconnected in many cases with business, who have forgotten that a high interest is but another name for bad security, and who have invested their money in an adventure which, in spite of the promptitude with which the first call has been met, was on the same and subsequent days quoted at 3½ discount, and heavy at quotations.

The Loan is fortunately of small amount; it is presumed to have been taken up in good faith by some to whom a loss will be of moment, and it is in the interest of such, and before further mischief has been made by the payment of the next instalment, that this letter is written—if such doubts as at present exist in the writer's mind are cleared away, the better for all the parties concerned, if they cannot be removed, then much trouble, vexation, and loss will be saved to those who have committed themselves so far, but whose money must be returned to them unless the demand which this letter makes is complied with, and the very simple and necessary documents required are promptly supplied.

To revert to the standpoint from whence this business has been started, in the prospectus issued by Messrs. Schroder and Co. the following points are broadly stated:—

1st. That Messrs. Schroder and Co. are authorised by Mr. Horatio Nelson Lay, C.B., to receive applications for this Loan.

2nd. That Mr. Horatio Nelson Lay, C.B., is the Special Commissioner for this business, duly authorised by the Imperial Government of Japan.

3rd. That the Imperial Government has conferred upon the above-named gentleman full powers for raising the Loan on its behalf.

4th. That the said Government has set aside the whole of the proceeds of the Customs revenue as security for payment of interest and loan, and the collateral security of such revenue as may arise from railroads at present unconstructed.

And, lastly, that the general bond has already been signed by Mr. Horatio Nelson Lay, C.B., on behalf of the Imperial Government, and will be deposited with the original edicts at the Bank of England.

I have carefully perused the columns of the Japan Herald, published at Yokohama, and which publication is the official organ as well of the Japanese as the English Government, and I can find no edict published in that paper either that Mr. Lay has been so appointed or that the Japanese Financial Minister has announced either to the Superintendent at the Customs-house, or to H.B. Majesty's Minister the hypothecation of the Customs revenue; nor has even any public announcement been authoritatively issued, that the concession for the construction of the railways has been permitted by the Government to run through their territory—omissions singularly at variance with the usual absolute correctness of the Japanese in such matters.

The writer well knows how chary the Japanese Government are of granting official rank to foreigners; he is also aware that when they have so done they are most clear, business-like, and explicit in the commissions which they place in the hands of those foreigners they elect to serve them, and in the announcements which they forward to the Foreign Consuls and legations of the appointments which they have made.

It is the more surprising that none of the Japanese documents which necessarily have been issued by the Government have been translated and printed in the Japan Mail, of which paper Mr. H. N. Lay, C.B., is the chief, if not the sole proprietor. The documents, and the true translations of them, duly certified by the linguists attached to H.B.M. Consulate at Yokohama, are doubtless, however, in Mr. H. N. Lay's possession, and should forthwith be laid by the promoters of the Loan before the present scripholders. Such documents are, when issued, always written in the native language, signed by the particular authority issuing them, and stamped by his official seal; this signature and seal are well known at the offices of the British Legation and Consulate, and for the purpose of the present business would probably be stamped the following important issues:—

1st. The notification that the Government of Japan had granted to Mr. H. N. Lay, C.B., the concession for the construction of certain railways.

2nd. That they had authorised and commanded the Treasurers at the various Treaty Ports to pay to the Oriental Bank Corporation, or the Manager thereof at such places, the revenue thereat collected.

3rd. That the Japanese Government had appointed Mr. H. N. Lay, C.B., to be their commissioner and representative in England for the raising of one million sterling, to be disbursed in England or elsewhere, for the construction of the railways so granted to be made.

And lastly, the document whereby they had duly authorised Mr. H. N. Lay to sign on their behalf the general bond which is to be deposited at the Bank of England, a document I would remark en passant, which few in London either inspect or understand, and which must be a profound mystery to the most enlightened and astute of the Japanese officials.

* The deficit of revenue by last telegram is over two millions sterling.

Mr. H. N. Lay has doubtless these documents in his possession (for what negotiator would travel without full credentials?), and translations made by the linguists of Her Britannic Majesty's Consulate at Yokohama; should the originals only be in the possession of that gentleman it will be unfortunate, for there are not three linguists in all England who are qualified to translate—with certainty, and as experts—a Japanese official document written in the native character; and in the absence of such certified translations understandable by those who are subscribing their money, it is clear they are lending a large sum to the risk of a single life, without the slightest commitment of the Government itself to whom that money has been loaned.

When these documents have been placed before the public, the Japanese Loan, with subscribers which all are led to believe are of the highest respectability, with a call fully paid for the entire number of shares to be issued, will no longer remain at its present anomalous quotation, but at its intrinsic value of 2 to 2½ premium.

Should they not be forthcoming, the public will have but themselves to thank for any loss they may sustain, should any political convulsion shake Japan to its centre at any time during the next thirteen years, and scatter into thin air the million sterling (or any residue thereof) which they have so heedlessly undertaken to lend.—I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

May 16, 1870. A LATE RESIDENT IN JAPAN.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

MR. SWINHOE ON THE YANGTSZE.

At the meeting of this society, held on the 9th inst., in the theatre of the Royal Institution, Albemarle-street, Sir Roderick Murchison in the chair, a paper was read by Mr. R. Swinhoe, late Her Majesty's Consul at Formosa, describing a journey up the Yangtze-Kiang river from Hankow to Chun-King, undertaken by him at the instance of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, with the object of ascertaining the navigability or otherwise of that river above I-Chang. Having proceeded from the Tung-ting Lake early in April last year, without any material obstacle, as far as I-Chang, it was thought imprudent to attempt the rapids above that place in the small steamer Faust, which had been towed up for that purpose, and therefore a junk was hired to take Mr. Swinhoe and party as far as Chung-King. They did not get beyond Chung-King-fu, which was reached on the 12th May, where they were well received and visited by merchants, who presented them with samples of native goods, and were anxious for trade. While there he visited the monastery of the Great Buddha, and saw the gilt giant idol to which veneration was paid by the sailors. In the province of Se-Chuen he ascertained that after the winter gathering of opium, rice, millet, tobacco, and beans were successfully cultivated. The river itself appears to be scarcely navigable from I-chang to Kwei-fu, the rapids being great and the river dangerous from the sudden rocks and shifting bottom. On returning to I-chang, Mr. Swinhoe found the river much swollen, and some of the rapids easily navigable, while other rapids had arisen. Captain Stokes had no difficulty in taking his vessel back to Hang-how, and Mr. Dawson, who remained at I-Chang in the Opposum, reported that steam navigation could not be carried on above that place on account of the rocks, the rapids, the total absence of anchorage-ground, and the shifting bottom; the lead gives no warning of the sudden danger of rocks. Between I-Chang and Hankow there is about seven feet of water from April to September. The Chinese navigate their vessels by hugging the deep banks, and anchor to stumps or piles driven into them. There is coal near I-Chang of anthracite character, requiring great furnace surface for proper ignition.

The Chairman, in thanking Mr. Swinhoe for his valuable contribution to our knowledge of Chinese rivers, referred to the difficulties of laying down charts in waters the upheavings and downcastings of whose beds were so constant and changeable.

After a few remarks from Admiral Collinson, who spoke with satisfaction of the expedition of 1842,

Mr. Cooper said he thought the difficulties of the navigation had been over-estimated in these days of engineering skill; and he mentioned that the river beyond Chung-King becomes wider and quieter, but at Su-Chow was an impassable rapid in a gorge. When once above Chung-King there was a good course up a tributary of the Yangtsze-Kiang into the province of Se-Ghuen, which has a fine and equable climate; and, in reply to Mr. Campbell, he stated that he had no apprehensions that the Chinese opium would interfere with our Indian trade in that drug.

Dr. Lockhart thought the coal discoveries even more important than the river explorations, and hoped that India would be supplied with Chinese coal. Admiral Hall and the Chairman finished the discussion with spirited allusions to the famous "Nemesis," and a paper was then read by Mr. W. A. Whyte, describing in the most graphic and interesting manner his journey across Mongolia, from Tientsin to Kiachta, on the borders of Siberia. Leaving Tientsin with one companion on the 16th October, 1869, he passed through Peking, which he described as poverty-stricken and wretched, and arrived at Kalin, on the edge of the desert, on the 22nd. The temperature was only 22 deg. Fahrenheit, and the elevation 2,400 above the sea level. Having made the necessary preparations, he proceeded across the desert, which is from 2,400 to 5,000 feet high—a plateau without vegetation. After enduring many privations, and being under no shelter for twenty-three days, he entered Kiachta, the temperature being 40 deg. below zero. The course taken was through Tsaryan Angarik to the river Tala, a tributary of the Selinga, thence to Mainai-Chin, a Chinese town, to Kiachta. Mr. Whyte met with genuine kindness from some of the natives, who appear in marked contrast to those in the towns. They wander about from place to place with their cattle, obeying no laws and paying no taxes.

Dr. Lockhart combated Mr. Whyte's notion of Peking and China, and said that a country with universities, with 10,000 students, with buildings that would compare with any—a country with a race of scholars, a competitive examination system and promotion to higher posts by literary merit—was not to be disparaged on account of a few signs of dilapidation.

THE ROTTERDAM BANK.

(FROM OUR ROTTERDAM CORRESPONDENT.)

The Rotterdam Bank has published its annual report. From the communications made by the managers, I learn that every possible means have been taken to reinstate the Bank in a healthy position. The engagements in stocks and shares have been entirely liquidated, and transactions upon them will in future only be entered into for account of customers; the object being to limit the business of the Bank strictly to legitimate banking business. The last year, which commenced with a deficit of f.156,551.12, and an entire reorganisation of the statutes of the Bank and of the board of directors, must evidently be considered as a period of transition, and as such the result cannot fail to give satisfaction. Not only has this deficit been extinguished, but a sum of florins 370,526.49 has been set aside towards reducing to their fair value the different assets originating from the claim against the bankrupt firm of Messrs. B. J. van Eck and Co., of Sourabaya, which assets, according to the opinion expressed by the Commissioners in their former report, and confirmed by the actual Board of Managers, figured for a too high amount in the balance of last year. The net profits are absorbed by these reductions, and leave only a balance of f.1,565.11, an amount, of course, too small to divide amongst the shareholders. I further learn from the report that an amount of f.1,500,000 of the Bank's capital is administered exclusively by the Batavia agency, and that upon the remainder working in Europe, taking into consideration only the operations of last year with its profits and losses, a net income of about 8 per cent. has been earned. Taking in the same way the operations of last year separately, the Batavia agency has worked very profitably; but, as before stated, the profits have been more than absorbed by the reductions made upon the valuation of the assets of last year.

The terms of the new statutes rendering a re-organisation of the Batavia agency necessary, M. Casters, one of the directors, started for Java, with the object of making a preparatory report upon the state of affairs there. The managers intend at all events to maintain the position of the Bank in the commerce between Holland and India, but they will restrict the circle of their operations to legitimate banking business, the same as in Europe. There are two ways in which this reform may be effected, namely, to maintain the agency, but with a simpler working, or to transfer the business to a local bank in Java. Negotiations are being made to ascertain in what manner the last-named reform may be applied. In July next it will be known whether these negotiations will have led to a final arrangement. With regard to this point, the managers call attention to the circumstance that this arrangement will leave the directors free, while abandoning their Batavia agency, to maintain at the same time their position in the banking transactions of every kind between India and Europe, and that should they finally determine upon this course, the transfer would be on the basis of the actual valuation of the assets, and a sum of about one million, which is now employed in the liquidation of the above-mentioned claim against the firm of B. J. van Eck and Co., would become free to be employed in the proper business of the Bank. The commissioners speak in the highest terms of satisfaction respecting the prudence, activity, and the caution displayed by the directors; and, indeed, the general opinion is that the "hard times" have now finally ceased for the Bank of Rotterdam. The annual meeting of shareholders will take place on the 23rd inst.

ROTTERDAM, May 11.

H.M. the Queen has returned unwell from Amsterdam to the Hague but her condition is not one of danger. The King is at het Loo, and the Hague papers assert that Prince Alexander will soon take up his residence at Leyden, where he will become a student at the University of that town. Prince Henry has started for Luxemburg, and opened the Sitting of the Chamber with a Speech from the Throne, in which he stated that the political horizon is quite without clouds. I have already assured you that there was no foundation for the report, originated by the Hague correspondent of the Temps, of an impending political complication in that duchy. The Conservative papers are still busy speculating upon a coolness arising between Holland and Belgium, because the Belgian Cabinet has augmented the import duty upon spirits in opposition to the existing treaties. Without the least doubt the Cabinet will be interpellated thereupon, and it is not improbable that Mr. Roest will be thrown into a difficult position. The rumour that Mr. Thorbecke will retire from the political stage—which was spread by the Nieuwe Goessche Courant—is contradicted by the Asser Courant. You are aware that Mr. Thorbecke is now M.P. for the capital of the province of Drenthe.

Up to this moment the Staats Courant has not published the information that the definitive concession has been granted by our Government to construct a telegraphic communication between Singapore and Australia through a part of the territory of Netherlands-India, with permission to land a cable in the neighbourhood of Batavia, on the east coast of Java. This creates much astonishment, because it was generally known that the 4th inst. was the day appointed by the Minister to decide the question.

Since the departure of last mail not one political event has occurred worthy of mention. The Conservative papers are still hinting at a Ministerial crisis, whilst the Liberal journals contradict their statements. Happily, the Second Chamber met yesterday, and journalists will have something else to write about than the very cold and frosty weather which has prevailed for a month past. From all parts of the kingdom intelligence reaches us that vegetation does not thrive, and that the cattle have been put again under shelter—in a word, that May resembles a cold and bleak November.

In a former letter I told you that at a late meeting of the Amsterdam Union for promoting the elections a proposal was made by one of its members to create a league for reforming the taxation system in Java. The Union, however, has declined to agree to this proposal.

A first call of 25 per cent. is now payable on the shares of the Steam Navigation Company, Nederland.

The day on which the debate on the Sugar Bill will be opened is not yet fixed.

COMMERCIAL.

COFFEE.—The Trading Company has advertised its auction for the 18th instant, when 40,300 b. will be offered. This being a very small quantity has had a favourable influence upon the market; but little is offered, and an advance of ½c. on the last auction prices is paid. The private transactions include 1,788 b. Java, ex Enthoven; 223 b. ex County of Lanark.

SUGAR (Raw).—The Trading Company will offer in auction on the 24th instant 66,500 mats Java. In waiting for this auction the market is very dull. The quotations is f.1½ to f.1 under March. The business includes 1,331 mats Java, ex Leopold Graaf van Limburg Stirum, No. 10¾, at f.32¾: 768 mats Samarang, No. 12, ex China, at f.33; 307 mats No. 12, at f.32¾; stock in bond on the 1st, 40,019 mats.

RICE.—In consequence of the cold weather a good business has been done, and the following parcels have changed hands:—419 b. Java, ex Graafstroom, at f.7½; 904 b. Sourabaya, ex Susanna, at f.5½; 13,180 mats Saigon, ex Nereus, at f.5½; 5,184 b. Java, per Susanna, 9,220 b. Rangoon, ex Nordge, at f.5¾.

SPICES.—Prices without alteration; market quiet.

JAVA TOBACCO.—There is a demand for good quality fit for cigar purposes, and generally higher prices are paid. The new Malang is very satisfactory, likewise the Kediri. The fresh import of Manila is very inferior, and almost impossible to sell. The stock of Java is 9,725 bales.

TEA.—A good portion of the parcel of China ex Deerfoot, bought in at the last auction, has been sold privately.

ARRACK.—55 casks Batavia ex Eastham, 25 casks do. ex Eurydice, and 39 casks Sourabaya ex Europa have changed hands at prices that did not transpire.

TIN.—The market looks again somewhat healthier, and some lots had been sold at f.78 to f.78½. Loco. Billiton, f.77 to f.77¼.

HIDES.—By private tender were sold the following parcels:—590 p. Buffalo, ex Jannetje, 2,193 p. do. ex County of Nairn, 2,967 p. do. ex L. J. Enthoven and County of Lanark, 501 p. do. ex Copernicus, 477 p. do. ex Vrachtzoeker.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Japan Camphor: Nominal, at 52c. Long Pepper: 20c. Oleum Cajaputi: 27 m., ex Royal Arther, were sold. Japan Wax: A, f.45; B, f.43. Rattans: The following parcels changed hands:—342 piculs, ex Maria and Elisabeth; 500 piculs, ex Ellen; 120 piculs, ex President Plate; 62 piculs, ex Vrachtzoeker; 150 piculs, ex Maria Sarah; 156 piculs, ex Copernicus; 77 piculs, ex Jannetje; 500 piculs, ex Kenilworth. Mother-o'-pearl Shells: The Trading Company sold by private tender 26,000 kilo. Macassar, ex Hollandia.

POSTSCRIPT.

MAY 14.

The official paper of Holland, the Nederlandsche Staats Courant of to-day, contains the communication of the Minister of the Colonial Department that a concession is granted to the British Australian Telegraph Company (Limited) for a telegraphic communication between the island of Java and Singapore, and between the island of Java and Australia. The first-named line must be ready on the 31st Dec, 1870, and the second one on the 31st Dec., 1871.

An occasional correspondent writes from the Hague:—

The projet de loi about the establishment of an embassy in China has been rejected with 35 against 34 votes. It is evidently proved by this decision that the Second Chamber of the States General never may boast of her being the expression or the reflection of the national opinion. Dutchmen are too shrewd, and too well at the height of commercial interest, not to feel the absolute necessity for their trade and shipping to be represented in Peking in a diplomatic way; the expenses, £1,500 a-year, cannot be considered in any measure to have been the cause of this result in the Chamber. We have only to choose between two probable causes—viz., there must be a good number of members in the States General knowing nothing about the public interest of their country, or there must be a number of members whose vote is systematically against a Cabinet which does not happen to be in their political way of thinking and talking.

COLLISION BETWEEN TWO CHINA CLIPPERS.

A collision case has just been settled at Liverpool before arbitrators, Messrs. L. R. Bailey, S. W. Kelso, and Captain D. B. Morton, nautical assessor. The claim was brought by the owners of the ship Chusan, against the owners of the barque Joseph Sprott, both ships belonging to Liverpool. The facts will be gathered from the following evidence.

Captain J. W. Roy stated he had been master for seventeen years, and four years master of the Chusan. That on the 27th of September last, while on his passage from Foochow to London, he was beating through the Straits of Manipa, with two or three other vessels. That at about 7.30 P.M. on that day he tacked, the wind at the time being S.E., and his ship making a course S.S.W. At this time a barque was one to two miles off, and about three points on his port bow, standing on the same tack; the night was cloudy, but objects could be seen without much difficulty. At 8.15 he was nearly abreast of the barque, and hailed her. Her name was not clearly heard, but they made it out to be the Joseph Sprott or Joseph Scott. At this time and previously all hands were on deck, the chief officer on the forecastle, the second officer conning the ship, his eldest apprentice on the bridge checking the course by the illuminated standard compass. That he observed the barque keeping away, the apprentice also drawing his attention to the same. That he told the helmsman to keep her "clean full," and, finding the barque still approaching, to put the helm "hard up." That the spanker sheet was let go, and that he called to the barque, "My God, sir, what are you doing? Put your helm hard down; you'll be into me;" that a reply was given, "All right," but that the barque struck him across the bows, carrying away jibboom, and driving stem, cutwater, &c., over to starboard. That before the ships collided the Chusan had paid off to about S.W and by W. That on the vessels separating, he again asked the name of the barque, and was answered, "Joseph Sprott," and would the Chusan stand by him. That he did so, burning blue lights, &c., and hung out signal lantern at the gaff end. That, owing to the state of the weather, he could not communicate the next day, but that on the 29th he signalled to the Joseph Sprott that he was seriously damaged, and had sprung a leak. That after one or two consultations it was decided that it would not be safe for the Chusan to proceed on her voyage, and that she bore up for Singapore, where she arrived in the middle of October. When parting, the captain of the Joseph Sprott admitted that if he had not kept away the collision would not have occurred, and that he hoped Captain Roy would do all he could at Singapore to make the expenses as light as possible. On arriving at Singapore, the stem was found split, and the damage so serious that half the cargo had to be discharged, the ship docked, &c., the total expenses there being some £2,000, making, with the demurrage claimed by the Chusan, the total claim against the Joseph Sprott upwards of £3,000. The demurrage claimed was for sixty-five days.

The evidence of Captain Dixon, of the Joseph Sprott, was to the effect that he had been eleven years at sea, and master of the Joseph Sprott three years. That on the evening of the 27th of September he was in the Straits of Manipa the weather fine, wind light from S.E. to S.S.E. He was on deck; saw a ship to leeward, but not in signal distance. About 6.30 she tacked astern about two miles; about seven saw both her lights; she overhauled me fast. At eight o'clock changed watch, second mate taking charge; was on deck, as also chief officer. About a quarter past eight the ship hailed me; she was just abeam of us. He asked, "What barque is that?" Up to the time of hailing I kept close to the wind, then kept away a little, and put the helm hard down. Kept away about three-quarters of a point; we were steering S.W. at the time. Saw the helm put hard down. The ship came to. Kept off a minute, then righted the helm. Heard from the Chusan, "Hard up, hard up, I say: my God, what is that man doing?" Then, "Put your helm down." I answered, "All right; it is down long ago." She came up and struck me amid-ships, her bowsprit and jibboom going over the main hatch. (This Captain Dixon subsequently wished to amend, and stated at the next sitting that the Chusan struck him abaft the fore rigging, and then raked him all along.) At the time of the collision both ships were aback, the Chusan dead aback. My ship's head was south-west. My bumpkin struck his port bow. Asked him to stand by me; after collision he stood by me. Saw no rocket or blue lights. Saw her next day four to five miles off. On the 29th went on board the Chusan and surveyed damage. Strongly advised him to proceed on his voyage. Found stem and cutwater all canted over to starboard. Agreed with Captain Roy that I would consult my carpenter whether he thought she would make more water. I did so, and then signalled to Captain Roy agreeing to his bearing up for Singapore. On parting said I hoped he would do the best for all concerned. Did not admit that I was in fault, but might have said that if I had not kept away the accident might not have happened. I kept away that I might hear what he had to say.

Ultimately the arbitrators decided that no blame attached to the Chusan, and awarded £1,971 as the amount due to her.

The screw steam surveying vessel Nassau, 5, Commander William Chimmo, under orders to sail for Singapore, was removed on the 9th inst. from Hamoaze into Plymouth Sound, where her powder was shipped. She then tested her engines and machinery outside the breakwater, on the measured mile, and returned to Barnpool.

THE STRAITS PLEBISCITE.

THOSE whose school memories can recall "Plutarch's Lives" will remember that after every second chapter there came a paragraph of "Comparison." The subject of the first biography was compared, often quaintly enough, with the second, and thus strange company at times met ROMULUS with THESEUS, CATO with ARISTIDES, CÆSAR with ALEXANDER. Judged, therefore, by classical precedent, there is warrant for introducing together the names of Governor Sir H. ORD and the EMPEROR of the FRENCH. We are not about to propound one of those most provoking of riddles, "What is the difference" between the one person and the other? If we did so, we can imagine the numberless answers that would be returned, many of them no doubt equally correct. It might be said that LOUIS NAPOLEON begun by being unpopular, and lived to possess the love of his people. That he has shown tact as well as ability, that he has been scrupulously conciliatory in his government, and fifty other features of difference might be pointed out between his MAJESTY and the Ruler of the Straits Settlements. The mention of their names in concert is suggested by the news to hand this morning from Singapore. By an odd coincidence, Emperor and Governor have within a few weeks passed through a similar phase of history. Each one had challenged from the people he governs an answer to the question, "Do you approve of my administration of affairs?" The answer, as we now know, has in both cases, been clear and unmistakable. France says "Yes." Singapore replies "No." Governor ORD'S challenge was so direct that it could not fail to be taken up. The SECRETARY of STATE had been told that the complaints of the Straits Association were only those of so many youngsters, ignorant of what was going on in the Colony and anxious only to be saved some trumpery tax on their wine and tobacco. That in the Settlement almost perfect unanimity existed, and that the relations between Governor and governed could only be equalled in "a united happy family."

In the minds of those who adopted this showing of the case, the recent explosion of public feeling will produce no little dismay, and in the face of it we cannot pretend any longer to accept the Governor's statements. Were the community so satisfied, as he maintains they are, with his rule, it is inconceivable that a meeting such as is now reported would have been even tolerated. But we find it attended by the leading Colonists, presided over by one of the oldest residents, a gentleman who, if he has been accused of expressing his opinions strongly, has never been charged with expressing them but in the interests of his fellow townsmen, and who yields to no one in his knowledge of the Colony and devotion to its service; we say, therefore, that such a meeting is irreconcilable with anything like satisfaction with Governor ORD'S administration. As to the form in which public opinion has been pronounced, we can only regret that the fears we have expressed have been realised, and that a personal and somewhat bitter tone has marked the Plebiscite. It could hardly have been otherwise; for two years the community had entrusted to their friends in London the charge of representing at the Colonial-office the dissatisfaction existing in the Straits. They were to call attention to Colonel ORD'S contempt for the recognised principles of political economy, his extravagance, as evidenced in a largely increased annual expenditure, and his evident willingness, if more money were wanting, to saddle the Colony with a debt. It cannot be said, even by those few gentlemen who have stood aloof from the recent movement in Singapore, that these points were urged by the Association intemperately, or with any other object than the promotion of the prosperity of the Straits. But, unfortunately, in answering their statements, Sir H. ORD forced a quarrel upon what TOUCHSTONE calls "the seventh cause." He passed over the retort courteous, the quip modest, the reply churlish, the reproof valiant, the countercheck quarrelsome, and the lie with circumstance, and he chose the seventh cause, which we have not named. All the six, says TOUCHSTONE, you may avoid—"Even the lie direct you may avoid with an 'if,' your 'if' is the only peacemaker, much virtue in 'if.'" It is to be wished that a seat in the Executive Council could have been vacated for TOUCHSTONE. As it was, "the only peacemaker" was disregarded, and, as is well known, the flattest of denials was given to the statements of the Association. There can be no doubt that herein is to be found the explanation of much of the strong language which has been used in Singapore. A personal sense of insult and an honourable desire to support the Association in London runs throughout the speeches of which a report is before us. It is a thousand pities, however, that there should have been even the slightest introduction of personal ill-feeling, for it can only retard the cause of reform by alienating the sympathy and support of certain influential gentlemen in the Colony who, while they thoroughly disapprove of much in Sir H. ORD'S administration, come daily under his social influence, and wisely elect to confine their opposition to him to the arena of politics.

For good or for evil, the public voice has been heard. For good or for evil, it has condemned the Governor's own account of his proceedings, and his controversy with the Association; and, in so doing, it has condemned the general course of his policy during the last three years. "The principle" of Judicial subserviency which he has aimed at establishing—the attempt to impose upon the Colony endless restrictions previously unheard of—the lavish expenditure of public money—the demands on the Colonial Exchequer for a locust-like host of officials—his guiding maxim, "Conciliation is not my policy"—all these chapters in the history of his government have been frequently denounced. The quarrel has no doubt another side. On behalf of Governor ORD, it is urged that he has been misunderstood, that he has been badly advised, that his position was a difficult one to fill, and so on. All these considerations must be kept in view, and more so than they have been amid the angry sounds of local controversy. If we have only touched upon them it is because we are not here discussing the merits of the controversy, but recording the very significant opinion which has been publicly pronounced upon it in Singapore. To many the political complications in the Straits will appear only a storm in a teacup, but to our minds it is most discreditable to this country that a colony, however insignificant, should be in a condition of avowed hostility to its Governor. It is absurd to say that it has always been so. General CAVENAGH left the Colony regretted and beloved. Colonel MANN'S promotion to the Andamans was regarded as a blow to the interests of the Settlement. Colonel MACPHERSON'S recent death drew forth the most general and sincere expressions of grief. These were all men with a thorough experience of the country. Their hearts were in it, and by all people and races they were trusted and respected. Is it to be reserved for Sir HARRY ORD to be the one Governor of the Straits whose departure from it will prove a day of rejoicing? We sincerely trust not; but the moral of this colonial Plébiscite which we would wish to point is this—that the system upon which appointments are regulated at the Colonial-office affords no security against the repetition in any quarter of such a state of things as we have been commenting upon. A Colony that has enjoyed a golden age may suddenly find itself drawn into a six years' cycle of discontent and agitation by the appointment of a ruler who has the fatal gift of ability without either tact to guide it or the wish to exercise it with conciliation.

MR. LAURENCE OLIPHANT.—Readers of Mr. Laurence Oliphant's "Piccadilly" must have been amused with his assumption of the character of "spiritual medium:"—"The pages were penned under an impulse which seemed at the time irresistible. I found myself unable, by any conscious act of volition, to control either the plot or the style." Also with his farewell to the world: "I can be in no way affected by the fate of the book, nor is it likely I shall ever see or hear the criticisms of which it may be the subject." As usual, the eternal adieu proves a most transient adieu. Escaped from his celestial retreat with Mr. Harris on the bank of Lake Erie, Mr. Oliphant is learning, in Pall Mall, what society thinks of "Piccadilly."

Assistant Commissary-General A. C. Crookshank, who was sent out in 1867 to Ceylon to establish the Commissariat in that island, and was subsequently appointed Assistant Controller in the same command, has returned to this country on completion of his term of service in the Ceylon command.

A TELEGRAM from Brussels states that the Chinese Embassy left here to-day, on its way to Italy, Spain, and Portugal.

SIR RUTHERFORD ALCOCK, K.C.B., was presented to Her Majesty by the Earl of Clarendon on his return from Peking.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps has attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in tin-lined packets labelled—JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London

THE OPIUM QUESTION.

THE persons who expected that Sir WILFRID LAWSON'S resolution would lead to any distinct expression of opinion on the part of the House of Commons, either in support or in condemnation of the Opium trade, as a matter of principle, were probably few in number. The question is one of such magnitude that the idea of settling it by the mere affirmation or rejection of a dogmatic resolution of just nineteen words is absurd, and the Government must be considered to have acted wisely in taking advantage of one of the forms of the House (the "Previous Question") in such a way as to evade a vote on the direct issue. The debate was not a very brilliant one, and the earlier portion of it was so thinly attended that it narrowly escaped a count-out; eventually, some half-dozen members having spoken on either side, the matter was shelved by a majority of about three to one, in a House of less than two hundred members.

In examining the speeches of Sir WILFRID LAWSON and his supporters, we find no very new or striking arguments. On the strength of the old stock objections, based on the alleged immorality of the traffic, the House was asked to demolish at a blow about one-sixth of the net revenue of India, at a moment when the finances of that country are in a highly unsatisfactory state, and the natives groaning under the burthen of an increased income-tax; and this without any attempt to show how the deficiency might be supplied, or how so great a loss could be borne without ruin to our Indian Empire. To begin with Sir WILFRID LAWSON—who, without any disrespect, must be described as an enthusiast—we find him taking up his usual position as an uncompromising but somewhat unreasoning enemy to stimulants of all kinds. To quote Mr. GLADSTONE'S words, though excellent in every other way, he is merciless towards those of his fellow-creatures who indulge in stimulants of any kind, in any degree, and there is nothing he can say against opium that he would not also say against alcohol. Of course his first arguments to show the pernicious effects of the drug were based on the statements of missionaries; and although we would be the last to deny that its effects are pernicious, it may be as well here to remind our readers how greatly some missionary observers, in their excess of zeal, have been tempted to exaggerate. It has been frequently observed that no section of the English public is more intemperate than that which upholds the temperance movement; intemperate, that is, in their language, their denunciations, their bigoted and unreasoning hostility to the use of stimulants in any form or degree. And it must be owned that some of the missionary crusaders against opium are inoculated with a similar spirit. A valued correspondent, in a series of papers recently contributed to the London and China Telegraph, showed by a careful analysis of some of their statements how necessary it is to receive them with caution. One missionary, whose acknowledged experience and ability give great weight to his opinions, sets forth that one-fourth of the whole male adult population of China are opium-smokers, and one-tenth of the female adults. Another missionary, of equal standing, states the average quantity per diem consumed by each smoker at 2¾ mace. If we combine these accounts—taking the lowest admissible estimate of the population—we find that the entire consumption of the drug in China must be upwards of one million piculs per annum. Now, as the import from India is about 80,000 piculs, this would necessarily show the quantity of native-grown opium to be some 920,000 piculs annually; or, in other words, that of the opium consumed in China less than one-twelfth part comes from India. So that if the calculations of our missionary friends are to be relied on, we are not after all responsible for a tithe of the injury arising from opium smoking in China. Again, a missionary authority tells us that the waste of time involved in the pernicious habit is enormous—and so it must be, if his calculations are correct. Two candareens of opium (an ordinary dose) takes from one to two hours to smoke. Suppose we say an hour and a-half; then, 2¾ mace (the quantity our other missionary authority gives as the daily average) would take twenty hours to smoke, while excessive smokers, such as take an ounce a day, must devote some sixty hours out of the twenty-four to its consumption—a terrible loss of time indeed! We do not quote these exaggerated statements with the view of discrediting all missionary evidence on the subject, but merely to show that their statements, like all others made under the stimulus of strongly excited feelings, must be received with a certain amount of reserve. Sir WILFRID of course went back to the first China war, and traced all our complications with China, from that time to this, to the forcing of our opium on China; and he endeavoured to strengthen this view by showing that even the Taiping rebels entertained a deadly hostility to the cultivation of the poppy. This argument was perhaps the weakest of all, for the condition of the districts ravaged by the Taipings shows only too clearly that they entertained a "deadly hostility" to the cultivation of tea, silk, or anything else, and in fact possessed an equal abhorrence of any form of productive industry. To credit the Taipings with a conscientious objection to, and abstinence from, the use of opium, is about as reasonable as to believe in their self-asserted claim to be the champions of Christianity against Paganism—a belief once entertained by a small section of the missionaries and other foreigners in China, but long since exploded.

Mr. R. FOWLER, in seconding the resolution, dwelt more on the medical side of the question, but condemned the introduction of opium into China as inconsistent with Christianity. Mr. MCARTHUR said, "We had grievously afflicted China by this "opium traffic, and he believed in the doctrine of a retributive "Providence." Mr. W. FOWLER said that the House ought not to sanction what was manifestly wrong for the sake of money, trade, or any other consideration; but he also failed to show how a suddenly-created deficiency of six or eight millions could be made up, or how the Government of India could be carried on without it. Mr. CHAMBERS mourned over the attempt to count out the House during so important a debate, but consoled himself with the reflection that Sir WILFRID LAWSON'S resolution "would have the entire concurrence of the whole nation"—wherein Mr. CHAMBERS showed himself rather sanguine. The only other supporter of the motion was Mr. KINNAIRD, who thought that we ought not to risk any difficulties with China "for the sake of obtaining a certain amount of revenue for the Indian Government." Like most of the other members whose speeches we have noticed, he seemed quite to ignore the effect on the vast population of India of any measure that would suddenly cut off so large a slice of its already insufficient revenue.

If the attack exhibited no very great argumentative powers, it must be owned the defence at least, from a sentimental point of view, was somewhat lame. Sir CHARLES WINGFIELD thought that opium could not be very hurtful, otherwise China would not have such a teeming and industrious population; but the mere fact that opium has failed to depopulate a country can hardly be accepted as proof that it is innocuous. Mr. C. DENISON was more practical, and pointed out that however desirable, such a change as Sir W. LAWSON desired could not possibly be carried out otherwise than very gradually, and during a long series of years. Mr. GRANT DUFF plunged boldly into figures; showed how enormous would be the deficiency in the revenue if opium were given up, and how it would at one blow reduce our Indian Empire to a state of bankruptcy. He showed, too, that the Bombay duty and the Bengal monopoly both acted in fact as a heavy restrictive tax on the drug, and that even were these to be abolished, so that we no longer derived any benefit from the export, it would still go on; for we could not compel the native princes in whose territory the drug was produced to prohibit the growth of the poppy entirely. The drug would still find its way to China, probably in still larger quantities, certainly at a lower price. After setting forth these undeniable facts, Mr. GRANT DUFF rather weakened his case than otherwise by relapsing from the practical into the sentimental, and trying to vindicate the reputation of the maligned drug by quoting Mr. FORTUNE's statement that he had once seen a Chinaman indulge in a few whiffs and then walk off to business none the worse; and another statement of a writer in the "Cyclopædia of India," that he knew a veteran opium smoker who had reached the great age of eighty. Mr. GLADSTONE ably supplemented the more practical part of Mr. GRANT DUFF'S speech, by showing that the revenue derived from opium can only be relinquished on one condition, namely, that an equivalent sum be handed over to India from the resources of this country. And even were this done, and the export of opium forthwith prohibited, though the Indian budget would look no worse, the large proportion of the Indian population now engaged in the growth of opium would be deprived of their occupation and means of subsistence.

In truth, the whole question is one rather of expediency than morality. A system that has been the growth of many years cannot be brought to a sudden termination without much injustice and suffering to a large population, while the benefit would be very doubtful. If we found means entirely to stop the cultivation in India, that would by no means stop the consumption in China. On the one hand, we lay waste thousands of acres of productive land (which it would take a long time to bring under cultivation for other crops) and deprive a large population of the means of support. On the other hand, the growth of Chinese opium would be stimulated, and probably thousands of fertile acres now producing rice would be given up to the poppy—for China will have opium, and even as it is, the native growth is increasing enormously. The Chinese, as a nation, do not drink; but even could their supplies of opium, native and foreign, be entirely stopped, some alcoholic stimulant would take its place, and become quite as universal and possibly even more deleterious. The question, as we have said, is shelved, but cannot be considered finally disposed of. We do not believe that it lays in the power even of the Parliament of Great Britain to abolish the growth of the poppy in India; but by assimilating the system of Bengal to that pursued in Bombay we might free ourselves from any direct interest in its production beyond the imposition of a restrictive tax. The already apparent falling off in the demand for the Indian drug will do the rest; but this will be by slow degrees, so as to allow time for the development of the resources of our Indian possessions, and the increase of the revenue derived from other sources. In the meanwhile the question will no doubt be allowed to sleep for a time.

TRADE IN THE NORTH OF CHINA.

WE have more than once had occasion to compliment Her MAJESTY'S Consuls in China on the completeness of their Commercial Reports, and the contents of a blue-book published last month (China, No. 7, 1870) fully justify the high estimate we had formed of their value. This volume contains the reports of Mr. MONGAN, Mr. MEDHURST, and Mr. CAINE, on the trade of Tientsin, Shanghai, and Hankow respectively during the year 1868. The title of the blue-book in question is somewhat calculated to mislead, for it purports to contain "Commercial Reports from Her MAJESTY'S Consuls in China and Siam, 1869;" whereas, though dated last year, the reports from China actually refer to the previous twelve months, and only that of Mr. KNOX from Bangkok really includes the trade of last year.

To begin with Tientsin, we learn from Mr. MONGAN that the direct home trade of this port steadily increases. This is not to be wondered at, since Tientsin is now the principal market in China for cotton piece goods, and these goods are laid down much cheaper when shipped direct from England to this port than when received indirectly through Hong Kong or Shanghai. In 1868 the net importation of Grey Shirtings into Tientsin was 1,393,377 pieces, out of 4,690,890, the total imports into China. He estimates the average cost of conveyance of grey shirtings by direct shipment from England at 12s. per bale, while the average cost of transport from Shanghai to Tientsin is 15s. 10d. per bale. He therefore very naturally advocates direct shipment of cotton fabrics from England to Tientsin. The tendency of trade at this port has generally been to an increased sale of British goods, a diminished employment of British sellers, and a large and increased employment of British carriers, leading naturally to the withdrawal of purely mercantile and the establishment of steamer and other shipping agencies in Tientsin.

Mr. MEDHURST'S report on the trade of Shanghai is most elaborate, and we can only afford space for a few of its most important features. The first thing that attracts attention is the enormous increase in the importation of English cotton manufactures, which in 1868 reached a total value of 17,429,000 taels, against 9,900,000 taels in the previous year; and of this large increase the principal part is in grey shirtings. Of course the re-exports are heavy, some 8,000,000 taels' worth of Shirtings being merely landed in Shanghai to be forwarded to Hankow or Tientsin; still the increase is satisfactory. White shirtings, which in the previous year had fallen off, have now regained their position, and T-cloths are in improved demand. On the whole, the prospect for cotton goods is encouraging, but woollens show a decline. The decrease on these goods appears to have been progressive for the past three years. They seem to be of too expensive a nature to compete successfully with the padded cotton clothing to which the Chinese are so partial, and until they can be presented on the market at a more moderate rate the demand for such goods must continue to flag, and the trade remain stagnant. Speaking of the trade generally, Mr. MEDHURST says that the growing share which Chinese speculators are taking in it is a remarkable feature of the general aspect of trade. The Chinese already show that they possess advantages over foreigners by reason of the economy with which they can keep up their establishments; and they accordingly enter very largely into rivalry, both for the home trade and the trade from the coast ports. The total foreign trade of Shanghai during the year 1868 amounted to 89,360,772 taels, against 75,798,608 taels in 1867. And the British trade alone in 1868 very nearly equalled the entire foreign trade of the port in 1867.

Hankow comes next. Here we also find a satisfactory increase in the imports of English cotton manufactures, though American and Dutch goods show a decline. Grey shirtings and T-cloths are in good demand, the latter being especially favoured as bearing a close resemblance to native manufactures, while they are—as Mr. CAINE shows by a comparative calculation—about 7½ per cent. cheaper. In Hankow, as in Shanghai, woollens show a falling off. Mr. CAINE considers that although the general trade of the port has improved the foreign merchants at Hankow have not benefited much by it, as nearly all the goods required for the large province of Szechuen are now purchased by Chinese in Shanghai, so that any increase only affects the river carrying trade. Still, the effect on commerce generally must be beneficial. The Report on the trade of Bangkok for last year we reserve for a separate notice.

ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF FINE ARTS, PARIS.

(FROM OUR PARIS CORRESPONDENT.)

Those who desire to see Paris at its best should come at once, the season has been behindhand, and the greater part of April was gloomy enough, but at the present moment the boulevards, gardens, and parks, are exquisitely beautiful, while the temperature is just warm enough for comfort. There is another reason why a visit is peculiarly pleasant at this season—the great May meeting is now open for six weeks; it does not resemble the May meetings of London, with the exception of those held in Piccadilly and in the neighbourhood of Pall Mall East; it is the grand artistic reunion where all classes of Paris, from the quartier Saint Germain to the bouses, are to be seen thoroughly at home.

The annual exhibition of pictures, sculptures, engraving, &c., is always large, for it represents at once all the arts and a very large industry, the largest of its kind in the world; and as artists of all nations contribute more or less, the visitor gets glimpses of the styles of all nations. This year the Salon, or Exhibition, presents a new feature, the election of the juries, and, consequently, the acceptance or rejection of works sent in; the hanging, the award of the medals, all the management, in fact, has been left to the artists themselves, and they have adopted in its entirety the simple rule of alphabetical in arrangement as far as it could be carried out. There is this year no principal room, and consequently no preference, except as regards height from the ground and favourable lights. It has been said that the Exhibition is always large, but no one who is not acquainted with the Continent would be likely to imagine how large. In 1853 the number of works was considerably below 2,000, in 1864 it had grown to 3,000, in 1868 and 1869 it reached 4,000, and this year it amounts to 5,434. Very nearly 7,000 works were sent in, and about 1,200 rejected, although the jury of admission was unusually considerate.

It is not easy to imagine such a collection, the oil pictures alone cover the walls of three large and sixteen or eighteen small rooms; and the water colour and other drawings, engravings, lithographs, architectural plans and drawings, fill several other rooms and two long galleries looking on the enclosed garden.

One of the first facts that strikes the visitor on entering is the immense size of many of the pictures; this is not a recommendation in itself, but it shows two things—first, that there is a great demand for the decoration of public buildings; and, secondly, that French artists are not afraid of designing on a large scale. Few large pictures are remarkably successful, but the Exhibition will prove to any one with an educated eye that the drawing of the figure here is good; the composition and the colour are far from being equally satisfactory, although considerable improvement is certainly taking place in the latter respect. The greatest want in the French school is the absence of religious, highly poetic, or deep sentiment of any kind; its merits, general, good drawing, admirable execution, and harmonious though not brilliant colouring.

An effect of the great attention paid to drawing is the production of an immense number of studies of the nude, they cannot be called pictures, for they tell no tale, represent no sentiment, and as they are generally life size, and not one of a dozen unobjectionable, it must be admitted that they sadly vulgarise the Exhibition. Each year generally produces one or more wonderfully painted examples of this kind of work, which deserve and obtain great attention, but on this occasion we have not found one of high quality; on the other hand, there are several nude figures introduced into compositions, true pictures, sound in drawing and admirable in expression.

An excellent point in the present exhibition is the absence of battle pieces, that is, large pretentious compositions, all uniforms and smoke; of military episodes there are many, and some of them are admirable. One by an Englishman, Mr. Walker, born at Calcutta (as the catalogue says), is extremely clever. The great strength of the French school lies in compositions of small size, modern, historical, sentimental, and domestic scenes. Portraiture is also cultivated with great success; and there are many excellent landscapes which present a contrast to our pictures of the same class in two ways: first, from the difference of the country generally depicted; and, secondly, from the manner of treatment, which is smoother and more finished, but more conventional than ours. Of late years great attention has been paid to Oriental subjects, ancient and modern, and in the treatment of these French artists have been forced out of their general low tone of colour, and blaze forth brilliantly. Nothing can present a more delightful contrast to the often crowded picture galleries than the central garden, which is devoted to sculpture, of which there are nearly 700 samples, many of them admirable. The Exhibition remains open till the 20th of June, but will be closed for a week as usual towards the end of the present month, when it reopens after that vacation; all the works to which medals have been awarded are labelled, and thus an additional interest is given to the Exhibition.

THE OPIUM QUESTION.

Sir John Bowring, formerly Governor of Hong Kong, has written the following to the Pall Mall Gazette, conveying his opinion on the effects of Opium smoking on the Chinese:—

"It has been long known that the poppy has been and is cultivated largely in at least five Chinese provinces, and in the earlier edicts it was less to the use of opium than to the 'oozing out' of the sycee silver in payment for the 'foreign drug' that the objections were urged. It was and is notorious that many of the decrees against the importation of opium emanated from those who themselves consumed it. Employed in excess there can be no doubt of its being deleterious and dangerous, but its mischiefs have been much exaggerated. I caused statistics to be prepared when I was Governor of Hong Kong, and it was shown that there were fewer deaths among the 60,000 natives who smoked opium than among the 600 Europeans addicted to drinking. Among forty of my own dependents and servants there was only one who used the drug to excess—nor let it be forgotten that opium has to a very large extent banished intoxicating liquors, formerly much used in China. The drunkard is led to commit every sort of violence; the effects of opium are much less injurious—they who smoke it are delivered over to delicious though delirious dreams, but the community suffers little from these excesses. I believe that no legislation will prevent an indulgence which may be called national, and were Indian opium prohibited and its supply checked, the vacuum would be soon filled up from other quarters. Any increase upon the heavy duties now levied in China will but give greater encouragement to smuggling, especially along the extended coast and amid the many islands of the China sea, and the almost universal corruption of the Custom-house officers."

PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE OPIUM TRADE.

(May 10th.) Mr. KINNAIRD presented a petition, signed by Dr. Lockhart and several missionaries in China, against the continuance of the opium trade.

Sir W. LAWSON rose to move that the House condemns the system by which a large portion of the Indian revenue is raised from opium. He said this subject involved the happiness of great multitudes of people, and had never been fairly discussed in that House for twenty-seven years. In 1843, when it was last before the House, Lord Shaftesbury, then Lord Ashley, moved a resolution precisely similar to that which he was moving. The Government of Sir Robert Peel did not venture to oppose it with a negative, but moved the previous question. Lord Ashley was ultimately induced to withdraw his motion, on the statement of Sir R. Peel that negotiations were pending on the subject, and that such motion, if it were carried, might seriously interfere with negotiations. No change had taken place in the system which Lord Ashley condemned, but there was a change in the Government of India which warranted him in bringing forward the question at the present time. The opium sold by the Indian Government was not a medical opium to soothe human pain and suffering. The evidence of Sir Benjamin Brodie and twenty-four other eminent physicians, of Mr. Marjoribanks, for many years in the service of the East India Company, and of many other persons who had had opportunity of witnessing its effects, went to show that it inflicted the most serious injury on the human race by destroying the moral and intellectual faculties of those who used it, and leading to idleness, poverty, and an early death. The member for Elgin (Mr. G. Duff) in his budget speech last year explained very clearly the system on which this traffic was carried on, and acknowledged that the Government were actual dealers in this opium, about half of which was produced in Bengal and half in Bombay. In 1800 only about 4,000 chests were imported into China, whereas now the importation was more than 75,000 chests. Previous to 1860 all the opium was smuggled into China; and it appeared from the evidence before the select committee that nine-tenths of the China merchants engaged in the traffic. Great efforts were made by our representatives to legalise this traffic with the Chinese Government; but they stood out against it, and went so far as to seize £2,000,000 worth of opium which belonged to British merchants, and destroyed it. It was to avenge that insult, as we call it, that the war of 1839 was commenced, and which was concluded by the treaty of Nanking, in 1842. Under that treaty they had obtained $12,000,000 as the cost of the war, and $3,000,000 due to merchants, besides the value of the opium destroyed. The trade, however, still continued to be carried on with a certain amount of success, but our other trade did not go on in as satisfactory a manner. In 1854 the imports of our manufactures by the Chinese were less than in 1835. Things went on till 1857 in this manner, when we entered into that Lorcha war which everybody will remember. That war was carried on in a horrible manner, the result being that they obtained the treaty of Tien-tsin. In that treaty, for the first time, a duty of 10 per cent. was put on opium, and though the Chinese had earnestly solicited that it should be 20 per cent., the English Government would not consent. He might be told that the Chinese were not in earnest in desiring to put a stop to the traffic. They had proved themselves in earnest in 1834, when they sacrificed two millions of money; and if they were not in earnest why should they continue to put out proclamations against it? He pleaded for the abolition of this traffic, not only for the injury which it did the Chinese, but for the injury which it did England. Their conduct in this matter had made them bitterly hated in the East, and their missionaries were disliked because they were looked upon as the allies of the enemies of the people. The right hon. member for Bucks had once asked what the House thought of those who speculated in shares and called it progress. In like manner he asked what they thought of a Christian nation which became a wholesale druggist, which drenched with poison the inhabitants, and which dignified that proceeding with the high-sounding title of opening up China. It had been said that the spirit trade at home was as bad as the opium trade. On that question he could not pronounce an opinion; but he said that two blacks did not make a white, and that the opium trade must be judged by itself. The real argument of the honourable member the Under Secretary for India would be that they must have the money, and that their Indian finances would go to wreck without it. It appeared to him that they would go to wreck already, and if it was said that they could not do without opium, he (Sir W. Lawson) asked how they could do with it. He might be told that this was an abstract resolution. He knew that the Government and the House hated abstract resolutions; he hated them himself—(a laugh)—but he was unable to see any other way in which he could have fairly brought this question before the House, except by moving an abstract resolution. He asked the House to say that the Government should not pursue the ruinous and profligate course of sacrificing the honour of England and the welfare of the unoffending inhabitants of China for the sake of the profits of a few merchants, and of filling the Indian exchequer.

Mr. R. N. FOWLER seconded the motion, and contended that the evils produced by opium were infinitely greater than those caused by alcohol. The hon. member proceeded to complain that, while the action of the Government in the case of spirits was in the direction of checking consumption by increasing the price, in regard to opium everything was done to increase its consumption by the Chinese, and that we were answerable for encouraging them to consume it. Its cultivation in India, too, had the effect of demoralising our native subjects.

Sir C. WINGFIELD opposed the motion. Pointing out inconsistencies in the arguments of the mover and seconder, he denied that the Chinese Government and people looked upon the opium traffic as immoral. At any rate, that Government had shown their desire to derive a revenue from it, and it was an undoubted fact that the cultivation had very much increased in China during the last twelve years. It was not the fact that we were responsible for the introduction of opium into China, the drug having been in use from time immemorial in that and all Asiatic countries. He denied also that its moderate use was any more injurious than the moderate use of spirits. So far from the opium cultivation producing demoralisation in India, he knew from personal experience that it was very popular amongst the native cultivators of the soil. In his opinion there was no halting-place between the abandonment of the present system and the complete suppression of the manufacture. Our opium revenue was in a very precarious condition, and he believed that if the hon. baronet had deferred his motion for a few years it would have been rendered altogether unnecessary. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. M'ARTHUR thought the House was much indebted to the hon. member who had brought forward the motion. In China there was the greatest opposition to the opium traffic, which we had no right to force upon the natives there. He believed that in that traffic were involved consequences the most destructive—worse even than the slave trade with all its horrors. If we had not cultivated the opium trade as we had, that magnificent country of 400,000,000 would have taken our manufactures, and the markets of Manchester and the North would have been greatly benefited thereby. The hon. gentleman then referred to the commercial aspect of the question. The finances of India at the present moment were in a very unsatisfactory condition, and he believed that result had been mainly brought about by the opium traffic with China.

Mr. C. B. DENISON felt sure that if the resolution of the hon. baronet rested upon moral grounds alone very few members would hesitate to go into the lobby with him. But the motion involved a much larger question in connection with the trade of India and China, and the House must not conceal from itself that a large portion of the revenue of India was derived from the opium trade in China. What would the Chancellor of the Exchequer say if some one were to move that the malt duty was pernicious and should be done away with? and yet many persons in this country held that view; for the better and cheaper beer was made the less would be the temptation to consume gin. In the present state of the finances of India, and when there was a great outery against the imposition of a new income-tax, the passing of an abstract resolution like that of the hon. baronet would have the most disastrous effect.

Mr. FOWLER demurred to the doctrine laid down by the hon. member who had just spoken, for it seemed to reverse the maxim that had been uttered with such effect in that House two years ago—"Be just, and fear not." If the opium trade with China were unjust and unrighteous, they should not sanction it for the sake of the revenue of India. He would far rather sanction an Imperial guarantee for an Indian loan than maintain an unrighteous traffic. He freely admitted that the question of revenue was not without difficulty, but when a great moral principle was involved, the House should not be deterred by difficulties, but face them boldly.

Mr. M. CHAMBERS remarked upon the thin state of the House when so important a question was under discussion, and said the real matter to be considered was whether it was justifiable to poison the Chinese for the sake of money. The small trader might as well try to justify the sale of poison to the poor of his neighbourhood because he lived upon the profits derived from the sale. He believed that if the House passed the resolution the country would endorse it.

Mr. GRANT DUFF doubted whether the hon. baronet was aware of the tremendous character of the proposition which he had submitted to the House. During the last five years for which we had returns the average net revenue derived from opium was £5,781,890. In 1867-68 it was £7,041,447; and that sum was not a tax levied upon our own subjects, but a contribution derived through the luxuries of another people, for whom the British Parliament had no more direct responsibility than the American House of Representatives. Suppose the resolution carried, one of three results should follow—either a subsidy of equal amount to India, an enormous new tax levied on it, or such slow progress with the works of improvement which we had undertaken as to lead every well-wisher of India to the verge of despair. He put aside the first two as impossible, and, if we were compelled to adopt the other, the question would be whether we should not give up India altogether. But was it true that, in allowing the opium trade we, as a nation, were guilty of the terrible thing alleged? And was it true that that which was called an accursed thing was an accursed thing at all? The Indian Government derived revenue from opium under three heads:—First, under the head of excise, which was small; secondly, from what was known as the Bengal monopoly, which was considerable; and thirdly, from the duties imposed on opium passing through the port of Bombay, which were also large. As to discouraging the traffic, he could hardly see what more they could do to discourage it than they had done, unless they forbade its cultivation altogether. As to the question whether opium was really the accursed thing which some supposed it to be, he was afraid that he would have no chance of converting to his views the mover and seconder of the motion. He asserted, in the most positive manner, that there was not conclusive evidence to show that opium was anything like so great an evil to its chief consumers, the Chinese, as some supposed. The hon. gentleman then gave extracts from various sources in support of his views, and said that, on the whole, his impression was that the importation of opium into China was not a misfortune at all. This, however, might be said, that, if opium was indulged in to excess, the opium eater was simply an enemy to himself, and was in no way dangerous to those around him. He had observed during this debate that the opium revenue laboured under an unjust feeling of prejudice, derived from its past history. Several members had spoken as if opium were still introduced into China illegally, whereas it was a perfectly legal trade; and if there were a large party against it, there was also a large party in its favour. He did not think it would be desirable, in order to confer an imaginary benefit on China, which would be immediately neutralised by the action of the Chinese themselves, in growing opium to throw into confusion the finances of India, to introduce discontent into the country, as well as throw upon the shoulders of the British Parliament the whole responsibility of Indian debt. He would therefore move the previous question.

Mr. KINNAIRD supported the motion.

Mr. DALRYMPLE said the question was, did the Chinese want opium or not, or did they like it? Wherever it was supplied from it mattered little to them, provided they could get it good and cheap. All the evils which the hon. members had described arose from the abuse, and not from the use, of the opium. All nations had their stimulant or narcotic, whether it were bang, or hashish, or opium, or gin; and so that the Chinese wanted opium, he did not see that India should be shut out of the Chinese market.

Mr. GLADSTONE pointed out that, if the House affirmed this resolution, they must be prepared to enter into a matter of account with the Indian Government, and to determine, on their own responsibility, on what new basis its financial relations should rest. He reminded the House that the state of things which had led to the discreditable transactions of twenty or thirty years ago had entirely disappeared. Then, the Chinese Government were determinedly opposed to the introduction of opium upon any terms; but they had now adopted the wise resolution of not attempting to struggle against so strong an appetite as that which possessed a large portion of their people for opium. From the moment the Chinese Government adopted that resolution, this subject became detached from political considerations. A resolution of this kind could not be adopted without the most careful preliminary inquiry, which must embrace many branches which his hon. friend had not touched. The first would be as to the nature and use of opium, and whether it was analogous to other stimulants in which a large portion of mankind indulged, or whether there was something peculiar in its nature, so as to separate it from tobacco, alcohol, and all other stimulants. He knew that horrible and heart-rending descriptions of the results of the excessive use of opium might be produced; but at the same time there was a great deal of evidence to show that, although in China its use in excess might be as alcohol was here, the most fertile source of disgrace, misery, sin, and crime, yet there was a legitimate and reasonable use of opium, just as there was a legitimate and reasonable use of alcohol. He asked if it was possible that this great assembly could, at a moment's notice, sweep away fifteen per cent. of the Indian revenue, and shrink from the responsibility of pointing out the policy by which the financial difficulty created by that act could be met. The Indian Government derived this six millions of revenue from the inhabitants of another country, who did not complain of it; and what right had this House to take that sum away from it, or to deprive the people of India who were engaged in the cultivation of opium of the means of their support? If this resolution were carried, it would not put a stop to the growth of opium, but rather by the removal of an immense burden would give an enormous stimulus to the trade. Even if his hon. friend should get its growth in India prohibited, that would not affect the north-west, and the result would be that the enormous premium of 600 rupees per chest, or 8s. per lb. weight, would be given to smugglers. He trusted that the House would not affirm a resolution of this kind, which ought not to be adopted without preliminary inquiry of the most complete kind.

After a few words in opposition to the motion from Mr. HENLEY, and a reply from Sir W. LAWSON, the House divided—

CONSULAR ETIQUETTE IN CHINA.

(13th.) Colonel SYKES asked the Under-Secretary of State for War whether the Foreign-office had received, officially or otherwise, confirmation of the following statement in the North China Herald and Supreme Court and Consular Gazette of the 15th of March, 1870:—

"From Hankow we have received the strange news that both the English and the United States Consuls, when calling on Viceroy Li, were refused admittance except by the side door, while the acting French Consul was recognised on terms of equality, and obtained entrance by the middle or large door. It is just possible that the determined aspect assumed by the French Government on two or three occasions lately had paved the way for its representative at this time. Neither the United States nor the English Consul availed himself of Li's condescension to be visited by the side door;"

and whether the Foreign Office would cause inquiry into this matter.

Mr. OTWAY replied that the Foreign-office had received no official intelligence of the circumstance referred to by his hon. and gallant friend. If, however, his hon. and gallant friend would take it upon himself to assert that any indignity had been perpetrated upon the Consular officers, it would, of course, be the duty of the Foreign-office to inquire into the matter. He was, however, bound to say that the representations of this nature made by the Chinese newspapers had not always been verified upon inquiry. (Hear, hear.) He might observe that he was not sufficiently versed in the etiquette prevalent in that part of the world to which his hon. and gallant friend alluded to know whether admission by a side door instead of a middle or large door could be regarded as an indignity; but he did know that in European Courts it was often a matter of special distinction to be admitted by the side door. ("Hear, hear," and much laughter.)

THE OPIUM DEBATE.

(THE TIMES.)

We cannot judge severely those members who fled from the unpractical sentimentalities talked by Sir Wilfrid Lawson and his supporters, for everybody could predict from the outset the fate of the motion. The debate has, however, for the present, satisfactorily disposed of the question, not alone for intelligent politicians, but even for those estimable persons who are usually influenced by appeals to sentiment. The motion "that this House condemns the system by which a large portion of the Indian revenue is raised from opium" was brought forward, opportunely enough, at a time when we learn from India that the opium trade is in a precarious condition. For some time past there has been a decline in the price of the Indian drug in the Chinese markets. This has contributed to Sir Richard Temple's embarrassments, and has prompted him to estimate the yield from this source for the present year at £1,000,000 less than the actual returns of last year. The causes are various; but the main one is unquestionably the increased growth of opium in China, because, although the drug under the Chinese system of culture and preparation is inferior to that which is grown and prepared under the control of the Indian Government, it is improving in quality and becoming cheaper. Year by year the Chinese are habituated more and more to their native product and become more unwilling to pay the high price still demanded for the luxuries of Malwa and Patna. The demand steadily lessening brings down the price, and Indian financiers look forward to the possible, and it may be not distant, depression of the market value to a point at which it will be no longer profitable to grow or export the drug. It appears from the recent prices telegraphed, and the arguments lately adduced by the commercial members of the Legislative Council at Calcutta, that the margin between the present rate and the lowest remunerative price has come to be very narrow indeed.

The Government of India deals in two different ways with the opium that is exported from its centres of commerce. In Bengal it has long established a monopoly of the preparation and sale; granting licences to the cultivators on condition that the raw material is brought into the Government depots at Patna and Benares, and selling the drug when prepared for use to the exporting merchants. In Bombay a transit duty is levied on the opium which is grown in the native States of the interior and finds its way through our territory to the sea. It is remarkable that in the debate on Tuesday little was said by Sir Wilfrid Lawson and his supporters about the latter case, probably because not even the most susceptible philanthropist could be induced to believe that we are encouraging the traffic in a commodity by laying an enormous tax upon it. Indeed, Mr. Kinnaird presented a petition before the debate commenced which demanded the substitution of an ordinary tax for the present Government sales; and Sir Wilfrid Lawson himself drew a distinction between the opium revenue and the taxes on strong drinks, on the ground "that the Government themselves were dealers in opium, while they merely derived a revenue from the sale of spirits." This is a sample of the economical and political wisdom of those who argue against the traffic. It reminds one of the pious silversmith in the Spanish novel, whose horror of sacrilege was so great that nothing could induce him to purchase a chalice and crucifix from a lucky church-breaker, but who, nevertheless, was quite willing to oblige the thief, for a consideration, by melting down the holy plate. When Macaulay quoted this story to illustrate the inconsistencies of Sir Robert Peel's Government in their proposals to tax slave-grown sugar, he added, "You talk of morality! What can be more immoral than to bring ridicule on the very name of morality by drawing distinctions where there are no differences?" The illustration and the application are not less pertinent to-day. It is clear that the profit exacted by the Government in Bengal upon the opium as it passes from the cultivator to the exporter operates precisely as a transit or export duty would do to raise the price. If the latter be legitimate, consistency can find no fault with the former, except that it is a somewhat clumsy and antiquated process. But it is plain, as Mr. Gladstone argued, that though Sir Wilfrid Lawson dallied with these minor gradations of guilt, he would, in fact, be content with nothing less than the total extinction of the opium revenue and the absolute prohibition of the manufacture.

For this extreme course, oppressive to the cultivators of India and disastrous to the financial stability of the Empire, the supporters of the motion failed to show any reasonable pretence. They put aside with most philanthropic nonchalance the question of revenue, as though we had no moral obligations towards our Indian subjects, and no duties to perform in India for which money is sorely needed. To them, perhaps, it may appear a light thing to pause in our works of improvement in India, and to let men die by millions in Orissa, because the money that is required for these obligations of our own is obtained by taxing a drug on which the inhabitants of a distant country sometimes get intoxicated. The Chinese surely may be trusted to look after their own interests, and whatever English merchants may once have been inclined to do, they are not likely in these times to force opium upon unwilling purchasers. In fact, the Chinese have settled the question for themselves; they are growing their own opium now, and if they were never to get an ounce more from India, they would only grow it more assiduously. Other countries, too, such as Persia and Siam, would take possession of the trade we had abandoned, and our only consolation in our difficulties would be that we had contented Sir Wilfrid Lawson, and given him a precedent for the total suppression of the liquor traffic in England. But, after all, who has proved that any benefit would result from this achievement? The testimony of medical authorities varies abundantly as to the effects of opium, and we are really asked to mulct ourselves, and to punish a nation, because some poor wretches yield to excess in their only pleasure. The case against opium is by no means so clear as Sir Wilfrid Lawson would have it, and we commend to his consideration the eloquent words of a distinguished statesman now no more,—"We may doubt whether it be a wise policy to exclude altogether from any country a drug which is often fatally abused, but which to those who use it rightly is one of the most precious boons vouchsafed by Providence to man—powerful to assuage pain, to soothe irritation, and to restore health."

(STANDARD.)

It is certain that the poppy was cultivated for its juice in China itself many centuries before our appearance in the East. Opium itself was imported from India and from other parts of Asia into China long before it was possible for us to influence the traffic. This, of course, is no sufficient reason that we should take up the trade; but it is a very good plea in mitigation of the sweeping charge which Sir W. Lawson made on Tuesday night against this nation, which amounted to nothing less than this, that England had invented for her own profit a new source of demoralisation which she had forced upon the Chinese.

That 300,000,000 survive many centuries of opium-smoking is a sufficient proof at least that the poison is a slow one, and the drug itself is less deleterious than Sir W. Lawson requires us to believe. Some of his own figures, quoted to give greater force to his denunciation of the habit of opium-smoking, furnish the best refutation of his argument. About 50 per cent. of the Chinese people, it is declared, and about 75 per cent. of the Chinese soldiers, are consumers of opium. Now this would represent an impossible state of things if opium were always and in each case a poison. We are forced to the conclusion, therefore, that Sir W. Lawson has exaggerated the case against opium, just as he and his school have exaggerated the case against alcohol. The truth is, that opium smoking is an indulgence, like tobacco-smoking or dram-drinking—differing, indeed, in the degree to which it is injurious, but certainly not differing in kind. Both alcohol and nicotine are poison when taken in excess. As a rule, it is very doubtful whether there are more Chinese who take opium to excess than there are Londoners who abuse the use of spirituous liquors. We do not put this forward as any justification of the opium traffic, but as evidence of the absurd exaggerations into which Sir W. Lawson would lead us. It is no argument, we admit, in favour of obtaining a revenue from opium in India that we obtain a revenue in England from spirits; but it is only right, for the cause of truth and of sober morality, that the two things should be put on the same footing. It is clearly immoral and wrong that any country should encourage and should profit by a traffic in what is vicious and degrading; but the question is whether the recognition of opium as a means of indulgence by the Chinese is worse than the recognition of gin or brandy as an indulgence to the indigenous Briton.

The only question which remains is, whether the Indian Government ought to continue the opium monopoly as a means of revenue. There is a good deal to be said, of course, against such a policy, which is not the less true because it comes from an advocate of a prohibitive liquor law. Without mounting to the heights to which Sir W. Lawson invites us, there is something undignified in a Government raising a revenue by such means, although when we come to examine the financial resources of Governments we do not usually find that they are of an exalted, or necessarily of a moral character. Governments are too prone to say, with the Emperor Vespasian, Anne olet? when it is a question of the undignified character of the sources whence their revenue comes. After all we have to consider not so much the moral sense of the people of England as that of the people of India, who alone receive the benefit of the opium revenue. Before the Indian Government deprives itself of the five millions a year which the opium monopoly produces it should ask itself how its place is to be supplied in a period of perpetual deficits. It is even doubtful whether the discontinuance of the monopoly would be beneficial to morals, for it is certain that if the Government abandoned the cultivation of the drug it would be taken up by private individuals. The first effects of free trade in opium would unquestionably be a larger production and a decreased price of the drug. The individual cultivators would be satisfied with much less than that which is exacted by the Government, and the competition would infallibly lead to a reduction of cost. What would Sir W. Lawson propose that we should do in such a case? Are we to take on ourselves the duty, not only of preventing the growth of opium in India by the private cultivators, and thus of interfering with native industry, but also of maintaining a preventive service on the coast of China, in the interest of Chinese morals?

(GLOBE.)

The time has gone by when such a debate as that which took place on Tuesday evening in the House of Commons on the opium question can possibly have much effect in maintaining or diminishing the importation of the Indian drug into China. It matters comparatively little now whether hon. members consider the trade moral or immoral. All that Sir Wilfrid Lawson desires is being gradually effected by the action of the unalterable law of commerce that consumers will buy in the cheapest market. The cultivation of the poppy has of late years largely increased in China, and whereas formerly it was confined to the provinces of Szechuen and Yunan, it is now also very generally grown in Shansi, Mongolia, and Manchuria. With the increase of the cultivation the price of the native drug has diminished, and at the present time it is sold for just half the price of Malwa—an argument in its favour which appeals powerfully to the frugal Celestials. As a natural consequence, the Indian drug has disappeared from the inland markets of China, and is even to be met with at Shanghai and the other ports of import, adulterated with native-grown opium. With the rapid spread of opium-smoking among all classes, and the increasing manufacture of the native drug, it cannot be doubted that before long the importation of the Indian opium will be reduced to a minimum. It is doubtless an evil that the revenue of India should be dependent to the extent of £6,000,000 upon the opium trade, but a far greater evil would result from throwing open the trade in opium to the population of India without control or restriction. So far from the monopoly increasing the quantity of opium supplied to the Chinese, it restricts the amount. The revenue impost is a burden which helps to restrain the commerce in this particular article within certain limits. If the Government were to withdraw its prohibitive regulation the trade in opium would be quadrupled, and the Chinese would be more demoralised than they are at present.

The British taxpayer has done many noble and disinterested things for the sake of principle, and if as strong a case could be made out for the suppression of the sale of opium as was established for the emancipation of slaves in the West Indies, his generosity would not be appealed to in vain. But we know of old that sentimental philanthropists are not always to be depended upon for accuracy of statement. It is their pardonable failing that, looking to the effect of this or that habit as developed in an extreme case, and arguing upon the principle that what has happened in one case may happen in others, they denounce the habit, whatever it may be, as an unqualified evil. In listening to Sir Wilfrid Lawson's attack upon opium, it was impossible to resist the suspicion that, with the best intentions, he was misrepresenting its action on the people of China, in the same way in which he has misrepresented the action of alcohol on Englishmen. There are bad examples amongst us of the abuse of beer and wine and spirits; but, gross and shocking as many of these cases are, they are exceptions, and comparatively, rare exceptions. One of the favourite illustrations of the "horrors" attending the use of fermented liquors is that the quantity drunk by such or such a number of working men in a year "would be sufficient to float a man-of-war." To people who do not reflect this is an alarming statement, though it really amounts to nothing more than a sum in addition. In like manner, it is to the same class of persons startling to hear that we are deriving a revenue of six millions sterling per annum by selling opium to the Chinese. But if we consider that there are between three and four hundred millions of Chinese, our revenue from opium sinks into a comparatively small affair. As a matter of fact, it appears that the abuse of opium amongst the Chinese is perhaps more rare than the abuse of fermented liquors amongst ourselves, and that it is not the "accursed thing" which Sir Wilfrid Lawson and his supporters pronounce it to be. One thing, at least, can be said of our dealings with it, as far as the Bengal monopoly, from which we derive the largest portion of our opium revenue, is concerned, and that is, that every effort is made in the factories to render it as pure as possible. The value of such precautions will be understood by any one who will so far tax his imagination as to realise what the probable result would be if our Home Government were to take as much pains to provide the British public with pure wine, beer, and spirits as the Indian Government takes to give the Chinese pure opium.

The agreement—to which we alluded in our last—between the China Submarine Telegraph and the Great Northern Companies has been signed, subject to approval at a general meeting to be called for the purpose. There is, however, but little doubt as to its confirmation, and consequently the Danish frigate with the Cella and Great Northern may be expected to start shortly with the cable to be laid between Shanghai and Hong Kong. The Times on this subject has the following :—

"In January last, on the publication of the prospectus of the Great Northern Telegraph, China and Japan Extension, Company, by Messrs. Hambro and Son, it was suggested that, instead of competition being established with the China Telegraph Company (Singapore to Hong Kong and Shanghai), an arrangement should be arrived at, so far as the routes of the two companies threatened to run side by side, for harmonious working between all the parties concerned. To-day an agreement has been entered into by which that most desirable object will be secured, competition being thus avoided between Hong Kong and Shanghai, where both companies intended to lay down a cable in connection with their other sections respectively to Singapore and to the Russian Coast. The cable between Hong Kong and Shanghai will now be laid and worked by the Great Northern Extension Company, and the net profits on the local traffic will be divided between the two companies after deduction of a fixed sum per annum for interest and working expenses."

A meeting of the Telegraph to India Company was held on the 9th inst., at which resolutions were passed to the effect that Sir R. M. Stephenson, Mr. P. P. Blyth, the Hon. J. Byng, Mr. W. Dent Sir W. H. Hall, and Mr. J. F. Leith be appointed liquidators for the purpose of winding up the affairs of the company, and authorising the liquidators to carry into effect the agreement between the company and Sir J. Anderson, acting on behalf of the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company, dated Jan. 2, 1869; and to transfer the whole of the business and property of the company (with certain exceptions) to the British Indian Telegraph Company, in consideration of receiving £37,500 in fully paid up shares, and empowering the liquidators to distribute the said shares and the proceeds of some of them among the members of the company.

At a general meeting of the Submarine Telegraph Company Sir J. Carmichael, the chairman, said the directors proposed to ask the shareholders for power to increase the capital to a sum not exceeding £400,000, and authorise them to lay down a new line of telegraphic communication between England and France. It was proposed to issue £73,225 stock pro rata to the shareholders, on the terms of £100 stock for £220 cash. The new cable would be laid by the end of July. The sanction of the Board of Trade would have to be obtained before the stock could be issued, but there would be no difficulty, as the company might be said to be in partnership with the Government. Resolutions approving the issue of the stock as proposed were carried.

The following, on the fluctuations in the Cable Companies, is from the Financier:—

"The panic in Submarine Cable Shares has gone to a length out of all reason, as is the way with panics in general. Experience has certainly not produced any facts which should warrant the shareholders rushing recklessly into the market and selling their holdings at a fall of 40, 50, and even 60 per cent. below the price they paid for them only three months ago. This extent of fall is calculated on the amount of the subscribed capital only; if the calculation be made on the amount of paid up capital, there is a far more considerable percentage of depreciation. The following comparison of prices will confirm this :—

	Prices. Jan. 15.	Now.
British Indian...	... 4¾ prem.	... 2 dis. ex bonus
British Indian Extension ...	... 2¼ prem.	... 3⅝ dis.
China Submarine	... —	... 2⅛ dis. (£2 paid)
Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta	... 4¼ prem.	... 2 dis.
British Australian	... —	... 3⅛ dis. (£3 paid)
West India and Panama ...	... ¾ prem.	... 2¾ dis.

"The China Submarine and the British-Australian have been brought out since the 15th January. All these shares are of £10 each, and the fall has therefore been nearly 60 per cent. in British-Indian Extension, and more than 60 per cent. in Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta. Both these cables will doubtless be laid successfully, and the Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta is expected to be completed early next month. British-Indian Extension shares can be bought at 36½ per cent. discount, and Falmouth and Malta at 20 per cent. discount. In each case there is no further liability. Again, the fact of British-Australian shares being at 32 per cent. discount on the nominal £10 share, and with a third of the capital paid up, is another of the 'anomalies of the Stock Exchange.' On British-Australian and on China Submarine shares, the Construction and Maintenance Company guarantee 5 per cent. during construction, and at the present price the investment appears more than usually tempting. The Australian Cable shares are the lowest of all in market price, and the fear of any competition between Australia and Java and Europe may be entirely banished from consideration. We have seen competition in the telegraphic service between Europe and America and between Europe and India; but the Australian Company must, by its very position, remain for many years complete master of the situation."

The Times of the 10th stated that the Pacific Mail Company propose abandoning the line from New York to San Francisco via Panama. This rumour has not yet assumed any reliable shape, and we can confidently assume that the company has no such intentions. The following extract from a New York paper was published in The Times:—

"So this immense institution, which paid eight millions of dollars to its stockholders, and built twelve million dollars worth of ships since 1856, is toppling to its fall. But in order to start the machine anew, and fill up the depleted coffers of the company, they are now at Washington, endeavouring to secure from Congress a grant of double their present subsidy between San Francisco, China, and Japan, on condition that they double the service. The duties at San Francisco on goods imported from China and Japan have increased for the past two years about $389,000 per annum. The duties collected in New York during the same time upon merchandise from China and Japan, transhipped or re-exported, amounted to about $375,000 per annum. By doubling the service, making a semi-monthly instead of a monthly line, the company expect to compete successfully with the Peninsular and Oriental, or any other subsidised foreign line, in carrying freight and passengers over the route. There is a strong effort being made to induce the passage of a Bill of this kind, and if any succeed it is probable this will; but there is doubt in every case, for a short yet, at least."

The fifth annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Mayar Coffee Company (Limited) was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, Mr. J. Carrington Palmer in the chair. The profit and loss account, as usual, showed the result of the crops of 1868 and 1869, and the balance sheet was made up to the 31st of March, 1870. After providing for £761 9s. 5d., the balance to the debit of profit and loss last year, and writing off £698 11s. 1d., proportion of suspense for outlay on new buildings, &c., the directors were enabled to pay a dividend of 3 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, and to carry forward £48 12s. 2d. to the next account.

The report of the National Provincial Bank of England announces a distribution at the same rate as for the last two years—viz., 4 per cent., and a bonus of 7 per cent., making, with the dividend paid in June, 21 per cent. for 1869, and leaving £25,000 to be carried forward. An issue of 22,500 new shares of £20 each, at £10 premium, has been resolved upon in consequence of the large increase in the business of the establishment.

The proposition brought forward last week by Lloyd's Committee for making losses payable in seven days after settlement instead of a month, as heretofore, was confirmed by a large majority.

Colonel Sykes, M.P., has been re-elected chairman of the East India Company for the year ensuing.

The following vessels are reported as passed from Port Said to Suez by the Canal:—Brazilian, Afrique, Lumnig; from Suez to Port Said, Magdala and the Vedetta (Italian navy).

The directors of the Messageries Imperiales announce that they will propose to the general meeting of shareholders about to be held to fix the dividend of 1869 at f.45.

Advices have been received from Mexico stating that about 2,700,000 Mexican dollars (£550,000) had left the city of Mexico and Zacatecas for Europe. They were expected at the coast in time to catch the English steamer due here about the 27th inst. The price remains at 4s. 11⅞d. per ounce.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The following is from Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson's Circular:—The market during the past few days has continued very flat, owing to the large sales by public auction last week, as also further sales advertised. Prices, however, are more regular, and some holders are standing off for better rates than those generally current at last public sale, but, on the other hand, the dealers will only buy when forced to do so. Foochow Congous: A few parcels of common Siftings realised at public sale 5¼d. to 5½d. per lb.; Common is still quoted at 11d. to 11¼d., and good common at 11¾d. per lb.; fair is saleable at 1s. to 1s. 0½d. per lb. In medium to fine a very limited business has been transacted, the holders waiting for higher rates. Black-leaf Congous: A break of inferior common has been sold at 10¾d. per lb., an improvement upon the forced price of last public sale. For good common to fair there are buyers at 1s. to 1s. 1d., but holders generally require an advance. A few parcels of medium to fine were printed in last public sale, but were not realised, bids being below the reserve prices affixed to them. Tayshan Congous: Nothing to report; the parcels on the market are chiefly common, and not sought for. Souchongs and Oolongs continue without enquiry. Scented Teas: A limited business has been transacted at slightly reduced rates for the lower grades; a fair demand still exists for the finer sorts, which are scarce. Green Teas: For anything classed as fine there is still an enquiry, but the commoner grades remain heavy of sale. The next China auction is advertised for the 17th inst.

SILK.

The market has further improved during the last few days, and Tsatlees especially are in demand at 32s. for best chop 3rd., 28s. Red Peacocks, 25s. common No. 5. There is also more general inquiry for other classes, and altogether the market is very firm, with an upward tendency for neglected silks. The deliveries have improved during the last few days.

COFFEE.

The market for Plantation Ceylon has been steady throughout the week at the advance noted in our last report; the offers, which have not been very extensive, being nearly all taken at previously ruling rates. Present prices are:—Triage, 49s. to 55s.; small grey and dull, 59s. to 60s. 6d.; low middling to middling ditto, 61s. to 65s.; small coloury, 61s. to 63s.; middling ditto, 65s. 6d. to 71s.; good to fine middling, 73s. to 78s.; good, 82s.; peaberry, 80s. 6d. to 83s. In Native Ceylon the business has been limited at the following rates:—Small, 48s. 6d.; small good ordinary, 49s. 6d.; real good ordinary, 50s. 6d; good to fine bold pale, 54s. to 56s. 5d.; peaberry, 55s. to 57s. 6d. We note the sale of about 300 bags Singapore:—Mixed, at 46s. to 48s. 6d.; fine bold yellow and brown Bonthyne, at 62s. to 68s. 6d. There have been no offers of other East India descriptions. The export deliveries have at length shown some improvement, wholly in Ceylon, other kinds being again smaller, and for the week are 250 tons more than last year; the deliveries for home use are also larger than last year by nearly the same amount, and as the landings are 400 tons less, the surplus in stock is thereby reduced to about 6,000 tons.

The quantity of Ceylon Coffee afloat for Great Britain is estimated as follows:—Plantation, 293,954 cwt., against 304,863 cwt. at the corresponding date of 1869; Native, 31,321 cwt., against 51,290 cwt. The quantity afloat for the Continent is 2,694 cwt. Plantation against 10,179 cwt., and 1,845 cwt. Native against 19,454 cwt. The quantity of Coffee landed in the eighteen weeks ended May 7, 1870, was, of Ceylon, 8,792 tons, against 10,133 tons during the corresponding period of 1869; of all descriptions, 12,649 tons, against 16,609 tons. The quantity entered for home consumption was, of Ceylon, 3,535 tons, against 3,809 tons; of all descriptions, 6,137 tons, against 6,464 tons. The quantity exported was, of Ceylon, 6,994 tons, against 8,637 tons; of all descriptions, 11,738 tons, against 16,429 tons. The stock on May 7 was, of Ceylon, 12,127 tons, against 8,682 tons; of all descriptions, 18,993 tons, against 12,936 tons.

SUGAR.

The market since we last reported has been extremely quiet, the inquiry being very limited, and the few transactions effected have been at a decline of 6d. to 1s. per cwt. At auction there has been no business in East India, 6,149 bags unclayed Manila and 726 bags low brown China (duty 4s.) were offered and bought, the former at 21s. 6d. to 22s., the latter at 19s. By private contract the only sale has been of 24,000 bags unclayed Taal at 19s.; afloat, the cargo per Eliza Thornton, 1,700 baskets Java No. 12½ has been sold at 27s. 6d. for the United Kingdom.

The quantity of Sugar landed in the eighteen weeks ended May 7, 1870, was, of Penang, 792 tons, against 1,126 tons in the corresponding period of 1869; of Manila, Java, and China, 7,338 tons, against 17,970 tons; the quantity entered for home consumption was of Penang, 876 tons, against 1,230 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 8,706 tons, against 4,956 tons. The quantity exported was, of Penang, 35 tons, against 42 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 1,490 tons, against 700 tons. The stock on May 7 was, of Penang, 2,211 tons, against 183 tons; of Manila, Java, and China, 32,982 tons, against 44,058 tons.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—The dulness in the market continues and has resulted in a further decline of 10s. for Ceylon, the present quotation being £39 to £39 10s. The quantity of Ceylon afloat for the United Kingdom is estimated at 36,086 tons, against 22,057 tons last year, and 18,475 tons in 1868; to the Continent, 2,566 tons, against 750 tons last year.

CAMPHOR.—Prices for China have declined, 50 cases having been sold at 82s. 6d.; in Japan no transactions are reported.

CINNAMON.—The only offer since our last report, 38 bales Ceylon low coarse third sort, was sold at 1s. Chips: Of 688 bags Ceylon offered 420 bags sold, low middling chips and thin bark, at 4¼d.; common coarse bark at 2¼d. to 2½d.

CUTCH.—The offers have comprised 852 bags Pegu, of which 670 bags good quality were sold at 22s. 6d. to 23s., one lot at 23s. 6d. per cwt.

FIBRE.—We note the sale of 10 bales Ceylon Kitool at 7¾d. to 8d.

GALLS.—There have been no transactions at public sales; privately 100 cases China have realised 47s. 6d.; no business in Japan.

GUMS.—Benjamin: 47 cases saved from the wreck of the Benvenue, from Penang, sold with all faults at 85s. to 89s. Copal: At auction 8 cases Manila were offered and withdrawn, and 12 barrels low rough Ceylon were bought in at 5s. Damar: At public sale 17 cases Singapore sold, mixed pale and dark at 62s. 6d. to 68s., one case pale at 77s., and 20 cases good clean partly bold Ceylon were bought in at 60s. per cwt.

GAMBIER.—The market has become flat and a decline has been submitted to, 130 tons having been sold ex ship at 16s. 9d. In auction 1,025 bales were bought in at 16s. 9d. to 17s., of 225 bales pressed cubes 77 bales sold at 18s., and 305 baskets cubes sold, fine pale Rhio at 19s. 9d. to 20s., medium at 18s. 6d. For arrival 100 tons, March sailing, have been sold at 16s. 7½d., with all faults.

GUTTA-PERCHA.—The sale is reported of 5 tons Singapore whole at 10d. to 10½d., pieces at 6d., block at 5¾d. per lb.

HEMP.—The market for Manila is steady; the sales amount to about 250 bales good roping at £54 to £54 10s. per ton.

ISINGLASS.—At auction 10 cases and 2 bags Penang sold, tongue fair at 3s. 9d., middling at 2s. 11d., leaf good bold at 3s. 10d., small at 3s. 9d.

INDIA-RUBBER.—An offer of 16 baskets Singapore was bought in, ball and lump dark, partly scrappy and rather foul at 1s. 7d. to 1s. 8d.

JAPAN WAX.—At auction 295 cases saucers sold without reserve; good hard, 67s. to 68s.; fair, rather weak, 63s. to 63s. 6d.; good middling, from 60s. 6d. up to 63s., closing at 62s.

PLUMBAGO.—Of 135 barrels Ceylon offered 65 barrels very common dust sold at 5s. 6d., repacked 5s. to 5s. 3d., the remainder lump being bought in at 20s.

PEPPER.—Black: Floating sales have been effected of 30 tons Singapore, very distant shipment, at 4¾d., and 2,000 bags Penang on terms not reported. White: There has been more demand, and a further advance has been paid, 200 bags Singapore having been sold at 6¼d., with prompt, and 100 bags common Penang at 6¼d. cash.

RICE.—The business on the spot has again been only of moderate extent, but at steady prices; the transactions in floating cargoes have been large, but have become somewhat restricted during the past few days, owing to holders requiring a further advance. The sales have been, on the spot, 1,160 mats Saigon, at 7s. 6d., and 6,000 bags Rangoon, at 9s. to 9s. 7½d.; afloat, the following cargoes:—The Blackwall, about 1,000 tons old Moulmein, January sailing, at 9s. 6d., ex ship for London, without guarantee; the Berar, 600 tons Rangoon, early February sailing, at 10s., ex ship for London; the Star of the North, 1,150 tons Rangoon, late January sailing, at 10s. 1½d., old conditions for the Continent; the Washington Irving, 1,000 tons, March sailing, at 10s., open charter, for the Continent; one of 740 tons Rangoon, February sailing, at 10s., for the Continent; The Gustav Adolph, 900 tons Necransie, April sailing, at 9s. 7½d., open charter. The Elizabeth Fry, 1,000 tons Rangoon, April sailing, at 10s. for the Continent, or 9s. 9d. ex quay for London. The Daniel Rankin, 1,280 tons Rangoon, March sailing, at 9s. 10½d. ex ship, or 10s. 4½d. landed in Liverpool. The Zingra, 450 tons Rangoon, March sailing, at 10s. 3d. for the Continent. The Carl XV., 500 tons Bassein, April sailing, at 10s. for the Continent. The Hypatia, 1,060 tons Bassein, February sailing, at 9s. 9d. ex ship. The Ludwig, 410 tons Bassein, March sailing, at 10s. for the Continent. The Thomas Fletcher, 1,100 tons Necransie, April sailing, at 9s. 9d. for the Continent. The Ocean Bride, 270 tons field Siam in bags, at 8s. ex ship for London.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea: 100 cases unsorted were offered and bought in at 117s. Nutmegs: 102 cases Padang offered at auction met a good demand, and were chiefly sold at firm rates; fine bold, 62 nuts to the lb., at 4s. 3d., 71's at 3s. 2d., 82's at 2s. 6d., one lot at 2s. 7d., 95's at 2s. 1d., one lot at 2s. 2d., 135's at 1s. 6d., ungarbled 164's at 10d. to 11d.; 5 cases Penang—113's sold at 1s. 9d. to 1s. 10d.; 10 casks limed Java, 103 to 114's, were bought in at 1s. 10d. Mace: 6 casks ordinary Java were bought in at 2s. 10d.

SESSAM SEED.—A portion of the cargo per Albert Juras, from Formosa, consisting of 1,350 quarters slightly heated brown, sold by auction—sound at 56s., sea-damaged at 56s. 3d.

SAGO.—There have been no sales since our last report.

SAGO FLOUR.—At public sale 250 bags Singapore realised 14s. 3d., and 60 bags Borneo 14s., cash.

SAPANWOOD.—We note the sale of 42 tons Siam at £7 10s. to £7 15s. per ton.

TAPIOCA.—At auction 140 bags Penang were offered and bought in at 2½d. per lb.

TIN.—The market for Straits is somewhat less active, but prices are steadily maintained, the current rates being £185 on the spot, and £133 to £134 afloat. Banca and Billiton are steady at last mail's quotations.

VEGETABLE TALLOW.—At public sale 37 casks Singapore were offered and bought in at 43s. for fair lump partly soft.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.

COFFEE.—The market for Brazil is steady, and previous rates are firmly maintained; in East India a limited business has been transacted at former prices, viz., Java Government bags 20c. to 21½c.; mats, 20c. to 22c.; Singapore, 18c. to 19c.; Manila, 16c. to 17c.; Native Ceylon, 17½c. to 19c. gold. The stock of Manila on the 1st April was estimated at 2,627 bags, against 6,769 bags on April 1, 1869; of Java (Government) at 815 bags, against 1,641 bags; of Java mats, 51,929, against 41,808 bags; of Ceylon, 1,500 bags, against 7,000 bags; of Singapore nil in both years.

CAMPHOR.—China is quoted 18c. gold (in bond).

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Aniseed is quoted $2.12½; Cassia, $1.25 gold.

GAMBIER.—The current quotation is 4c. to 4¼c. gold (duty paid); stock very small, not exceeding 2,000 bales.

Digitized by Google

CORDAGE.—A moderate business has been done in Manila at steady prices; the current quotations are :—6-thread and 9-thread (¼ in. and 5-16 in. diam.), 23c.; 12-thread (⅜ in. diam. 22½c.; Hay Rope, 22½c.; Bolt Rope Yarns, 24c.; do. 6-thread and 9-thread, 25c.; Manila, 21½c.; Fine Tarred Lath Yarn, 23c.

HEMP.—We note the sale of 1,000 bales at 14½c. gold, showing no change. The stock of Manila on the 1st April was estimated at 20,591 bales, against 3,205 bales at the corresponding date of 1869, and 27,844 bales in 1868. The imports into the United States from the 1st January to the 31st March, 1870, were 48,136 bales, against 34,795 bales during the corresponding period of last year, and the quantity afloat on the 31st March was 18,317 bales, against 12,676 bales at the same date last year.

INDIGO.—There has been more activity in the market, owing to an increased demand; the sales have included 35 cases Manila at $1.10 to $1.35 currency.

PRESERVED GINGER.—China is quoted $8 currency (duty paid).

RHUBARB.—The quotation for China is $1 to $2 currency (duty paid), showing a decline of 50c.

RICE.—The market continues quiet, but there is still a fair inquiry for Rangoon for export purposes, and we note sales amounting to 1,200 bags at the previously ruling rates, viz., $3 to $3.25 gold (in bond). In other kinds of East India there have been no transactions. The stock of East India on the 1st April was 6,350 bags, against 10,940 bags at the corresponding date last year, and 4,200 bags in 1868.

SPICES.—The opinion seems to have become more general that there will be no reduction in the tariff during the present session of Congress, and buyers purchase with more confidence and enlarge their orders, so that, with moderate and concentrated stocks, and favourable accounts from abroad, the market for most descriptions remains strong, and for some goods prices harden. Nutmegs favour sellers. Cassia is higher, closing firm at 47c., and Pepper is steady at the recent advance. In Cloves there has been a large business, 2,000 bales having been taken on private terms. We notice besides 300 cases Nutmegs, at $1 to 1.5; 20 do. Mace, $1.22½ to 1.25, in casks, $1.20; 500 bales Cassia, 46c. to 47c.; 1,400 bags Pepper, 27c. to 27½c., in small lots 28c.; 300 do. Pimento, 19c.; 150 bales Cloves, 25¾c. to 26c., all gold; also 600 bales Cassia on private terms.

SUGAR.—The market is quiet, holders declining to transact business except at an advance; the sales have included 13,692 bags Manila at 8¾c.

TIN.—Straits is firm at 34c. gold, and we note the sale of 350 slabs at that figure; Banca is very scarce, 25 slabs have been sold at 40c., and at the close 42c. were being offered and refused.

TEA.—There is no change in the tone of the market; limited business has been done in parcels ex Elizabeth Nicholson, Dilpussund, Mikado, Resolute, Horatio, and Elizabeth Dougall at the prices previously current.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKET REPORT.

COFFEE.—We remark an increased inquiry, with a slight advance in prices. Sales to some extent have been made to the jobbers, but details are not forthcoming; O.G. Java is quoted 22½c.

CHINA MATTING.—Imports from Jan. 1 to April 16—54 bales, 2,920 rolls. As the warm season approaches there is more inquiry for Chinese, both white and checked, with sales of 200 rolls 4-4 at $5.25.

RICE.—Imports from January 1 to April 16: China, 5,778,952 lbs., 2,276 mats. Information received from Japan and China of crop failures has had the effect anticipated. Purchases have been considerable, embracing an entire cargo of Saigon of inferior quality, say 800,000 lbs. recleaned, at 4c. per lb. In addition to this, about 750,000 lbs. second quality China have been taken in lots at 5¾c. to 6½c. per lb. No sound grain can be purchased for less than 6½c. to 6¾c. per lb. 3,400 mats No. 2 China sold at 6½c., and at the close was held for higher rates.

TEA.—Imports from Jan. 1st. to April 16th: China, 145,163 lbs., 444 pkgs.; Japan, 360,016 lbs., 2,428 pkgs. Leading holders evince considerable firmness in their views without succeeding in effecting sales at any actual advance. Stocks are by no means excessive. We quote Japans at 75c. to 90c. for first quality, according to size and description of package; second quality, in chests, 65c. to 70c.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.—April 23, at Boston, from Singapore, Polly Lewis; 27, Rocket; 30, at New York, from Foochow, Horner; May 3, from Yokohama, Herbert Graham.

DEPARTURES.—April 29, from New York, for Yokohama, Horatio 30, from San Francisco, for Yokohama and Hong Kong, China (s.).

LOADING.—At New York, for Batavia, Franklin; for Hong Kong, Formosa; for Hong Kong and Shanghai, N.B. Palmer, Willy Rickmers; for Shanghai, Haze, Mary Whitridge; for Yokohama, Horatio; at San Francisco, for Hong Kong, Sumatra.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

Berth freights still continue without animation, there is however not much suitable tonnage available; coal freights from the Northern outports are without change.

Current rates of freight for vessels on the berth:—To Yokohama: 32s. 6d. weight, 35s. meast.; per steamer, via Suez Canal, 120s. weight. 110s. meast. To Shanghai: 40s. weight, 30s. meast.; per steamer, via Suez Canal, 90s. weight, 80s. meast. To Hong Kong: 35s. weight. 30s. meast.; per steamer, via Suez Canal, 80s. weight, 70s. meast. To Batavia: 25s. weight, 30s. meast. To Penang: per steamer, via Suez Canal, 80s. weight, 70s. meast. To Singapore: 30s. weight, 25s. to 30s. meast.; per steamer via Suez Canal, 70s. weight, 60s. meast. To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 20s. meast; per steamer, via Suez Canal, 60s. mea t At New York to China; $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet.

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear or Tyne per keel.—For Hiogo: £35. For Yokohama: £35. For Hong Kong: £28. For Singapore: £25. For Galle: £27. From Newport, Cardiff or Swansea per ton.—For Hiogo: £1 15s. For Hong Kong: £1 8s. For Singapore: £1 4s. For Galle: £1 6s.

CASUALTIES.

Advices from Fayal, dated April 23, state that the Juanita, Bartols, from Sarawak to London, which put in there, March 8, leaky, and discharged part of her cargo, had received instructions to proceed with the cargo she had on board, as a vessel would be sent out for that portion which had been landed.

Advices from St. Thomas, dated April 23, state that the Herald, Gardner, from Java to Boston, which put in there leaky, March 27, was on the marine repairing slip, with fore and mainmasts out, and was being recoppered and caulked.

The following telegram, dated Galle, May 4, received from Yokohama, states as follows:— St. Dunstan, from Glasgow, has been wrecked at Cape King, at the eastern entrance of the Gulf; and the Bengal (British ship), Maclean, from Penarth Dock, went ashore west of Hiogo Point April 3, but was towed off by the Orissa (str.) with light part of cargo jettisoned; she does not appear to have sustained serious damage.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The following goods have been forwarded to London from the wreck of the Benvenue, from Penang, in addition to those previously recovered:—511 bdls. rattans, 37 bags pepper, 1 bale tobacco, 1 bag coffee, 9 bags cocoanuts, 1 case nutmegs, 24 bags tapioca, 5 bales and 113 hides.

At SUEZ.—May 6, Priam (str.), from Liverpool, and was to leave 7 for Singapore, China, &c.; Danube (str.), from Liverpool, and was to leave May 9 for Singapore, China, &c.

At MAURITIUS.—April 1, Eastern Isles (str.), Knight, from Capetown, and left 4 for Singapore; 7, Hopeful, Buttrey, from Singapore; 30, Admiral Trehouart, Aubry, from Monte Video, sailed for Galle.

ADMIRALTY NOTICE.

WINDS AND CURRENTS AT THE LITTLE BASSES ROCK.

The following notice on the prevailing winds and set of the currents observed off the south coast of Ceylon, compiled from a memorandum dated April, 1869, by Mr. John Buchanan, master of the light-vessel marking the position of the Little Bassas Rocks, has been transmitted to the Hydrographic Department of the Admiralty, and is published for the information of navigators:—

January.—During this month a strong, steady, north-east monsoon prevails. The S.S.W. current never shifts, but continues throughout January, running from the Bay of Bengal with a velocity varying from 2 to 3½ knots. Sea cross and very rough all the month. Steam-vessels steering N.N.E. have remained in sight from the light-vessel for two hours, and sailing-ships for six days; hence ships bound to the north-east should avoid the south-east coast of Ceylon in January.

February.—The same remark applies to February, although towards the end of the month the wind becomes much lighter; the current also slackens. Occasionally in this month the light-vessel swings. In 1868, however, she did not swing until April, while in 1869 she swung in February. At the end of the month land and sea breezes begin.

March.—Throughout this month regular land and sea breezes prevail. The current, although generally S.S.W., is variable at times, setting from different quarters, one hour in one direction, another probably in the opposite. March is one of the finest months at the Little Bassas, the thermometer often reaching 87 degrees in the shade. The land and sea breezes being regular, and the current weak, the passage up or down the coast is easy in this month.

April.—The winds are variable during this month, being sometimes from the north-east, at others from the south-west, blowing from the latter quarter for days together. Sometimes in the course of a day the light vessel's head will be at almost every point of the compass. Weather becomes gloomy, with occasional showers, thunder and lightning are prevalent, with dense blackness over the land. As a rule, very little current is felt, but it occasionally runs strong to the S.S.W.

May.—Between the 1st and 20th of this month the south-west monsoon sets in strong and steadily, generally much rain falls, and thunder and lightning are common. During seven years the south-west monsoon set in regularly from the 4th to the 10th of May, in 1869 it was steady at south-west from April 6th; this year is accordingly an exception to the rule, with regard to winds and currents. After May no rain falls until the 20th of October; and it is hardly an exaggeration to say that not a drop of rain falls during the south-west monsoon. The current runs N.E. from one to three knots.

June, July, August, and September.—Throughout these four months one day resembles another, the south-west monsoon blowing strong and steadily, generally beginning about 10 A.M., by noon increasing to a gale, so continuing to 4 P.M., and then decreasing towards sunset; if the gale continues after sunset it moderates after 10 P.M., never attaining throughout the night aught beyond a strong breeze. There is a strong current setting N.N.E. from 1 to 3 knots. As soon as the sun passes southward of the line, the regular monsoon ceases on the south coast of Ceylon, the winds become variable, land and sea breezes setting in, with an intervening calm.

A remarkable circumstance occurs with regard to current during the south-west monsoon. After running 3 knots to the N.E. for ten days, suddenly it slackens and runs from 2 to 3½ knots S.W., or from the Bay of Bengal, lasting sometimes only one day, at other times for a week; these changes happened at all times of the moon, and appear to obey no recognised law. By observing these changes in the current monthly communication was, with extreme difficulty and much risk, kept up with Potana Bay, and thence by land with Galle.

October.—During this month regular land and sea breezes prevail, the S.S.W. current runs strong towards the end of the month, at times attaining a rate of 5 knots. The light-vessel does not swing again until the middle of March, so that for five months and a half the current runs steadily out of the Bay of Bengal, with a velocity of from 1 to 3½ knots, and sometimes of 5 knots. In communicating with the shore on the 15th December, the light-vessel's boat was swept past Potana, and could neither return to the ship nor land; but at length, when out of food and water, the coast was reached at Kirinde, where the boat remained until February 15th before a return to the light-vessel could be attempted.

November, although rainy, with thunder and lightning, is not a bad month at the Little Bassas. The north-east monsoon blowing strong and steadily sets in towards the end. The S.S.W. current runs strong, invariably setting floating substances out to sea, accounting for the fact of so few things coming on shore on the south coast of Ceylon.

December.—During this month a strong north-east monsoon prevails, and the current attains its greatest strength. The light-vessel is uneasy and rolls violently. In December no ship should proceed to the northward along the south east coast of Ceylon. The period during which ships may proceed north is that intervening between February 15th and November 15th; for three months in the year it should not be attempted.

Summary.—There are no regular tides, but the currents from the middle of November, or during the north-east monsoon, set S.S.W. out of the Bay of Bengal for five months without variation; thus a steamer, steering N.N.E., has not only to oppose a 3-knot current, but also has the wind dead against her; some steamers barely make two miles an hour when bound to the northward. During the remaining seven months the currents are nearly equally divided, for about twice a month in the south-west monsoon the current will suddenly change from N.N.E. to S.S.W. When the sun passes northward of the light-vessel there is no more monsoon. During the south-west monsoon, in the event of a vessel making Dondra Head, when bound to Galle, which is not uncommon, the master should never attempt to beat to Calle, but recross the line.

CHINA SEA AND BANCA STRAITS.

The following information of dangers in the China and Java Seas, discovered during the years 1866-68, has been published on the authority of the Netherlands Commission for improving and correcting the charts of the Indian Archipelago. [All bearings are magnetic. Variation 1 deg. easterly in 1870.]

CHINA SEA.—The ship Scheweningen struck on an unknown bank in lat. 1 deg. 19 min. 12 sec. S. and long. 106 deg. 39 min. 48 sec. E., about fourteen leagues E. by N. from Crassock Point, the north extremity of Banca Island. Immediately after the ship touched a sounding of four fathoms was obtained, and a second sounding showed a depth of fifteen fathoms.

NORTH COAST OF BANCA.—A reef, with only 7½ feet of water, lies about 1½ mile from the shore, and nearly midway between Crassock Point and Cape Tuen. From the shoal, Crassock point bears W. by N. ½ N., Pulo Pongoh off Cape Tuen S.E. ½ S., and Pakoe Point S. by E.

BANCA STRAIT.—A rock, with 12 feet over it at low water, lies about two cables northward of the Hadjie Reef, with Tanjong Bersiap, the eastern point of Banca Island, bearing N. ¾ E., and Kalian Point Lighthouse E. ¼ N.

GASPAR STRAIT.—A reef has been discovered lying N.N.W. 3¾ miles from the Belvedere Rock, also seventeen miles distant from Gaspar Island, and twenty-eight miles from Brekat Point, on Banka Island. The position given is in lat. 2 degs. 8 mins. S., long. 107 degs. 1 min. 15 secs. E. A reef with only 6 feet water lies off the northern end of Pulo Leat. From a position three-quarters of a cable northward of the shoal, the northern point of Pulo Leat bore S.W., and the eastern point of Pulo Anak, or Selagin, S. by E. ¼ E.

CARIMATA STRAIT.—A reef, situated on the north-east coast of Billiton, and shown as "doubtful" on the charts, has been found to exist. It dries in one spot, and is in lat. 2 deg. 37 min. S., long. 108 deg. 18 min. E. A bank that dries has been observed off the east coast of Billiton; from the bank Slandak Island bears S.W. ½ W., Gantong Island W. by S., and Boesong Madau Island N.W. ¼ W.; the position given is in lat. 2 degs. 59 min. S., long. 108 deg. 21 min. E. A reef, with about 6 or 7 feet water, lies near the assigned but doubtful position of a shoal named Admiral Protet; from it Slandak Island bears W. ¾ S., and Liendorg, one of the Scharvogel Islands, S.S.W.; the position given is in lat. 2 deg. 59 min. S., long. 108 deg. 38 min. E.

GREIG SHOAL.—Careful examination has shown that the position of this danger, off the western coast of Borneo, is lat. 0 deg. 55 min. 30 sec. S., and long. 108 deg. 28 min. E.; from the shoal Panambungan Island bears E.S.E., and the peak of Carimata Island S.S.E ¾ E. The shoal is circular in shape, about 1¼ cable in diameter, and has eight feet water over the shoalest part.

JAVA SEA.—E. ½ N. from the south point of Peblakan or West Island, distant about 3½ miles, is a reef of coral and stone; this reef extends about one cable north and south, and 2½ cables east and west; there is about four feet water over the shoalest part, and from four to five fathoms around the reef; from it the extremes of Rangat Island bore N.W. ½ N. and N.W. by N. respectively. A reef also, on which the sea breaks heavily, extends a distance of about two cables (by estimation) from the north and north-east sides of Rangat Island. Careful examination has shown that the Siren Bank, to be found on some charts in lat. 5 deg. 19 min. 30 sec. S., long. 106 deg. 34 min. 45 sec. E., does not exist, and that no danger has been found near the assigned position.

TRINITY-HOUSE NOTICE.

TEMPORARY LIGHT NEAR THE GREAT BASSES ROCK.

The following has been issued from the Trinity-house:—"Notice is hereby given, that, in accordance with the notice issued from this House in October last, a light vessel was placed, on the 30th March, in twelve fathoms of water, three-quarters of a mile N.N.E. of the 'Great Basses' Rocks, off the S.E. coast of Ceylon, and will be maintained there during the time of building the lighthouse; and in order to distinguish her from the light vessel at the 'Little Basses,' which exhibits a white flash every minute and a-half, and which is twenty miles distant, the light shown is red, revolving at intervals of forty-five seconds. By day she is distinguished by carrying two balls vertically at the mainmast-head."

LIGHTING THE RED SEA.—The following paragraph appears in the Marseilles Courier:—"The Khedive has decided that the coasts of the Red Sea shall be provided with lighthouses, similar to those erected at Damietta, Burlos, and Rosetta, in the Mediterranean, at the approaches of Port Said. The decision of the Khedive has been put into immediate execution, his Highness having already given orders to the Compagnie des Forges et Chantiers de la Mediterrance for two first-class lighthouses. The first will be placed at Saouskin; it will be 180 feet high, and will be furnished with a revolving light, having a range of 30 miles. The second will be at Ras Garib, about one day's sail from Suez, being 150 feet in height, and having a fixed light of the first order."

ALFRED SCOTT GATTY'S AMUSING COMIC SONGS OF THE DAY.

I Really am so Sleepy.	I'll not try it again.
Put It down to Me.	Medicine Jack.
Bobbie! Bobbie!	B. R. A. G. (a lady's song).
Not so bad for Me.

These songs may be sung in any drawing-room. Post free for 19 stamps each.

"Mr. Alfred Scott Gatty is getting quite a reputation for his comic songs, and deservedly so. They possess far more real humour than the popular songs of the music halls, and we need hardly say are far above them in every respect. Mr. Gatty's words are funny without being vulgar, and there is not one of his songs but what has a hearty and legitimate laugh in it. 'I Really am so Sleepy' is a very simple melody, set to clever racy words, and will sure to be a favourite amongst those who enjoy an honest comic ballad."—Vide Illustrated Midland News, Jan. 8.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.
PIMPLES, BOILS, CARBUNCLES, &c.—These maladies arise from some obstruction to the free circulation of the blood through the blood-vessels or lymph through the capillaries and the only rational mode of cure consists in removing the local impediment, at the same time that any impurity engendered by the stoppage should be filtered from the blood. Holloway's Ointment applied to the part effects the first, his Pills accomplish the latter object. The inflamed skin derives softness, coolness, and ease, from the application of this unguent, which gradually penetrates to the affected tissues, arrests inflammation, assuages irritation, soon restores the circulation and its channels to a healthy condition, and spares the sufferer most serious diseases and unnecessary suffering.

NAGASAKI.

NAGASAKI, April 9, 1870.

I last wrote you on the 24th ult. We hear the English mail of 11th February reached Shanghai on the 1st inst., but when it is likely to reach this is very doubtful, as the Cadiz will go on to Hong Kong to receive new boilers. Sword-drawing has again been revived at this port. A few nights since Lieut. Gough, commanding H.M.'s gunboat Grasshopper, and an officer from H.M.'s corvette Zebra, while passing through the native town, accidentally pushed against a man wearing two swords, and, thinking nothing of the circumstance, were about to proceed on their way when one of them discovered the fellow in the act of drawing his long sword from the sheath. The two officers having no weapon of any kind were compelled in self-defence to take it away from him, and in the scuffle he was knocked down; and on rising he made an attempt to use the short one, with like results. Had he killed the two officers the matter would most probably have terminated with results similar to those relating to the poor fellows belonging to the Icarus, but as he got the worst of the struggle the delinquent soon finds the whereabouts of the official residence of H B.M.'s representative, and the native authorities have lodged a complaint with that gentleman; but he should have thought of this method before he made the attempt to assassinate, as it is now clear that he only does so to screen himself from the consequences of having lost his swords.

The above is not the only case, I am sorry to say. Messrs. Bohlens and Rasch were walking through the town on the 7th inst. and met a couple of these two-sworded ruffians, who were inclined to push against them, but they avoided a collision by getting out of the way. Bohlens and Rasch soon after left each other, and the former, on reaching Desima, was surprised to find the same fellows there, who this time were bolder still, and attempted to make him get out of the way again, but being near home he refused to do so; a scuffle took place, and while one fellow seized him by the hands another drew out his sword, happily without inflicting any injuries, as Bohlens managed to get away from them by slipping his hands from his gloves, which he left, together with his hat, in possession of the Japanese cut-throats.

In my last I reported that a native priest had misconducted himself at the French cathedral here, and have since been informed that "the poor fellow was drunk."

The corvette Iho Sho Maru was duly handed over to the officers of the Prince of Hiogo on the 7th inst., with the customary salutes peculiar to the Japanese on such occasions; the house flag of Messrs. Glover and Co. was hauled down with a salute of seven guns. Since my last the small steamer Nomo, known formerly as the William IV., has had her flag changed from British to Japanese, and now belongs to the same Prince.

The movements of vessels of war have been as follows:—H.M. gunboat Grasshopper arrived from Yokohama March 25, and remains in port; the Dove arrived from Hiogo on the same day, and sailed for Shanghai March 28; the corvette Zebra arrived from Hiogo April 4, and left for Hong Kong on the 7th; the French frigate Venus arrived from Shanghai April 2, and left for Hiogo and Yokohama on the 7th. The U S. steamer Monocacy left this for Hiogo and Yokohama March 25. The arrivals from the home side have been—Fidelio (North German barque) on March 23, from Hamburg; British barque Achilles, March 27, from Swansea, with coals for British Government; and Japanese man-of-war Nit Sin March 30, from Holland.

Nagasaki felt a shock of earthquake since my last, somewhat severe for this place. It is expected that the tea season here will open later this year than on the previous one. The tea plants on the surrounding hills appear to be very backward for the month of April, and I think vegetation would be more advanced in England at the present time than it is here—a very unusual thing indeed—and it is yet cold weather. Business remains in the same inactive state as last advised; to which may be added—rice, peas, beancake, and oil are all lower. Piece goods seem to be in no demand. Exports arrive in retail lots, and are offered at prices much above those ruling at Hiogo, and are such that no foreigner can give, although the Chinese occasionally make purchases for shipment to Hong Kong.

A case was decided on the 25th ult. at H.B.M.'s Consulate, before A. A. Annesley, Esq., and Messrs. John Maltby and F. Ringer, assessors, in which J. P. Hyver sued the captain or owners of the British barque Southland to recover $94, the value of 23½ tons of coals short delivered from that vessel at Shanghai. It seems that the only evidence brought before the Court was the bill of lading for 147 tons; this was signed by the captain, who inserted a clause of "More or less, all on board to be delivered." The case seems to rest upon this and unconfirmed assertions made by the captain and his attorney, none of which they seemed able to prove. The Court was of opinion that the clause inserted in the bill of lading did not relieve the captain from his responsibility, neither did the fact of the mate getting drunk while taking them on board, and gave a verdict for the plaintiff. The Nagasaki Shipping List of April 2 reviews the case, and makes a few remarks on what appears to be evidence; but this I am informed is only a one-sided statement from the defendant's point of view, and contains some very libellous matter, which the Court asked him during the proceedings to prove by witnesses, but he brought none forward. Another case has been decided by H.B.M.'s Consul and Assessors—Customs v. Alt and Co. The question to be settled was—what rate of duty should be paid on certain teas shipped by that firm? The case I referred to in my letter to you, dated Jan. 29. It appears that Alt and Co., before making the tea into Greens, sent a muster to the Custom-house, and asked whether such tea would be passed as Bancha, and they were informed that it would be; but this statement the Customs deny, and claim full duty. Messrs. Alt and Co. also argued that as fine uncoloured tea, when shipped in packages for the English and American markets, had been only charged the low rate of duty, they ought to be placed on terms quite as favourable. The Court held that, although the treaty had been evaded with the knowledge and connivance of the Custom-house officials, it could not be made a precedent, and that Alt and Co. must pay the proper duty. The above case has caused British merchants to send in the memorial to H.B.M.'s Consul mentioned in my last. The document was signed by all the English firms except Holme, Ringer, and Co.

In freights the rate is quite nominal, as there is no vessel loading for London. Exchange the same. Ni-bous are firm, in consequence of the late advices from Yokohama, the quotation being 415 to 420 against dollars; Kinsats have no quotation, and are quite nominal.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices from this port by the P. and O. mail are to the 10th April. The outward mail of Feb. 17 arrived on April 7. We take the following from the Japan Herald:—

We recorded a mail or two back a threatened attack upon the secretary of the French Legation at Yedo. It now falls to our lot to record a supposed attempt to murder Major Shepard, the U.S. Consul at Yedo, in his bed at the hotel. Awakened by a rustle, he fired at the intruder, who fled, unharmed by either of two shots. Subsequent search disclosed that in the possession of the servants were false keys to every lock in the house. It is conjectured that a clique hostile to foreigners have determined to assassinate some one of note amongst them in order to bring trouble upon the existing Government, and thus be avenged for permitting their residence in Japan.

The flying squadron has arrived at Yokohama, including the Liverpool, Phœbe, Barossa, Endymion, Liffy, and Scylla. They stay ten days, and then go home. Passage from Australia occupied fifty-six days. Barossa takes the place of the Pearl.

It is stated in Yedo that the disturbances in Chosiu's territory have been brought to an end, after two days' skirmishing, in which some men were killed and several wounded. Government and Satsuma troops, and Chosiu samourai were the combatants; the latter, after their defeat, fled into the adjacent country.

Rumour has it that Sir Harry Parkes, K.C.B., the present British Minister for Japan, is not unlikely to be shortly accredited to Peking.

The Thabor, which was sent out here by the Messageries Imperiales Company, has been sold to the Japanese Government for the sum of $90,000, and will be employed as a despatch boat, running as regularly as circumstances will permit, and carrying the high officers of the Government, despatches, &c. She will also be employed on the lighthouse service.

A native mail service, carrying passengers and freight, is about to be established, under the management of the "Commercial Department," between Yokohama and Kobé. The steamer Dumbarton, belonging to the Japanese Government, is to ply on this line.

The Japanese Government has authorised the municipal director to procure lamp standards and fittings for the purpose of lighting the streets at night with kerosene, in default of better illuminating resource, and for this concession to the public need, and the paving and drainage work now in hand, the settlement feels satisfied—nay, even grateful; but, as the lamps are to be "not more than 300 feet apart," feel indisposed to join in the eulogies which some of their number would fain bestow upon the promoters of the scheme.

The Chinese have been buying up Boos for export to Shanghai as specie, at the rate of 58,000 to 60,000 per diem, at 25 per cent. premium, being a rise of 7 per cent.

So dire is the famine now prevailing in some parts of Nipkon that the sick and dying natives, cast out to perish, huddled under fragments of matting, along the wayside, are said to number more than we care to print—the total appears so incredible. The weather has been of late variable, and much sickness prevails—chiefly fevers of a mild inflammatory type, with rarer cases of typhoid. An earthquake which occurred a few days back appeared somewhat to clear the air of seeming oppressiveness.

The Japan Mail says,—"A Court of Enquiry is now sitting at the British Consulate to investigate the circumstances connected with the loss of the Ocean Queen, which was wrecked in November last, not far from Nigata. The Court was called by Captain Bowman for the purpose of refuting certain statements reflecting upon him which appeared in one of the local daily papers. These statements may have been false, and were certainly irritating; but this is no excuse for the unseemly language which they subsequently elicited, and which it is highly reprehensible in the Press to give any countenance to by publishing."

One day last week as the four horse coach was on its journey to Yedo two yaconins, armed with bamboos, sprang forward from the side path and endeavoured to stop the coach. The driver plied his whip, and the vehicle moved swiftly on, but in doing so the wheels grazed the legs of one of the officers and threw him down. No further interruption occurred until Kawasaki was reached, where progress was forcibly arrested, and the coach detained for two hours and a-half. This was the result of orders sent on from the guard-house at Kanagawa by an express messenger, who doubled on the coach by a short cut. The passengers—six Japanese—scuffled off on the first indication of trouble, forgetting in their haste to pay their fares. How much longer the mortified Jehu might have had to wait the pleasure of his captors is unknown, his release being effected by the appearance on the scene of the Rev. Mr Thompson, who warned the Japanese that their conduct might lead them into sore disgrace. We understand that the proprietors of the coach propose bringing an action against the Government for damages. There is no doubt that the affair will scare away the natives from the four-in-hand team for a while.

TWELVE DAYS LATER BY PACIFIC MAIL.

The Pacific mail steamer Japan, with Yokohama dates to April 22 (twelve days later than the present P. and O. Mail), reached San Francisco on the 13th May, bringing 1,400 passengers, 1,300 of whom are Chinese; of the remainder 16 are for New York and 36 for Europe. Her freight includes 147 packages of silk for New York, and 1,020 packages of tea and 150 bales of silk for Europe. The following is a summary of her news, as telegraphed to New York:—

Admiral Hornby arrived from Australia and visited Yedo, where he was entertained by the Mikado. The Admiral sailed again for Vancouver's Island on the 19th instant. The disturbances in Chosiu's territory terminated after two days' skirmishing. Several were killed and wounded on both sides. The Japanese budget for last year shows a deficit of £2,500,000, which is equal to one-half the Imperial revenue. Attempts recently made by the Japanese to assassinate Charles O Shepard, the American Consul at Yedo, had been frustrated. A rumour is in circulation that Sir Harry Parkes, the British Minister to Japan, will soon be transferred to Peking. Outrages on foreigners are of frequent occurrence. A shock of earthquake was experienced recently, but no damage done. The British bark St. Dunstan, from Glasgow for Yokohama was wrecked forty miles from her destination, and four of her crew were lost. The import market is unchanged. The arrivals are numerous, and all contain general cargoes. The tea season is nearly over, and transactions are limited. Exchange has advanced one farthing. The silk market is active, and the high prices are maintained; the season has been favourable and the arrivals small; the settlements have been 600 bales.

TIENTSIN.

From Tientsin we have news of a serious defeat inflicted on the Imperialists in Shense; the state of things in that province is very bad, and causes great anxiety to the officials. It seems to be a fact that the Government does contemplate opening coal mines in the Chihli province; and we are assured that engines are now being made in the Tientsin arsenal for pumping out water and raising coal.

SHANGHAI.

The outward mail of Feb. 17 (French) arrived on the 5th April. Telegrams to 22nd March via Kiachta. Latest dates from Shanghai are to the 12th April.

The following items are from the North China Herald of 5th and 12th April:—The same sudden change to extreme heat, which we experienced last week in Shanghai, seems to have extended to Tientsin. A correspondent writes, on the 24th ult., that the thermometer out of doors in the shade was registering 88, and in a room 74.

The third of the Shanghai Temperance Society's lectures of this season was delivered by Mr. J. Barr Robertson, before one of the largest audiences that we have seen assembled on a similar occasion in Shanghai. The lecture, on "the Subjection of Women," was an able one, and was listened to with much interest.

Rumour, of course, is very rife as to the next likely British Minister at Peking. A correspondent suggested Mr. Erskine, our present representative at Athens; the name of Mr. Thornton, now H.M.'s Ambassador to Washington, is also mentioned; but these are, of course, only rumours, and we merely give them as such.

From Hankow we learn that the river is rising rapidly, in consequence of the late heavy rain. The British Government have determined to withdraw their contribution in aid of the Chaplaincy at Hankow; and the community, feeling unable to support a chaplain without assistance, are compelled to relinquish Mr. McClatchie's services after the end of March. This is only one phase of retrenchment. We hear that the extra allowance granted some time ago to members of the Consular staff, while resident in Shanghai, is also to be stopped. Another order, to cease insuring public buildings, is a wiser economy. The Government is a sufficiently large owner to be its own insurer.

A meeting of the Cricket Club was held on the 1st of April, at which Mr. Groom was elected President—Sir E. Horaby declining the post on account of his approaching departure for England—and the previous committee were re-appointed. Nine new members were proposed; and it was agreed to pay the rent, Tls. 900, due to the Recreation Fund, which had been withheld until the latter was in a position to give a proper lease.

The question of river frontage has been again under discussion, with reference to a letter on the subject written by Mr. Cunningham directly after leaving Shanghai. Mr. Cunningham opposed the construction of landing stages off the English Bund, on the ground that ships would interfere with the view, and would greatly inconvenience cargo-boats. We differ from Mr. Cunningham's arguments. Though we have always opposed the erection of any buildings in front of the Bund, we do not consider ships an obstruction, and would gladly see measures taken to render their approach possible. The best answer to the objections put forward by Mr. Cunningham to the mooring of steamers off the English Bund is the aspect of the French Bund, where ships are constantly lying, and which is the preferable promenade of the two.

The Registration case in which Mr. Michie was defendant has come to an end. In accordance with the decision, a warrant was issued after the trial, calling upon Mr. Michie to pay $11.50. He did not do so, and a distress warrant was issued; but the constable failed to find any property belonging to Mr. Michie. There might or might not be some in the house; but he was warned from touching any belonging to the firm! A warrant was next issued ordering Mr. Michie's arrest, pending payment of the sum claimed (now swollen to $12 50, by costs,) and imprisonment for two months in the Consular jail in default. Considering, apparently, that he had now carried resistance as far as he conveniently could, Mr. Michie declined this prospect, and paid the $11.50.

A second case similar to that of Mr. Michie's, occurred. Mr. Macdonnell had declined to pay his fine, and had been distrained upon ineffectually, so he was arrested, and given the option of payment or two months' imprisonment; he elected imprisonment, but shied at the last moment at the aspect of the cell allotted to him and paid.

The Land Renters' meeting is fixed for the 9th May. The following is the list of new Municipal Councillors elected: Dixwell (75), Purdon (70), Probst (66), Reid (66), Jellicoe (63), Anderson (61), Cameron (57), Gubbay (55), and Reme (47 votes)

We hear that Mr. G. F. Seward may be expected by the P. M. steamer due here in July next.

It is said that the refuse commonly known as "Maloo tea" has been condemned at home, and is likely to be prevented from finding its way into consumption. We shall not be sorry to see the export of this second-hand rubbish stopped; but the loss occasioned will be rather serious, as it is said that £30,000 worth is on its way home.

HONG KONG.

From this port our advices are to the 19th April. The outward mail of Feb. 25, conveying London telegrams to March 19, was received April 8. The following items of news are from the Overland China Mail:—

His Excellency the Governor and Lady MacDonnell took their departure on the 12th, per Japan, for Yokohama. In spite of the rain, which fell heavily during the time, a large concourse of residents assembled at Pedder's Wharf to witness their embarkation, and bid them farewell. The Army and Navy, Government officials, and persons of all ranks and classes were well represented. The military escort consisted of one wing of the 29th Madras infantry, while the entire police force, from the Sikhs to the Lukongs, added feebly to the pageant. At half-past two the Governor and his Lady drove down to the wharf, passing slowly through the ranks of the multitude, exchanging farewells and responding to the expressions of regret that were freely uttered. Amid deafening cheers and the pealing of artillery they embarked in the colonial barge, and proceeded on board the steamer, leaving behind them many warm friends both personal and public

Another piracy on a North German schooner (the Gazelle) has taken place in close proximity to Hong Kong harbour. The affair of the Gazelle appears to have been one of the coolest and most impertinent piracies yet recorded, though no violence was attempted on the part of the pirates. It is said that, when off Cupchi Point, the German brig was boarded by a Chinese junk, and the pirates firmly called upon the crew of the brig to deliver up so many chests of opium known to be on board. The drug having been secured by the pirates, they then demanded delivery of certain piece goods, &c., which were duly given up; and then the brig and her people were generously informed that they could go on their way rejoicing. It is very clear that the Gazelle—which was consigned to Messrs. Bourjau, Hubener, and Co., and left this port on the 25th March for Chefoo—must have been watched here and followed out, in the antiquated style adopted previously to the beneficial action of the Coast Ordinance; and some record at the Harbour-master's office, we should think, would serve to show the identity of the junk in fault.

We understand that the N.G. frigate Hertha left this port on Friday evening on a cruise for information concerning this somewhat cool appropriation, and returned here last night with a junk in tow. She started again early this morning; and as we believe that a Chinese mandarin was taken on board, it is probable that something may be heard of our piratical rovers.

A life-size portrait of H. R. H. the Duke of Edinburgh has just been completed, by Mr. J Thompson, photographic artist. The portrait is a painting in oil, representing the Prince in his uniform of a captain of the Royal navy, and has been the result of much labour on the part of the artist. In the background is represented the frigate Galatea at anchor, and the Kowloong hills in the distance. H. R. H. is decorated with his various orders and the ribbon of the garter, and the likeness is an excellent one. It is placed in an appropriate frame of the artist's own design, and will be hung on the walls of the City Hall as a souvenir of the visit to this colony of the princely original, and the service he rendered to the Committee by inaugurating that institution.

We (China Mail) learn that a campaign, which it appears has been in progress for some time past on the frontiers of China (Province of Kwang-si) and Tonk-king, has been terminated with satisfactory results to the Imperial arms. The remnants of the rebels and banditti who, after the extinction of the great rebellion, gathered in the mountainous region of Western Kwang-si as a last foothold, were driven across the frontier a year or two ago by the Chinese troops, commanded by a very energetic General named Fung Tsze-tsai, and took refuge in Tong-king, where the Anamese authorities were powerless to impede their ingress. Since then, we learn, a combined attack upon the refugee insurgents has been organised, and some two months ago they were surrounded, as we learn, and ruthlessly slaughtered. Ten thousand is the number at which the dest uction of lives is estimated. If the report as it reaches us be correct, this may be looked upon as the veritable close of the last act of the Taiping rebellion.

The steamer Prince Kung went ashore on Crab Island, some fifteen miles north of Sharp Peak, in a dense fog, and became a total wreck. Captain Brown and crew reached Foochow on 27th March, much exhausted. The Naval Court of Inquiry decided that the loss was caused by Charles Brown, only mate, who is a German, and held no certificate.

Mr. Moss the gentleman appointed by the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce to proceed into the interior to collect information as to trading matters, will start this morning for Canton, whence he will proceed up the West River, passing Wuchaufoo, Sinchaufoo and Nanningfoo, as far on the river as is navigable, which is understood to be Pehshiting, in Kwangse, whence he will proceed westward.

We learn that the British Government has expressed its disapproval of its Consular officers accepting the position of Consuls in China for other Powers. This decision, though especially referring to the Austrian Consular appointments which have been temporarily held by British officials, will probably prevent Mr. Medhurst from undertaking the duty of Portuguese Consul at Shanghai, for which he had been recommended, and that office will once more go begging.

some time. The commander and some of the officers went on shore, and were received with cordial hospitality by the Resident, Mr. Kater. The Resident being on the point of undertaking a voyage by sea to Sintang, proposed to the Italian officers to accompany him thither, which offer was eagerly accepted. It excited the astonishment of the foreign guests to find various posts pushed forward so far into the interior. On their return on board, they took a particularly hearty farewell of the Resident. We learn from the same source that the Resident probably will not avail himself of the furlough for Java granted him, but apparently prefers paying a return visit next month to the Governor of Labuan.

The continual rains which fell in the months of January and February last have contributed much to cause favourable expectations to arise regarding the production of tin at Billiton, although at first it appeared unfavourable. In 1869 a total of 36,750 piculs were obtained, almost 5,600 piculs more than were produced in 1868. This island is only one-third the size of Banca. The State profited by this production to the amount of 1,090.05 piculs of tin in kind, or, in cash, amounting altogether to f.68,701.50; the export duties on the whole production of tin for 1869 was f.94,232 98. Thus, adding this to the former amount, it gives the total profit to the State f.162,933.48 on tin from Billiton. An official notification states that 450,000 piculs of sugar and 50,000 piculs of coffee will be sold during the months of April, August, September, October, and November, 1870, on days specified below, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, in the locality of the Handels Vereeniging, which will be accessible to everyone on the occasion.

1870.—Sales of 450,000 piculs sugar:—

Tuesday, August 30	75,000	piculs.
,, September 27	125,000	,,
Saturday, October 29	125,000	,,
Wednesday, November 30	125,000	,,

1870.—Sales of 50,000 piculs coffee:—

Monday, April 25	25,000	,,
Saturday, December 17	25,000	,,
	50,000	,,

The conditions on which the said sales will take place lie for the inspection of those interested at the offices of the heads of the district Government.

THE CREMATION CEREMONIES OF THE LATE KING.

By last mail we received information of the cremation of the remains of Somdet Phra Paramendr Maha Mongkut, the late King of Siam. His Majesty died so long since as October, 1868, of jungle fever, contracted during a short residence in the jungles of the Malay Peninsula, which he had visited to observe a total eclipse of the sun. His embalmed remains having been placed in a sitting attitude in a large silver cylinder, enclosed in a very hand ome gold and jewelled case or urn, were set in state on a throne or altar in the western wing of the Maha Prasat, the great Throne Hall. All the insignia of royalty—umbrellas of many stages, swords, conch-shells, tribute trees of gold and silver, and numerous other gold and jewelled ornaments and utensils—were arranged around the urn. The food vessels were daily replenished with food; priests, mourners, and pages were in constant attendance, foreign officials took audience, and, in short, for nearly eighteen months, during which the lying in state lasted, royal honours were paid to the departed. According to custom, the cremation had to take place in a building specially erected for the occasion of timber specially felled for it, and as some of the logs (the four central columns) required to be of immense length (from two hundred to two hundred and fifty feet long), and could only be obtained from distant provinces, considerable time elapsed before the materials were collected. Once that they were collected, the actual building only occupied a few months, during which time the chief members of Government occupied themselves with little else. The finished building was a gorgeous temple, between 200 and 300 feet high, the centre surmounted by a richly ornate and gilt pyramidal spire, from which projected four wings with gable roofs. In the centre of the building was a handsome pyramid, about sixty feet high, on which the urn rested during the ceremonies preceding the cremation. Everything was richly gilt, and much artistic skill was shown in general arrangement, and in the patterns of the details, so that the effect, when not too closely viewed, was splendid, but on close inspection one was rather disappointed at the poor appearance of paint, tinsel, and spangles. A large court, in which this central building stood, was full of quaint models illustrating manners and customs, heavens and hells, &c., a sort of museum attracting continual crowds of sight-seers; around it were retiring-rooms for the King, priests, and noblemen, and storerooms for the immense number of objects brought there to be given away to those who attended. Outside this court, scattered over a space about half-a-mile in extent, were numerous theatres, stands for tumblers and ropedancers, and pillars for pyrotechnic displays, an arena for displays of riding, boxing, singlestick, &c., and several buildings in which throughout the day food was given gratis to all applicants. Foreigners were not forgotten, and received most hospitable treatment in rooms set apart for them.

The ceremonies commenced on the 7th of March, when there were some pugilistic and other contests in presence of the King and Court, terminating with a grand display of fireworks. A similar performance took place every day until the 12th, the day appointed for moving the body to its place in the cremation building. On that day the urn was dragged along in a ponderous State car, accompanied by a very large procession, including the First and Second Kings, the chief priests, the Regent, and many other Princes and nobles clothed in white, and with shaven heads. The foreign Consuls were all invited to witness the procession from a building in which they were entertained by the Minister for Foreign Affairs; the only notable absentee was our own Consul-General. On reaching the cremation building the urn was thrice carried round the before described central pyramid, and then raised on to it From the 12th to the 18th the ceremonies continued, their nature being rather that of a high festival than of a mourning occasion. Chinese and Siamese actors and ballet-dancers, marionettes, tumblers, and professional amusement-givers of all descriptions exhibited from morning to night in presence of an immense crowd. Every afternoon the King appeared. A special fete was held before him; priests, noblemen, and distinguished foreign guests received various customary presents, and the crowd in general scrambled for money and lottery tickets enclosed in limes; actors and dancers, singlestick players, and others exhibited until dusk, when the performances ended with a brilliant display of fireworks, while fiery dragons and other monsters, ingeniously formed of numerous linked lamps carried on sticks, played over the heads of the crowd.

On the 18th, a pyre having been raised in place of the upper part of the golden pyramid in the centre of the building, the silver cylinder was replaced on it, a sandalwood model being substituted for the golden urn, and the young King lit the pyre of his father. The Second King and all the chief princes and nobles followed in order of rank, each adding some scented wood and wax tapers, and the fierce blaze soon required water thrown over it to reduce its fury. Volumes of smoke filled the building, and thousands of mourners raised a most affecting wail, many—especially the large family who lost in the late King a most affectionate father—genuinely weeping, but the most wailing conventionally. Next morning a few white bone ashes were collected, and placed in a small gold urn, the remaining ashes being carried away, and escorted by several state barges a short distance below the city, where they were cast into the river. The ceremonies, the shows, and the feasting continued for three days more, being, in the words of the Siamese, the festival for the consecration of the royal relics, and then the little urn was carried into the palace, and the place that had been for fifteen days thronged by crowds of sightseers was left deserted by all but a small body of workmen busily engaged in demolishing the buildings.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The dates are down to the 26th April. The outward mail of the 11th March arrived on the 14th April, and the French mail of the 17th on the 20th.

The following summary is from the Straits Times of April 26:—

The fortnight has been more than usually dull. There has been a lull in political matters, and the Legislative Council not yet being in session, nor the day announced for its opening, there are no questions of any public interest for discussion. There has been a meeting of the Executive Council, at which a proclamation was directed to be issued prohibiting the exportation of arms from the Colony to the territory of the Sultan of Salengore or the region of the Klang river. This step was adopted in consequence of a complaint by the Rajah of Quedah that he was unable to quell the disturbances at Klang, they being kept alive by the importation of arms and munitions of war from Malacca. The Colonial steamer Rainbow left this for Malacca on the 22nd inst., and if advices received there rendered it necessary, would proceed to Klang. As she has not yet returned, it is probable she has been despatched on this service.

The letter of the Straits Association to Earl Granville, on the subject of the supplementary Convention to the treaty with China, reached us by last mail, and sets forth some very forcible arguments against the appointment of Chinese Consuls in this colony. That such a concession would be productive of most mischievous consequences no one with any knowledge of our social organisation can for a moment doubt. However little harm might result from the residence of Chinese Consuls in the great cities of Europe, where they would have little to do, there can be no question that here, where fully one-half, if not more, of the population are Chinese, it would seriously derange the working of the local administration, and be likely to engender dissatisfaction among the Chinese, who are at present contented under the protection of British authority. And to the European population it is to be feared the consequences would be disastrous in the extreme. That squeezes, extortion, and intimidation would be practised upon their countrymen by these officials may be taken for granted, such being the syste practiced in their own country, and, instead of benefiting by the change, the result would be that their enlightenment would be seriously retarded.

The Bishop of the Diocese is here, and has administered confirmation to a large number of communicants. On Friday last this rite was administered to about one hundred and fifty men of H. M. S. Donegal, which vessel has arrived here and sailed again for Hong Kong. The candidates from Singapore have been confirmed.

Her Majesty's steamer Icarus, Lord C. Scott, commander, from Hong Kong April 5 has arrived here. The Icarus is to remain on the station, and her commander, Lord C. Scott, will be senior naval officer.

The Siamese steamer Kalahome, which arrived on the 20th from Bangkok, brought as passenger Mr. Knox, Her Majesty's Consul at Bangkok.

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Continued activity has to be reported, and prices of staples show a further decline. The demand for Yarn had somewhat improved, but business had only resulted by holders meeting the views of buyers. Woollens and Worsteds remain neglected, also most descriptions of Fancy Goods.

SHANGHAI.—The fortnight had been one of unusual depression in the market. The dealers had bought very sparingly, and, owing to continued discouraging news from the Northern and Riverine ports, some difficulty was experienced in getting them to clear their previous purchases. Grey Shirtings: Rates ruled easier; ordinary chop, 8¼ lb. goods, placed at Tls. 2.2.7 to 2.2.8 per piece for immediate clearance. Transactions quite retail. In 7 lbs. and 9 to 10 lbs. the business had been very trifling. White Shirtings: Market weaker, but prices showed little change. T-Cloths, Drills, Jeans, and Sheetings all more or less unsaleable unless at a concession on quotations. Fancy Cottons: Fair inquiry for Brocades and Spotted Shirtings, and a little demand for Velvets, Chintzes of good pattern, Muslins, and Dyed Shirtings, but the prices offered had generally been under the ideas of sellers, and hence a small business. Stock of Brocades, Spots, and Muslins much reduced, and holders disinclined to accept lower rates. Woollens: All kinds were out of demand, and quotations were nominal. Metals.—Iron: With the exception of one or two small parcels sold "to arrive" at Tls. 2.35 per picul, no business had been done. Lead: Sales very few and at low rates, holders shipping to the river ports in the hope of good exchanges for Teas. Coals remain dull, without transactions of importance. Quotations:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.2 to 2.0.5; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2 2.6 to 2.3.0; 9 to 9.12 lbs., Tls. 2.5.0 to 3.1.0. White Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2.8 to 2.7.5. T-Cloths, 6 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.4.0 to 1.6.8; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.0 to 1.8.5; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls 2.0.0 to 2.1.4; XX, Tls. 2.4.0; Gentian Shirtings, Tls. 2.9.0 to 3.0.0. Chintz, Tls. 1.4.5 to 1.8.5. Camlets, English, SS, Tls. 10.7.0 to 11.8.0; SSS, Tls. 9.7.5 to 10.2.5. Lead, per picul, Tls. 4.9.0 to 5.0.0.

HANKOW.—During the interval great dulness had pervaded the market for all descriptions of Cotton and Woollen manufactures, and prices generally had given way. Grey Shirtings: Immediately after the departure of last mail a recovery of 2 to 3 candareens per piece in the value 8¼ lbs. was obtained, till unfavourable advices from the inland marts checked demand which recent news of a quiet market in Shanghai confirmed; prices —Tls. 2.25 to 2.30 per piece for 8¼ lbs., with little doing; 7 lbs., Tls 2.04 to 2.06; 9¾ lbs., nominally Tls. 2.60 to 3.05. White Shirtings: 56 reed still asked for at Tls. 2.25 to 2.28 per piece. T-Cloths: Arrivals to hand freely; demand almost nil; re-sales made by natives at a loss of 5 to 8 candareens per piece. Small sales of Chintz, Damasks, Turkey Reds, and Dyed Spots at previous rates. Camlets: Sales to a fair extent; market closed weak at quotations. Lastings: Very little inquiry. Long Ells still difficult of sale, low rates failing to tempt buyers. Spanish Stripes: Small retail sales. Figured Orleans only saleable at low rates, except approved patterns and assortments. Lead: Arrivals very heavy, stock being estimated at fully 10,000 to 12,000 piculs; rates show 2 mace per picul decline. Quicksilver also lower; sales for the fortnight 200 flasks. Quotations:—T-Cloths, 6 to 6½ lbs., Tls. 1.5.0 to 1.6.0; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.5 to 1.8.0; 8 to 8¼ lbs., Tls. 2.0.5 to 2.1.2; Drills, American, 40 yards, Tls. 3.7.0 to 3.8.0; English, 40 yards, Tls. 3.4.0 to 3.6.5; Camlets, English S., per piece, Tls. 12.7.0 to 13.2.0; SS., Tls. 11.6.0 to 12.1.0; Lastings, Tls. 10.1.5 to 11.2.5; Long Ells, Tls. 5.9.0 to 6.1.0; Lead, per picul, Tls. 5 to 5.2.5; Quicksilver, Tls. 51.5.0 to 52.

FOOCHOW.—The following transactions are reported:—1,000 pieces 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings, $3.10 per piece; 3,550 pieces 7 lbs. T-Cloth, $2.37½ to 2.70 per piece; 2,028 piculs Lead (against Tea), $7.50 to 8.0 per picul; 200 pieces Dyed Brocades, $6.0 per piece; 72 pieces Scarlet Spanish Stripes, at 75 cents per yard.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular:—Cotton Yarn: No quotable changes have taken place, and moderate sales have been made at current rates. Nos. 16/24 are, perhaps, less inquired for, whilst Nos. 28/32 are in better request. Such parcels of Nos. 38/42 as are placed upon the market readily command quotations. Piece Goods: Buying has been very limited, and the demand for staple goods light. The inquiry for 7 lb. Grey Shirtings has not been supported, notwithstanding the reduced position of stocks, and, although prices are unchanged, sales are not now so easily effected. 8.4 lb. goods, though weak during the first part of the fortnight, are now more firmly held. Common White Shirtings have suffered a decline of 5 cents, and fine descriptions are entirely neglected. No sales of Drills have been reported, and last quoted rates cannot now be obtained. Some small parcels of English Jeans have been placed at a decline. T-Cloths are again weaker. 6 lb. goods are in full supply, and are lower 2 to 5 cents. 7 lb. Mexicans, under the influence of heavy arrivals, have declined 2½ cents, and 8 lb. are not wanted at a material reduction. Brocades and Spotted Shirtings find a ready market at advanced prices. Woollens: Values of nearly all articles under this head have given way, and the sales reported have been made at declining prices. Metals: Soft Bar Iron is wanted at an advance of 10 cents, and Hoop is firm at former rates. Wire continues dull. Steel is somewhat inquired for. Lead is neglected at declining rates. The demand for Quicksilver has slackened, and a quieter feeling is now apparent. Coal: Arrivals have been 1,400 tons of Sydney, 900 of which have been sold at $6.10 to 6.25 per ton, ex ship. Ginseng: The market shows increased firmness, as no arrivals have taken place and the stocks on offer are very small. 10 casks Crude Root are reported sold at $145 per picul. Quotations:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16 to 24, per bale, $140 to 145; 28 to 32, $145 to 150; 38 to 42, $170 to 180; Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., $2.57½ to 2.62½; 8¼ lbs., $2.85 to 2.90; 9 to 10 lbs., $3.10 to 4.05. White Shirtings, $2.50 to 3.50; Finer qualities, $4.25 to 4.65; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., 32 in., $1.90 to 2.05; 7 lbs., $2.10 to 2.40; 8 to 8.4 lbs., 36 in., $2.65 to 2.75; Grey Twills: English, 14 to 15 lbs., $4.45 to 4.55 per piece; American, 15 lbs., $4.90 to 5; Dutch, 14.8 to 15 lbs., $4.50 to 4.60. Long Ells: $7.20 to 7.40 per piece; Blankets, Assorted, $0 42½ to 0.47½; Camlets, SSS, $12.75 to 13; SS, $14.50 to 15; S, $16 to 17; Dutch, $25 to 27; Iron Nail Rod, Nos. 1 to 6, $2.35 to 2.50; Quicksilver, $63.25 to 64.50; Lead, L.B., $6.30 to 6.35; W.B., $6.50 to 6.55.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Hunter, Houghton, and Co. report as follows:—There is little or no change in our market. As our busy season is however now approaching and stocks continue light, we may look for a fair business being done shortly. Cambrics, 45 inch by 12 yards: 15/16s attracting no attention, best makes do not command more than f.4.90 to f.5 per piece. Medium and low qualities also dull, at f.4.75 to f.4.80, and f.4.60 to f.4 70 per piece. No. 24s, of fair quality asked for at f.3½ to f.3¾ per piece. Shirtings, White 40 yards: 45 inch neglected, favourite makes not valued above f.10.50 to f.10.75 per piece. 40/41 inch more asked for, and quoted at f.9.25 to f.9.50 per piece. 36 inch 64 reeds dull at f.8.50 to f.8.75 per piece. Grey Shirtings, 38½ yards: 39-inch, 7 lbs., in fair demand, at f.7.50 per piece, with an upward tendency. 39-inch, 8½ lbs., remain at f.8⅜ to f.850 per piece. 45-inch, 8 lbs., in little demand. Maddapollams, 24 yards: Dutch makes still firm, but demand small; 38/34-inch White, f.5.40 to f.5.60 per piece; 40/41-inch, at f.6.25 to f.6.50; 7/4-inch neglected. Grey 34/35-inch placed at f.5.25 to f.5.35; 43/44-inch, at f.6 to f.6.30 per piece. English Grey, 32/33-inch, 3 lbs., in more demand; sales at f.3.20, one month's credit. White, common quality, in little demand, at f.3⅜ to f.3.75 per piece. Prints: Considerable sales ex County of Berwick, but prices unremunerative. Pink Pads asked for at f.7.50 to f.7.75 per piece; Green Grounds, at f.7.25 to f.7.50 per piece; Steams, at f.5 to f.5⅛ per piece. Jacconets: No transactions. Dyed Maddapollams: 9/8 by 24 yards: A fair demand for Orange, sales at f.4 to f.4.10 per piece cash for inferior quality. Other colours neglected. Dyed Brocades, 9/8 by 40 yards: Small sale at f.11 to f.12 per piece. Green Dyed Spots, 24 yards, attracting more attention, and would command f.6 per piece. Other colours not in inquiry. Turkey Red Cloth quite neglected. Twist, Grey: 40s in fair demand at f.435 to f.437½ per bale, one month credit. 24s and 30s more asked for, the former at f.345 to f.350, the latter at f.375 to f.385 per bale credit, with a prospect of an advance.

SINGAPORE.—Messrs. Boustead and Co. supply the following report of the fortnight's business:—39-inch Grey Shirtings: Supplies of 8¼ lbs. and 7 lbs. keep low, and as the enquiry for these weights continues prices are firm at last rates. Sales on the spot $3 to 3.05 for 8¼ lb.; $2.55 for 7 lbs., and "to-arrive" to some extent at the same rates; 6 lbs. unaltered. 45-inch continue in but limited request. 32-inch Grey T-Cloths: Demand has not been large; 5 lbs. worth $1.55 to 1.57½; 6 lbs. in small stock and worth $1.87½ to 1.90; 7 lbs. are weaker in value and only in limited inquiry. 32-inch Grey Maddapollams quiet, quotations unaltered. 36-inch Grey Long Cloths without change. 36-inch White Shirtings: Common descriptions still saleable at fair rates; some sales of Fine reported at low and unremunerative prices. 45-inch saleable at last prices. White Spots and Brocades inquired for. White Cambrics: All descriptions in less demand, and prices show no improvement; 24s, $19¾; 15-16s, $32 to 32½. White Jacconets very little inquired for. White Maddapollams saleable to small extent at $21 to 21½. Dyed Shirtings: Small supply, limited request. Brocades inquired for. Velvets quiet, and worth last rates. Turkey Red Cambrics exceedingly dull of sale; values nominally unchanged. Prints in full supply, and very small inquiry. Camlets and Scarlet Long Ells dull. Spanish Stripes sold at auction at 60 to 62½ cents per yard. All Wool Lastings, assorted, quiet at 39 to 40 cents per yard. Black inquired for at same rates. Scarlet Bombazetts very difficult to place. Brocade Lustres unsaleable. Grey Yarn: 18s to 24s in less demand; sales to a limited extent at $120; 30s inquired for at $137 to 138; 40s in request; sales at $145, but importers ask more, supplies being small. Turkey Red Yarn, of 12 lbs., Glasgow dye, inquired for at $155. Coloured Yarns: Green wanted at $85; Imperial Red sold at $74; Orange, at $76.

PENANG.—Grey Shirtings of the lighter weights were somewhat scarce: 6 lbs. goods especially, of which no sale is reported. 7 lbs. goods disposed of at $51½ and $52; 8¼ lbs., $61 to 62 per corge. Grey Long Cloths: Stocks exhausted—prices nominal. Grey Maddapollams not required; quotations nominal. Grey T-Cloths in more demand; sales of 5 lbs. at $31½ and 33; 6 lbs., at $38½ and 38; 7 lbs., at $43¼ and 43 per corge. White Shirtings disposed of in considerable quantity at about former prices. Fine not much wanted; principal business in Medium and Low. In White Cambrics, Nos. 15/16, sales at $32½ per corge. In other qualities no business. Grey Sheetings quite inactive. American and Dutch Drills very quiet. Dyed and Figured Shirtings, and Mulls not moved. Prints, covered ground, buyers at $52 to $54; and Furnitures sold to arrive at $60 per corge. Yarn, of all kinds, dull of sale. Grey Mule: no business reported in the lower numbers, for which there was no demand; sales of No. 30 at $136 and $137, and of No. 40 at $145 to $147 per bale. Turkey Red Twist very quiet; one sale of No. 40 at $148 per bale, and of No. 44 at $144. Imperial Red also dull; some unimportant sales made at $78 and $77 per bale.

STRAITS, JAVA, CHINA, AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA

YOKOHAMA.—Since the departure of the American Mail the market had been exceedingly quiet, the only business being the settlement of some 600 or 700 piculs for the California Market at about the same prices as last quoted; transactions had been so limited, and the season was so nearly drawing to a close, that prices may be considered almost nominal. Stocks unaltered. The P. M. S. S. Co.'s str. America took 181,293 lbs. for New York, and 54,154 lbs. for San Francisco. The Brave sailed for New York on the 5th April with 465,658 lbs. Quotations:—Common, $24.0 to 26.0 per picul; good common, $27.0 to 29.0 per picul; medium, $31.0 to 35.0 per picul; good medium, $36.0 to 39.0 per picul; fine, $40.0 to 42.0 per picul; finest, $43.0 to 46.0 per picul; choice, $47.0 to 50.0.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Settlements for the fortnight, 1,052 chests country Tea, which found buyers at former quotations. Stock, 3 chops, or 1,250 packages country, 3,000 packages "Maloo." Green: Transactions small, settlements only 2,302 half-chests, at very full rates considering the common quality of the Teas. The stock on offer was 7,949 half-chests, comprising 4,467 half-chests country-packed, 2,782 half-chests Shanghai-packed, and 700 half-chests Pingsuey Tea. Settlements for the fortnight, 2,302 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,053 half-chests; stock, 20 chops, or 7,949 half-chests.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had continued active during the fortnight, especially for Oshus and Taysaam sorts. There was no change in prices except for inferior descriptions, of which occasional purchases had been made at lower rates. Supplies had been fair, though scarcely equal to settlements, and the unsold stock was rather smaller. Quotations:—Mybash and Sinchu Hanks: Best, 34s. 7d. to 36s. 2d.; Medium, 30s. 5d. to 33s. 1d.; Inferior, 26s. 7d. to 29s. 5d. Oshu: Extra, 38s. to 39s. 2d.; Best, 34s. 8d. to 36s. 2d.; Medium, 31s. 7d. to 33s. 5d.; Inferior, 26s. 7d. to 29s. 8d. Sodai: Medium, 28s. 6d. to 30s. Etchesen: Medium, 26s. 7d. to 28s. 6d.; Inferior, 23s. 11d. to 25s. 10d. Mashta: Best, 26s. 7d. to 28s. 6d.; Inferior, 23s. 11d. to 26s. 2d.

SHANGHAI.—The following is from Messrs. C. J. Skeggs and Co.'s Circular.—Since our last circular the London mails of 11th and 17th Feb. have arrived, as also telegrams via Kiachta to the 15th ult. quoting "Red Peacocks, 28s. No. 3 Tsatlee 32s. active." This favourable news has continued the anxiety to operate on this side, and the consequence has been a further advance in price, which has brought to market unexpected supplies in the shape of silk intended for native manufactures, so that our total export will now probably be rather over 42,000 bales. Very few Tsatlees go forward, and the settlements, which are estimated at about 1,000 bales, consist mostly of Chincum and Kahing Taysaams, Re-reels, Hainins, Long Reels and Common Szechuens, all except the latter showing an advance ranging from Tls. 5 to 20. Chooping's chop has been taken at Tls. 620, equal to 32s. 6d. A few extra good Long Reels at Tls. 435, equal to 23s. 1d. No. 2 Fatmow is held for Tls. 535, 28s. 2d., and Re-reels generally are Tls. 10 to 15 higher. About one-fourth of the settlements are reported to be in barter for woollen goods.

JAVA AND STRAITS PRODUCE.

BATAVIA.—Arrack, 4 per cent. overproof: Little doing; price nominally f.80 per leaguer. Coffee, Java: Some parcels of Green deliverable later on changed hands at f.34 per picul. Government sale of 25,000 piculs by auction on 25th April. Padang: Government sold by auction on 31st March 16,400 piculs No. 1 and 800 piculs Triage, which averaged respectively f.36.01 and f.14.31 per picul. Cubebs very dull, at f.14.50 to f.15 per picul. Gum Damar: Demand not brisk, purchases of No. 1 could readily be effected at f.38 per picul. Indigo: Prime quality changed hands at Samarang at f.5.25 to f.5.30 per Dutch pound. India-Rubber: Scarce, at f.95 to f.105 per picul. Gutta-percha: None offered; extreme prices would be paid for suitable kinds. Tin, Billiton: 5,051 piculs sold on 6th April at an average of f.71.35 per picul. Nutmegs: In request, at f.100 to f.110 per picul for Nuts of 110 to the pound. Mace: Market but poorly supplied; inquiry continues active at f.165 to f.175 per picul for Moluccas; Padang sold at f.145 per picul. Pepper, Black: Advanced materially, none to be had under f.23 to f.23.50 per picul. White: None offered. Rattans: Small sales of Padang at f.8 to f.9.25, of Borneo at f.11 to f.13 per picul. Sugar: Further transactions for delivery from the growing crop reported at f.14½ to f.14⅝ per picul for No. 14. Exporters generally hold back, considering these figures higher than advices from the home markets warrant.

PENANG.—Pepper, Black, had come forward freely, and had been taken at $8.07½ to 8.30 for West Coast—and $8 to 8.17½ for East Coast and Acheen. Trara, no arrivals, quotations nominal. An arrival of good White secured at $11½ per picul. In the earlier part of the fortnight there was an unimportant purchase of Tin at $28.90 per picul, but the principal business done had been at $29 to 30 per picul—the latter price having been paid after the arrival of the mail steamer from England. No Cloves of Penang origin had come forward. Gutta Percha very scarce. India Rubber also in small supply at $40 and $41 per picul. Hides in fair supply at $10.35 for Buffalo, and at $14.50 and $14½ for Cow. Horns scarce. LATEST TELEGRAMS.

FALMOUTH, GIBRALTAR, AND MALTA TELEGRAPH EXPEDITION.

The following telegrams have been received by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company:—

CANNING TO OSBORN.

GIBRALTAR, MAY 26, 3 P.M.—The laying of the submarine cable from Malta to this place is completed. We are just going to make the final splice to the shore end.

The certificate from Latimer Clark, for Malta and Gibraltar section of the cable, has been granted. That portion is handed over to Malta and Falmouth Submarine Telegraph Company for traffic. Shore end of next section is laid. Hope to be in Lisbon on Tuesday evening.

From Gibraltar, via Malta, to England, May 28, 10 45 P.M.

CHINA.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS, BY BRITISH-INDIAN CABLE.)

BOMBAY, MAY 29.—Intelligence from China announces that the Mahomedan rebels in the North-West Provinces are gaining ground, having advanced to the borders of Honan. Their progress is creating much alarm among the Chinese officials, and further disturbances are expected. Russia undertakes to protect the Mongol settlement of Oorga from the Mahomedans.

Great satisfaction exists in Hong Kong and Shanghai at the energetic action of London merchants in making known the truth regarding Chinese affairs, and at the agitation against the Alcock Convention.

The Foochow tea market has been opened.* The ship Dunmail struck on a sunken rock in Hong Kong harbour and sank; it is expected that the cargo will be saved.

[It will be observed that the telegram announcing the assassination of the U.S. Consul at Yedo, though incorrect, is not wholly without foundation, as an attack of some kind on him is reported in our Yokohama mail news.]

THE waiting-room at the Admiralty contains a remarkable work of art from the pencil of Sub-Lieutenant Francis Ingram Palmer, late of Her Majesty's ship Rodney. The picture is about twelve feet by ten feet, and represents, by almost innumerable specimens, surface oceanic life, observed under the microscope, at Hong Kong and in other parts of China. The tableau is interspersed with several masterly sketches of the banks of the Yangtse, and other places of interest, an engraving of one of which—the Lukan Pass—appears in the Illustrated London News of the 28th inst.

THE letters by the New Zealand Mail, via San Francisco, which reached London last week, were about a fortnight later than those previously to hand.

* The accuracy of this is open to doubt.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

We have received from the directors of the Canal Company a telegram dated Port Said, May 24th, announcing that the Messageries steamer Peiho, with the China mail, had passed safely through, as well as the British steamers Elizabeth and Apollo, the Austrian steamer Sphynx, and the French steamer Europe. A telegram from Ismailia, of the 27th inst., announces the passage of the Cambode with the incoming French mail, the French despatch boat Lucifer (returning to China), and the English steamers Star, Alnwick Castle, and Atlas.

A tabular statement just issued by the company shows the monthly receipts arising from the traffic through the Canal up to the end of April. The following figures show the totals, which it will be seen, exhibit a steady and rapid increase up to March, but a heavy falling-off in April. November, f.75,118; December, f.241,795,; January, f.250,968; February, f.340,726, March, f.647,588; April, f.377,207.
